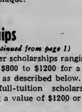
Madison Devlin, new college music instructor, is pictured here unpacking instruments in preparation for a college band. The plan fell through, however. (That was in 1941.) Now everything seems to speak propitiously for not one but three student musical groups this semester. With credit courses being given (see story above), Devlin believes that a band and two orchestras will be quick in forming.

NYA Now Accepting New Applications For Work

After a two month period in which NYA enrollment had to cease because of state regulations, the government amended its ruling of November 21, 1941, to allow students to apply for jobs as of February 1, 1942, according to Claude T. Silva, college NYA director.

In an effort to cut the budget allotted to the state NYA, enrollment had to be limited, and no more students were to be admitted until further notice. However the abandoning of this ruling came into effect February 1, and it appears that there will be enough jobs for all who wish to apply, Silva added.



Any student who wishes to apply for an NYA job must be between the ages of 16 to 24 inclusive, and must be carrying at least three-quarters of a regular normal college schedule. That is, he must carry at least twelve of the required sixteen units. He may work only four hours a day during school days, and any day the student has no classes he may work as many as seven hours a day.

Positions are open to both men and women students, Silva said and the pay for NYA work is forty cents per hour.

Dance Next Friday Final Activity Of Orientation Week

First outside social event of the semester will be a dance at the Empire Room of the Sir Francis Drake Hotel on Friday, February 13, according to Gloria Olivi, Associated Student vice-president and chairman of the social committee.

The dance is to be semi-formal and all Associated Student card holders are invited to attend without charge. Either Gary Evers' or Eddie Murphy's orchestra will be chosen to play. The no-corsage rule will be enforced.

Gloria Olivi
AS&FJC Vice-Pres.

Miss Olivi has announced that a mixer-dance will be held in the women's gym on Monday afternoon, February 9, at 2:30 p.m. The dance will be in honor of the low freshman class, Miss Olivi added, and all students of the college are urged to attend.

No Mixer If Raining

According to an announcement made this week by Bertha Keller, women's physical education instructor, the mixer dance scheduled for next Monday will not be held in the women's gym in the event of rain.

Registration Books Due Next Wed., Fri.

J. Paul Mohr, college registrar, announced last Wednesday that student registration books would be filed on February 11 and 13 next Wednesday and Friday, in the college library.

Registration, Mohr said, will be closed to all students Friday, February 13. Only special students will be allowed to register after that date, he added.

Course Changes Allowed

Those students wishing to change from one course to another or to change the hour at which they attend a course will be allowed to do so by making individual arrangements with the course instructor. This procedure will be permitted until after registration books have been filed.

Consent of the student's adviser, however, must be secured to change any courses, or to make a change in program.

Graduation Petitions March 2

Graduation petitions must be filed by March 2, the registrar's office has also revealed, emphasizing that all students planning to graduate in June should meet this requirement early to facilitate a check-up of grades and units.

Information concerning graduation requirements may be secured from student advisers, from Miss Mary Perry in the registrar's office or from the catalogue of courses issued to all registering students.

Complete information regarding enrollment figures has not yet been compiled. Estimates, however, indicate that sharp drop is expected by the administration.

Rally

First Student Meeting 11 O'Clock Wednesday

With a program of better rallies planned, Bob Murphy, rally commissioner, has announced the first rally of the semester will be held on Wednesday, February 11 at 11 a.m.

Keynote of the rally is the introduction of the new student officers and messages of welcome to the freshmen by President Archibald J. Cloud and Dean Edwin C. Browne.

Basketball Team Presented

The rally will have a twofold purpose; first, it will be dedicated to Orientation Week and secondly, it will serve to introduce the basketball team. The rally will be one which all the incoming freshmen are expected to attend.

More Outside Talent

The aim of the new commission is to have a guest star at every rally, and more outside talent to entertain. Student talent will be called upon to come to the front, but it will be carefully chosen so as to be sure that it is acceptable and enjoyable to all, Murphy stated.

The newly elected rally commis-

Book Exchange Dates Set For Three Weeks

For the greater convenience of the students of the college, the Women's Service Society will conduct a book exchange during the first three weeks of the semester it has been announced by Leona Schaeffer, president.

The hours of the exchange are from nine to one every day, Miss Schaeffer went on. All students may sell their books through the exchange, and may name their own price. There is no guarantee that all books will be sold, and all unsold books will be returned to their owners after the book exchange has closed, she added.

There will be gym suits on sale in the women's gym, Miss Schaffer continued. These are suits which were left at the gym last semester. They will be laundered before being put on sale.

Officers of the WSS are: president, Leona Schaeffer; vice-president, Nancy Leaman; secretary, Mildred Clings; treasurer, Jane Lippert.

Don Jensen, AS&FJC President

Mixer Scheduled For Women's Gym Next Monday, Feb. 9

Orientation activities will begin with a mixer dance, sponsored by the Associated Men and Associated Women Students, to be held Monday, February 9 in the women's gym, from 3 to 4:45 p.m., according to Betty MacKillop, AWS president.

The dance is to be informal, and dancing "off the record" will be the featured entertainment of the afternoon.

Something new, however, will be tried out at the mixer, explained Miss MacKillop. A committee of ten men and ten women students will be there to "keep the ball rolling," she said.

Members of the committee will dance with attending students and assist in introducing them to other students.

"We're doing it this way this semester to eliminate the familiar two-sided stagline," Miss MacKillop said. Committee To Rule Dance

The committee, under the supervision of Miss MacKillop and Jim Durpea, AMS president, is comprised of college officers and other well-known figures. Those on the committee are: Gloria Olivi, Associated Students' vice-president; Barbara Stahmann, Associated Students' secretary; Eloise Winfeldt, Associated Women Students' vice-president; Ernestine Cervelli, Associated Women Students' secreatry; Don Jensen, Associated Students' president; Bob Murphy, rally commissioner; Jim Upp, yell leader, and Pat Niemeyer, Jo Ann Hall, Dorothy Ann Kreul, Marge Allen, Mimi Grover, Lou Minkin, Jim Skinner, Joe Lewis, Herb Jensen, Dick Clayton, and Joe Wiss.

MacKillop, Duryea Announce O Week Events For Men, Women

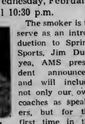
College Men

Claimed by its sponsors that it will surpass all previous smokers, is the traditional Associated Men Students' Smoker, slated to be held at 1750 Clay Street, between Polk and Van Ness, next Wednesday, February 11, 8 p.m. till 10:30 p.m.

James Durpea
AMS President

The smoker is to serve as an introduction to Spring Sports; Jim Durpea, AMS president announced, and will include not only our own coaches as speakers, but for the first time in the history of the college, will include the biggest named sports writers and college coaches in the bay area.

Many Speakers Scheduled



Among the speakers who will deliver talks to both new and old students will be Ernie Smith and Doug Montell, local sports announcers; Charles Hunter, Olympic Club track coach; Jim Needles and Jeff Cravath, University of San Francisco coaches; Bill Leiser, Chronicle sports writer; Walter Mails, San Francisco Seals' coach, and Clint Evans, University of California baseball coach. Durpea said that in addition to these personalities will be Will Connolly of the Chronicle.

In order to familiarize the students with spring sports that are being held this semester, the coaches of the college will each deliver a few words of explanation on the particular sport which they coach. Lee Easan will speak on spring football and golf; Russ Sweet, track; Jack Gaddy, base-

College Women

To enable the incoming freshman women students to become better acquainted with the students and faculty of the college, a tea will be sponsored by the Associated Women Students to be held on Tuesday, February 10, in the cafeteria, according to Betty MacKillop, AWS president.

Betty MacKillop
AWS President

This ten, Miss MacKillop pointed out, is to be a sort of "get acquainted" affair. The idea is for every woman student to attend, and make new friends and renew old acquaintances. It will provide an opportunity for incoming women to meet high school acquaintances and to meet women officers of the college.

Hostesses Needed

All returning women students are asked to attend and help to make the tea a success by acting as hostesses. They will meet the new students and introduce them to other students and faculty advisers.

Student Speakers Participate

Entertainment for the tea is indefinite, stated Miss MacKillop, but there will be student speakers who will tell about the various activities of the college.

Refreshments, prepared by the home economics department will be served.

The committee will include Gloria Olivi, Barbara Stahmann, Virginia Frantz, Shirley Wood, Jane Johnston, Betty Rost, Betty Dahlberg, Donna Meyers, Jackie Blair, Flieta Alexander, Rose Donabedian, Pat Brand, Violet Butler, Connie Custer, Ernestine Cervelli, Eloise Winfeldt, Shirley Martin, Alice Donner, Janice Birch, Foy Woo, Matilda Mortiglia, Sarah Smith, Marjorie Wagner, Lee Lebeer, Josephine Royola, Beth Craddock, and Carol Mochal.

President's Message-- College And The War

GREETINGS to all students of San Francisco Junior College.

Education is universally regarded as one of the most valuable contributions to the nation's welfare. Its importance is equally vital whether in war or peace.

Our great leader, President Roosevelt, in a letter to the American Association of Junior Colleges, recently said:

"We have one great task before us. That is to win the war. At the same time, it is perfectly clear that it will be futile to win the war unless during its winning we lay the foundation for the kind of peace and readjustment that will guarantee the preservation of those aspects of American life for which we fought.

"The United States needs the services of its institutions of higher learning, and we know we can depend upon their complete cooperation in carrying forward the present war effort."

War will bring enormous strains upon the body-politic, and severe dislocations of individual purposes and plans. Peace will call for the devoted service of trained and qualified men and women, in order that the fruits of victory may endure.

To such ends, the offerings at San Francisco Junior College are dedicated.

Scholarship Applicants Must Meet Feb. 5 Deadline

Students wishing to apply for University of California under-graduate scholarships are reminded that all applications must be filed by Sunday, February 15, with the dean of undergraduates at the University of California, according to Alice Cooper, Alpha Gamma Sigma adviser.

These appointments are for next August, Miss Cooper stressed, and all graduating Alpha Gamma Sigma members graduating in May are urged to look into the matter.

The Alpha Gamma Sigma, for the past few semesters, has been extremely active in aiding students of the college in their studies. Almost all of the subjects taught in the college have been coached under the supervision of the society. Coaches have been volunteers from both the faculty and the honor students.

Membership is gained into the society by the acquiring of 30 grade points, or approximately a B average, in a single semester, while at the college. Students enrolling in the college from high schools, and bearing red seals, are invited into membership, but must maintain their scholastic standards in the college.

A student belonging to the society for three semesters at the college is allowed to become a permanent member.

Civilian Defense Instruction Begun

To better prepare students for the emergency at hand, the following courses on civilian defense have been added: Civilian Defense 1, a one unit course, in answer to the growing desire of students to be informed on matters of civilian defense, and in order to enable students to be more adequately prepared to care for their own safety and the safety of others.

Several motion pictures taken in Great Britain will be shown. The following subjects will be discussed: civilian defense organization, gas protection, military explosive and ammunition, fire defense, air raid warden system, law and order, plant protection, communication and transportation, sabotage and espionage, public health and sanitation, and the student's part in national defense.

First Aid Training Planned

First aid, a practical course in general principles and practices of first aid. Standard American Red Cross certificates are given to those who qualify.

Defense gardening, Floriculture 1, a two unit course, gives methods of growing vegetables and small fruits for home gardens.

Food Ideas Stressed

Home Economics Nutrition, a one unit course, will instruct in meal planning, and food preparation during times of food rationing and shortages. Production, distribution, and nutritive value of food products will be discussed.

Peace officers training 65, a five unit course in which emphasis will be placed in training for military police, industrial plant guards, auxiliary police, FBI student fingerprint classifiers, and special investigators.

Guardsman Threatened; Dissection Plan Revealed

Did you know that there is a possibility that this paper may be cut in half and one-half thrown away? If you knew it then forget that you ever read this. If you haven't heard of the "DISSECTION PLAN" please turn to page two. Mention is made of this fact in column one. Read the whole thing—and remember, this is your paper!

The Guardsman

Vol. XIV, No. 1 Friday, February 6, 1942 Page 2

From Two To One

THE GUARDSMAN, official publication of the Associated Students, is threatened with dissection. Because of the drop in enrollment this semester and last, and the subsequent drop in the monetary strength of the budget, it has been worded about that perhaps The Guardsman should only be published once a week instead of remaining a twice-weekly publication.

Naturally, those connected with the paper are vitally interested in maintaining the status quo, and feel that this is the opinion of the majority of the students at the college.

When considering this dissection question it should be remembered that The Guardsman affects more members of the Associated Students than does any other activity—including football, basketball, or social functions. The paper itself may not be quite so spectacular as a football game, nor quite so enjoyable as a class dance, but it appears regularly throughout the semester with hundreds of announcements and explanations concerning the administration, faculty, and students.

And this point is important: although it has been said that The Guardsman worries only about The Guardsman—this is not true. Proof of this denial may be had through the words of any of the officials in the student government, or in the administration, or of the members of the faculty with whom your paper has worked in the past. All will admit that this publication is the one strongest link between themselves and the students at large.

But because the process of producing a paper; of producing, in particular, an adequate paper is expensive, it is felt that a cut should be made. Such a cut would mean that announcement of a dance, game, or rally might have to be made a week ahead of time and made only once before the event occurred because there was only one issue a week. A majority of the student leaders are solidly against this, because it would tend to affect the attendance at the various affairs.

Certainly this dissection of The Guardsman would be merely an attenuation of its services and of its utility.

A plan has been submitted to the members of the Executive Council and to the chairman of the finance committee whereby the cost of publishing the paper as usual would be less than in any of the past several semesters. The required amount would be about the same percentage of the total budget as was received in the past with an addition available to the budget only if the paper continues to come out twice a week.

There is nothing wrong with this plan. It is feasible. The staff of The Guardsman wishes to continue as in the past. It is felt that the students also wish the paper to continue as usual. The matter ultimately remains in the hands of the Executive Council. Theirs is the last word.

However the members of the Council vote as they imagine the students themselves would vote (in most cases). If the Associated Students make their wishes known there will be no dissection. This may be done either by attending meetings and gaining a knowledge of Executive Council procedures, or by making offerings to the Ram's Horn.

When the change from one to two issues a week was first made, it was done over the protests of some who claimed that there would be too much grief all the way around. Since that time, however, the paper has continued to come out regularly and has won several high awards in national competition.

Those who are connected with the actual publication feel that you, the students, approve their efforts. They feel that there should be no change. What do you think?

Shots At ...RAMdom

semester finds us back again with the same policy of throwing a kleig on the quaint things that happen in this glamorous metropolis and leaving the international situation to the boys who know what they're talking about This will again be our policy, (1) because anything we know about the international omelet of intrigue can be read in any newspaper, (2) because we falteringly confess to being a bit too thick to interpret events as quickly as they're now happening. As soon as we get one doped out, something else happens and we're right back where we started from.

A FLASH

coming over the U.P. teletype down at the Chronicle contained the following Q's and A's from an intelligence test given to selectees at the Portland Induction Center in Oregon.

Examiner: "If I cut off your right ear, what would happen."

Selectee: "I couldn't hear."

Examiner: "If I cut off both of your ears, what would happen?"

Selectee: "I couldn't see."

The examiner, puzzled, repeated the question and getting the same answer, asked for an explanation.

Selectee: "Simple. My hat would fall over my eyes."

up on the shipping situation as it now stands in San Francisco, we strolled timidly into the Seamen's hiring hall down by the Embarcadero. They were all there, merchant seamen waiting for ships, convoys, watching the bulletin board for the name of a ship. Occasionally a husky looking guy would waddle over to the board and write down the name of a vessel and the position open on it. One of the waiting men would leave his chair and hasten to the office, discharge from his last ship in hand. After a few moments he'd come back and sit down, or shake hands with a few of his pals and walk out of the hall. Going to sea, San Pedro or Rangoon, they don't know where.

The war has brought many of these merchant seamen from far parts of the earth. There's Joe Herman, "the Great Orientalist," who spent so much time in the Orient that he still takes his shoes off before he goes into the house. There's Johnny Caracas, a wiry little Kanaka mess boy who was torpedoed on the way over from the islands. Johnny was bounced right out of his bunk up against a bulk head and lost seven of his front teeth. The company bought him some more teeth. They say when he came down to the hiring hall he took them out and showed them proudly to every one.

"I'm lucky," Johnny said in his short, clipped tones, "there's a couple of good guys that are still in their bunks on that ship."

They don't wear uniforms and there's nothing distinctive about them. They don't get publicity. But, they've taken the flag to every port and brought back the riches of the world to America.

RAM'S HORN

Paging Yehoodi; Lists Wanted For Available Jobs

• Where Is He?

Editor, The Guardsman:

Past issues of The Guardsman have mentioned something about an internal publicity manager, who is supposed to notify students of coming events. Surely when The Guardsman suspends publication this publicity agent should swing into action.

Failure to do this was evidenced during the recent basketball season. Games were apparently scheduled and played . . . then the next morning in the city paper an article would be printed that told of the game and its outcome.

According to one sports writer we have a fairly good basketball team. When we have something good why not publicize it so that the students can see the team in action? Although finals were scheduled on days following the games there were undoubtedly students who were through with finals, or could have spared the time to see their school team.

I know many basketball fans who drive across the bay bridge to see games that are played by business firm teams and by large universities, and these students don't even know about their own games.

The external publicity man is doing a fine job, but the internal agent is practically non-existent.

—H. I.

• Help Wanted

Editor, The Guardsman:

Now that the national defense program has lessened employment problems to such a very great extent there are probably many civil service and governmental positions available to college students. For various reasons the students do not hear of the majority of these opportunities, for which they might apply were the situation different.

I should like, therefore, to suggest that the college paper publish complete, or as near complete as possible, lists of these available jobs for the benefit of those many students who wish to receive this important information.

This service would truly be of great use. It would concern a goodly number of the student body, and would aid materially in helping them find desired work.

I hope that these suggestions may be of some interest and use to you, as they are to me. Surely matters of this type deserve some space in your paper.

FEM FADS . . . by Nancy

SPRING is here again, well almost anyway. Outward signs of it include the new semester, splashy prints and light colors that now grace shop windows. Fashion writers begin dusting off all descriptive adjectives in preparation for the hosts of new fashions due to arrive soon, and every one takes on a new outlook on life.

The saying still goes April showers bring May flowers . . . but California is advanced even in its showers and flowers. So a little rain shouldn't dampen any spirits here. Since few can get into the real spirit of spring with the current drizzle why not try a new gadget that when pinned on the rain coat will guarantee to divert the attention from the weather.

TOOL JEWELS

Number one on today's hit parade is a small lapel pin, about one and a half inches long, with a monkey wrench, pliers, hammer, or saw dangling from it. Only three tools come per pin, so there is room for variety. Fingerprints won't show, so if you go in for crime in a miniature way, don't tell who did the tipping off.

She wolfs, or wolfesses will really fight for this, a locket with a telephone on the outside. But, open it and there is a phone number. Yes, it's yours.

Tortoise shell jewelery has come into the limelight of late. First seen as trimming on belts, it has advanced to the point where it now can be purchased in the form of link belts, various necklaces, and enormous round compacts. Incidentally, if you are unfamiliar with the shell, it is a yellow brown transparent substance, amost like plastic.

BAGS AND MORE BAGS

How about a draw string bag, fringed to look like a mop? It can be slung over the shoulder and filled with a bathing suit, or with regulation hang bag composites. The material, soft, fluffy, cotton string, will go perfectly with a tweed or pastel suit, or even with beach wear.

While on the subject of hand bags, there is another new number, patterned like the plastic bags of last season, made of white bamboo cane. Belts completing the twosome are also made.

A long, flat strip of pique ending in three scallops at either end can perform miracles as an extra accessory with any outfit. Admittedly, it looks disintriguing at first glance, but with a twist of the wrist, a turban can be made with puffs (from the scallops) at the ear, like a sea island maiden, or at the top of the head, like a South American damsel. By twisting the wrist in a different direction, a collar to dress up a dark dress is discovered, or again, around the waist, and a belt.

Last but not least on the fashion hit parade is a double duty jacket, sun and water proof, made of colored canvas. The canvas is the same material that covers beach chairs, bright colors and wide stripes.

They Died With Their Boots On . . . and do it gracefully, too

LOCAL cinema goers will be the object of a direct hit when they view Warner Brother's current moneygetter They Died With Their Boots On. The biography of General George Armstrong Custer comes to life on the screen amid historical scenes of many decades ago.

The plot, of course, has one objective in mind, namely, the affair at Little Big Horn.

Custer's early days at the academy, his experiences on the battlefield where, even though he disobeys orders, he emerges the victor, the post war days, and the memorable year in which the famed seventh cavalry goes down at the hand of Sitting Bull and Crazy Horse. The story is written with clarity and does not lead the reviewer astray at any time. Except for the over done story job on Custer's life at the academy, the film sticks more or less to historical facts.

Errol Flynn, Hollywood's Custer, plays his part with flying colors. After viewing Flynn in the title role, it's a rather difficult job to imagine anyone else in such a part. Flynn has played so many similar roles that the Custer biog. seems to have been written especially for him. (His characterization of the great soldier is done with flawless manner and all sincerity. Could Custer have lived his own life as well?)

Olivia De Haviland, sharing the title role with Flynn, plays the part of Mrs. Custer with her usual finesse and charm. Although she wasn't as commanding as she was in the late Hold Back The Dawn, Miss De Haviland gave her wonderful acting ability to the film. The blame for the fact that she didn't command too much attention can be chalked up to script writers, who undoubtedly figured that General Custer and his cavalry deserved the limelight. The portions of the picture that did feature Mrs. Custer combined two great artists, Flynn and De Haviland, in scenes with excellent dialogue that carried a lot of punch, particularly the balcony and the departure of the hero for his last battle.

SUPPORTING CAST SUPURB

The supporting cast could not have been better chosen. Warners plucked a star studded cast from the Hollywood scene and dropped them into this production.

Sidney Greensttreit, portraying the paunchy General Scott, turned in his second admirable performance. Although he wasn't as forceful as the merciless collector in the Maltese Falcon, Greenstrelt, as the general, proved his worth as a supporter.

Arthur Kennedy, the former soldier and ruthless Indian trader, gives an admirable account for himself as the bullying individual who can't stand up against the dynamic Custer. It was to Kennedy, the trader, that Custer uttered some of his last words: "Where are we going? I don't know. Either to hell or to glory." Kennedy's reformation came a little too late to aid him, but his last actions helped him gain his just desserts.

Charles Grapewin, the tobacco spitting frontiersman, deserves honorable mention; Gene Lockart turns in one of his well known "two-faced" portrayals, a little man who can change personality to fit the occasion. The English member of the brigade, does give a small amount of humor to the film, and his relation to the film is quite similar to our relations with Britain today. Good propaganda unexpectedly thrown in.

Director Rauol Walsh turned in a great motion picture with his historical epic, They Died With Their Boots On. Judging from its theatre attendance throughout the country, one could predict it a berth in motion picture's big ten of the year.

Cabbages & Kings

THE number of excuses that accompany a black eye has always amazed me.

Just before the closing of classes there appeared in the halls of the college quite a quantity of such eyes. With each eye there also appeared a different excuse. There was the one about the door (standard No. 4). The one about, "you should see the other guy" also was heard. But the excuse that accompanied the prize discoloration was, "I got it playing basketball."

Said eye was a masterpiece of color. One which would put Disney to shame. The rim of the coloring was a weak green such as the color of an entering frosh. The owner, one "Cut Rate Count of Castlemont," said that even the Paint Technology classes refused to name the color that permeated throughout the entire production. The eyelid was splotched with a vermillion and the lower lid was tinted a sickly yellow.

The Count stands by his claim as to how he got the "mouse" but his friends have different opinions.

STYLES

Every year, with the induction of a new bunch of freshmen, there is a parade of styles that would make B. Brummel spin in his tomb.

Each frosh dresses as he (or she) thinks that the well dressed frosh should be heard. But I think that the prize should be awarded to the freshman last year who was declared the, "Don't let this happen to you" man.

This man was dressed in a white sweater with a gigantic music note on his manly chest. The effect was greatly added to by a pair of dirty cords with the climax supplied by a pair of loud sox and a dirty pair of sandals.

What about a cup for the "D.L.T.H.T.Y." man each semester? I think that it would rival the soph sweetheart contest in popularity.

TO TALK OF MANY THINGS

Of the high and low soph who were engaged in ardent conversation.

"Was that your best girl with you last night?" asked the low soph.

"Naw, she jus' next best," came the answer.

Of the sweet innocent who tearfully exclaimed:

"I just shot a Junior College man." While the cop smiled, "Congratulations, there's a $2 bounty on wolves."

And of the creature who wanders about with sightless eyes, not seeing where he goes or caring what he does, we label them "Frosh."

Faculty Features . . . A History Instructor With Sidelines

By Iwanna Hayworth

(This new column, by the same authoress who wrote Your College Presents, will appear regularly in The Guardsman. It is intended to better acquaint the students of the college with their instructors, many of whom have won honor and distinction in their various lines of teaching. We sincerely hope that it will serve that purpose. In each issue will appear the written results of an interview with some instructor at this college. (A picture of that instructor will also most likely appear.) No particular courses will be featured, and no interview will be exactly the same. An attempt will be made to make these columns both enlightening and interesting. We hope that you like and approve them.)

"I BELIEVE firmly and strongly in the education, not the elimination, of students," says Dr. Robert J. Parker, co-ordinator of the Western Hemisphere division.

Dr. Parker began his scholastic studies at the University of California at Los Angeles in 1925, majoring both in history and Political Science. He graduated with honors in both in 1929.

In 1929 he came to the University of California in Berkeley to get his teaching credentials consecutively M.A. and Ph.D. in Western Hemisphere study taken under the direction of Herbert E. Bolton, dean of the Western Hemisphere historians at the university.

The teaching career of Dr. Parker began at Santa Ana High and Junior College in 1932. That same year he started the Coalinga extension division at Fresno State, and stayed there for two years then left to take charge at Taft to reorganize the plans and curriculum.

When the junior college here was organized in 1935, Dr. Parker came to work in the history division. At that time he also had a teaching fellowship at U.C. in European history.

Dr. Parker began his career with the idea of historical research in mind, however after meeting Dr. Bolton, he was inspired to go ahead with teaching of history as well as research. In this way he feels he may be able to enlighten a lot of students as to the true importance and value of constructive learning in this field. In speaking of this he said, "There are still some people in the eastern part of the United States who think that Indians roam the western plains yet, scalping all likely victims, and some Texans who firmly believe that all inhabitants 'south of the border' are pretty low individuals. It is the purpose of all historians to help clear up these prejudices and beliefs."

Outside of teaching and research, his main interest is swimming and other aquatic meanderings. When in Los Angeles, he was one of many life guards at the beach for five or six summers; this being while attending the university and after. "It was a lot of fun," he said.

When asked about future plans, Dr. Parker answered that he wished to continue with his writing, having done quite a lot since 1932, at which time he began his writing with various theses. Among the first works were various studies made of the Indians, namely, Iroquois. Since then he has contributed numerous articles to: California Journal of Secondary Education; Nation's Schools; Pacific Historical Review; California Historical Quarterly; Southern California Historical Register. His first book is titled, Chapters In the Early Life of Thomas Oliver Larkin, the foreword being written by Dr. Bolton.

In 1941 he published a book, American West. In Scribner's Dictionary of American History, a few of his articles were published, and Hispanic Historical Review, this being published at Duke University.

At the present time the last of his works published is a book on Western Hemisphere, the first part of which concerns the colonial period and is to be used as a text for students. In the future, there will be another part which will bring this study up-to-date in the many happenings in this world of today. At the present time, he is writing a novel with the professor of English at Oregon.

In keeping with his writings, he is the associate editor of the California Historical Society Quarterly. He was appointed to this position through his writings.

Dr. Parker is a member of the Pi Sigma Alpha, honorary political science society, and the American Historical Society at Washington.

Quoting Dr. Parker, "My philosophy is to get as much fun as possible out of life while I can."

To the entering students who will be included in Dr. Parker's history classes, they may look forward to a very enlightening semester of study, made more interesting by his avid interest and knowledge of the subject.

Menlo Wins; Rams Face Stockton Five

Loom As Favorites To Beat Tiger Cubs Tomorrow Night; Oakies Capture 53-41 Game

By Jimmy Lee

Fresh from a closely played game against the Menlo Junior College Panthers, the college varsity is all pepped-up as they leave Townsend Depot tomorrow morning for the game against Stockton Junior College tomorrow night. The tipoff will be at 8:15 sharp.

The Menlo tilt started off at a slow pace, until the Oaks broke the scoring column with the first two points of the night.

Although they took few shots, the Menlo players seemed to have uncanny ability in scoring points, for they rarely missed a bucket in the first half. Menlo led at the halfway point, 22-15.

Oaks Pull Away

As the third quarter rolled on, the Oaks slowly pulled away, but in the closing minutes of the final period, the Red and White cut their opponent's lead in half, with Jack Terry, Alex Adorador, and Mel Dropo swishing points through the net from any and all angles.

This sudden scoring threat was dampened again, however, as Menlo put on the pressure and slowly pulled away, and maintained their lead until the final whistle, 53-41.

High point honors for the Rams during the evening went to Jack Terry with 12. Alex Adorador with 10 and Captain Mel Dropo with seven, were next to follow.

Thirteen players will go on the trip to Stockton, and transportation will be either by bus or by players bringing their own cars.

Cubs Are Weakest Team

Although the Stockton Tiger Cubs are the weakest team in the league, they cannot be considered a pushover, as any team that plays on its home court is always dangerous. This can be seen by Stockton's position last season, when, although at the bottom of the league, they beat two of the leading teams of the junior college conference in surprising upsets.

Stockton has been beaten by every team thus far, and all by huge scores. The Cubs are the only team in the league to have in use the fan-shaped backboards on their court, which makes it exceedingly difficult for any team to score at first, but after the Rams have a short work-out on Stockton's pavilion, they should become familiar with the set up.

Rams Have .500 Average

With three victories, as against three defeats, the Rams have maintained a .500 average thus far this season. They have defeated San Mateo 57 to 43, Yuba City College 51 to 50, and Modesto 37 to 36, and lost to Marin, the present league leaders, Sacramento, a game behind Marin, and Menlo.

The tilt against San Mateo proved to be an easy win as the Rams scored at will, with Jack Terry grabbing top scoring honors with 15 points. The game against Yuba, however, was very close, with the college quintet trailing by 13 points with five minutes to play, and suddenly getting "hot" to pour it on and come through the final winner. Jack Terry again was high point man.

The Modesto game was also very close, and it wasn't decided until the final gun sounded. The contest saw the college five holding a very slim one point lead at the game's conclusion. Again Jack Terry was high point man with 15 digits.

Against Sacramento, Captain Mel Dropo was high with 12 points, and in the Marin contest, he hit the bucket for 15 points.

Varsity Pressed For Men

The varsity is hard pressed for material at present, with the untimely loss of Bob Cunningham, Ram star forward, whose vacancy will be greatly felt as the season continues. Cunningham was one of the varsity's sharpshooters, and an excellent ball handler. The other player lost to the varsity for the remainder of the season will be Gus Stromgren, another player with a deadly eye, and one of Coach Wilson's hopefuls at the guard position.

The only remaining veteran on the team this year is center Mel Dropo, who by his seasoned experience, will prove an able leader for the other members on the team. Jack Terry, leading scorer for the Rams, Alex Adorador, Frank Isola, Ray Sulprizio, Jack Roberts, and Norman Schue will make up the entire varsity squad.

Junior Varsity To Help

Thus, with only seven men on the varsity, Coach Tom Wilson will undoubtedly have to bring up some material from the junior varsity to fill out the remaining reserve position for his varsity quintet.

In the practice contests played thus far this season, and with the six conference games already played, the varsity has molded itself into a solid, compact unit, with each member on the squad an important cog in the effectiveness of its winning power. Including the game against Stockton tomorrow night, the Rams have six conference games remaining on their schedule, with the final game of the season to be played against Salinas Junior College at Salinas.

Alex Adorador, stocky Ram forward, will undoubtedly see plenty of action tomorrow night when the Rams invade the campus of Stockton Junior College.

Dropo Solves Problem; Terry Leading Scorer

WILSON DESPERATE

In desperate need of replacements at the beginning of the year for cagers who possessed the finesse and experience as exhibited by last season's Ram quintet, Tom Wilson has produced a squad thus far, capable of matching the abilities of other junior college quintets in California.

Wilson's first problem was the search for a player who could direct his offensive and defensive formations efficiently through moments of high tension as successfully done by Captain George Mossler, last year's high scoring guard.

Who should he select? Right in the midst of the many floundering basketeers who pathetically attempted to dribble and shoot in Wilson's fall basketball class, hoping to land a varsity berth, his inevitable choice seemed no less surprising than the day it was announced.

His first choice was Mel Dropo, and rightly so, for Dropo had been the second leading scorer for the Red and White in 1941 behind Mossler. An All City center from Poly High, Mel was transformed into a forward last year, a position vitally strange to him, yet blossomed forth into one of the most dependable forwards in the conference.

SWITCHED AGAIN

With the loss of Mossler, Dropo again has assumed new duties, this time at guard, another strange position, where to date he has excelled in rebound work off the backboard and continued his long distance shooting.

If his all around play continues, Dropo has all the possibilities of becoming the leading guard in the conference.

The modest Mel will probably deny many of these things, but the official scorebook and words from his fellow players will verify these statements.

After making Dropo the so-called quarterback, Wilson had but one veteran remaining, namely, John Cunningham, fleet footed forward. At present, John has played his usually good floor game, but has had trouble finding the hoop with regular consistency. If and when Cunningham does regain his eye, he will add considerably to the Ram offensive game.

TERRY STARS

A newcomer to the Ram roster, however, has taken over the practice of filling the mesh with field goals in the person of Jack Terry, terror from Washington High. Terry, possessing an uncanny eye and fortunate of speed, has led the squad from an offensive standpoint.

Another difficult assignment for Wilson to fill was to replace guard Bob Staynor, who was remembered for his rebound work, dribbling, and floormanship. No cager has performed up to the abilities of Staynor, but through tedious practice sessions, Wilson has been attempting to develop a similar likeness from guards Gus Stromgren, Ray Calderon, Don Winter, and Ray Sulprizio.

From these candidates, none has virtually cinched a berth, and Wilson has been content to name a stating player only before game time.

RECORD UPHELD

True, this year's edition lacks the height advantage held by last season's maplewooders, but Wilson's crew, nevertheless, holds a record thus far comparable to the 1941 Rams.

The squad holds victories over San Mateo, Modesto, and Yuba, while setbacks were received from Sacramento and Marin.

Riflemen Have Chance For Second Place; Retain Trophy For Successive Years

Holding a firm grip on the third spot in the San Francisco Rifle Association League, the Ram marksmen have a good chance of moving into second place before the final match is shot, at a yet unannounced future date, according to Jim Juri, head of the college sharpshooters.

The college gunners rounded out a highly successful fall semester of activity by copping the college division title in the Napa Rifle and Pistol Club bay area meet last Sunday at Napa. This marks the second successive year that the Rams have copped this college division trophy. The meet will not take place again for at least a year.

Team Enters Hearst Shoot

A team from the college will be entered in the Annual Hearst Trophy Shoot, but Juri doesn't hold much hope of garnering anything in the way of honors in this event, because of the extremely stiff competition that is always entered. Experienced teams from almost every rifle organization in the country will shoot in the tournament, which will be a telegraphic meet. That is, all teams will shoot in their respective areas and send verified scores to the central scoring office for official marking.

Large Turnout Expected

Juri anticipates a widely increased enrollment for the coming semester, because of the present war situation. He said that the high schools last season produced an abundance of fine marksmen, and he hopes that some of them will come to the college with their talents.

Approximately eight Ram riflemen have qualified for awards and will be presented with block sweaters for their participation in last semester's matches, Juri reported.

Intramural

Program To Be Conducted Again This Semester; Brady Directs

As usual in past semesters, the men students' intramural program will be held, Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser announced this week.

The purpose of the intramural program is so designed to provide recreational and competitive activities for students who have neither the time nor the ability to compete on the varsity teams, and yet have a desire to take part in a particular athletic activity.

Following are the rules and regulations for the Intramural program this semester as released by Brady:

Managers Selected

1. Organization of the intramurals.

a. The intramural director is charged with the planning and supervision of the program.

b. The student intramural manager is charged with the administering of the program. He will post daily bulletins concerning the program, be responsible for the bulletin board, publicity and keeping the publicity file, and keeping the file on the history and results of each activity.

c. Assistant intramural managers are charged with such duties as are delegated to him.

d. Sports managers are charged with the supervision of the sport that they manage.

e. The student intramural manager (upon recommendation) will receive a block award, and the assistant manager will receive a circle award. Sports managers will be given first consideration in the selection of assistant managers.

Round Robin Planned

2. Sports for this semester.

a. Round robin tournaments will be played in basketball and touch-tackle; elimination tournaments will be played in softball and volleyball. Individual activities will include tennis, badminton, swimming, horseshoes, rifle, boxing, track, table tennis, and free throws.

1. Softball

a. Games will be seven innings long but scores of games not completed by 4:30 p.m. will revert to the last completed inning.

2. Volleyball

a. Teams will be composed of six men.

b. Teams will play two out of three fifteen point games.

c. A team may play with less than six men if agreeable to the other team.

3. Touch Tackle

a. Rules, etc. will be published in The Guardsman.

4. Tennis

a. One singles and one doubles tournament.

5. Badminton

a. One singles and one doubles tournament.

6. Swimming

a. One swimming meet, events to be given will be published in The Guardsman, upon recommendation of the swimming instructor.

7. Track Meet

a. Consists of 13 events. No one will be allowed to compete unless they have put in a training period that will meet Mr. Sweet's requirements.

8. Boxing

a. Elimination tournaments will be held in gym periods under the direction of Mr. Jensen. The finals will be held in conjunction with the AMS at the Coliseum Bowl.

9. Individual events

a. Elimination tournaments will be held. Horseshoes, rifle, table tennis, and free throws.

Games Start Promptly

3. Athletic Period

a. Will start at 3:30 p.m. and end at 5:00 p.m. every college day.

4. Entrants Requirements

a. Filling of an application blank is necessary for participation in any event. The entry blanks are published in the college paper and they must be filled in on or before the date appearing thereon. Any organization may enter a team, college club, fraternity, or organization.

5. Eligibility

a. All members of the student body and faculty are eligible, except a student may not compete in any which he has won a varsity award. A faculty member may not enter a sport that he is coaching.

b. To be eligible to receive an award a student must have a student body card.

Trophy Awarded

6. Point System

a. In round robin sports the winning team receives 100 points; second, 80; third, 60; fourth, 40, and fifth, 20 points.

b. Track events, first place, five; second, three points; third, two points; fourth, one point. Swimming is on the same basis.

c. Team elimination tournaments to count as 50 for first, 40 for second, 30 for third, and 20 for fourth.

d. Individual elimination tournaments: first, 25; second, 20; third, 15, and fourth, 10.

e. Rifle and archery: first place 12; second, 9; third, 6, and fourth, 3 points.

f. Boxing: first, 12; second, 6 points in all classes.

g. When a contestant enters an activity, or a team enters, they will indicate for what organization they wish to compete.

h. Points will be compiled and the organization having the greatest number will be awarded the intramural sports trophy.

Baseball

Two Pitchers Bolster Ram Pitching Staff

By Ed Coffin

With his two ace pitchers returning to the college for the spring semester, and with a well-rounded turnout expected, Jack Gaddy, Ram baseball mentor, is anticipating a better than fair season, starting with the first practice next Monday, February 9, at the Ocean View Playground.

Andy Adams, mound mainstay of last year's diamondmen, is one of the returning twirlers, and the other is Ed Flora, outstanding reserve artist of last season.

Gaddy Expects Veterans

Gaddy is somewhat optimistic about the approaching season, with the two pitchers back, and he expects to greet several other veterans of past campaigns. He did, however, make no predictions or promises as to the outcome of the forthcoming encounters.

That the war and defense jobs should have no effect on the college baseball situation is one of the preseason statements that Coach Gaddy did make.

Several practice games are being lined up for the first few weeks of practice, with the first one tentatively scheduled for Thursday, February 19.

Pitching Main Factor

The Rams finished well up in the top bracket of the league standings last spring, after a shaky start. At first they couldn't seem to catch on to the hitting idea, and the upholding factor of the squad was the superior pitching.

Later, as the hitting and fielding began to improve, the college nine garnered several wins to rescue an otherwise poor season. This year, with the moundsmen back, Gaddy is hoping to get the fielding and hitting difficulties ironed out at an early stage of the season, and thus to pile up a larger amount of wins.

Competitive Activities Features WAA Events

With the new physical education program, Women's Athletic Association activities will be reserved for competitive activities, according to Janice Berch, president of the organization.

Through the WAA, women will have an opportunity to organize tournaments, playdays and recreational mixers with student leadership, while freshmen will have an opportunity to meet both new and old students.

Mixer Dance Soon

Initial social activity for the group will be a "get-acquainted" mixer probably during Orientation week, Miss Berch announced. The mixer will be open to all women of the college, with a special invitation extended to freshmen.

Sign-ups for WAA membership will take place at the mixer, Miss Berch said. Although previously all sign-ups were made during registration.

The program planned for the semester's activities will include a swimming playday Saturday, February 14, at San Jose State College, an ice skating carnival scheduled for Saturday, March 7 at Winterland, badminton playday at San Mateo on Saturday, March 7, and an archery field day at Golden Gate Park in late spring.

Play Day At State

The general play day, at which all WAA clubs will participate, will be given by San Francisco State College in May.

As first aid, nutrition, and knitting groups have attracted many women, the WAA may organize a Civilian Defense Corps for college women, Miss Berch revealed, although no definite plans will be announced until after sign-ups and clubs are organized.

Hours and days designated for WAA activities will be available at the gym, Miss Berch said, and will be announced later.

Women Rifle Classes Suspended For Indefinite Time; Extensive Training Offered Men Students Of College

Rifle classes for the college women have been suspended for the time being, except possibly for the Women's Athletic Association, according to Jim Juri, who heads the college rifle team.

Extensive training will, however, be offered the men of the college, and physical education credit will be given for rifle team participation. Team practices will be held from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays on the college range. Other advanced and elementary courses are open to the men.

All men are eligible to enroll in the elementary rifle classes, while the advanced rifle training is restricted to those who have had some previous rifle experience. Entrance to the latter classes may be obtained by permission of the rifle instructor, Al Eisan.

National Defense

Nation's War Effort Aided By New College Activity As Aviation, Business, Red Cross Classes Promote New Program Of Defense; Student Help Anticipated

Business

Cooperating in the national defense effort, the business department of the college is providing short intensive courses of study which will train students for early entry into business positions.

For those who have had no business training, but are anxious to start earning immediately, faculty members of the business department urge completion of short courses in fundamental business skills. A student, they feel, can be prepared for certain types of clerical work in a period of six to eight weeks of intensive study. Better jobs, they point out, naturally require more advanced training.

Clerical Opportunity In Service

Many men who are expecting to be called for military duty may insure rapid promotion within the ranks by acquiring the clerical skills of typing, filing, and record-keeping, the business staff emphasizes.

Late Afternoon Classes Offered

Those who are already employed, they point out, may find it possible to secure promotion by perfecting added skills. Late afternoon classes offered this semester between 3 and 6 p.m. will make it possible for students to carry a part-time job requiring morning hours of work and still secure added training.

Even those students who have determined upon a full university course, members of the department believe, should prepare for some practical job by taking a short business training at the college. This training, they feel, will insure the student of a good position in emergencies.

New Jobs For Women

More and more women, college business instructors find, are being employed to fill positions once held only by men. Women who show ability in arithmetic, they maintain, are readily employable, especially if this aptitude is accompanied by some skill in the use of simple business machines.

Free Placement Service

For some months past, the college employment office has had more jobs to offer employable students than there have been students prepared for employment, the business staff reveals. As soon as the individual has prepared himself for employment, the staff assures, he will be placed immediately in a job commensurate with the degree of skill he has acquired. In addition the employment office will keep in contact with him until such time as it feels that both the individual and the employer are mutually satisfied.

Aviation

In keeping with the vast Civilian Pilot Training program throughout the country, the college, in conjunction with the University of San Francisco, is offering fine opportunities in aviation to the men, according to Beverly Pasqualetti, aviation adviser for the college.

Extensive ground work is available through a large variety of courses offered, while those passing a rigid physical examination are given flight instruction at Sparks, Nevada. The actual flying was formerly handled at the San Francisco Airport, but, since the national emergency, has been transferred inland, in accordance with the request of the War Department.

Students qualifying for the flying do not do all of their work at Sparks, for they have many hours of work to do in the class rooms at the college.

Course Available At College

Although most of the fliers get a majority of their ground work at the University of San Francisco, a complete course, including most of the phases of the subject, is included in the college curriculum.

The only cost incurred by the students is living expenses, while at Sparks during flying, and, in the event that a student is rejected from flying physically, the cost of such an examination must be paid by that student. If the physical is passed, that expense is taken care of by the government, as well as the student's insurance while he is flying.

After completion of the course, the student may enlist in the Air Corps crew. An aptitude test is then given him to determine whether the student shall be a pilot, navigator or bombardier.

A large field is also open to aerial photographers, and a complete list of courses is offered at the college along this line.

Major George Richards, Civilian Pilot Training head at the college, conducts the ground school work at the college during the week, and spends each week-end in Sparks supervising the flight training.

Dr. Berman Aids Program

Practical air navigation, a new part of the training, is a basic defense course for intended air pilots, radio operators or navigators. No one course is prerequisite to the other. Students may choose any combination of the following courses: Astronomy 12a, fundamental principles of aircraft piloting and navigation by dead reckoning, chart and map reading, and aircraft navigation instruments. This course is available Mondays, Wednesday and Fridays in Room 312 from 2:10 p.m. to 3 p.m.; Astronomy 12b concerns fundamental principles of radio navigation, preparation leading to radio operator's license, and code practice. This is offered Tuesdays and Thursdays in Room 312 from 1:10 p.m. until 2:25 p.m.; Astronomy 12c, the fundamental principles of celestial navigation, determination of position by sextant observations of the heavenly bodies and practice in the use of the sextant, air almanac tables and chronometer. This is given Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, from 12:10 p.m. until 1 p.m. in Room 312.

Louis Berman is the instructor for all of the astronomy courses.

Pasqualetti explained that most of the present aviation courses have just been added to the program and that the rules governing them are all subject to change from time to time. In fact, he reported that the whole program is undergoing constant changes and that nothing is certain except the fact that a definite need is at hand for trained airmen.

Although the supply of yarn from Red Cross knitters has been exhausted, knitting instruction will continue until more yarn can be obtained, Claire Cuneo, home economics instructor, revealed recently.

Until the manager of the production room at the Red Cross center on Sutter Street recovers from illness there will be a halt in the amount of yarn distributed to Red Cross units, Miss Cuneo said.

New and old students whether experienced or beginners, should report to Room 158 and sign-up for knitting so there will be no delay when the next supply of yarn arrives.

In addition to knitting, sewing for evacuee children will also be done, Miss Cuneo pointed out.

As so many evacuee families leave their homes on such short notice, the need for warm clothes is urgent. Sewing on the children's garments may be done either at home or in the home economics rooms.

All women who still have sweaters or scarfs unfinished must report twice a week to Miss Cuneo so their work may be checked, and the women are urged to finish as soon as possible so that a complete display of the work may be arranged.

Women who work for the college Red Cross unit will be credited for the number of hours put into each garment, and at the end of a certain period will be awarded a service pin. Ten hours credit is allotted for a scarf, 20 for a sweater and 7 to 9 for a dress. Pins will be awarded for a total of 144 hours.

Until additional yarn is received, many women are knitting six inch squares from yarn of any color. When four hundred of these squares are knitted a blanket will be formed, Miss Cuneo stated. Any women doing any knitting at all is asked to knit at least one square so that she may be represented on the blanket.

Knitting for the unit was begun during the Christmas holidays, Miss Cuneo explained, when a number of women spent their mornings organizing the unit in hopes that it would eventually develop into the second production center in the city, the only other one being located at 625 Sutter Street.

Photography Courses Entered In Three Majors

Aviation, peace officer, and floriculture students may be interested in the four new photography courses offered this semester. Those who wish to enroll for any of these classes should see Beverly Pasqualetti, instructor, immediately.

Photography 64, a one unit demonstration course in elementary photography, is offered Mondays and Wednesdays at 2 o'clock. Floriculture 64, a two unit elementary course in Kodachrome technique and handling of cameras, is scheduled for Tuesdays from 2 until 5 o'clock. Peace Officers 64, fundamental police photography, a two unit course, will be given on Thursdays from 2 until 5 o'clock. Aviation 64, a basic two unit military course in photography, is to be conducted Tuesdays and Thursdays at 9 o'clock.

Invents Dust Eliminator And Traps New By-Product

SEATTLE, WASH. — (ACP) — A University of Washington professor's dust-elimination invention literally has snatched a valuable wood by-product out of thin air.

Professor Frederick K. Kirsten, school of aeronautical engineering, has disclosed how his application of the principle of centrifugal force to dust-laden air has resulted a process by which fine wood dust—"wood flour"—can be reclaimed for use in plastics.

The machine takes dust out of the air by setting it in whirling motion at terrific speed. The dust is thrown out by centrifugal force while the clean air is taken off at the center.

He said wood flour sells for about $35 a ton.

Smaller units soon will be on production, he said, for use as dust filters on automobile carburetors.

College Financial Status Uncertain 'Til Next Week

Following an informal, unofficial meeting held this week, the finance committee is now awaiting additional requests for funds from various college organizations, Ted Green, committee chairman has announced.

Because official registration figures are not yet complete the committee must wait until next week before suggesting allotments to the Executive Council, Green said.

Plans have been made to hold the first regular meeting of the finance group early next week.

Don Hewitt and Jo Ann Hall are the other members of the committee, Don Jensen, president of the Associated Students, has announced.

Health Notes - - - -

(These Health Notes will contain weekly health items from the medical and hygiene department of the college.)

Reprinted from News Letter—Calif. Tuberculosis Assn., January, '42.

The possible evacuation of people from the coast areas to the interior, as a war measure, was brought forcibly to the attention of California people by the recent announced program of the State Department of Public Health.

Other matters of vital importance in a time of war to protect public health were disclosed by the request for funds by the same state department. Notably the matter of garbage disposal must be handled in a different manner. Instead of the huge garbage burning dumps, which are found to defeat the blackouts, new orders require that the garbage be handled by the "cut and cover" method. This disposes of the garbage quite as effectively as the burning method, but here again California builds itself a problem.

It takes time and expensive machinery to build garbage pits that are satisfactory. In this emergency, we shall have neither sufficient time nor proper machinery. Therefore, in these temporary garbage pits, the ground squirrels will find their friends the rats and promptly there will be an exchange of fleas. We must be on the alert to control an outbreak of plague.

Then there is the matter of water supply and the shortage of chlorine. What to do and how to keep our water supply safe in a war crisis is just one more of the responsibilities of the health departments.

Again, if people are to be evacuated from coast cities to the interior, how can the health departments unite to quickly service vast areas which now have no adequate sewer systems and other sanitary facilities?

In normal times, our vegetables and fruits of the best quality are marketed and the rest wasted. But in war times, even the culls from our fruit orchards and the less attractive of our vegetable will be needed. This again presents a problem in the question of residue spray. Also there is of course an extra precautionary measure needed to watch for food poisoning, which may be a far-fetched phobia but still possible.

Epidemics are due. We all expect influenza to break out in epidemics of large proportions. We also expect pneumonia and an increase in tuberculosis. And worse still we may expect some new and unknown epidemic, such as influenza was in the last great war. Our first of these epidemics is no longer a possibility, it is here. It has taken the form of a virulent conjunctivitis which is now causing great concern in our steel plants and ship-building works.

Curriculum

New Courses Widen Scope Of Studies

New subjects being offered this semester include Psychology 11, an orientation course required of students on probation; Art 70, a course in recreational crafts, and American Civilization, a history course dealing with democratic ideals.

Students attending the college on probation are required to enroll in the new orientation course. Psychology 11, for guidance in study procedures and occupational problems, Marion Turner, psychology instructor, announced this week.

Psychology Course Open

Freshman Orientation, Psychology 10ab may be taken for one or two units this semester, Miss Turner said. This course, open to entering freshmen concerns adjustment of the new student to the college environment, study problems, and vocational guidance.

Art 70, a new course in recreational crafts, including book binding, painting, clay modeling, and others, may also be taken for one or two units, according to Miss Turner.

Unit System Explained

Classes are offered Monday and Wednesday at 9. Students enrolled for Monday will receive one unit of credit. Those enrolled for both Monday and Wednesday will receive two units.

American Civilization, History 18, is given Tuesday and Thursday at 1:10 to 2:35 by Claude T. Silva and David Goldshur. Offered for the first time, this three unit course is a study of America's contribution to the democratic way of life.

and submitted to the Executive Council for approval.

Instruments Needed

Instruments also must be secured for the new classes because those now at the college fall short of being sufficient in the new program. It is expected that this difficulty will be done away with as soon as possible.

Credit is due President Archibald J. Cloud for his constant efforts in making the college band a reality, according to the registrar. It is largely through his efforts that the present courses are now part of the curriculum.

Included in the music courses offered for the first time are: music 15a, 16a, 19, and 21, all to be taught by Devlin. These are classes in orchestra, band, studio orchestra, and orchestration respectively.

Yell Leaders Needed

Tryouts for assistant yell leaders will be held next Tuesday in Room 147, at 1 o'clock, according to Jim Upp, the college's new yell leader.

Both men and women are requested to appear because two men and two women assistants will be chosen to assist Upp at future rallies and sports activities.

No previous experience in leading yells is needed, Upp added.

Physical Education

Women To Engage In Gym Health Activities

Physical education classes will meet four days a week this semester instead of two, Bertha M. Keller, Women's Physical Education Department chairman has revealed, to aid in the civilian defense health program outlined by Alice Marble.

The classes will be divided into two groups, physical fitness and recreational activities, Miss Keller announced. Physical fitness classes on Mondays and Wednesdays will include body building and conditioning, exercises such as marching, calisthenics and combative stunt will be offered. Such exercises will tend to improve posture, and develop strength and balance, Miss Keller said.

Recreational activities will include archery, badminton, basketball, dancing, tennis, swimming, bowling, skating, and softball. Rifle and riding will not be offered this semester to women, Miss Keller revealed. Students will meet in the gymnasium for their recreational activity the first day classes meet and will vote for their favorite activity. The activities receiving the most votes will be offered during this period, and students will be assigned to their special group.

Restricted students will be offered moderate exercises, activities, or relaxation as prescribed by Dr. Alice Potter, college physician. All restricted students must have a health recheck, and should see Doctor Potter during her office hours.

There will be no rainy day program of inactivity this semester, Miss Keller said. Classes will meet in the gymnasium for activity or exercise. Last semester classes met in the science building during the rainy day periods, but in order to get in 120 hours a semester physical education there will be no diversion from the regulation program.

Classes will begin when academic instruction begins, according to Miss Keller, with college attendance regulations prevailing.

All new students must have health examinations, she added, and should see Dr. Potter immediately if they have not already done so. Dr. Potter's office hours as released by the department will be on Mondays and Thursdays from 1 to 4 p.m. and on Tuesdays and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 12 M. in the women's gym.

sioner said that he was going to try to give the students rallies that they would really enjoy.

The complete rally commission has not as yet been chosen but those who have been accepted include: Jim Upp, yell leader; Dick Dickenson, Eloise Windfelt, Marshall Hyde, Jack Sherwood and Jack Sullivan. The committee is intended to be quite small but it is going to have students who are willing to work on it, Murphy said.

Hal Burdick To Speak

The name of the guest star for the first rally has not been officially announced but it is hoped that Hal Burdick, of Night Editor fame will be able to come out to the college. Other guests for the semester include prominent sportswriters, newscasters, dramatic critics of note and varied columnists.

The rally will be cut short 15 minutes so that class elections may be conducted immediately afterwards. The four classes will meet in the following rooms: high sophs in Room 100, low sophs in Room 204, high frosh in Room 209, and low frosh in Room 136.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 134, according to the following deadlines:

Wednesday, 11 a.m. for the Friday issue; Friday, 11 a.m. for the Tuesday issue.

- Chinese Students Club . . . Meeting for all Chinese students in Room 322 at 12:30 p.m. today. Discussion of membership card designing contest. New students are especially invited to be present.
- Forester's Fraternity . . . There will be a meeting of the Forester's Fraternity in Room 322 at 4 p.m. Tuesday, February 10. New students interested in obtaining information concerning membership in the fraternity are invited to attend.

Home Economics Meet

All students registered in Home Economics courses are urged to report to Room 158 Monday at 1 p.m., according to Claire Cuneo, instructor in the department, for an important meeting.

Students unable to come should report to either Francis Mount or Miss Cuneo some time Friday.

U.C. Dentistry Dean Sets Estimate Of Dentist Visits

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF. — (ACP)—Dr. Willard C. Fleming, dean of the University of California college of dentistry, estimates the average American should spend three hours and 12 minutes each year with his dentist.

In each 100,000 persons, he said, at least 90,000 have dental disorders.

New Semester Results In More Job Openings

Preparations for the new semester have had a direct effect on college employment, according to Joseph A. Amori, college employment director.

In making out their new schedule many students have found it impossible to continue working. The result, Amori declared, is an abundance of jobs, not new jobs but jobs that have been held by college men and women last semester.

Hospitals account for a number of these open positions, with urgent requests for orderlies. Besides general orderly work there are openings in pathology and autopsy.

Instructors to teach hobbies, dancing and sports are also in demand, said Amori. The hours are adjustable to the individual and wages are mainly 65 cents an hour.

Further information about these and many other positions may be had by applying at the college employment office.

The army's new "shirtpocket" food rations—12-ounce, condensed meals—were developed by Dr. Ancel Keys of the University of Minnesota.

Associated Students

Jensen Requests Aid Of Students In Campus Spirit

To raise spirit through increased membership in college organizations, Don Jensen, newly elected president of the Associated Students, announced last Monday, February 3, the beginning of a new drive to bring students into active participation in college activities.

The various clubs, fraternities and other similar organizations, explained Jensen, will play a vital part in the future entertainment program for the college. These clubs, approximately 40 in number will also help to supply the spirit that is lacking at present; and yet so essential to an institution such as this, he said.

Activities Curtailed

Because the present budget calls for a cutting of extra expenses, many college activities and functions usually sponsored by the Associated Students will not be held this semester; and it is here that the various clubs will be called upon to do their part, Jensen said.

The plan would call for a greater effort on the part of the organization of the college to hold more activities and social functions.

Students, he added, would be urged to join clubs and organizations that would be of interest to them and by which they would find enjoyment in joining.

CAB Announces Plans

Jensen also revealed that the Club Advisory Board had future plans for a "Join a Club Week," to help increase the membership of the various clubs and organizations of the college.

These clubs, he said, possess spirit and enthusiasm, as well as the interest of their members, and with the widening of the membership, that same feeling of enthusiasm may spread throughout the entire student body.

Jensen revealed that Jim Duryea, associated men students president, and Ed Lopez of the CAB, were in favor of the plan and that both had pledged their full support.

Duryea and Jensen have made plans to visit the various clubs and fraternities to place the plan before the groups personally. The entire success of this plan depends on the cooperation of these groups, he emphasized.

"At present I am concentrating on plans for a successful Orientation Week, but at the first opportunity, I shall start actual work on the completion of the present plan."

More Interest Desired

He added, "I hope that many of the students will take more of an active interest in the functioning of the student government.

"Many students are displeased with the way certain affairs are handled," he said, "but not one person will come forward and speak to an active officer and express his ideas or opinion. I hope to correct this situation before the semester is over. I urge any student of the college to come and speak to me about any matter concerning the Associated Students."

ball; Tom Wilson, basketball and tennis, and Jim Jensen, boxing.

Additional Entertainment

To supplement this schedule of speakers Duryea has scheduled for entertainment some performers from a local talent bureau (Fanchon and Marco) and a small orchestra.

"I personally assure each and every student a full evening of pleasure, hilarity, and one grand time," Duryea declared.

To fill out the evening Duryea said that there will be plenty of free "food and entertainment" for all the students attending.

Assisting in the arrangements of the smoker are Bill Steenberg, AMS vice-president; Nick Barbarotto, AMS secretary; Dick Clayton, Jack Sullivan, Jim Upp, and Joe Lewis.

Come Early

Duryea said that all men students should plan to attend the smoker because it will be the biggest in years and will be a good chance for everyone to become acquainted with one another. It will give the men students a chance to learn what sports are open to them in both regular team competition and intramural activities.

Admission to the smoker will be by student body card. The site of the smoker is located at 1750 Clay Street, between Polk and Van Ness. Duryea suggests that students come early and get a good seat for the evening's entertainment.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

SANE men cause little trouble in this world. It is only when they have tasted of any of several types of brew that they cause attention to be paid them.

Alexander the Great, famed cutter of the Gordian knot and conqueror of the known world, tasted of the brew of Bacchus—and burned a mighty city to the ground. Roman generals tasted of the brew of fame and led their people into costly and useless campaigns.

And in this modern era a few men have tasted of the brew of idolatry, and have found in that sip cause to change the world. These men find that first sip insatiable. It does not quench their thirst though they drink again and again. It is not meant to quench, but to cause a want for further drink.

Bacchus may cause a momentary lull in the senses of the mortal man, fame lasts until the public hero falls from the glances of the mob—but the brew of idolatry lasts a life-time, and the only cure is death.

A NATION'S CREATION

But this idolatry is not a creation of wise men; rather it is the creation of a nation too weary and worn to care. When the feeling of responsibility has fled, when the urge to govern oneself no longer exists, when apathy and lethargy cloud the rational powers of human beings, then this brew becomes most potent.

It does not exist in the realm of a free people. It cannot so exist. The art of being free is the art of smothering idolatry. It is the art of having neither clouded senses nor godlike heroes. It is the ability and the art and the determination to live a free, a non-tyrannical existence.

And this determination is backed by a united action. When a country is free there is no such thing as one man, or clique, control.

HE WAS THE FIRST

Of several, one man has tasted this treacherous concoction in greater proportion than any of his compatriots. Because he was first to feel its full force, because he was first to succumb to its enveloping seduction, it has been his lot to bring about most of the discomfort and trouble that the world now feels.

It is the claim of some that Adolph Hitler is the creation of an age, the child of an ill-drawn treaty, the poorly begotten son of a bloody and stupid war. Therein lies some truth—but greater truth lies elsewhere.

The creation of an age? Surely not of an American age. For at what time in the history of this country was there the desire for such a son? Since the landing of the first Englishman these shores have boasted individuals and never bunds or racial groups. War has always been a thing that should be fought if need be—but only if need be.

NO AMERICAN VERSION

The child of an ill-drawn treaty? Surely not the child of an American version of any treaty. Was not our President over-ruled in his desire for a more Americanized version; did he not travel 3,000 miles to be considered a dreaming idealist?

The poorly begotten son of a bloody and stupid war? Perhaps so. Indeed it was a stupid war. For who else but a stupid American would fight to the death so that people he never knew might live in freedom? Who else but a stupid American would leave his home and his country to defend the populations of small and weak nations? No, Hitler is not the poorly begotten son of any American battle.

Rather he is the creature of a people who have never known what liberty and the rights of many truly meant. He is the son of a nation that was never a nation; but which has been, as long as history can record, the nation of a king, or clan, or leader.

WHOSE FAULT AND WHY?

Are these people in this nation to blame. Is it their guilt that their land is an aggressor, at war with a more civilized world? Not at all. In their lack of knowledge and adequate training they have built around one man the powers and the abilities of a god. They have had no other knowledge, they have known nothing else, and so they have turned to him who seems to have the greater strength. Him they have made an idol—a thing to be worshipped—an all powerful. They have given him a bitter cup from which to drink, a cup whose final sip is oblivion. These people

Parking Lot

Plans Made To Begin Work In March

Appropriations have been made by the Board of Education for a parking lot to be built on the south side of the campus, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne.

"The Board of Education has not deemed it wise to let the contract as yet because of the present muddy condition of the lot. Work on the lot will probably begin about the middle of March," the dean said.

Lot Permanent

The parking lot, which will be permanent, will be a wide strip of concrete with diagonal lines for parking spaces to be painted on one side. The lot, as planned, will accommodate about 200 cars.

Eventually a larger lot will be built on the north side of the campus but this will not be constructed until some time in the very distant future, the dean revealed.

Hill Parkers Warned

He also warned students about parking on the side of the hill. Often cars parked on the side of the hill become obstacles for people who find it necessary to get to the top of the hill to pick up or unload some merchandise.

"Any student who parks on the side of the hill leading up to the college will probably be fined a dollar for their troubles," the dean said.

Consult Advisers In Program Changes

Any changes of programs or changes in the hours of a course, to be made between now and the time for filing program books, should be taken up with the individual instructor and the student's adviser, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

After the filing of the books, students must obtain a change of program slip from the registrar's office before dropping or entering another course.

It is imperative that all books be filed on the day which is stamped on the registration book, Miss Learnard revealed.

Books Must Be Filed

"No student," she continued, "will be allowed to enter class if the registration book is not filed in the registrar's office on the date appointed."

The dates for filing books are, February 11, for returning students, and February 13, for new students. Registration will close on February 13, at 5 o'clock. Only special students will be allowed to register after this date.

All prospective graduating students are requested to sign graduation petitions with Mary B. Perry in the office as soon as possible.

Graduation Petitions March 2

Graduating students should consult with either Miss Learnard or their advisers, Miss Learnard said. All graduating students must file petitions by March 2, so that grades and units may be checked.

Miss Learnard also revealed that approximately 2200 students have enrolled to date. This is a slight drop over last semester, she said.

No College Classes Thurs. No Guardsman Friday

Because classes will not meet Thursday, February 12, Lincoln's Birthday, no paper will be issued next Friday, Francis Chrisman, Guardsman editor, said last Friday. Other holidays this month will be Monday, February 23, Washington's Birthday, and Wednesday and Thursday, February 25 and 26, Institute days.

Debate Team To Stockton For Three Day Meeting

Representing the college in a three day public speaking meet, the college debate squad will travel to the College of the Pacific at Stockton, Thursday, February 12, Lloyd Luckmann, adviser for the group, announced Friday.

The contest will include oratory, extemporaneous speaking, and radio announcing, Luckmann added.

Fitness Done To Music; Gym Classes For Defense Hold Secret

Captain Rogers and his rangers had a disagreeable time in "Northwest Passage" thrashing around in swamps and woods, but little did they know that San Francisco Junior College students would some day experience some of the same unbelievable hardships.

To go to the gymnasium twice a week via Niagara Walk was quite bad enough, several coeds state, but in addition the physical education department supplemented another compulsory course, Physical Fitness.

In reality, this new course is advanced for national defense by such prominent sport leaders as Alice Marble and Gene Tunney! Physical Fitness will include body building and conditioning exercises which will include a carefully graded progressive group of exercises of the Danish and Swedish gymnastics type.

Each class will be divided into two sections. When the indoor section meets music will be used to increase the enjoyment and freedom of movement. Among the subjects to be offered are, marching, calisthenics, and combative stunts.

It is the hope of the physical education department that postures will improve, and poise, balance, and strength will be developed. The real attitude of the women students toward this revised program has been typical of American women who are eager to prepare themselves for trying days ahead.

The registration poster fully expresses the idea of the course.

"Thumbs up to do your bit Four days to keep you fit."

Music Department

New Credit Courses In Band, Orchestra Offered Students

For the first time in the history of the college, classes will be held in both band and orchestra, according to Madison J. Devlin, college music instructor.

One unit credit will be given for these classes which will meet once a week. The band class will be held from 2 to 4 o'clock every Thursday afternoon, and the orchestra will meet each Tuesday afternoon during the same hours.

There has been a small enrollment in both of these courses because no notice of the courses was given in the schedule book.

Some Instruments Loaned

Some larger instruments such as basses and baritones will be loaned to the students from the college supply of instruments. All students signing up for these instrumental courses who play either the trumpet, trombone, or clarinet, must have their own instruments.

There are no prerequisites for the course except that the student have a fair knowledge of the musical qualities of the instruments which they play, Devlin said.

Beginners classes will not be held because the college does not have enough instruments to start such classes, Devlin revealed.

Band To Play At Rallies

No definite dates have been decided from either organization to play for as yet, but Devlin intends to have the band play for rallies through the semester and possibly for several basketball games.

"Performance dates will be made as soon as the groups get in a little practice," Devlin confirmed.

A small group, which will be used as a studio orchestra, has also been formed and the class will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 1 o'clock in Room 147, Devlin said.

This group will play for radio broadcasts and other functions where just a small orchestra is needed. One unit credit will also be given for this course, Devlin announced.

More Players Needed

"We would like more students to sign up for these musical courses as soon as possible so that we may get organized and make arrangements to appear for college activities," the music instructor concluded.

Call Issued For Student Assistant Yell Leaders

Tryouts for assistant yell leaders will be held today in Room 169, at 1 o'clock, according to Jim Upp, the college's new yell leader.

Both men and women are requested to appear because two men and two women assistants will be chosen to assist Upp at future rallies and sports activities.

No previous experience in leading yells is needed, Upp added.

Defense Stamps Sold At Finance Office

Defense stamps, in denominations of ten to twenty-five cents, are now on sale in the finance office, Room 188, Michael Zarchin, faculty treasurer, announced last week. Students of the college are urged to patronize the school in this defense effort.

Commuting tickets of the various transportation system in the city can be bought here also. The office is open from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. each day.

Rally Commission Schedules Caravan

The rally commission has asked that all those students who were planning on attending the Marin Junior College basketball game, join the caravan that will leave the front of the college at seven-thirty on Tuesday evening.

A rally is being planned by the commission, for Wednesday afternoon in the front of the college, weather permitting. Bob Murphy, rally commissioner, asked that all students attend the first rally of the new semester.

Basketball Team Slated

The basketball team will be introduced and there will be speeches by Dean Edwin C. Browne and by President Archibald J. Cloud.

The guest star has not been named but it is announced that he will be a prominent radio personality. The rally commission is initiating a rule of having a well known guest star at every rally.

All Freshmen Invited

"For those freshmen who want to get acquainted with the officers or the Associated Students, I ask that they attend the rally and join in the activities. Don't be afraid to yell when the yell leader asks you to because you may not know the yells. Lots of older students don't know them and anyway we just want you to make a lot of noise," Jim Upp, yell leader, commented.

Upp added that he hoped that all students who are going to the Marin game will take at least one friend along. The success of future caravans depends on the student reaction to this one.

Murphy said that if he had the student's cooperation in this rally the ones to follow would be among the best that the college has ever known. He is planning to present "more rallies with more entertainment than has been the custom."

The entire rally commission will be on hand to help make the first affair one of enjoyment for all who attend, Murphy said.

More Jobs Available For Men In Retailing Fields

"Learn while you earn." Students enrolled in retail merchandising curriculum will attend class in the morning and work in the afternoon in leading department stores, Miss Virginia Gohn, retail merchandising instructor, pointed out.

The demand for young men in the retailing field is increasing and many positions are open to college students, Miss Gohn said. Those enrolled in Business 10a, retail merchandising, will receive college credit for their part time employment in department stores, Miss Gohn emphasized. Remuneration will be at the prevailing wage scale.

Those interested in this course are asked to apply immediately to Miss Gohn in her office, Room 224.

Smoker

AMS Show Tomorrow At Calif. Club

Last minute changes in arrangements for the semi-annual Associated Men Students' smoker, scheduled for tomorrow evening, has placed the event at the California Women's Club, 1750 Clay Street, 8 to 10:30 p.m., Jim Duryea, newly elected AMS president, has announced.

Featured in an evening unequaled in the history of the college, as smokers go, according to Duryea, is a sport-studded program which will include many of the leading authorities on spring sports in Northern California.

Sportsmen On Program

Attending the smoker to add their contributions to the program will be Walter Mails and a few members of the Seals baseball team; Charlie Hunter, Olympic Club track coach; Doug Montell and Ernie Smith, local sport announcers; Jeff Cravath, Forest Twogood, and Jimmy Needles, University of San Francisco football, basketball coaches and athletic director; Bill Leiser and "Curly" Grieve, Chronicle and Examiner sports writers, and Ernie Cope, News sports writer.

Packed into the smoker will be talks on college spring sports by the college coaches, each coach to his particular sport. Featured as entertainment during the evening will be "a sleight-of-hand artist," one of the best on the Pacific Coast, Duryea said.

Student Talent On Program

Supplementing this entertainment will be several selections of the college quartet, school songs and yells led by Jim Upp, college yell leader, and a small piece band to add a bit of background music to the theme "Spring Sports."

Because of a limit to the amount of time that the administration has assessed to the smoker, the reason being the day of the calendar, Duryea revealed that everyone who plans to attend this men's part of Orientation Week, should come early and find a suitable seat so that he may better hear subjects which the speakers will offer.

Faculty Will Meet Students

To fill out an evening of getting acquainted with the faculty and fellow students refreshments in the form of hot dogs and coffee will be served. Duryea said that all new men students should plan to attend this college event and get in the spirit of things at the college, "become acquainted with how things are done and who does them," he added.

Location of the new hall for the smoker is the California Women's Club, 1750 Clay Street, between Polk and Van Ness Avenue. Admission to the smoker will be by student body card only.

Charles Myers New Head Of Judiciary Committee

Chairmanship of the judiciary committee has been entrusted to Charles Myers, Don Jensen, Associated Men Students president, has announced.

"Myers will appoint a committee of men students to serve at the dance next Monday during the Orientation dance," Jensen stated.

Outlining the duties of the committee, Jensen said that it will serve in the same capacity as former committees. Duties of the committee are to exercise control over and pass judgment upon all matters pertaining to student conduct that are referred to it by the office of the dean of men, as outlined in the constitution.

The committee consists of a chairman and two men and two women members, appointed by the president. Jensen said that Myers as chairman of the committee, will select students to serve under him and that they will be announced later this week.

Standard duties which are carried on by the committee are distributing The Guardsman, checking Associated Student cards at the college's social activities, and various other duties designated by the Executive Council and Dean Edwin C. Browne, adviser to the judiciary committee.

AWS

Women's Tea Second Scheduled Event Of Orientation Week For Frosh, Sophomore Women

Both incoming and returning women students will have an opportunity to renew old acquaintances and to make new friends at the Associated Women Students tea this afternoon in the college cafeteria, according to Betty MacKillop, AWS president.

This tea, the first such event of the semester, is going to be a sort of "get acquainted" affair, added Miss MacKillop. Each returning student, as well as every new woman student should attend and make the best of this opportunity to meet school officers and faculty advisers.

Atmosphere Friendly

The idea is for the returning women to attend so that each may perform the duties of a hostess, and help to make the new students feel at home. "The college is reputed to have a friendly atmosphere," Miss MacKillop said, "and we want to prove this to the incoming women by giving them a grand time at the tea."

The hostesses who will aid the official welcoming committee, are: Gloria Olivi, Barbara Stahman, Virginia Frantz, Shirley Wood, Jane Johnston, Betty Rost, Betty Dahlberg, Donna Meyer, Jackie Blair, Fleeta Alexander, Rose Donabedian, Lee Leiber, Violet Butler, Connie Custer, Ernestine Cervelli, Eloise Winfeldt, Pat Brand, Tillie Mortigia, Fay Woo, Shirley Martin, Alice Danner, Janice Berch, Marjorie Wagner, Sarah Smith, Josephine Rayoli, Beth Craddock, Carol Machel, and Ann Van Dyke.

Prominent Women Featured

In the way of entertainment will be speeches by several of the prominent women students of the college. Featured speakers will be Pat Niemeyer, who will talk on the Social Life of San Francisco Junior College, Dorothy Ann Kraul, who will tell about the Women's Athletic Association and a student speaker from the college music department.

Refreshments, prepared by the college home economics department, will be served.

Plans Indefinite

Other plans for the semester are as yet indefinite, Miss MacKillop pointed out, but the AWS usually has a full semester of activity. Last semester, for instance, a series of teas were planned for high school women of the city.

The AWS is an organization for women of the college comprised of those students who are in good standing with the Associated Students. Its officers for this semester are Miss MacKillop, president; Eloise Winfeldt, vice-president, and Ernestine Cervelli, secretary.

Social Committee

Hotel Dance Closes O Week

To honor the incoming freshmen students of the college, the social committee will sponsor its first dance of the semester in the Empire Room of the Hotel Sir Francis Drake, Friday, February 13, 9 o'clock until 12 midnight, according to Gloria Olivi, Associated Student vice-president and social committee chairman.

Two Bands Considered

The orchestra to play for the affair is still uncertain, Miss Olivi said. "We have a choice of two," stated Miss Olivi. "Eddy Murphy's or Gary Evers' orchestras."

Gary Evers Auditioned

The Murphy group is quite well known to the students of the college, having played at several former dances, but Gary Evers' orchestra has never before played for a college affair.

"Both bands include nine men and visable to audition Evers' band before a woman vocalist," she added, "but the social committee thought it advisable making the decision."

The dance is to be a semi-formal affair, and the no-corsage rule will be strictly enforced.

Admission will be by Associated Students cards. "Only one card per couple is needed," reminded Miss Olivi. No other admission will be charged.

Committee Names Revealed

The social committee, under Miss Olivi's supervision, will have charge of decorations and all other necessary arrangements. The committee includes: Betty Rost, Mary Ann Grover, Sally Nelson, Shirley Stayton, Pat Niemeyer, Dick Clayton, and Joe Lewis.

To date this is the only activity planned by the committee. Other dances, to honor the high freshman and low sophomore classes and several mixer dances will be held during the semester, Miss Olivi added.

Class Elections Follow Next Wednesday's Rally

Class elections will be held immediately following the rally to be held on the front steps tomorrow at 11 a.m., Don Jensen, Associated Student president announced Friday.

The low freshman class election will be held in Room 136 under the supervision of Jensen.

In charge of other class meetings will be Jim Duryea, high freshman, Room 204; Mel Dropo, low sophomore, Room 209, and George Coart, high sophomore, Room 100.

Mary B. Perry and Nelson A. Wells, high sophomore class; Phyllis Haley and Edward E. Sandys, low sophomore class; Gertrude Bolton and Wesley Muscio, high freshman class, and Ruth Gavin and Harry Nelson, low freshman class.

"All students should participate in their class elections," said Jensen, "especially the low freshman class. We hope to see a record vote cast."

The first rally of the semester will be held at 11 o'clock to acquaint new students with faculty officials and Associated Student officers.

President Archibald J. Cloud and Dean Edwin C. Browne will extend messages of welcome to the freshmen and urge all students to take part in the elections to be held at the conclusion of the rally.

Administration At Two Day Meet

Effects of the college's position in the present emergency, problems of defense courses and the "third term" controversy were discussed by members of the college administration in the California Junior College Federation meet at Bakersfield last week end.

President Archibald J. Cloud, Dean of Men Edwin C. Browne, J. Paul Mohr, Registrar, and Louis G. Conlan, Coordinator of Education at the college, attended the two day convention.

President of the Federation, Roscoe C. Ingalls, called the meeting for the purpose of discussing the California Junior College and the present emergency.

Current Affairs Contest Held Today At 12, Room 237

A Current Affairs Contest will be conducted today at noon in Room 237, according to William Goss, economics instructor, and sponsor for the contest in this college.

The contest is open to the economic classes and anyone else interested in the subject. Those who wish to participate should go to Room 237 at the designated hour.

The contest will cover national and foreign affairs, and questions pertaining to sciences, arts, business, and personalities.

It is being conducted in more than 100 junior colleges of the west. Results of the contest held here will be compared with those of other junior colleges by Dr. Eurich of Stanford.

Repairs Needed

Spring Is Here

SEVERAL semesters ago some person with a soul thought that perhaps there should be a college band. This institution being comparatively young, had never had such a thing. Although there were great strides being made in various other lines of endeavor, in the curricula, in the social calendar, in the sports and fraternal departments, yet there would be more spirit created by a few horns and a trio of drums than by the rest of the aforementioned fields all together. Therefore, with much vim and not a little vigor, the plan for a permanent musical group to represent the Associated Students and to perform for them was launched.

It was hardly the fault of the launchers of the program that it failed not once but several times. Certainly the energy which was applied to the problem was more than sufficient. Certainly no lack of effort existed.

Mostly the trouble lay in the fact that those students who were interested in becoming members of a band received no credit for their efforts. They were forced by necessity to meet at the most convenient hour, and sometimes they were unable to get a complete outfit assembled at one and the same time. The crux of all the trouble has now been remedied. Credit will be given them.

Madison Devlin, who is enthusiastic in his plans, will assume control of three credit courses scheduled to supply the college with a similar number of musical units. An orchestra, studio orchestra, and band has finally come into practical, permanent existence. This is an important step in the music department of the college. It marks the beginning of an entirely new program. It is hardly necessary to add that instructors in that department are waxing confident in this latest addition.

And so they have finally done it! Congratulations are in order. Within the next semester good things in a musical manner are to be expected.

At Long Last

We've Got A Band

EACH spring it rains! And each spring students slip and slide down to the gymnasiums, endangering their equilibrium in their ensuing struggles. Things were worse in past semesters. At that time there was no paving at all on the route from main building to destination. And at that time rivers ran rampant and mud was ankle deep.

Under impetus of the students at large the mud was done away with. Pavement replaced dirt, sun replaced rain, and it was a pleasant journey all the way.

But it is spring again. The pavement has lost its character. It leaks. At the bottom of the walk is a miniature Niagara Falls. Along the way are gullies and rivulets of water. The entire area of the walk is coated with a fine and wet film of H two O. Those students who wear nothing on their feet other than shoes during these springy times will find that there is no lack of affinity between the film on the walk and the shoes on their feet.

Perhaps classes in the gymnasiums should not be cancelled during these periods of inclement weather—but the least that can be done is to have that holey walk repaired. In these times when extra hours of body building, and physical fitness activities have been added to the student burden it seems rather useless unless the applicants for better health arrive in class with dry or drier feet and suitable dispositions.

Therefore, it is believed that for the sake of college health, for the betterment of college disposition, and for the creation of a condition of drier shoes (which is the main issue), the concrete should be poured and pathway completely repaired. There are few who will object to such a request.

Shots At ...RAMdom

little happenstance took place on the windiest corner of balmy Pacific paradise a few moons ago. The wind whips around the corner of Powell and Post like reenforcements for a typhoon. Waltzing down the street just ahead of us was one of those ultra ultra sophisticated young femmes with the come-on-walk, and the stay-away eyes. You know, the how-dare-you-laugh-on-my-birthday type? She reached that windy corner and right away things started to happen. A wild clutch at her wind born hat availed her nothing but a good handful of San Francisco breeze. She quickly forgot the chapeau as she looked and saw about a foot of slip trying to follow it.

There she stood, undecided whether to chase her hat or protect her pride. She might have been there yet were it not for a nice cop whom she hailed with a,

"Follow that hat."

The grinning cop took off, held up a little traffic, got the hat, and feminine dignity continued blissfully on its way.

That's about all to this little story, except that we forgot to mention that we were so busy laughing that we forgot to hold our own little Stetson, which now lies under the Powell Street cable car tracks. What cop's going to hold up traffic for us?

DOWN AT

Tiny's, where we sometimes climb around a sandwich, or something, we saw an American sailor. His hat was perched jauntily on top of a bandaged head. He'd return the understanding smiles directed at him with a rueful little grin. He was having a great time. People were noticing his nice bandage. They were telling each other that here was a sailor, wounded in action while defending the United States. One plump old dowager beamed and gave him the thumbs up sign.

We were just about ready to go when an English sailor walked in and sat down beside the American.

"Hello, Yank, bumped yer head, hey?"

"Yeah, I got it pretty good, all right."

"You off the Pennsylvania?"

"No."

"Then where'd you get it? Pearl Harbor? Shrapnel?"

"No, I went through the mirror maze down at the beach. And I mean went through it!"

WEATHER

reports have been cancelled all along the Pacific Coast because of possible aid to the enemy. We don't actually miss the things because you could never depend on them, anyway. We have a special one here, though, that was given to us by a certain agent who has agreed to keep sending us reports if we'll quit trying to tell jokes. His latest is that there will be high winds all along the Pacific Coast for the next 36 hours.

Don't worry though, we'll be able to walk under them.

Letters Inspired By Plan; Sophomore Patience Upheld

• Dissection Plan

Gentlemen:

Upon reading your editorial published in the Friday, February 6, issue, concerning the dissection of the future issues of The Guardsman, we feel that any such action would be a detriment to the progress of our institution. In the past four semesters, we, the undersigned, have looked forward to each issue of The Guardsman, and have enjoyed its contents immensely.

We also feel that The Guardsman is the true emplification of the spirit which is so prominent in this college, and any restrictions placed upon its size or contents would be defeating the purpose of college spirit and journalism.

In the past, the publications of The Guardsman has won national recognition, and this alone speaks of the importance of having a newspaper such as is in its present form. For a college as large as ours, [illegible] imperative that The Guar[illegible] should be continued in the[illegible] in the past. We hope th[illegible] our s[illegible]gestions will be of some assistance in solving the plan for dissection of The Guardsman.

Hoping for the best, and KEEP THE GUARDSMAN ROLLING.

• Frosh Trouble

Editor, The Guardsman:

Isn't there a building directory or something that will direct wandering freshmen to their classrooms? Having been a frosh once, I heartily sympathize with their newness, greenness, or what ever it may be, but I also dislike having somebody run into me every ten seconds wanting to know where Room 542, 189, and so forth, is. If there were a directory to study, or that they could glance at with every change of periods, I'm sure the patience of all upperclassmen would be saved a lot of wear and tear.

Perhaps a committee could be formed that wear the large SFJC pins to aid, direct or assist any of the young things. Many of the new students are embarrassed to stop somebody and show their newness by asking where to find the registrar's office or something when it seems so simple to everybody else. This idea would prevent all the embarrassment and be an all-around aid to everyone here.

S.D.

Editor's note: A directory can be found on the large bulletin board by the registrar's office, and opposite the main staircase on the second and third floors. There are lists posted throughout the building, also, with the instructors' and advisers' office numbers.

FEM FADS . . .
by Nancy

THIS semester the women's physical education department announced that freshmen are everything but the traditional green. "Indeed," exclaimed one member of the P.E. department, "they are serious, healthy, poised, and attractive." For a group of women this is a very large order, we only hope they live up to the first observations of the faculty.

Before registration all women were given physical examinations and as a rule the women had very bad posture. Laurine Bergin, one of the faculty examiners stated that many women had uneven shoulders. This may be caused by leaning books on one hip, and letting one arm dangle.

POSTURE VS. CHARACTER

Another common ailment was improper walking. A woman's whole character may be revealed by her walk, and a slouchy walk doesn't reveal a sturdy, good character, we've been told.

Glancing at a person standing still is also tale bearing. The examiner can determine the poise and selfconfidence of a women in this manner. If the woman shifts from one foot to the other, twists her hands and arms around, and performs other odd actions, it is quite safe to say she is nervous, self conscious and lacks poise.

After writing this little discourse, we began to wonder if the army, navy or even the air corps physical regulations weren't a snap, as compared to college requirements.

FLAT FEET ABSENT

Honestly though, the physical examinations aren't that bad. One observation, however, that might please army officials in the event that a woman's army is ever formed, is that there are only two cases of flat feet among the new freshmen. Whether this means the age of walking has passed is undetermined as yet. If another pedograph test can be arranged after the freshmen walk up and down the halls looking for Room 199, and walk up and down to the gym four times a week and there still are only two cases of flat feet, walking is not the cause!

FITNESS NECESSARY

Surprisingly enough, since the beginning of the semester, there has been very little complaining about the four day gym periods. Very few of the students are pleased with the idea, but they accept it as they would blackouts, rationing and other war-time safety measures.

Surely the programs mapped out by such great athletes as Alice Marble, Gene Tunney, and others will benefit all students.

Women students partaking of the new physical education program may in time iron out postural difficulties. Their posture will be the envy of the highest paid fashion models. With that posture they will be able to look as well-dressed in a less expensive dress as in an expensive model. Many of the women in college who look well-groomed and well-dressed all the time say that their outfits are very inexpensive. Remember the saying—it's not the clothes but the way one wears them, while exercising away in physical fitness classes. Who knows,

Spectator . . .

Bahama Passage . . . at last we get a real "turkey"

TODAY, the Spectator performs its annual good deed by warning students with all the power at its command, of one of Hollywood's worst flops in recent history.

Read and beware. Entertainment just "ain't" in Bahama Passage, the new Madeleine Carroll-Stirling Hayden co-starrer.

Focusing the spotlight on Bahama Passage is a decidedly unpleasant task for this little Paramount technicolor opus comes to the screen as dismal fare, flat and shallow in scope, featuring a vague plot that starts out sluggishly among the azure waters of the Bahamas, wanders along without a single attempt to arouse dramatic intensity, and tapers off in the same fashion . . . a trite tale that goes nowhere in particular.

DIRECTOR, WRITER RESERVE BLAME

We'll lay the blame for the film on the story, dialogue and static direction. Script-writer Virginia Van Upp and director Edward H. Griffith can bow their heads in shame. In collaboration, this pair have turned out some excellent screen plays, notably, Honeymoon In Bali and one or two others.

Miss Upp's dialogue is artificial, painstakingly striving for blatant effect but never quite reaching it. The story itself is buried and indefinite. Director Griffith makes no attempt to define his theme in clear-cut expression. Rather, he permits his story to ramble on in such a hazy string work of dim conjecture, that the audience's ratiocination is stimulated to undue lengths to unravel just what is occurring on the screen. This is certainly not good picture-making.

STORY DIFFICULT TO LOCATE

To summarize the barely unperceivable story of Bahama Passage in one paragraph is not to easy for reasons enumerated above. It seemingly revolves around a young man, Adrian Ainsworth, last of a long line of Ainsworths and his semi-mad mother who reside on a salt cay in the Bahamas as have their ancestors. The brooding solitude and isolated quality of the forbidding island evidently has a bad physiological effect on the Ainsworth women for most of them die insane. Into this waste of salt, natives and silence comes Carol and her scoundrel father to manage the island for the frightened mother. Carol is supposedly a loose woman (or so says the picture's foreword). She sets out to seduce Adrian despite the fact that the latter is already married. That's the story as we see it although there is also quite a bit to do with the actions of Carol's father and the natives.

ACTORS THROWN BY ROLES

Some genuinely fine performers are snowed under by the poor immature situations and dialogue. Madeleine Carroll, needless to say, is the loose woman, Carol. Another role like this one and Madeleine will be only a memory on the Bob Hope program. Her characterization of Carol falls completely to coincide with the supposed nature of the "loose woman." The part was so shadowy in development, so unsubstantial in its delineation that it's really not her fault. Stirling Hayden portrays Adrian. He is an attractive hunk of manhood, but unfortunately his performance is as spirited and animated as a truck-horse. His vacuous acting makes his recent retirement from Hollywood a not too unhappy one. Flora Robeson as the mad mother does best in the thespian department, but such fine actors as Leo G. Carroll, Cecil Cunningham, and Leigh Whipper struggle with their roles.

Even the worst picture has its good points and Bahama Passage has gorgeous technicolor to boost its sagging segments. The authentic backgrounds of the Bahamas dubbed in lavish color are treats to the eye. Unforunately the film itself has about as much punch and thrill as an excursion to Fleishhacker Zoo.

Cabbages & Kings

IN the spring, a young many's fancy likely turns to thoughts of baseball and other forms of pitching.

It isn't spring but with the new crop of students, the "institutions" are already planning elaborate campaigns for obtaining dates with said new women. Some of these plans are quite elaborate, others are comparatively simple.

Ed. C. has one which is guaranteed to work with almost any woman providing that she is a lady wrestler. Stride up to said woman, slap her heartily on the back and scream sweetly into her shell like ear,

Another Ed, this one a Brain believes that the way to a woman's heart is through her stomach. He is a staunch believer that the way to obtain a date is to stalk up to the woman, offer her, shyly, a bunch of fresh carrots and suggest that they share a corner in the search of nutrition.

For tops in results, however, I suggest that you follow the example of H. Greg. Greg says that all you have to do is to invite her to meet you over a Ramburger. After that anything can happen. Greg, as you know, is president of the local Timberland Union.

TO TALK OF MANY THINGS

Of the local college witch who finally got to go on a hayride. She looked tenderly at the eligible young man next to her and then at the full moon. She leaned over and breathed,

"Nobody loves me," she paused and continued in a different voice, "and besides, my hands are cold."

The boy yawned and sighed,

"Don't feel bad, God loves you and you can sit on your hands."

Of the dense co-ed who agreed to go for a drive with a college man. The car went faster and faster. The scenery flew by the lowered window. As they sailed around a sharp turn, the tires sang and the car overturned. By a miracle, the occupants were unharmed and the boy slipped his arm around the girl's waist and murmured reassuringly in her ear.

The dense one looked at his troubled face and beamed,

"Say now, wouldn't it have been easier to have run out of gas?"

OF WOMEN

Girls when they went out to swim,
One dressed like Mother Hubbard,
Now they have a bolder whim:
They dress more like her cupboard.

Faculty Features . . . A History Instructor With Sidelines

By Iwanna Hayworth

ALICE C. COOPER, English instructor, completed her elementary and high school education in Los Angeles, then obtained her A.B., M.A., and Ph.D. at Stanford University. She taught at Stanford for eight summers in the education and English departments while getting her M.A. degree.

After leaving Stanford, she went to the University of California as a supervisor of English at University High, and at the same time taught four units of English at the university.

While at Modesto Junior College, the next of her teaching positions, she organized, for the first time, a group which makes up the Alpha Gamma Sigma, honor society of that college.

When the college here was organized, she came from Modesto to become a member of the English department, and organized another group of Alpha Gamma Sigma students. Any students who are interested in becoming a member of this group, should consult Miss Cooper as soon as possible.

Speaking of honors and societies, Miss Cooper was a member of the Delta Delta Delta while in college; was on the president's counsel at Stanford; was a member of the Pi Lambda Theta, education society; English Speaking Union; Pan-American League, and National League of American Pen Women. In the last group she is in charge of the poetry section, that is, the critic of the poetry section.

She has published quite a number of books, among which may be included: Poems of Today. She did the nineteenth and twentieth century eras in the Adventures in English Literature, Essays Then and Now, and March of a Nation, which is the whole history of the United States, illustrated through literature.

Her latest book, Twenty Modern Americans, will be off the press early next month. The book is approximately four hundred pages, and is made up of biographies of people who have made a success in their varied fields, for example, Disney, Chrysler, all of which are taken from a different field and no two a duplicate of the other.

Many fascinating hours could be spent in hearing about the many travels of Miss Cooper, Europe, Alaska, Australia, the Panama Canal, throughout the United States, and last summer a nine-week flying trip to South America. They flew by day and stayed in all the capitals of the South American countries from a week to sixteen days, the last being the longest spent anywhere.

According to Miss Cooper, the people south of the border are independent and loyal to their own immediate country as well as having a definite friendly attitude toward the North American people.

It is interesting to note, she said, the great interest which the people have in their college life, and added, "the university at Lima is eighty-five years older than Harvard."

The students in the universities and colleges specialize in literature, language, and archaeology. Everywhere, she said, these students inquired how they could get scholarships from universities and colleges of the United States, as many of them are interested in the study of Mechanical Engineering and law.

In giving amusing and interesting incidents which occurred during the trip, Miss Cooper told of one day while looking around for a certain shop, one of the students from the university offered to be her guide. Explaining his motive in offering his assistance, the student said that one of his instructors had said that if they ever wished to learn English, they must find some English person and associate with him. He also said that his people liked the people from the States, and wished to be friendly with them.

To show how her summer vacation has helped her in the instruction of English literature, she said that last semester during some class lectures concerning the South American countries, she showed the students curiosities which had been brought from Lima. When the examination was given on this material, all the questions were answered. She exclaimed, "If one could only teach everything so it would be so alive and interesting."

"Have you ever seen or heard of a pinspoon?" she asked suddenly, then went on to explain what it was. It seems that while buying souvenirs, she found this antique pinspoon, which is by the way, a spoon with the slender handle which comes to a sharp point at the end. Formerly the women of these countries used this article as a piece of costume jewelry, that is, they would use it to pin their shawls together and hold them in place. When eating time came, these pinspoons were used as a part of their eating utensils.

Besides being active in Red Cross work at the present time, Miss Cooper has for some time been spending all her spare time in British War Relief work, and recently received a personal letter from Mrs. Winston Churchill commending her for her work.

Explaining her philosophy Miss Cooper remarked, "I feel that one should derive as much enjoyment as is possible from one's work, for when it is interesting, it is much more educational and helpful to the individual."

Space Scarce In Menlo; Newman Trojans At Large

GOOD THINGS IN SMALL PACKAGES

Speaking of crackerboxes, a look at the Menlo Junior College basketball court takes the cake!

There just isn't room for any more than the 10 players and the two officials. So, what do the substitutes do? . . . They just sit on the sidelines with their legs all but dangling out on the court.

Behind both baskets there is approximately one yard (three feet) of space, then the players are confronted with a blank wall.

On the sides of the court, there's just about two feet of space before another blank wall appears. And, as we mentioned, it is within this space which separates the court from the wall that the substitutes, benches, and coaches of both teams are squeezed.

In fact, the situation got so bad that Russ Sweet, Jack Gaddy, Jim Jensen, and Jerry Stroh, sporting goods salesman from San Francisco, had to sit on the elevated grandstand. Upon asking Sweet what the idea was of them climbing into the bleachers from the court, he answered, "there just isn't room for all of us down there!"

AND WE ARE NOT EXAGGERATING!

Of course, Tom Wilson was there too! But they managed to find a couple of inches of space for him to sit along the sideline. After all, he IS the coach.

Despite all this, however, the Menlo quintet didn't find any difficulty in scoring baskets. Practically every shot the cagers took during the first half just swished through the bucket. Even in the second half, though their average dropped, they continued to send them through without touching rim or backboard.

The Rams tried desperately to match the Oakies' baskets, with Jack Terry, Alex Adorador, and Mel Dropo coming through with occasional beauties. But when the final gun sounded, the boys from the farm had a 53 to 41 advantage.

We're inclined to believe that the contest would be much closer on the Ram home court or at a court where oxygen could be breathed more freely.

SPLIT THE YANKEES?

There has been much talk the last couple of years of splitting the New York Yankee baseball team so that it wouldn't be such a powerful aggregation and give some other club a chance at the pennant.

Well, right here at the college a similar step is being taken in the person of the Newman Club members, winners of the Intramural Basketball Championship. The reason for splitting them, however, is far different than the reason for splitting the Yanks.

Most of the members of the club are fiends for the University of Southern California, so they adopted the name . . . Newman Club Trojans!

The other half is still undecided on what name they will adopt.

Why not call them the Newman Club Bruins and send them both down to the Los Angeles Coliseum?

CELEBRITIES AT SMOKER

The Associated Men Students' Smoker tomorrow night should attract many of the college sport enthusiasts! Invitations have been sent out to such sport notables and sportwriters as Ernie Smith, Doug Montell, Jeff Cravath, Forest Twogood, Walter Mails, Jimmy Needles, Charley Hunter, Curley Grieve, Bill Leiser, Tom Laird, Ernie Cope, Jack Rosenbaum, Will Connolly, Bob Brachman, Walt Daly, and Bob Stevens.

Many have accepted and the affair should really be a humdinger!

WE WONDER WHEN

By the way . . . wasn't the college going to install bleachers in the men's gymnasium?

Thirty Trackmen Prepare For Season; Inter-Class Meet On March 6 And 7

In line with the nation's physical fitness program, 30 men answered the roll call as track prospects for Coach Russ Sweet's college track and field contingent for the spring semester.

"Despite loss of good men via national defense and full time jobs, the cinder squad has fair prospects for a 14 meet schedule," Sweet declared.

Provost On Squad

Of the newcomers, Ernie Provost, city high school 440 champion from Commerce High School; Dick Petch, Oakland High School's 10 second flat century man, and Bill Jennings, former Polytechnic High School football star, loom as fair prospects.

Cinders officially begin to fly March 6 and 7, when the college inter-class track and field meet will be held on the college oval.

Following the inter-class meet is the intramural track and field meet on March 12, 13 and 14.

Regular competition begins on March 21, when the Ram track team travels to Modesto to engage the Modesto Junior College Buccaneers. On March 28, Salinas Junior College will afford the competition at Salinas, and on April 1 or 2, the Rams will face San Francisco State College and San Mateo Junior College in a three-way meet at Kezar Stadium.

NCJCC Meet May 2

Meets with Santa Rosa, San Francisco State, Marin, and Stockton follow, and then the Northern California Junior College Conference meet at Santa Rosa on May 2.

On May 9 the Red and White cindermen will again venture to Modesto for the Modesto Junior College Relays. On May 16 and May 23, they will enter the Fresno Relays and the Los Angeles Relays, respectively, and end the season on May 30 with the National Junior College Meet at Visalia.

Brady Names Ted Green Manager For Semester

This semester, as in the spring semester of last year, Ted Green will act in the capacity of student intramural manager, Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser revealed last week.

Forced to withdraw from this position last fall, Green will assume full control over the intramural program once again, and will be aided by William Gerecke, who will serve as his assistant.

Brady, of course, will have complete jurisdiction over the activities regarding protests and minor infractions concerning the sports, with Green responsible for the drawing and posting of schedules, supervision of the games, and tabulation of results.

Brady urged all new students in the college to enter one or more of the activities offered, for in such a time, physical fitness and body development is stressed by the government. The program also offers a conditioning program as well as the opportunity for competitive sport and recreation.

Students Should Enter

Any college students who are interested in entering the intramural program are advised to form a team and remain intact throughout the various leagues, which will afford them a possibility in winning the intramural trophy. The trophy is awarded to the winning club or fraternity at the conclusion of the semester which has compiled the largest amount of points in the activities combined. There is no compulsion in this case, however, Brady said.

Last semester, the Newman Club retained the trophy for the second successive time, winning the free throw contest, and basketball league.

Medals Awarded

Gold and silver medals will also be awarded to the contestants of the winning team who finish in the competition and also to the runerups.

Last fall's program was deemed a success, according to Brady, in as much as the activities were limited because of the amount of days the program was allowed to be conducted.

A total of 564 men students presented entries to him, and competed in 12 events, namely, basketball, volleyball, touchtaekie football, free throwing, singles and doubles tennis, ping pong, rifle, softball, swimming, cross country run, and horseshoes.

Program Released

A tentative program has been released by Brady, subject to change, which shows that the individual indoor activities will be held first this semester. Those to be conducted are ping pong, free throwing and the rifle shoot.

Because of the weather situation and the use of the gymnasium by the varsity basketball squad, the major sports such as basketball and volleyball will start within three weeks.

Touchtaekle football and softball will probably be conducted near the end of the semester when the weather is favorable.

Dr. Zeeb Gilman, oldest living graduate of Dartmouth College, celebrated his 100th birthday at Redlands, Calif., on May 13.

Baseball

Gaddy Builds Squad Around Flora, Adams

Using his two returning pitchers, Andy Adams and Ed Flora, as a nucleus, Jack Gaddy, college baseball coach, begins this week to build his entry in the 1942 junior college league pennant race.

The first practice was scheduled for yesterday, at Ocean View Park, with sessions every afternoon from here on out, at that field, according to Gaddy, whose slant toward the outcome of the approaching campaign is somewhat hopeful of success.

Weakness Shown

Last season's club ranked high in the upper bracket of the league, after a slow, unproductive start. A great weakness was shown, at first, in almost every department, except pitching. The work of the mound staff, led by Adams, with Flora doing some fine relief twirling, kept the Rams in the running until the others began to click in their fielding and hitting. Toward the latter part of the race, the latter two phases showed vast improvement and the Rams went on to a good closing.

Gaddy is certain that the present national emergency will not cut down on the baseball turnout. Besides the two moundsmen, several other veterans from among recent high school graduates along with possibly one or two transfers from other junior colleges may bolster the squad.

Duzdevich Gone

The squad is naturally expected to be somewhat weaker in the catching department also, with the loss of Mickey Duzdevich, clearly the bulwark of the catching staff in the 1941 campaign. Gaddy intended to use Duzdevich's understudy this year, Cliff Roberts, but he too, has dropped from the ranks of the college.

Missing from the bullpen too, will be the pitching slants of relief pitcher, Elmer Danielson, who displayed great promise during the time he twirled in his relief roles. Like many other members of the college, Danielson joined the ranks of the United States Navy two weeks ago, and is not to be counted on in the coming season.

Honnert Will Be Missed

First base is another position which will probably be contested for in a spirited way, as Jimmy Honnert, hard hitting first sacker, has also joined the navy. Not a brilliant fielder, however, Honnert maintained his place in the lineup strictly because he was able to break any ball game with his tremendous power. Honnert did that on many occasions, simply by belting the ball clear over the opponent outfielder's head far from view.

In regard to the coming season, Gaddy remarked, "It is much too early in the season to attempt to say how many games we will win, but we will be in there doing our best to produce some good results."

Undefeated Kentfield Quintet Holds Conference Lead; Favored For Eighth Win; Santa Rosa Game Next Thursday Evening

By Jimmy Lee

After playing Marin at the Mariners' home court tonight, the college varsity will return to play host to the Santa Rosa Bear Cubs in the men's gymnasium this Thursday night in the first of a two game series. The tipoff is slated for 8:15 sharp.

In what may prove to be the toughest game of their conference schedule, the Ram varsity will journey to Marin tonight to play the tall-timber boys from Marin Junior College, with the tipoff at 8:15 sharp.

At present the Mariners are leading the Junior College Conference, with six wins, and no defeats, with the Panthers from Sacramento very close behind, with five wins and no defeats.

Possess Great Team

This season, Marin has one of the best teams in its history. Every player is six feet or over. The whole squad averages 6 ft. 4 in. with some players breathing air up at the 6 ft. 6 in. level.

This year, the transbay boys have averaged 45 points per game, and their opponents just can't seem to stop them.

As mentioned before, the loss of John Cunningham has set Coach Tom Wilson in a tailspin, for now he has to find a forward suitable enough to fill Cunningham's shoes. So far, Mel Dropo, Jack Terry, Alex Adorador, and Norman Scheu are Coach Wilson's first four starters.

Pressure Removed

After shooting at the odd-shaped backboards at Stockton, the Red and White will have that added pressure taken off for the Marin pavilion is said to be the finest one in the entire junior college league along the Pacific Coast.

Many college students will remember the game against Marin last season, when Marin, leading at half time 27-17, were just able to hold the lead, and stave off a last minute scoring threat by the Rams, to win 49-45.

This season the college varsity may not have such notables as George Mossler, or Bob Staynor in the lineup, but with Dropo, Terry, Adorador in the starting five, the Rams will give the Kentfield players a tough evening of basketball competition.

Defeated Once Already

The situation that Marin will face tonight will be the same one they faced last season, when, after winning the first game of the two game schedule, they were dumped by the Rams in the second encounter. Tonight too, the Red and White will be out for blood because Marin has defeated them in their first game, and so tonight Dropo and Company will be out to keep up the record of last year's squad.

Plenty of seats will be available at Marin's gym tonight, and the transportation is within easy distance, for Greyhound bus, running from San Francisco to San Rafael, runs right near the Marin gym, which is only a short walk from the bus stop.

Marin is noted for their deadly work under both baskets, where they use their 6 ft. 4 in. forwards, and 6 ft. 5 in. center to great advantage.

Have Height Advantage

Under their opponents' basket Marin has little trouble in tipping in shots, whereas under their own bucket, the opposing players find it almost impossible to get a rebound. Marin applies a fast break, with a criss-cross of cleverly laid plays, and some fancy ball handling.

Last season, the varsity played only one game against Santa Rosa, but won that game in a very convincing way 49-35. The Rams led at the half 30-15.

Squad Meets Cubs

After playing the Bear Cubs here, the varsity will toddle up to Santa Rosa, to play the second tilt as the Cub's host.

Little is known of the Santa Rosa Club, as they continue to remain a dark horse in the junior college conference race.

Although only having 15 men on his squad this year, Coach Richard Blewett has maintained a .500 average through his entire practice season. They have defeated the U.S.F. Frosh, Analy High School, Alameda YMI, Glendale Junior College, and Modesto Junior College, while losing to Santa Rosa Furniture Company, Sacramento Junior College, Broadway Clowns, Compton Junior College, and Los Angeles City College.

Have Tall Guards

Santa Rosa's varsity runs along the same lines as Marin, and, although they, Santa Rosa, haven't the striking power of the Mariners, they have the height, as their guards average six feet, their forwards just about six feet, and their centers all tip the tape at 6 ft. 3 in.

Only two of the Bear Cubs have had varsity experience, those being Al Sanazzaro, guard, and Howard Norton, another guard. Nine of the players have had no varsity experience whatsoever, but Coach Blewett has had them improving with each game.

Sanazzaro is the fastest man on the squad, running the 100 yard dash in 10 flat, and is a consistent scorer, while Norton is a set shot artist, and is always dangerous with either a left or a right handed shot.

Guards Inexperienced

The other three guards, Al Garcia, Bruce Bailey, and Charles Schaap are all freshmen, with no experience, but make this handicap up with plenty of aggressiveness.

The two forwards, Ed Clerici, and George Whalen have had only Rambler experience, and are sophomores, while George McDonald, Dave Wright, and John Britton are all freshmen with no experience at all.

All three centers, Gene Martin, Bill Hocking and Don Huovinen are freshmen, but make up for their inexperience by their height, as each is 6 ft. 3 in., and all of them can shoot with either hand.

The Royal Blue and White, which are their colors, will hope to give the Rams a tough evening, for it is height alone that has been beating the team. Both Marin and Sacramento are the tallest teams in the junior college conference, with Menlo Junior College very close behind.

Cubs Score 533 Points

In the practice games so far this season, Santa Rosa has scored a total of 533 points, and have had 339 points scored against them, so you can see that the Bear Cubs play a wide open game, with plenty of baskets being tallied by both sides.

Santa Rosa has players from all over California. Mt. Diablo, Napa, Piedmont, Paso Robles, Lafayette, and Oakland all contribute to Santa Rosa's team.

This season, the college varsity is bedecked in white trunks, and white jerseys with red trimings, and red numerals. Also part of the varsity's regalia is the red sweat suits, with white trimmings, and white lettering. All the players have white basketball shoes, with red socks to match.

Caravan Leaves College For Marin Game Tonight

Jim Upp, new college yell leader this semester, will head the car caravan to Marin tonight which leaves the front of the college at 7:15 p.m.

Upp urges all college students to join in the caravan, because this is the first game of the season that the students will have a chance to follow.

The Marin game will start at 8:15 and the caravan will arrive in due time to settle themselves comfortably before the game begins.

"Although Marin is leading the league with seven wins as against no defeats, and has already beaten us pretty bad, Coach Tom Wilson has promised that this time we won't leave the court the losers," Jim Upp said.

"The team has shown remarkable aggressiveness," he continued, "despite the small number of students that turn out to cheer them on.

"I feel that if all the students who will come to the game prepare to urge their team on with lots of cheers and fire, the Rams will end up by being on the long end of the score."

Kalnen, Brown, Davies, Hoffman Enroll At Fresno

Four members of Coach Lee Eisan's 1941 football aggregation enrolled yesterday at Fresno State College, where they plan to give their grid-iron services next season.

Augie Kalnen, who played a lot of tackle for the Rams, will use his 238 pound frame at the same position for the Buildogs, while Temple Dayies' punting will probably be deserving of recognition.

The other two players that make up the quartet are Bill Brown, guard, and Bob Hoffman, who, along with Kalnen, was rated by Eisan as one of the best tackles in the conference.

Women's Athletics

Chance Given To Increase Sports Ability

To enable every coed in the college to find some activity that will increase her sport ability, create social acquaintances, and to provide opportunities for sport competition, the Women's Athletic Association is functioning this semester as one of the largest organizations in the college.

According to Janice Berch, newly elected president, the organization, composed of 14 individual clubs, will have an opportunity to develop and organize under its own leadership, tournaments, and recreational mixers. These clubs include archery, badminton, baseball, basketball, dancing, fencing, golf, ice skating, swimming, life saving, and tennis.

New Clubs Added

New clubs this semester are First Aid, Nutrition, and Knitting, which according to Miss Berch, are attractive to many coeds. On the campus this spring, a local Civilian Defense Corps for women may also be organized.

Certain days and hours have been assigned by Miss Berch for the individual clubs when facilities and supplies will be available. These days and hours are: 11, Friday; 12, Friday; 1, daily; 2, Monday and Wednesday; 3, Friday and 4, daily.

Badminton Held Daily

Badminton will be held daily at 1 p.m. and basketball at 4 every day. The organization of managers and four officers elected by the members of each individual club will continue, according to Miss Berch.

The officers of the WAA, Janice Berch, president; Dorothy Ann Kraul, vice-president, and Nancy Nagle, secretary, promise that the spring program will be full of variety. Local mixers, barbecues, and playdays will be outlined this spring for the coeds.

At the end of the spring semester, the WAA Tourney Week will be held, during which, awards will be presented for participation in the various clubs.

Valentine Party Friday In Women's Gymnasium

To acquaint new freshman coeds with the WAA, a get acquainted, all women WAA Valentine Party will be held Friday, February 13, at the Women's Gymnasium, from 3 to 4:30 p.m.

This is the first social event of the year and all women, whether freshmen or not are invited to attend.

At this event the WAA sign-ups for the individual clubs will be held.

National Emergency Gives Emphasis On Rifle Class

Added emphasis will be made in rifle training and in the importance of the college rifle team this season, according to Al Eisan, college rifle instructor.

With the present national emergency before students, a vastly enlarged enrollment in all rifle classes has been marked since the beginning of the new semester.

Many elementary and advanced rifle classes are available for men of the college, and openings are at hand on the rifle team, Eisan said, and "we are encouraging anyone interested to sign up."

The team practices every Monday and Wednesday on the college range from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. Physical education credit is to be allowed for this work.

The Ram marksmen have established a fine record and reputation since its inauguration several semesters ago. Last week they annexed the Napa Rifle and Pistol Club college division trophy.

President Cloud

U.S. Educators To Meet Here Says Cloud After Baltimore Convention; February 26 Will Mark Meeting Date

Recently returned from a three thousand mile trip to attend the Conference of American School Educators in Baltimore, President Archibald J. Cloud brings word that the American Association of School Educators has elected, by unanimous vote, to convene in this city for the first time February 26.

President Cloud, chairman of the local convention arrangements committee, reports a unanimous vote in favor of following the original plan, despite the unsettled conditions here resulting from the opening of hostilities against the Japs.

Convention Most Important In City

"This will be the most important educational meeting ever to be held in this city," President Cloud asserted, "and the first time the association has chosen San Francisco for a convention site."

All previous meetings of the association have been held in Cleveland, Atlantic City or St. Louis, President Cloud said. An intensive study of the facilities available in San Francisco revealed that the community exceeded all requirements.

Dr. Studebaker Presides Over Meet

President Cloud also attended the four day series of meetings of the United States Official Committee of Educators, held in Baltimore and presided over by Dr. J. W. Studebaker, committee chairman.

"The main theme of these meetings," President Cloud explained, "was the course of education during the present crisis. Speakers from many government departments were there to give talks and make reports," President Cloud added. "Many problems, such as accelerated educational programs and larger vocational training units were discussed," he explained.

War Problems Emphasized

Problems confronting educators as a result of the war were also related. Students leaving school to join the service or take jobs resulting from increased war production was one of the prominent phases under discussion, according to President Cloud.

"General Hershey's address to the committee concerned this problem. He maintained that American youth should not leave their education unfinished because of the present crisis. The work of reconstruction after the war is still ahead. Students should also continue their education so as to be prepared for higher offices of national offense," President Cloud said, enumerating the main topics of General Hershey's speech.

Cafeteria Hit By Food Priorities

In line with the national government's priority on sugar, the college cafeteria has already started in its effort to prevent the unnecessary waste of sugar, Mrs. Hilda Watson, chairman of the Hotel and Restaurant Division, announced recently.

Sugar containers, which were formerly placed throughout the cafeteria, have been withdrawn for immediate use behind the coffee counter. Here the sugar will be distributed conservatively and accordingly.

Despite the fact that the price of food products now being served in the cafeteria has increased 25 per cent, Mrs. Watson announced that the cafeteria will, in some instances, alter the prices of certain foods.

Such essential foods as meats, sugar, shortening, eggs and butter top the list of food products which have risen in price since June of last year.

Mounted specimens of 252 native Georgia birds are contained in the Emory University museum.

Bleachers On Way For Installation

Bleachers, which have long been sought after by the students for the men's gym, are on their way from the eastern manufacturer, according to Louis G. Conlan, college coordinator.

They may not reach San Francisco for some time yet. however, because of the Government priority over railroad transportation.

On The Way

Conlan said that two weeks ago when he spoke to the eastern firm's representative in San Francisco the under structure had already gone forward. He said also that the rest of the portable bleachers was to leave a week ago.

In this event, barring side-tracking along the way, the entire materials should be at the college and ready for assembly within another week or two.

After the materials have arrived here, it will be but a matter of a few days before the bleachers are ready for use by the students, Conlan stated.

Here In Five Weeks

"At least the bleachers are finally on the way," he said, "but when they will get here, no one can say. However, they should be available to student use within four or five weeks."

It had been hoped that the bleachers would be here in time for the completion of the current basketball season, but with only a few weeks of the season remaining these expectations have been set aside by student leaders.

Reviewed by Major George Richards, flight instructor, President Archibald J. Cloud, and a member of the board of education, one of the first groups to successfully complete their preliminary flight training stand at attention prior to their graduation into higher ranks of flying. Richards will again conduct similar classes this semester for interested students. Although actual flying will not be handled here, basic instruction will be featured.

Aviation

Flight Training Program Undergoes Changes; New Courses Offered

A complete change in the Civilian Pilot Training, as it concerns the college, was announced by Major George Richards, aviation instructor at the college, last week.

He reported that no more actual flight training is to be given at or through the college. Only extensive ground work is to be given here. All of the flying now comes under the jurisdiction of the University of San Francisco, according to Richards.

Richards Explains Problems

Richards said that there are two great difficulties about the Air Corps after all of the preliminary ground work is laid. One of these is the extreme difficulty of getting into the corps originally, and the other is the difficult job of remaining in the corps after one gets there.

The requirement, at present, for flying is one year of college. The applicants must also be between 18 and 25 years of age in excellent physical condition. All of the flying from the University of San Francisco is done at Sparks, Nevada. Approximately seven to nine weeks are spent in Sparks to complete the instruction. The Government stands the cost of the physical examination and pays for the insurance of the student. In the event that the applicant fails to pass the physical examination, the cost must be sustained by the student. Living expenses, amounting to approximately $2 per day, according to Beverly Pasqualetti, college aviation adviser, are the obligation of the student.

College Prepares Students

Innumerable courses are included in the college curriculum to prepare students for the advanced work, and may be begun in the high freshman year. The courses include navigation, celestial navigation, instruction in the various instruments used in flying and numerous astronomy courses. No one aviation course is prerequisite to another.

All of the aviation regulations and courses have undergone drastic alterations since the beginning of the national emergency, and nothing is yet definite, Pasqualetti said, except the dire need of the nation for more and more pilots for the thousands of planes being turned out in the factories throughout the country.

Classes Still Open

Richards and Pasqualetti would like any college student interested in aviation to call on them at the aviation office, Room 37, at any time. Either one of them is available at any time during the day, throughout the week, in their office.

The present City College of New York was established by the state legislature 94 years ago.

Club Advisory Board

Club Advisory Board Plans Dance For "Join A Club Week"

Highlighting the present semester's Club Advisory Board schedule will be a mixer dance to open a proposed "Join a Club Week," revealed Ed Lopez, president of the club board, last Friday.

"This semester," said Lopez, "the CAB will strive to work hand in hand with Associated Student President Don Jensen in his plan to raise spirit through increased membership in college organizations."

New Officers Chosen

Lopez explained that the officers of the CAB, including Dorothy Hogan and Beverly Brown, had discussed the plan carefully and were waiting for the report of the Finance Committee before placing the plan before the Executive Council for approval.

"The CAB hopes to stimulate club membership by holding a 'Join a Club Week' to be observed by the entire college. We hope to gain the cooperation of every club and organization by having them offer membership to the men and women of the college, especially during the week set aside for this purpose," he said.

Group Plans Mixer

To open the drive for new members in college organizations, the CAB has made plans for a mixer dance for the entire college with each club represented at the function. "The entire plan is only tentative and has not been approved by the Executive Council," Lopez said.

"Following the decision of the Executive Council," said Lopez, "we will call a meeting of all representatives of the clubs to discuss the plan."

Club Representatives Needed

All clubs and organizations should elect their CAB representatives at once, so they may be sure to be represented at the first board meeting, he said.

Renewals of club charters will be due in the near future, but no definite date has been reached as yet, Lopez said. At the first CAB meeting the dates for charter renewal deadlines would be announced.

Further details will be announced at a later date. Lopez announced that in all probability, "Cabby," the CAB publication, would be discontinued this semester because of curtailment of funds by the Finance Committee.

CAB Aids Student Leaders

"The CAB was organized to serve as a coordinating unit between the clubs in the college and the Associated Students organization. This semester that coordination will be closer than ever before," said Lopez.

Higher Education Seen As World Aid

Higher education must have for the coming year an intelligent and a consecrated leadership. The selective service and other war measures have already disturbed its program. More drastic changes are quite possible.

In order to gain the victory in this dreadful war and also to win the peace at its conclusion the nation must have a steady flow of educated leaders. This is not only true for the military forces and governmental agencies, but equally so for industry, business and the professions.

Student Deferments

Very wisely has the selective service made provision for deferment of induction of those college students training to be physicians, dentists, veterinarians, engineers, physicists, chemists, biologists, geologists.

Because of the lowering of minimum age for slective service, most of the colleges have decided to accelerate their programs. For some years about two-thirds of the member colleges in the Association of American Colleges have had summer sessions. The length of these sessions has varied from six to twelve weeks. The tendency now is for colleges to have full summer quarters of twelve weeks in length.

Graduation Speeded Up

With this acceleration in the college program, the capable student will be able to complete graduation requirements in three years. If similar acceleration can be made in the grades, another year can be saved in the educational process. For brilliant pupils it has been possible for some time to save a year in the pre-college programs.

With the saving of the two years suggested above, the average young man should be able to complete his college course and be ready for the call to selective service at the age of 20.

Colleges are making changes in the curriculum to meet the exigencies of the situation. New courses have been added and to others have been given a bias of a military nature. Wisdom would indicate that much poise is necessary in proposals for curricular shifts, as the men still need as much time as possible for a well-balanced curriculum of humanities, social sciences and the natural sciences.

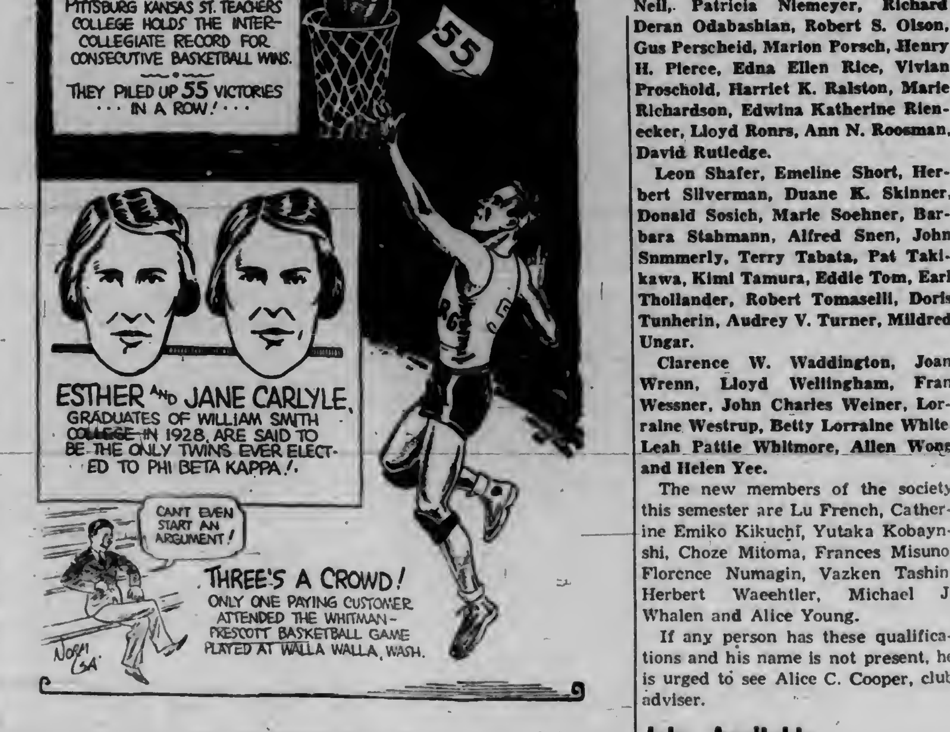
Kentucky College Invents Plane With New Principles

LEXINGTON, KY.—(ACP)—Development of a radically different type of airplane motor, more efficient than any now in use, has "progressed to a marked degree and we are confident that the final objective is well within sight with all major problems solved," says a report on University of Kentucky college of engineering defense activities.



Dean James H. Graham, reporting to the board of trustees, revealed the development began with a complete scrapping of a principle of valve construction that had been an accepted practice for two decades, and the making of a fresh start for "a superior solution of the problem."

Although a certain amount of research work had been done elsewhere along the same general lines, it has been "within the college, under the supervision of Prof. A. J. Meyer, and especially within the facilities of the Wenner-Gren aeronautical research laboratory," the report said, "that this search and development has been much expedited."

The new motor, since it uses less gasoline, should reduce the amount of fuel a plane will have to carry, thus increasing its weight-carrying capacity and making longer flights possible, the report points out.

Michigan Sociology Professor Publishes Study Of "Liberalism" In Colleges

Students do not "turn radical" in the average American college or university, observes Morton Mintz in the Michigan Daily. Results of an exhaustive four-year survey, combined with similar research of other psychologists conducted over a 15-year period in approximately 50 colleges, have convinced Prof. Theodore M. Newcomb of Michigan's sociology department that there is "only a slight increase in liberalism" between entrance and graduation among the great majority of students.

(Professor Newcomb said liberalism is defined in the survey as favoring the kinds of changes introduced by the New Deal.)

To Publish Book

Professor Newcomb's conclusions, which will be published in book form this spring under the title "Personality and Attitude Development," stated that "in college students, family background is a less important factor in attitude change than the conservatism or liberalism prevailing in the college atmosphere."

His survey was conducted chiefly at Bennington College in Vermont, where he taught social psychology from 1934-41. The survey was made from 1935-39. At this college of 250 girls he found that the great majority of students—who were nearly all from wealthy homes—lost their entrenched conservatism and became much more liberal than any other college group.

Some millionaire's daughters became confirmed radicals. Citing this as proof of his theory that family background is of secondary importance, he said the liberal environment of Bennington College proved more potent than parental advice and beliefs.

Professor Newcomb stressed, however, certain factors which differentiated Bennington from other schools. He pointed out that the school was new and based on a radically different system of individualized education. The president of the college was himself a liberal and a social scientist. In addition the faculty, in contrast to those of the University of Chicago and St. Johns College, which emphasize the classics was almost obsessed with the importance of acquainting students with the contemporary world.

Students Conservative

Dr. Newcomb declared that it is because of the conservative attitude prevalent in most American colleges that students are on the whole conservative.

He maintained that those who changed least, or not at all, in an atmosphere such as that at Bennington, were those absorbed in their own personal concerns, and bitter or antagonistic toward community activities. Asked how many students who are liberal when they enter college adopt conservatism during school, he said there are very few, and in these cases there is usually a psychological reaction against liberal but domineering, dogmatic parents.

Honor Society

Alpha Gamma Sigma Membership Soars With Spring Semester Underway; 126 Names Added To College Honor List

There are 126 students enrolled in the college honor society this spring semester, according to Miss Alice C. Cooper, adviser of the Alpha Gamma Sigma.

The Alpha Gamma Sigma was formed to provide recognition for students achieving good scholarship records, and to aid in the maintaining of scholastic standards. To become a member of the organization it is necessary to maintain a total of 30 grade points, not including physical education.

Members for the spring semester are:

Andy Adams, Irvin Adilman, Virginia Allin, Eleanor Andersop, Robert Raymond Angwin, Maria Arande, Nadine Arnson, Gloria Arrighi, Robert C. Arnold, George Baffice, Newton Baker, Mary Batey, John L. Begon, John Raymond Beddow, Julianna Bernhardt, David Billings, Harold Babbitt, George Brejnikoff, Annell Branch, Betram Brauer, Gloria Bulotti, Jack Buzze.

Patricia K. Lee, Eline Llewellyn, Edward Lopez, Grover Low, Carol Machol, Maybelle Marr, Philip Robert Maas, June Matsuda, Geraldine Mayee, Betty MacKillop, Frank D. McKerma, Douglas McKinley, Fulton C. McInerney, William Daniel McLaughlin, Sam Mendelson, Donald S. Michaelian, Charles R. Miller, Steve Miller, Henrietta Mitchell, Kimiyo Miyata, William Mizuno, Edward Montani, Helen Mnrphy.

June Nakayama, Kimi Nao, Ruth Neil, Patricia Niemeyer, Richard Deran Odabashian, Robert S. Olson, Gus Perscheid, Marion Porsch, Henry H. Pierce, Edna Ellen Rice, Vivian Proschold, Harriet K. Ralston, Marie Richardson, Edwina Katherine Rienecker, Lloyd Ronrs, Ann N. Roosman, David Rutledge.

Leon Shafer, Emeline Short, Herbert Silverman, Duane K. Skinner, Donald Sosich, Marie Soehner, Barbara Stahmann, Alfred Snen, John Snmmerly, Terry Tabata, Pat Takikawa, Kimi Tamura, Eddie Tom, Earl Thollander, Robert Tomaselli, Doris Tunherin, Audrey V. Turner, Mildred Ungar.

Clarence W. Waddington, Joan Wrenn, Lloyd Wellingham, Fran Wessner, John Charles Weiner, Lorraine Westrup, Betty Lorraine White, Leah Pattie Whitmore, Allen Wong and Helen Yee.

The new members of the society this semester are Lu French, Catherine Emiko Kikuchi, Yutaka Kobaynshi, Choze Mitoma, Frances Misuno, Florence Numagin, Vazken Tashin, Herbert Waechtler, Michael J. Whalen and Alice Young.

If any person has these qualifications and his name is not present, he is urged to see Alice C. Cooper, club adviser.

Meeting Date Set By Campus Players

The Campus Players will hold their first meeting of the new semester this week, according to Marion Turner, faculty adviser of the group.

The first public meeting will be held sometime next week, when the old members will present the entertainment. Miss Turner urges that anyone interested in acting, producing, or writing attend the meet.

Officers of the group for this semester are Dorothy Hogan, president; Florence Espinoza, vice-president; Dolores Sullivan, secretary, and Stella Miranda, treasurer. The representatives of The Guardsman and Club Advisory Board will be chosen at the first public meeting.

Miss Hogan disclosed that at future meetings, members will give reviews of books, plays, or radio programs. Some of the meetings are to be held at the homes of members.

Plans for the olio, which was postponed last semester, are still not definite.

Further information about the group may be secured from Miss Turner at Room 210.

Auditions for new college yell leaders will be held in Room 169 at 1 o'clock today, according to Jim Upp, head yell leader. Both men and women are requested to appear at that time.

Jobs Available At College NYA Office

Despite a recent renewal of the NYA program for students who need financial aid, there are many jobs open, Claude T. Silva, director of college NYA, announced last week.

The larger portion of these jobs are positions that have to be filled by men, and though there have been quite a few applications for jobs by women, not many men have filed applications.

According to Silva, since there have been fewer applications this semester than last semester, especially on the part of men, popular opinion must be that there are no jobs open in NYA.

This is due to a ruling of the federal government which cut down the state NYA budgets on November 21, 1941. For a period of two months, enrollment ceased and no more students were admitted to jobs. This ruling was abandoned on February 1, and many jobs for those who wish to work were reopened.

The positions are open to both men and women students between the ages of 16 and 24 inclusive who are carrying twelve units of the normal college course. Pay for the work is forty cents per hour.

Motion picture actor Dana Andrews is a graduate of Sam Houston College.

By Francis Chrisman

ONE of the newsreel theatres downtown is showing a shortie dealing with the all-out war effort of the continent of Australia. It is a nice film; filled to overflowing with pictures of the results of Australian labor and the sacrifices of Australian people.

There is a commentator hanging around who keeps bobbing up with war language. He gives out with such trite phrases as, "Australia is giving aid to mother England," and, "the English people have gained the undying respect of the Australian people."

The first impression we gained was one of quasi-repugnance for such out and out propaganda. The very idea of some English-accented smoothie dishing up those phrases and expecting people to swallow everything! Since then mitigation has set in, and a few pertinent facts have been remembered.

There are, in this country, many people (some Irish) who have absolutely no use for the people of Great Britain. They base their dislike upon the following:

PROFFERED REASONS

Men of other countries, especially Australia, do too much of England's fighting.

The English in the past have been ruthless colonizers, and earned their way in blood.

England seldom loses a conference. (This, in meaning, speaks for itself.)

Now—it must be remembered that the formation of the British Empire brought civilization to many parts of the world that probably would not have seen it for hundreds of years had England not been around.

We, ourselves, are fighting a war to establish our own and other people's freedom. In this war we are killing. We know it is necessary. And yet many condemn England for bringing civilization by the same method that we now use.

THE ONLY WAY

Too many Americans are prone to forget that often this is the only medium through which an aim or an ideal may be accomplished. It is argued that England was satisfying her own aims in bringing this civilization to these out of the way (then) places.

But the result in the end has been most favorable. Schools, colleges, roads, all the benefits of civilized men have come to the unknown parts of the world through the efforts of Great Britain. A better job could not have been done had it been planned this way.

When someone claims that too many other men are fighting the battles of the British Lion don't forget that, though this may have been completely or partially true in the past, it cannot be denied that now the entire people of that little nation of traders is now under arms—everyone of them is fighting this battle. Those were Englishmen that died at Dunkirk, and in the skies above London.

TAKE AND GIVE

In the colonizing period England won her way in blood of colonies; now she is giving her blood in her own fight. But she is giving her blood for those colonies, and commonwealths, and territories of hers as well. Most assuredly she will not be the only one to gain by a victory.

In the peace conference to come England has hardly anything ulterior to gain, as compared with Versailles; because those out of the way places, places like Australia, are now full-fledged nations and may speak to their creator on equal terms.

So if you see that film depicting Australia's expected help to "mother England," and if you seem to feel an aversion for the words of that English-accented commentator, just remember—of all the nations in history, of all the peoples in history, none other has in reality, though perhaps unknowingly, done so much for the human race as has England.

ENGLAND'S WORTH IT

Had there been no England the history of the world would have been drastically different. We might now be speaking German and doing a goosestep to some Hitler, knowing nothing of civil, religious, or private liberties—and certainly have no nation such as our own to willingly defend.

For all her vices she has imparted a virtue of democracy that was worth the price for which it was obtained. Courage, heart in the face of unconquerable odds, freedom, liberty, and civilization have been her contributions to man. It is impossible to have done more.

Elections

Freshmen Lead Way In Class Voting; Jack Skinner Takes High Sophomore Presidency

Freshmen of the college took the lead Wednesday in class elections by casting more votes than students of any other group.

In the high sophomore class, Jack Skinner won the presidency by defeating a field of three, including Dick Dickson, Marshall Hyde, and Sam Mendelsohn. Dorothy Ann Kraul was awarded the office of vice-president by a toss of a coin. She had tied with Don Taylor, with Jane Johnston close on the heels of both candidates. Shirley Stayton was unanimously acclaimed secretary for the high sophomore class. She was unopposed.

Skinner was unavailable for a statement, but Miss Kraul expressed the hope that she and the other officers woud be able to maintain the faith that their class members had vested in them with the election.

Sweetheart Contest Planned

When questioned as to the officer's views concerning the semi-annual sophomore sweetheart election, Miss Kraul said that it was much to early in the semester for any opinion on this matter, and that she could advance no statement without first consulting her fellow officers.

Jim Skinner, last semester's Freshman Apollo, walked off with the presidency of the low sophomore class, defeating Lexarr Cinnamond, Dick Archer, and Bill Allan. For the office of vice-president, Kay Krifles succeeded in nosing out candidates Warner Croll and Ed Gallimore. The new secretary will be Josephine Raiola, who defeated Irene Sotack.

Lewis Elected President

Members of the high freshman class selected Joe Lewis to serve as president of the class for the new semester. Lewis defeated fellow candidates Clinton Peck, Norman Smith, and Allan Clapp. Hugo Jacuzzi narrowly defeated Helen Custer for the office of vice-president with Bob Haines, Betty Dahlburg, Merve Weisholz following close behind.

For the office of secretary, Gloria DeMartini succeeded in defeating Lois Claussen and Jack DeGrace.

Golden Doubles Opponent Votes

There was no doubt in the minds of the low freshman class as to their choice for low frosh president. Candidate Win Golden rolled up twice the number of ballots of his opponents, Jack Champaghe and Al Peterson. Bonnie MacPherson defeated Roberta Irvine and Howard Samuels to win the vice-presidency of the class. Shirley Cooke will serve as secretary having defeated Frank Landecker and Tom Kenny.

"There was a fair turnout in all classes," commented Don Jensen, Associated Student president, "and it is interesting to note that this semester, as in past semesters, the low freshman class cast the largest number of votes. I hope the new freshmen will continue to have an interest in the class activities."

Low Frosh Elections In Future

Elections were held following the rally Wednesday afternoon. George Coart was in charge of the high sophomore class; Mel Dropo, low sophomores; Jim Duryea, high freshmen, and Don Jensen, low freshmen.

Counsellors for the respective classes are as follows:

Mary Perry and Nelson Wells, high sophomore class; Phyllis Haley and Edward Sandys, low sophomore; Gertrude Bolton and Wesley Muscio, high freshman class, and Ruth Gavin and the other yet to be elected, for the low freshman class.

Future Plans Of Duryea Announced

Announcing that plans for the Associated Men Student's semi-annual boxing matches are under way, after a successful smoker last Wednesday at the California Women's Club, Jim Duryea, AMS president, released the calendar of events scheduled for this semester.

"The semi-annual AMS bouts will be held as usual at the Coliseum Bowl in April," Duryea said, "and will be followed by an informal dance at some local hotel."

Barn Dance Planned

Included on the list of events which are scheduled for this semester is a picnic and barn dance the first Saturday in May, Duryea added. Because of the change in the daylight hours, effected by the newly installed Pacific War Time, the picnic will start about 4 p.m. and the barn dance will be held immediately afterward. The site for this event has not been selected as yet, but will be a suitable place, away from the city, providing adequate facilities for indoor and outdoor games, a big bonfire, and a good floor for the dance.

Three Day College Holiday; February 23, 25, and 26

Students will enjoy three days of vacation during the week of February 23 to 28. Monday, February 23 is a Washington's birthday holiday, and on Wednesday and Thursday, February 25 and 26, the faculty will hold their annual institute meeting.

Other events which will be given by the AMS and the Associated Women Students, in joint sponsorship, will be another mixer before the semester is over.

Bonfire Rally Suggested

It has been mentioned by several of the students to have another bonfire rally near the gymnasium, similar to that which was held last semester. This feature will be held if enough funds are available for it, Duryea said. If held it will be before a major track meet or before a major baseball game.

"All of these events will be held if the budget submitted by the AMS council is passed by the finance committee," Duryea said. "There is also planned a special event for the men students of the college later in the semester, but until the budget appropriation is passed and the event is initialed by Dean Edwin C. Browne, the nature of the event can not be made known to the students."

Smoker Success

At the smoker last Wednesday at the California Women's Club, there was a crowd of 300 men students, one of the largest in the history of the college for such an event. With the impressive list of speakers, who showed up as announced in The Guardsman, the whole show was a success in the minds of the AMS council.

Statements made by some of the students who attended the smoker were:

Jack Champagne: "It was a good program and I hope that they will have one next semester. I think Jim Duryea did a good job in putting the event on for the students."

Bob Cuthbertson: "It was a good program and the speakers were very

Women's Service Society Selling Gymnasium Suits

The Women's Service Society, whose purpose and activities center around rendering service to the college, are selling used gym suits in the gym this semester, according to Leona Schaefer, newly elected president of the organization. The suits, sold for the benefit of those who do not wish to buy or can't afford new ones, can be purchased for 25 cents a garment.

Nearing completion is the WSS Book Exchange, club officers said. New books are constantly coming in and those who were unable to get a book are advised to try again. Money for the books will be paid to the owners not before the 24th of this month, but if the books sell well, another week will be used for the sale.

This sale is one of the most popular events of the club along with a tea for new girls and a banquet at the end of the semester.

Guardsman Now Out Once A Week

From this date on, and probably for the duration of the war, The Guardsman will be published only once a week. Beginning the first week of March this new plan will be continued throughout the semester at least.

There will be one exception; two papers will be delivered to students the week of March 1 to 7. From that time on, commencing with the Friday, March 6 issue, The Guardsman will appear each successive Friday.

For the last several semesters the college paper has been a twice weekly publication. An effort was made to have it so continue. But enrollment has dropped, the sale of student cards has fallen off, the budget allotment for The Guardsman will be sliced almost one-third.

However an effort will be made to get all of the necessary information into the paper. There will also be an attempt to make The Guardsman as interesting a publication to the students as is possible under the limited circumstances.

It is the hope of The Guardsman staff that little inconvenience will be experienced by student groups because of this change. Perhaps when the war is over a two a week paper will be forthcoming.

South American Books Added To Library

With preference given to Pan-American relations, more than 65 books have been received by the library for faculty and student use, Marcus Skarstedt, college librarian, announced last week.

Included among the recently arrived books on Central and South America are Good Neighbors by Hubert Herring, The Mexican Earth by Todd Downing, Venezuela by Henry J. Allen, A History of Brazil edited by Percy Martin, The All-American Front by Duncan Aikman, and The Maya and Their Neighbor written by contributing authors.

Special interest will be given a new 16 volume set of works of Leo Tolstoy and a 20 volume set of Charles Dickens' works.

Ever-changing Europe by William F. Sigmund is given high praise by Skarstedt, for it depicts the rapid changing of European boundaries due to the present war.

Vocational Books Added

Books of interest to students enrolled in various courses are Fighting Planes of the World War by Major Bernard Law, Our New Music by Aaron Copland, Iceland by Vilhjalmur Stefansson, Poisons, Potions and Profit by Pete Morell, and The People, Politics and the Politician by A. N. Christensen.

The City of Berkeley, authored by WPA federal project writers, joins the lists of subject American cities. This book will be of a particular interest to students living in the East Bay area, Skarstedt said.

New Books Posted

Students are urged to pay attention to book jackets posted on the bulletin board outside the library.

At present, the library staff, headed by Skarstedt, Eleanor Blinn and Irene Mensing, is preparing to aid students and faculty members in their selection of books.

Drop In Sales of ASSFJC Cards

There has been a considerable drop in the sale of Associated Student Cards this semester, according to Ward Nichols, college comptroller. Complete figures on sales are not yet available.

Bleachers

StandsArrive; Now Set Up InMen's Gym

Bleacher seats for the men's gymnasium have arrived and are being installed at the present time. Proof of this statement may be obtained by merely making the long trek down to the gymnasium and peering inside the doors opening on the basketball court.

Plans for installing the bleachers were started in the first part of last semester. In fact, in the October 21 issue of The Guardsman, glaring headlines appeared announcing that work on the bleachers would begin within 30 days.

Priorities Caused Delay

However, due to circumstances over which the college had no control, this work was postponed until a later date. Then the war came along and the government declared a priority over railroad transportation which threatened the delivery of the bleachers. Despite all these setbacks, however, the bleachers finally arrived and are now in the process of installation.

According to Louis G. Conlan, college coordinator, the seats cost approximately $12,000 and will hold about 2,000 students. They are of the accordion type, in that they lie flat against the wall when not in use. When necessary to use them they will be "unrolled" and this work may be done by one person.

Seats On Four Sides

The bleachers are being set up on all four sides of the gymnasium. Either end will be equipped with sections containing six rows of seats and the side sections will provide 11 rows of seats.

"The bleachers should be ready for use within a week," Conlan said. This means that the bleachers will be ready for use for both the Salinas and San Mateo basketball games to be played on February 20 and 21 respectively.

No More Step Rallies

The bleachers will also be used for rallies and Associated Student assemblies, Conlan said. This will eliminate the use of the front steps as a meeting place for rallies and student assemblies.

At present the men's gymnasium and body building classes are meeting for roll call only, and until the bleachers are completely installed they will not be obliged to dress for classes.

CAB

College Groups Plan "Join A Club Week" Dance To Usher In First Membership Drive

Opening the drive for new members in college organizations the Club Advisory Board will hold a mixer dance to celebrate the beginning of a Join A Club Week sometime in the near future, Ed Lopez, CAB president, announced this week.

The officers of the club board are awaiting the decision of the finance committee before submitting the plan for approval to the Executive Council, explained Lopez, and until then the dates will not be announced.

College Clubs Boosted

Working hand in hand with Don Jensen, Associated Student president, and Jim Duryea, Associated Men Students president, the CAB will strive to cooperate with Jensen's plan to raise spirit throughout the college by stimulating active membership of students in college clubs and organizations.

Dorothy Hogan, vice-president of the CAB will head the mixer dance committee, and upon the decision of the Executive Council, Miss Hogan will be free to announce her plans.

CAB Meeting Friday

First meeting of the CAB will be held this Friday in Room 113 at 3 p.m. All clubs are urged to have their organization represented.

Plans for the Join A Club Week will be discussed.

An announcement will also be made concerning the beginning of club charter renewals, for which reason all clubs should make certain that they are represented at Friday's meeting, Lopez urged.

Cooperation Requested

"I feel sure that the various clubs will cooperate with the CAB in the plans for a Join A Club Week," Lopez said, "the success of the plan will depend on the students themselves."

He listed a number of clubs that would probably welcome new members this semester. They are:

Astronomical Society: open to all astronomy students.

Campus Players: open to all students interested in dramatics.

Chinese Students Club: open to all Chinese students.

Engineering Club: open to all engineering students.

Forestry: open to all students interested in forestry.

Forum: open to all students interested in art and society.

Home Economics: students of Home Economics department.

Hotel and Restaurant: students registered in this department.

Horticulture: students of floriculture.

Music Club: all students interested in music appreciation.

Newman Club: all students invited but approval of faculty adviser needed.

Omicron Phi Pi: honor society for economic students, grade requirements.

Phi Rho Pi: all students interested in debating.

Physical Education and Recreation Major: women students majoring in physical education.

Pi Mu Gamma: students in pre-medical or associated divisions.

Pick and Hammer: students interested in geology.

Next Guardsman Published Tuesday, March 3

The next issue of The Guardsman will not be delivered until Tuesday, March 3, because of the college holidays between now and that date. After this date The Guardsman will be published but once a week because of a decrease in the budget allotment which was caused by a drop in the enrollment for this semester.

Scholastic Council

Appointments Revealed By Marshall Hyde

To aid in the selection of a man or woman student who has contributed the most to the college, Margaret Mann and Dick Hoyt have been appointed to the Scholastic Council, Marshall Hyde, chairman of the Council, announced last week.

At present, there are two honor awards which will be presented. One, the President's Plaque, has inscribed on it each year the name of the man or woman student who has contributed the most to the college in leadership, sportsmanship, activities and other essentialities.

Cup Given For Grade

The Scholastic Cup is awarded to the man or woman student compiling the highest academic grade made during his two years in this scholastic college.

Leonard Gross, former editor of The Guardsman, and Mary Frances Malone were named on the President's Plaque last year. Miss Malone was also awarded the Scholastic Cup as well.

No Predictions

"We can make no prediction as to just who will be selected," Hyde said, "and only until the final grades have been handed in, will we have a chance to definitely make known our selection."

Hyde, who was appointed to the Council by last semester's outgoing president, Harry Haesloop, stressed the fact that the winner of the Scholastic Cup will be chosen with the honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma, acting upon the final decision rendered.

Alpha Gamma Sigma

Members Urged To Apply For Scholarships At Once

Members of the Alpha Gamma Sigma desiring to compete for scholarships to various colleges, this year are advised to start on their applications, immediately, according to Miss Alice C. Cooper, adviser of the organization.

Because each of the junior colleges are allowed to submit but one representative for each of the tuition scholarships the following requirements are asked of the Alpha Gamma Sigma members.

Only fourteen unit students who have been elected to temporary membership for two semesters and who are likely to be considered for permanent membership, should consider competing. It is recommended that the applicant be one who has shown special ability by participating in some extra-curricular activity; and be one who will be benefited by some financial assistance.

Scholarship Bases Award

In selecting the candidates, it should be remembered, that while financial need will be one of the factors considered in making the awards, scholarship will be the principal factor. No student should be recommended for a scholarship unless his character, service record and scholarship are excellent, Miss Cooper stated.

Following are the various colleges and deadline dates: Pasadena, March 1; Mills College, March 16; College of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons, April 17; College of the Pacific, September 1; Dominican College of San Rafael, May 15; La Verne College, April 15; Occidental College, April 15; University of Redlands, April 1; University of Southern Cali-

Yell Leader Caught In Act--Magic Eye Photos Show How It's Done

To College Sophisticates

Stop Moaning

THE spirit of a thing is all important. If there is no spirit there is little else. This college could use a little more. It could use quite a bit more.

At the recently held men's smoker, an Associated Men Students affair, the question of college spirit was brought into the various speeches and talks many times over. Not only members of the college coaching staff, but guests and well wishers brought home the point that "the old school spirit" is not something to laugh at. That is, unless it does not exist.

In a group of students that spirit may mean a winning team, a garnered honor, favorable publicity, public attention and support. It is equally as important as any other single item.

At this institution there are some who attempt to pass off their mental and physical lethary, insofar as college support is concerned, through the use of phoney excuses. They're too busy, they have something else to do.

They're not too busy to attend a dance at some off campus spot. In the past these have always been overcrowded events. They're not too busy to putter away their time in the cafeteria while a rally is being held. They're not too busy to eat and drink at a book store, or nearby eatery when they could be at an on campus event. Oh no! They're not too busy to find fault with the rally commission, to complain about the gym courses, to belittle the efforts of others whom they elected to keep those worries from their over-strained minds, to squawk, and howl, and bellyache all over the place.

These are the students who think that they are college material. College material! They belong here like Hitler belongs in the White House. These are the sophisticated wise-guys who are too good for such activities as have been planned for them. Do they think that it's fun to run around town auditioning orchestras, lining up entertainers, struggling over budget accounts, over-hearing the complaints of students for whom you're working?

Do they think it makes a person feel good to hear a feeble response to a yell leader, to play before half, or less, filled stands, to work hard and hear what a rotten job has been done?

And yet this kind of student attends here. Not all of them are like that of course. But quite a few. Just listen to them sometimes. They are the indefinable, all and well informed interiors of this institution. They could do a better job—but they never will.

If something is wrong, let's have it. Do something, don't tell your neighbor, tell a student officer, get a petition—do anything—but don't just sit around and moan, anybody can do that and tot very well.

Perhaps few know it but there are a lot of swell people here. They're enthusiastic, energetic; they want to put on better dances, better rallies, better events. Give them a break.

Those to whom this is addressed please take note. You will find more fun, more pleasure, more honest enjoyment in college, any college, if you will try and help out. Right now if you aren't getting much out of college life it's nobody's fault but your own.

Go to the rallies, go to the games (the bleachers are now in the men's gym), join some club, enter some activity, work at enjoying college and you will enjoy it.

It's good to study, it's nice to enjoy yourself. You CAN do both.

so often, some sage politician includes in a speech that, "General Sherman was right. 'War is Hell'." Despite the beatings this old cliche takes, it seems to crop up repeatedly and we never thought the time would come when we'd ever see the full meaning of it 'til when we heard a young cop talking to an ice man where we eat lunch somtimes.

"Look at me," he moaned, "I spent seven months in an army camp in San Diego. I couldn't even see the girl I was engaged to. We'd planned to get married just before I left but we wanted a nice honeymoon so we put it off. Okeh. Seven months with the army wasn't so bad. Then I got this call from the civil service board. I get out of the army to be a cop. Very nice. I could come home and we'd get married, and everything. And I did. And we did. And THEN, by gosh, you know what happened? They stick me on night duty!"

burned at her dock and is now resting wearily on her side, reconstruction on her being set back many months. Of course, the Federal Bureau of Investigation will declare that evidence did not point to sabotage." A munition plant blows up in the east. The FBI declares that it was not sabotage. Another one blows up in the west. "No sabotage," says the FBI. Gosh, we have the rottenest LUCK, don't we?

DOWN

at "Old Stadium" in Golden Gate Park, Lockheeds and low wing Buffalo Fighters and two tailed bombers go through their paces every Sunday. The pilots range in age from about twelve to fifty. Sounds strange, doesn't it? Well, these pilots do all their flying from the ground.

The trick is to build yourself a practical flying model, equip it with a miniature, one cylinder gas engine, make a couple of lines fast to the controls manipulating the tail flaps, attach these lines to a handle at the other end, and you've got yourself a fascinating toy and a lot of the thrills of real flying.

It takes a lot of skill to fly these flying puppets. Some of them go around fifty MPH. You can make them dive, loop, and landing them is no cinch. We saw a couple of swell crack ups. A running ground crew of "mechanics" always dashes over, full of purpose, tangling up the lines and making things look pretty serious. Technical language bubbles from the mouths of babes. We saw a nice little tailor cub dive from about 30 feet to a shattering smash.

"It's broken isn't it," we remarked intelligently to a small boy.

"Naturally," he replied glibly, "the line to the port elevator parted, resulting in uneven dihedral stress on the ailerons, causing the ship to go into a spin. A simple problem in aerodynamics."

"Oh, of course," we replied and

Praise Due Radio Class; Four Rainy Gym Days

● Lincoln Day Program
Editor, The Guardsman:

Quite by accident the other night I switched on KSFO, and found to my amazement a program in progress given by the college dramatic or radio production class. This Lincoln Birthday program was very well done. The commentator or narrator did an exceptionally fine job, while others also, were well cast in their parts.

If the class puts on dramatizations as good as this all the time they should be publicized both internally and externally.

It is programs like this that put our college on the map, and that make us proud to be numbered among the students of the college.

I've read several notices in previous semesters about similar programs but frankly didn't think them worth while. Now I'd like to retract my thoughts and loudly praise the class and its work.

Let's have more publicity on these programs, bigger and better radio productions and, if possible, names of students participating.

Editor's note: Through an oversight somewhere along the line The Guardsman was unaware of the program until after the deadline of Tuesday's paper. Future programs will be publicized, however.

● Wet Program
Editor, The Guardsman:

Last semester a wonderful program was worked out for women students having classes at the gym during the rainy season. The ruling stated that if rain was actually falling, the classes would meet in the science building. It rained, but hardly ever before gym classes. It seemed that the gym instructors had an "in" with the weather premoter, for it generally stopped before my class at the gym.

But last semester is now past history and we have another semester to look forward to. This semester, not last, is the rainy season, and now is the time that we need something done about the rain.

If we must go to the gym four times a week, and if it rains as it has of late, there will be about 99 per cent of the women students laid up with colds, flu, and even pneumonia.

Surely the physical education faculty could give some ideas on keeping fit, read some of Alice Marble's articles or something to occupy their students' minds for 40 minutes, that would be in keeping with the physical fitness line.

FEM ADS . . .

by Nancy

NO rain coats, no boots, no head scarfs—only a light jacket is needed in weather like this. So here is where the spring suit enters the scene.

Suits this season have full bloused backs achieved by taking small tucks at the waistline of the jacket. They are long torso jackets, with large patch pockets adding decoration as well as originality.

TWO WORD KEYNOTE

Plain and plaid may be the two word description of this season's suits. Checks seem to have dropped off into eternity, although every once in a while they stage a comeback.

Plaids are multi-colored, now coming in light blue, brown, tan, yellow, pink, and what-have-you. Brown plus blue are still high sellers among collegiennes, if sales have any bearing on popularity.

Several new suits have large patch pockets made to give a half size effect. Instead of opening at the top, as is the custom among pockets these choose to open sideways.

SAME SKIRTS

Skirts follow the same general pattern. The more pleats the more becoming the skirt, as fullness is flattering to almost any type of figure.

A recent article in a woman's magazine told how to buy a suit. The ideas seemed quite logical, and as this is the suit buying season, here are several of the hints: Don't be in a rush. Be leisurely and slow in selections.

Choose suits with the head, not the heart, as in buying hats.

Before shopping see what sweaters or blouses can be teamed up with certain types of suits, and select accordingly.

While trying on the suit, duplicate motions made in daily life, such as driving a car, hanging from a bus strap and so forth. If the suit feels and looks right while performing these actions, the suit may be "the one."

CHRISTMAS COLORS

Red and green are seen frequently on the streets of San Francisco. Some of the colors are mixed, and with a green suit are seen red shoes, red bag and hat, vice versa with the red.

Dress suits come in varied styles. One model of red was made with deep pockets and stitched flaps, and trimmed with two large silvery buttons. Another novelty number, bright blue, fashioned after the uniform of a continental army officer. When worn with a tricorn hat and gauntlet gloves, the wearer is practically guaranteed to look like George Washington.

Surprisingly enough there are very few military styled suits. Keeping up morale is the woman's job, and something cheery, bright, and non-military will be much more appreciated by the serviceman home on leave than a military designed outfit.

Cuthbertson Suspicion . . . entertainment

Spectator . . . value not doubtful

RECENT press notices from Hollywood mentioned the name Joan Fontaine and added that she should be considered for an award at the annual screen get-together for one of the top performances of the year. After viewing her latest cinematic role, Suspicion, we can only add our own affirmations to the proposal. Not since Rebecca has Joan Fontaine appeared on the screen, and not since Rebecca has such a thoroughly enjoyable picture been shown.

Co-starred with Cary Grant, Miss Fontaine portrays the role of a surprisingly naive English girl, who, after a rather amusing courtship, marries Grant, but discovers after marrying him that he has a good many worthless ways. Soon after the marriage, suspicion and dread overshadow their lives, wreaking havoc for the pair and almost capsizing the marital boat. Emotional, suspensive, and truly magnificent Suspicion is a masterpiece of fine acting.

FONTAINE FLAWLESS ACTRESS

Joan Fontaine, as the seemingly innocent Englishwoman, proves without a doubt that she is one of the most forceful and flawless actresses on the American screen today. Her portrayal is by no means mechanical in nature, but is done with a sincere humanness. It is easily a page from everyday life.

Cary Grant, the worthless husband, receives a change of role in his current casting, but such a change only proves the real talent that Grant has. Too often has he appeared in insignificant motion pictures, pictures that rely solely upon his name, looks, and box office attraction to put them across. His portrayal of Johnny, the hnsband, irresponsible, carefree, is done with admirable grace, and he and Miss Fontaine easily make an ideal motion picture team.

HITCHCOCK DIRECTS HIT

Alfred Hitchcock, the inimitable director from across the sea, scores brilliantly with his latest contribution to the screen. Suspicion without a doubt a triumph of motion picture directing, but didn't Hitchcock prove his distinctive style with a much earlier offering, Rebecca. He has shown his worth, and his showing has produced a reviewer demand for similar productions. To Hitchcock go the great portions of praise, but to the two principals, Fontaine and Grant, go the other large portions.

And, too, this drama did not find it necessary to depend solely upon actors, actresses and directors to make it the success that it is. For once these two ingredients were blended again with another successful factor—photography.

PHOTOGRAPHY SUPERB

For once a motion picture was shown depicting scenes in the out of doors as well as in the over stuffed set homes. Most of the outdoor photography was done with due regard taken for the beautiful cloud and water effects. Such scenes, not only beautiful and inspiring, completely captured the reviewer and added greatly to the suspense of the film.

Chalk up this film with They Died With Their Boots On as one of the foremost films of the current show year. Filled with emotion, conflict, and heartwarming love, Suspicion rates high on our list of cinematic favorites. If you want wholesome entertainment don't miss Suspicion.

Robinson

Cabbages & Kings

NOW at last the local Timberland Union has an excuse for extensive torso ogling. They are studying character.

It seems that a woman's walk not only gets her somewhere but also tells whether she can cook or not. Her posture when walking is indeed the key to her personality.

In the old days of 10 years ago, all of the college women used the "I'll tell my mother swagger" but now things are streamlined and this too has changed. The keynote of a feminine walk now is usually, "the Sadie Hawkin's day slump."

The users of the "I'll tell my mother swagger" looked much as though they were garbed in the latest style bustle. Perfect form was up, chest out, and the hips were far in the rear.

The more modern walk demands that the subject's head be lowered, her shoulders droop, her back must be curved forward and the hips well in front.

Just imagine the circumstances that the college recognition of this method of character determining would bring. Instead of a man asking a woman's telephone number, he would probably ask what her character walk standing was.

The day may even come when instead of a new hair-do creating havoc among the union members, a Veronica Lake of the pedal extremities would start a riot with a new instep twist.

EMOTIONAL RATS . . .

All of you that looked upon the rat as a purely unemotional creature are entirely wrong. A rat can show more understandable emotion than can its human counterparts.

This was all made known by a University of California doctor the other week. Seems that rats suffer almost all the same symptoms that we humans know. Even in that plane, the female rat shows a higher strung string of emotions and is just as likely to raise the knothole when hubby rat comes home cheezynebriated.

Heather maybe you won't scoff when you see M. Mouse suffering the effects of spring, over Minnie.

STRAY THOUGHTS

It wouldn't be the college without,

Human packed buses on rainy mornings with wet wool and hair tonic under your nose.

The almost traditional sign of "Checkers" over the exit at registration.

Sometimes stupid but always present questions of the newcomers to the halls of the college.

Crowded masses of humanity at the end of each period in the main entrance hall.

Students who stop to gape at the doing of the radio classes.

The changing of class times just as you've made out your program.

The long line waiting to get The Guardsman (we like to think).

Chris screaming, "You can't say that."

Nagle cheering, "Look, a Man."

Faculty Features . . . The College's Loss -- The Navy's Gain

By Ivanna Hayworth

DR. GLEN A. NOBLE, A.B., M.A., PhD., acting chairman of the Biology department for the school year '41, '42, will in all probability be taken into the Navy within a few months. His application has already been approved and sent to Washington, and he is now waiting for its confirmation and his commission.

When he goes, he will, as the other college instructors who have gone into the service, take a leave from his college duties for the duration of the present war. He will be a member in the parasitology and medical research department, and his work will consist of diagnosing various diseases such as influenza, malaria, any of which may or possibly may not be contracted by the service men.

Dr. Noble, one of identical twins, was born and raised in the Orient, where his father was a missionary. An interesting item about the Noble family is that the father and four son all have their PhD. degrees. While talking about his childhood, Dr. Noble also enjoyed one of his age, but said that he "was there" when Korea was invaded by the Japanese in 1910.

In 1927, Dr. Noble and his twin came to America to enter the University of California in Berkeley, where they stayed together majoring in the same fields to obtain their A.B. and M.A. degrees, then Dr. Noble went to Stanford to finish his academic training, whereas the twin remained in Berkeley.

His extra-curricular activities consisted of such athletics as wrestling, boxing, swimming, and one semester he and his twin were co-captains of the varsity team. He added that because all his spare time was taken up with these activities, he did not join a fraternity or any of the usual undergraduate collegiate activities.

When asked if he had ever considered going into any other field than Biology, Dr. Noble said that he had often seriously considered specializing in the field of medicine.

His first teaching position upon finishing his work at the university, was at the College of the Pacific at Stockton, where he was an assistant in anatomy, physiology, and embryology.

When the college here was organized in 1935, Dr. Noble came to San Francisco to take part in its organization as a part of the biology department. This department has grown very noticeably since the beginning when there were three instructors, and now, the department boasts eight well-trained instructors taking active part in its functioning.

Dr. Noble heads such classes as zoology and parasitology and the students hold unanimously that this course is the most practical of any offered in the curriculum.

Microscope technique is being given under this instruction for the first time this semester, having formerly been given by another instructor in the department.

The Red Cross courses, four hours a week, offered this semester, is being given under his direction, classes being held on Tuesday and Friday, and constituting half of the required weekly hours.

Along with regular college duties, he has a night class for the air raid wardens in this district where he is giving the first aid instruction.

When asked about any former positions which he had had, Dr. Noble said he had at one time worked as a partner of a biology supply company where most of his duties, and at this, he smiled reminiscently, consisted mostly of the embalming of cats and injecting frogs.

It seems appropriate in these brief talks about the college instructors to mention any special research or literary work which they may have done or plan to do in the future.

As for any literary work which Dr. Noble has done, he and his twin have published one book, and are working at present on another concerning biology which is to be used as a text. Louise Horne, a student at the college, is doing the illustrations for this book.

When Dr. Noble becomes a member of our country's armed forces, the college will be minus a valuable man in the biology department. However, the work which he will do will be, of course, important at a time such as this.

In the writing of this column about the various instructors, it is not the purpose of The Guardsman to slight or neglect any one instructor. However, time will only permit a certain number of the college instructors to be included. As was stated in the first issue of this semester, the idea behind such a column is to acquaint the students with their instructors, giving them an opportunity to better understand and know the people who are helping them with their semester's work.

Marin County's Tall Trees; Barksdale, Chapman Star

MARVELOUS MARIN

Although there have been many comments and ado rendered over the talented, towering redwood trees which cavort for Everett Dean's Stanford Indian quintet this season, there is another squad in the Bay Region, however, that possesses a similar record in which height and heftiness are its main assets.

Not only could the aggregation he called similar in height, but in ability as well, for this quintet has assumed first place in its respective conference as have the Indians at this juncture.

This repititious squad hails from Kentfield in Marin County, and is rightly named, Marin Junior College.

Forced to relinquish their coach, Louis Carlson, to the government for active service in the early season, the Marvelous Marin casabans were taken over by Paul Clymer, who has struggled them over the opposition, until now they are tied with Sacramento for the conference leadership with eight consecutive victories.

BARKSDALE CAPTAINS

Terror of the squad appears to be forward, Captain Don Barksdale, six feet four inches of humanity, who formerly matriculated at Berkeley High. Barksdale not only contributes his talents to the maplewood, but his agility enables him to hip jump six feet four inches for the Marin track team.

His ambition is to further his college career at the University of California at Los Angeles, where he certainly would be a welcome guest in the Westwood village. The Bruins, as many know, have been none too strong in the basketball department since the opening of the southern branch.

Barksdale's running mate, forward Em Chapman, could also be called a skyscraper in his own right. He too, measures the same, six feet four inches. With Barksdale, Chapman has been one of the main reasons why the Mariners contribute their high scoring sprees.

Carry Grant, the worthless husband, receives a change of role in his current casting, but such a change only proves the real talent that Grant has. Too often has he appeared in insignificant motion pictures, pictures that rely solely upon his name, looks, and box office attraction to put them across. His portrayal of Johnny, the hnsband, irresponsible, carefree, is done with admirable grace, and he and Miss Fontaine easily make an ideal motion picture team.

HITCHCOCK DIRECTS HIT

Alfred Hitchcock, the inimitable director from across the sea, scores brilliantly with his latest contribution to the screen. Suspicion without a doubt a triumph of motion picture directing, but didn't Hitchcock prove his distinctive style with a much earlier offering, Rebecca. He has shown his worth, and his showing has produced a reviewer demand for similar productions. To Hitchcock go the great portions of praise, but to the two principals, Fontaine and Grant, go the other large portions.

And, too, this drama did not find it necessary to depend solely upon actors, actresses and directors to make it the success that it is. For once these two ingredients were blended again with another successful factor—photography.

PHOTOGRAPHY SUPERB

For once a motion picture was shown depicting scenes in the out of doors as well as in the over stuffed set homes. Most of the outdoor photography was done with due regard taken for the beautiful cloud and water effects. Such scenes, not only beautiful and inspiring, completely captured the reviewer and added greatly to the suspense of the film.

Chalk up this film with They Died With Their Boots On as one of the foremost films of the current show year. Filled with emotion, conflict, and heartwarming love, Suspicion rates high on our list of cinematic favorites. If you want wholesome entertainment don't miss Suspicion.

Robinson

Cabbages & Kings

NOW at last the local Timberland Union has an excuse for extensive torso ogling. They are studying character.

It seems that a woman's walk not only gets her somewhere but also tells whether she can cook or not. Her posture when walking is indeed the key to her personality.

In the old days of 10 years ago, all of the college women used the "I'll tell my mother swagger" but now things are streamlined and this too has changed. The keynote of a feminine walk now is usually, "the Sadie Hawkin's day slump."

The users of the "I'll tell my mother swagger" looked much as though they were garbed in the latest style bustle. Perfect form was up, chest out, and the hips were far in the rear.

The more modern walk demands that the subject's head be lowered, her shoulders droop, her back must be curved forward and the hips well in front.

Just imagine the circumstances that the college recognition of this method of character determining would bring. Instead of a man asking a woman's telephone number, he would probably ask what her character walk standing was.

The day may even come when instead of a new hair-do creating havoc among the union members, a Veronica Lake of the pedal extremities would start a riot with a new instep twist.

EMOTIONAL RATS . . .

All of you that looked upon the rat as a purely unemotional creature are entirely wrong. A rat can show more understandable emotion than can its human counterparts.

This was all made known by a University of California doctor the other week. Seems that rats suffer almost all the same symptoms that we humans know. Even in that plane, the female rat shows a higher strung string of emotions and is just as likely to raise the knothole when hubby rat comes home cheezynebriated.

Heather maybe you won't scoff when you see M. Mouse suffering the effects of spring, over Minnie.

STRAY THOUGHTS

It wouldn't be the college without,

Human packed buses on rainy mornings with wet wool and hair tonic under your nose.

The almost traditional sign of "Checkers" over the exit at registration.

Sometimes stupid but always present questions of the newcomers to the halls of the college.

Crowded masses of humanity at the end of each period in the main entrance hall.

Students who stop to gape at the doing of the radio classes.

The changing of class times just as you've made out your program.

The long line waiting to get The Guardsman (we like to think).

Chris screaming, "You can't say that."

Boxing Team Faces State Tomorrow Night; Junior College Championships At Modesto

Boxing for this semester gets off to its first bouts tomorrow night when Coach Jim Jensen takes his pugilists to the San Francisco State gymnasium for practice matches against the Gator leatherpushers. Fists will begin to fly promptly at 8 o'clock. Jensen said, "I don't know a single thing about them except that they are green."

Concerning the competition that State will afford, Coach Jensen is in need of fighters and requests that all men interested in the ring should contact him immediately.

AMS Boxing Date Indefinite

At the end of the season, possibly before the Modesto finals, the college will stage its semi-annual AMS Intramural Boxing Championships. "We can't set a definite date for the fights," Jensen said, "because we are not sure when the Coliseum Bowl will be available."

Jensen also explained that the aviation course has made it difficult for some of the veterans to return and has prevented some of the prospects from turning out.

"Moffett Field asked us for bouts," he concluded, "but I'm afraid they will be a little too old for us. After all, a fellow weighing 118 pounds at 24 years old is a lot tougher than a fellow 17 years old at the same weight."

Intramural

Ping Pong, Rifle, Horseshoes First

First activities headlining the intramural program for this semester, will be ping pong, horseshoes, and rifle, Jack Brady, faculty adviser, revealed last week.

Signups are being taken by Brady in the men's gymnasium now, and all students who plan to enter, should have their entries filed by this Friday, February 20.

Play Starts Tuesday

Play will start the following Tuesday, February 24, at 3:30 p.m.

Singles will be conducted only in the ping pong and horseshoe competition, while in the rifle shoot, 20 shots will be taken, of which five shots will be taken from four different positions.

Gold medals will be awarded to the winners of the respective activities and silver to the runnerups.

Entries Due March 2

Volleyball, second activity planned on the intramural calendar for the spring semester, will start Monday, March 2. Entries should be given to Brady on or before Friday, February 27.

An elimination tournament will prevail and medals will also be awarded to the winners and runnerups.

Six men will be allowed to compete on a team, and one game will consist of 15 points. The best two out of three games will determine the winner.

Sweet Supervises Meet

On March 12, 13 and 14, the intramural track meet will be held under the supervision of Russ Sweet, college track coach. A total of 13 events will be held with the exception of the relay. In the event of a sufficient amount of entries who qualify to enter the relay, the event will be conducted, Sweet said.

Sweet requests that all students who wish to enter the meet start training at once so as to be in sound physical condition.

All men students are eligible to compete except cindermen who won a varsity letter or those who won a varsity letter at another junior college.

Brady Announces Spring Intramural Activities

Last week, Jack Brady, faculty adviser of the intramural program, released a tentative schedule of events for the spring semester. Brady announced, however, that all events are subject to change.

Date	Event
February 24—Ping Pong, Rifle, Horseshoes
March 2—Volleyball
March 16—Basketball
April 17—Swimming
April 20—Touchtackle
May 4—Softball

Free throwing and tennis will be held some time during the semester, but as yet, no definite date has been set.

Gaddy Speechless; Squad Looks Weak

By Charles G. Davis

This is the time of year that a baseball coach's worries begin.

For some reason or other, the prelude to a season is always the hardest for the mentor. Ram mastermind of the diamond, Jack Gaddy is no exception.

Those who are intimate with Gaddy say he's not up to par. Either he's not getting proper rest, or the outlook for the Ram nine for 1942 is none to bright.

Honesty, being one of the policies of The Guardsman, forces me to give the cold, hard, truth; to-wit: The Ram baseball team at present is nothing to write home about, so to speak.

Gaddy Better Than 1-A

Not knowing the able mentor's personal habits, and only seeing him on various occasions, it would seem offhand that he's a wee better than 1-A as the physical aspects go; but not much above 4-F when it comes to worries.

"Our Coach Gaddy" is in a bad way.

With the league opening only a matter of days, he has eighty-nine of his prospective team annamed—who they are, and where they are coming from, only the proverbial Little Bird knows.

As for the other one-ninth, "Our Coach Gaddy" has the Number 1 meance to enemy swatsman in the person of fireball artist Mr. Andy Adams. Adams is the gent who almost single handed pitched the Rams into second place behind Sacramento Junior College, during the 1941 conference race. During the off season, this Achilles Heel to all prospective 200 hitters, kept his winning right arm in shape by hurling in the Golden Gate Valley League. Andy's earned run average was the lowest in that loop.

Adams Top Moundsman

In the Junior College pennant scramble, he was also top moundsman with an average of 1.8, which is ample proof Gaddy has a better than fair country twirler on his side.

When the occasion arises that reinforcements are no longer a probability, but a necessity, he beckons a lithe, lean, pitcher named Ed Flora to lead the reserves into action.

Adams and Flora will do till something better comes along. And that something HAS to be something.

Women's Athletics

Barbecue Planned March 4 At Sigmund Stern Grove

Plans are now under way for a women's barbecue as the next event scheduled for the Women's Athletic Association. According to Janice Berch, WAA president, the affair will be held Wednesday, March 4, at Sigmund Stern Grove, from 7 to 9 o'clock.

The chosen managers of the individual clubs will also be installed in an impressive ceremony by the light of the campfire. Accompanying this ritual, the presentation of awards to last semester's freshmen will be held. Awards are given on the basis of participation and success in intramurals, good sportsmanship, posture and appearance, good scholarships, and interest in the promotion of women's athletics as shown by their service to the WAA.

The officers of the organization, Janice Berch, president; Dorothy Ann Kraul, vice-president, and Nancy Nagle, secretary, promise an enjoyable time for all interested co-eds who wish to attend.

A source of entertainment will be the community singing of the college song and special WAA songs. Before supper, dancing and recreational games will be participated in the club house. If the weather permits, the dinner will be held out doors.

As a specialty, Miss Kraul may perform, and other types of entertainment will be formulated by the line of singers, skits, and speeches.

Miss Berch extends a cordial invitation to any freshman interested in cooperating with the committees in charge of the barbecue and urges all interested to sign-up immediately.

Skating Club Presents Semester Events March 7

With the theme Around the World on Skates, the Skating Club of the college will present its semester event March 7 at Winterland from 5 to 7 p.m., according to Ingeborg Lubahn, president of the organization.

The continuity of the program will include a series of numbers of traditional dances by the club. Among the dances to be presented are: American Fantasy, History of United States Indians and Cowboys, The American Boy, and The Co-eds Drill.

Participants in the show will be: Peggy Egan, Betty Masiel, Barbara Linehon, Viola Miles, Ingeborg Lubahn, Adele Hays, Bob Anderson, Marcius Nelson, Arnie Hallstrom, Dick Burgess, Marilyn Grace, Ed Bodeo, Irene Rasmussen, Bill Udell, Bob Maxwell, Kay O'David, Jeanette Peters, John Marxon, Carol George, and Lorraine Nalpantion.

Participants in this affair are not only club members but graduates and old members as well. Miss Lubahn and Miss Egan were competitors for the State Skating championship.

Basketball

Wilson's Cagers Travel To Santa Rosa Tomorrow Night; Dropo, Terry Ready

By Jimmy Lee

In what will probably be the best game of the college basketball schedule, the Ram varsity will meet the Santa Rosa Bear Cubs on the Cubs home court tomorrow night, with the tipoff slated for 8:15 sharp.

In past seasons, the Santa Rosa tilt has always been a close game with plenty of spirit being shown by both schools.

Although having an inexperienced team this season, the Bear Cubs have plenty of scoring punch, for they play a wide open game, which finds many points being scored by both teams.

Both squads seem to point for each other, and the players on each team have always played their best.

The Bear Cubs have only two experienced men on their squad this season, but the other players make this up with plenty of determination and fight. All of the players are excellent shots and, although inexperienced, their floor work has been improving with each game.

Two Varsity Men Return

Only two varsity men returned to the Cub's fold this year, these being Howard Norton, and Al Sanzzaro, last year's guards. The other players are all freshmen with no experience, with the exception of Ed Cleriel and George Whalen, who played with the Ramblers last season.

The remaining ball hawks are all freshmen, the three guards, Al Garcia, Bruce Bailey, and Charles Schaap, who make up their handicap with lots of fight. The three centers, Don Hunnemen, Bill Hockins, and Gene Martin, have been improving fast.

The whole team averages 6 foot four inches in height, with the centers all hitting 6 feet 3 inches, the forwards 6 feet 3 inches, and the guards 6 feet even.

With a total of 339 points scored against them this season, Santa Rosa has tallied 533 digits for 10 practice games, and averaged around 50 to 55 points a game, which shows that the Bear Cubs are a high scoring squad. In all these games, however, Santa Rosa's opponents have averaged 35 points per game, showing that the Cubs take an active defense.

Taulbee Stars For Marin

Although not scoring very many points, Warren Taulbee, Marin's six foot five inch center proved the deciding factor of the game as he just about had control of both backboards all by himself, and besides being a bulwark on defense, he was even greater on offense, setting up plays, and feeding his other teammates all evening.

The high point honors for the Red and White went to two players, namely Captain Mel Dropo with seven, and Ray Sulprizio also with seven.

Dropo Leads Rams

A word must be said for the great playing, and generaship of Mel Dropo, who, by his steady playing all season has done his best, and is succeeding in setting the other players to play together to win more games, for the team has been hard hit by players dropping out of college, or from the squad. Before John Cunningham, and Gus Stromgren left the squad, the players were just getting together, and playing together.

With the loss to Marin, the college varsity has now dropped to fifth place, but the players are determined to pick up their standings very soon.

In what proved to be a mild upset in the Junior College Conference, Stockton Junior College defeated the college varsity in a slowly played game at Stockton's home pavilion last Saturday night, February 7.

Stockton Wins Out

Stockton scored first, and continued to build its lead until by halftime they left the floor holding a 25-19 advantage.

In the second half the game suddenly livened up, with the players on each squad getting rougher by the minute. At this time the Rams pulled up to within two points of the Tiger Cubs, 29 to 27, but then dropped back again, as Stockton drew away. This was partially due to the loss of Ray Sulprizio and his six foot four inch advantage under the bucket where he was greatly needed to take rebounds off the backboard.

As the game drew to a close, the Rams couldn't keep up with Stockton's fast pace, and the Cubs pulled away to win 45 to 34.

Post Mortem

Rams Beaten By Stockton, Marin Fives

Losing to one of the best teams in the Pacific Coast Junior College League, the Ram varsity was defeated by a powerful Marin squad, 57 to 28, at Marin's home court last Tuesday night, February 10.

Marin scored in the first two seconds of play, and kept on scoring for the rest of the game.

The Mariners, with their great advantage in height, seemed to be just playing with the Ram five, as they took almost every ball off the backboard, and just about controlled the entire ball game.

Lead At Half

In the first half, the boys from Kentfield couldn't miss, and at the mid-way mark led 29 to 11.

Even without their great height, Marin was hot that night, and could probably have beaten any junior college on the coast.

Don Barksdale, Marin's great colored guard, was high point man for the night with 12 points. He is another of the Mariner's tall boys, stretching his frame up to the six foot four inch level.

Taulbee Stars For Marin

Although not scoring very many points, Warren Taulbee, Marin's six foot five inch center proved the deciding factor of the game as he just about had control of both backboards all by himself, and besides being a bulwark on defense, he was even greater on offense, setting up plays, and feeding his other teammates all evening.

Medrano Enlists In Navy; Joins Former Grid Mates

Uncle Sam's call for Navy enlistments was answered again in the person of Jack Medrano, star gridder on the Ram varsity during the post season, who left for San Diego yesterday morning to join former teammates Art Ekdahl and Jim Honnert.

Medrano played two seasons for the college, but suffered with hard luck on each occasion. In 1939, though he started most of the games, he was forced to the sidelines with a bad shoulder injury.

Last semester he was hampered with the same injury and only at the end of the season did he see much action.

High Freshmen Now Accepted In Civilian Pilot Curriculum

Pointing toward the turning out of scores of thousands of trained pilots per year for duty with the multi-thousands of plans that the United States is producing for operation in the war, the Civilian Pilot Training program has undergone another drastic change, Major George Richards, college CPT instructor, announced last week.

The new alteration calls for the admittance of students of high freshman standing into the nation-wide flight instruction program. This replaces the former stipulation of one full year of college, which was formerly required for flying. The rest of the requirements still are in effect, Richards said.

A student must be of excellent physical condition, unmarried, between the ages of 18 and 25, and he must have completed 15 units of studies in his previous semester of college.

Must Enter Service

There is, however, one other stipulation that an applicant must comply with before entrance into the training. He must sign an agreement that upon successful completion of the Civilian Pilot Training he will apply for either Army or Navy flying duty.

The complete program contains four phases of training: first, the primary training; second, the secondary; third, the cross-country, and fourth, the instructor. Entrance into each succeeding phase is obtained only by recommendation of the instructor.

Flight Instruction At USP

The actual flight instruction, which, prior to the present national emergency, was handled through the college and done at the San Francisco Airport, now is under the jurisdiction of the University of San Francisco and is done at Sparks, Nevada. Although seven units of the ground school work are taken at the university, the college students will be able to pursue other subjects at the college, Beverly Pasqualetti, college aviation adviser said.

Approximately seven to nine weeks are spent in Sparks to complete the primary instruction. The Government stands the cost of the physical examination and pays for the insurance of the student. In the event that the applicant fails to qualify physically, the cost will be sustained by the student. Living expenses, amounting to approximately $2 per day, according to Pasqualetti, are the obligation of the student.

Draft Exemption

Richards reported that while a student is enrolled in this program he is exempt from the draft.

In explaining the high value of the training, Richards related that of the men who have undergone the CPT program and have applied for active service in the country's Air Corps, only seven per cent have been washed out, whereas, of the men who have enlisted, without this previous experience, 42 per cent have washed out, that is have failed to make the grade as a flier in the armed forces.

Courses Lay Foundation

Innumerable courses are included in the college curriculum to better prepare the low freshmen for the advanced work in their second semester. The courses include navigation, celestial navigation, instruction in the various instruments used in flying and numerous astronomy courses, which lay a fine foundation for the advanced courses. No one aviation course is prerequisite to another.

All of the aviation regulations and courses have been altered drastically since the beginning of the national emergency, and nothing is yet definite, Pasqualetti said, except the dire need of the nation for more and more pilots for the thousands of planes being turned out in the factories throughout the country.

Pasqualetti and Richards invite any student of the college, who is in any way interested in aviation, to call on them at the aviation office, Room 37, at any time. Either one of them is available at any time during the day, throughout the week.

Japanese Club Donation Aids Red Cross Drive

Largely because of a Japanese Club donation of $71, the total amount appropriated for the Red Cross by the college reached a figure of approximately $125, Ward Nichols, college bank executive mode known last Friday.

"However," he added, "our figures fell far short of the $500 mark that was set for us. The college Japanese Club had raised their donation a year or so ago for the purpose of buying cherry trees for the campus. There was so much delay in buying the trees, that when the Red Cross drive started, they decided to donate all of the money to it," Nichols said.

A Capella Choir Selects New Voices

New members were chosen for the A Capella Choir at the tryouts held last week, according to Flossita Badger, class instructor.

The new members are Muriel Scott, Lyla May Williams, Lois Levy, Martha Howell, Margaret Kaneko, Betty MacDonald, Irvine Bowker, Robert Roach, Miriam Johnson, Irving Cohen.

Clarence Ashman, last semester quartet member, who is now stationed at the naval training station at Treasure Island, will sing with the choir for special choir activities. The fourth quartet member to succeed Ashman has not yet been selected, but, Miss Badger believes, he will be chosen early in the semester.

Students are reminded by Miss Badger that places are still open in the mixed chorus, in the Men's Chorus, directed by Charles McKiernan and in the new instrumental groups directed by Miss Badger and Madison Devlin.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 124, according to the following deadlines:

Wednesday, 11 a.m. for the Friday issue; Friday, 11 a.m. for the Tuesday issue.

● Campus Players . . . All students interested in any phase of dramatics are urged to attend a meeting Friday, at 3 p.m. in Room 254. Reading of the play, Madness in Triple Time, will be part of the entertainment planned.

● Club Advisory Board . . . All clubs and organizations are urged to be represented at the CAB meeting in Room 113 at 3 p.m. this Friday. Club charter renewals and Join A Club Week will be discussed.

● Rifle Club . . . Meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Room 100. New members, especially women students, are urged to attend. Business meeting, including planning of social events for the semester, followed by shooting. Refreshments will be served.

Two University of Texas faculty members—the only North Americans to receive this honor—have been elected corresponding members of the Argentine Association for Historical Studies.

Luncheon

Hotel Classes Celebrate At Annual Affair

With representatives of leading hotels and restaurants throughout San Francisco and the bay region as guests, the college Hotel and Restaurant Division held its fifth annual spring luncheon, February 12, in the cafeteria.

Representatives of the California Northern Hotel Association, the San Francisco Bureau of Hotel and Restaurant Purveyors and the San Francisco Hotel Association attended the affair.

Notables Present

Other prominent guests who attended were Archibald J. Cloud, college president; Joseph P. Nourse, superintendent of public schools, and members of the Board of Education.

With Thorne Holmes acting as master of ceremonies, other student speakers who spoke on the work of the Division were Carol Phillips, Dave Massingham, Gerald Cope and Peter Slimmer.

Future Employers Attend

The luncheon and its management was conducted by the men and women students in the Division who sponsor the event in the hope of satisfying some future employer in attendance.

"This was the fifth luncheon held," Mrs. Hilda Watson, chairman of the Division said, "and it is the event in the spring semester in which students worthy of their talents have a chance to demonstrate their abilities."

Students Preside

Ernst Hjorth supervised the student chefs for the affair; Edward Nyland presided as chairman of the day, while Donald Woods was maitre d' hotel for the occasion.

As of yet, there have been no plans made for the next spring luncheon until existing conditions are made known, Mrs. Watson said.

of these "pilots" spend anywhere from two to three months building a ship. Good motors cost around $30, and are increasingly difficult to obtain because of government priorities. Luckily, these little engines are hardy, one of the hobbyists asserting that his had been through four bad smash ups. They go like a bat and make a noise that's a cross between a hornet and a Bronx cheer.

To think of all the quiet hours we used to spend with a kite! Ah happy childhood, you are gone, replaced by a new generation that knew the fine points of flying before our generation knew how to wave bye-bye.

Red Cross

Supplies For College Knitters May Arrive Soon

More yarn has at last been obtained for the Red Cross' college knitters, according to Claire Cuneo, group faculty adviser.

This shipment has been the first given out since the recent illness of the production room manager of Red Cross center on Sutter Street, and will be the last issued from this center.

Hereafter the government will issue yarn only where they think the need will be the greatest.

All garments for the coming college knitting display must be turned in tomorrow, Miss Cuneo announced.

Standard Set

Standard for the Red Cross must check their knitting with me at least once a week," she stajed.

Blanket Under Way

A blanket is under way in the class composed of all left over yarn; but more yarn is needed to complete the six-inch squares. All students are urged to bring in their left overs no matter how small to Miss Cuneo.

All women students of the college wishing to join this group should see Miss Cuneo any Tuesday and Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

No Knowledge Is Required

"No knitting knowledge is required," Miss Cuneo emphasized, "join the group and learn to knit."

Beginners must bring in their own yarn and needles for practice work.

Credits Given

Women who work for the college Red Cross unit will be credited for the number of hours put into each garment, and at the end of a certain period will be awarded a service pin. Ten hours credit is allotted for a scarf, 20 for a sweater and 7 to 9 for a dress. Pins will be awarded for a total of 144 hours.

No service pins have been worn as yet, but there is one knitter who has completed three sweaters. As soon as all girls have brought in their work, a display of the knitting accomplishments will be arranged.

War Effort Aided By Vegetable Gardens At College

Radish Growing Under Way At College; Competition Seen

"Raise Vegetables for Victory," requests the federal government. War has struck, a food shortage is impending.

Immediately, hundreds of small parsnip plantations and rhubarb gardens appear where conventional lawns and petunia beds once flourished. The American people have acted in this new defense effort.

Then the great "Vegetables for Victory" campaign is suddenly dissolved. Authorities have announced that a food shortage is improbable. "Do not raise vegetables," says the government.

"Campaign or no campaign," reply the college floriculture students, "we have decided to raise vegetables."

And so, the college "Defense Gardens" have been initiated. They are supported by the San Francisco agriculture commissioner and the San Francisco Garden Club, because it is believed that gardening helps to maintain civilian morale in these times.

Likewise, The Guardsman proposes to lend its support to the floriculture department. In the interest of producing better radishes, and because we feel that the radish has been an outrageously underrated vegetable, we announce a contest open to students of the Defense Gardens course.

The student producing the largest, most beautiful radish within 21 to 36 days, the normal period of development for this vegetable, will be formally acknowledged by The Guardsman. A weekly Radish Report will follow the progress of the contest.

The Defense Gardens, of course, will include all types of vegetables from brussels sprouts to broccelli, but we have chosen to sponsor the radish because we feel that the American people do not fully appreciate its merits.

From time immemorial, the radish has been cultivated in the Orient. In Japan, the propaganda minister reports, a variety attains a weight of 40 pounds.

"In its original and native state," an authority on the radish claims, "it was a vicious projectile, and when you bit into it, it exploded and blew the top of your head off, pouring three quarts of liquid red pepper down your throat, and peeling the skin off your tongue, tonsils and epiglottis. Today the domesticated radish is a juicy and attractive addition to the dinner table.

"Radish culture," Harry Nelson, head of the college floriculture department, informs us, "is no task for the incompetent." We have found that the "plant and pull system" . . . plant them in the spring and leave them alone until you pull them in the fall . . . is inadequate.

There is the constant struggle with invading hoardes of caterpillars, potato bugs, and zephers. There is the struggle with foreign growths and with the elements. Radish culture is a science and an art. To prove this fact, The Guardsman will spare no effort.

This is how staff artist Louise Horne pictures the current vegetable growing program being conducted by floriculture classes. Vegetable plots are part of the spring program of the floral department. Victory Gardens are playing an important role in the current defense program.

Radio

Sandburg Classic Given Over Air By College Radio Classes

The War Years by Carl Sandburg was the theme of a broadcast given by the college radio speech and radio announcing classes Tuesday evening, February 11, over radio station KSFO.

Marie Weller, class instructor, supervised and directed the program, with Andy Adams, speech student, in the leading roll as Abraham Lincoln, and Mirriame Zimmerman as Mary Lincoln, his wife.

Script Tributes Lincoln

The script, according to Miss Weller, is typical of the work of Sandburg, and is a tribute to Abraham Lincoln, the man.

Assisting Miss Weller as members of the cast, were James Browne, son of Dean Edwin C. Browne, Fred Harvey of the Parkside School, and Leo Cunningham, Jr. of St. Ignatius High School, as Lincoln's three children, the rest of the cast included Deane Hampton, Margaret Kyne, Lucille Valentine, Bob Murishy, Pearce Davis, Lou Uridiasy, Robert Roach, Robert Garner, Stella Miranda and Roberi Krutzberg.

Choir Represented

The Battle Hymn of the Republic was among a group of four songs rendered for the broadcast by the college A Capella Choir, under the direction of Flossita Badger, class instructor.

"The success of the broadcast," Miss Weller revealed, "was due to the cooperation of all who assisted." Miss Weller gives special thanks to Robert Dumm, owner and manager of radio station KSFO for his time, and for his interest in the broadcast.

According to Miss Weller, this broadcast was the commencement of an active semester for the class, with many events taking place throughout the term.

Campus Players Start Spring Meets

Cooperating with the plan of the Associated Students for stimulating campus spirit, the Campus Players are inviting all college students interested in the theatre to join the college dramatic organization, according to Dorothy Hogan, newly elected president.

The meeting at which new members are invited to attend will be held at 3 p.m., Friday in Room 254. The purpose of this gathering is threefold; to interest college students in the campus theatre; to greet and entertain new comers, and to encourage membership in the group.

After the business in the meeting, as a special entertainment for the new members, the old members will give a reading of the play Madness in Triple Time, a comedy by Valentine Stonjalsky.

"You do not have to be an experienced thespian to join the Campus Players," Miss Hogan stated, "all that is necessary is an appreciation of dramatic art, in the form of writing, acting, directing, make-up, singing, dancing, reviewing, etc."

The officers of the club, in coordination with Miss Marion Turner, adviser, offer many carefully planned activities for the organization this term.

At the gathering, new members will be asked to serve on one of the committees, and from these chairman of the committees will be chosen. The committees are hospitality, program, review, play repertoire, publicity, and scrapbook.

If those interested cannot attend Friday's meeting, an attempt should be made to see one of the officers or Miss Turner.

CAB Plans New Carnival Day Program For Spring

Plans for holding a carnival originally scheduled for last semester, are at the present time being reconsidered by the college Club Advisory Board, Don Jensen, Associated Student president, announced last Friday.

"The outlook on the possibility of holding the carnival this semester is bright," Jensen remarked, "but unless the Welfare Committee gets the full support of the various clubs and organizations of the college, there is not much chance of having a successful carnival."

According to Jensen, he has not yet selected a chairman for the committee but will do so soon. He said that as far as finances are concerned, the carnival will pay for itself and that the biggest worry of the committee in the event a carnival is held, will be to get the full cooperation of clubs and organizations.

"Ideas of lack of club support and also because of lack of time," Jensen pointed out, "last semester's carnival which was so highly publicized and touted was postponed until this semester. I hope we won't have to postpone it once again," he added.

Miss Cooper also stated that scholarship coaches will be available only the second and third quarters of this semester. The group feels that students should try to make the grade on their own during the first quarter of work.

If any need arises in the second or third periods the Alpha Gamma Sigma coaches will be on hand to help.

Clubs Planned

"There will be many new clubs and organizations founded this semester," pointed out Lopez, "and when these organizations are added to those clubs that have already been mentioned, students will find few subjects that are not covered here on the college."

Rifle Club Has Lack Of Women On Club Rolls

Although their group is faced with a possible curtailment of rifle ammunition, the Rifle Club of the college is faced with a more serious problem—women trouble.

The club roster indicates 132 eligible male rifiers, but female membership in the group is practically nil; hence, the seat of all the trouble.

Bob Ervin, club president, mindful of the seriousness of this problem, today sounded a call for any interested women of the college to join his organization. Ervin reported that no experience in rifling is necessary to join the group.

Meeting tonight for a business and shooting session, the group will gather in Room 100 of the college at 7:30 p.m. Plans for the semester, social program and semi-annual dance, will be the topics under discussion at the meeting.

Aileen Kinkle and Al Eisan, faculty members, will serve as advisers for the group for the semester. Eisan is replacing Thomas Nelson who vacated the rifle adviser post last semester.

Speedy Business Courses On Spring Curriculum

New accelerated business courses, which will enable students to cover the same amount of work in half the time, are being offered this semester, according to Ward Nichols, business department head.

In accounting courses, credit probably will be based partially on achievement, Nichols explained. In typing courses, students will have to be able to type 35 words a minute in one semester to receive double credit.

W. C. Marsh, instructor in the business department, stated that students should prepare themselves for some field in addition to their major, so that they will have double insurance in making a livelihood. A short business training will provide that insurance in an emergency.

A pew course is offered this semester, with the cooperation of the International Business Machines Corporation, to instruct students in the use of their machines. There is a great demand in this field now, according to Nichols.

MANY prominent persons have come before the public, through the medium of the radio in particular, to warn against overconfidence. There is more than an unfounded worry back of these warnings. Their justification is based upon the traditional belief in American ability to overcome almost anything.

This traditional belief is a good thing to have; confidence in one's government is a war-time necessity. On the other hand, overconfidence is every bit as dangerous to the successful culmination of such a struggle as the present one as is underestimation or doubt.

As soon as people become so certain of the outcome of a particular endeavor that laxness and a failure to realize the true state of affairs run rampant—then the outcome is anything but certain.

NO TROUBLE

The "we did it before and we can do it again" (it won't be any trouble at all) outlook has spelled the doom of many a proud and mistakenly overconfident country.

Still, some may be prone to question this. They wonder how the Axis can possibly emerge with flying colors when the flaz pole of raw materials does not even exist.

There is little opposition to the statement that overconfidence is a dangerous condition of mentality for either person or group. But the opposition appears with the query, the United Nations have such an obvious superiority in materials and production facilities, what matters then a bit of self-assuredness?

THE MATTER IS

The matter is that if the United Nations don't buckle down and tend to their knitting they may never have a chance to make use of their obvious superiorities. If the war is over in another year those production plants will only have begun to roll out the materials of war. And to win the war efficiency and production will have had to have reached a maximum.

Well the Axis knows that they cannot win a war of outwaiting the enemy. They know that Axis armies must smack down the English, Russian, and American armies completely; and they know that invasion is the only answer. Because blockade would work as great a hardship upon the blockee as upon the blockader.

Knowing this Hitler will further attempt to destroy the Russian factories and mines. Then he will concentrate his sea power in a move to eliminate sea borne aid to the USSR. Should he achieve this goal the Red army would find itself in almost hopeless straits.

GIBRALTAR AND SUEZ?

At the same time Hitler must isolate England from her allies. Submarines and planes are his best bet here. The Nazis must take Gibraltar and Suez. They must then occupy Africa and work a pincer play upon India. Japan would be the eastern arm moving west.

If the U.S. is kept occupied, invasion would be assured. Over from Dakar, in a cooperative sea-borne and aircarried invasion of South America. Down from Greenland and the west coast of Canada. So into the United States. (How unbelievable yet threatening this all sounds.)

As obvious as is the need for haste insofar as the Axis is concerned, and as obvious as is the United Nations' capacity, as obvious also is the trend of the fighting at the moment.

NO ENDORSEMENT, BUT—

Of course this does not mean that the three dictatorships are going to succeed. The job is one of the most impossible-sounding feats of history. However the Axis will try, and desperately.

The job of the Allies is to hold them in check as best as possible, then retake lost ground when the machines and planes and men begin to come in sufficient quantities. There seems to be little doubt that the Allies, though the cost is now, and will continue; to be, terrific, shall succeed.

But the issue is mostly one of saving lives by beginning the Allied world offensive as soon as possible. Every minute men are being killed; the sooner the war ends the fewer men will have to die.

And the struggle will end sooner if the workers and public will realize that this is not a game being played to divert attention from one boring decade to another. Overconfidence is not a tangible something, although it might well be a weapon in the hand of the enemy.

Executive Council Rushes Plans For Spring Budget; Appropriations Listed

Members of the Executive Council held a special meeting at the home of Dean Edwin C. Browne last Sunday evening to rush final approval of the spring '42 budget.

To Hewitt, head of the financial committee and assitants, Jo Ann Hall, went the task of cutting the first requests and providing a trial budget for the approval of the Executive Council.

To Don Hewitt, head of the financial committee and assistants, Jo Ann Hall, went the task of cutting the first requests and providing a trial budget for the approval of the Executive Council.

BUDGET FALLS SHORT

"This semesters total will fall almost $3,000 short of last semesters' expenditures," Hewitt revealed. All budgets have been passed and will not be any more. Any requisitions for funds will have to be turned in at least four days before they will be signed by the finance committee, he warned.

Members of the Executive Council who gave approval of the final budget were: Don Jensen, Associated Students president; Gloria Olivi, A. S. vice-president; Barbara Stahlman, A. S. secretary; Betty MacKillop, Associated Women Students president; Jim Duryea, Associated Men Students president. Bob Murphy, rally commissioner, Janet Birch, Women's Athletic Association president, and Ed Lopez, president of the Club Advisory Board.

AWS

Meeting Called To Plan Teas

Plans for a series of teas to honor high school women of San Francisco were discussed at a meeting of the Associated Women Students officers and members this morning at 9 a.m., in the office of Margaret Dougherty, dean of women and AWS sponsor, according to Betty MacKillop, AWS president. Outcome of the meeting will be published in next week's Guardian.

This plan for bolstering enrollment in the college which was inaugurated last semester by Betty Fox, last semester's AWS president met with fairly good success.

Plan Reviewed

Under the plan a series of three teas is sponsored by the women students; each tea to honor high school seniors of three of the city's public high schools. The women are invited to attend the tea and become acquainted with the college, its activities, its instructors, and its students. The women are usually contacted through their respective high school senior advisers.

Already this semester, the AWS has sponsored a tea for the new women of the college, and a mixer dance, held in collaberation with the Associated Men Students.

Fashion Show Squelched

Other plans for the semester included a fashion show. This, however has been outruled.

This terms AWS officers are; Miss MacKillop, president; Eloise Windfeldt, vice president; and Ernestine Cervelli, secretary.

Sale Of Defense Stamps

Both ten and twenty-five cent defense savings stamps are now on sale at the bank counter, Room 188.

Laid in 1820, the cornerstone of Bentley Hall, Alleghany College, contains a piece of Plymouth Rock, marble from Dido's Temple, mortar from the Tomb of Vrgil and brick from the Tower of Babel.

Registration Total Drops; 2177 Enrolled

Latest enrollment figures as compiled by the registrars office reveal a total enrollment of 2177 students, according to Miss Learnard, assistant registrar.

"This number is a slight drop over that of last semester" Miss Learnard revealed.

The largest drop was in new students just entering the college. Most of the students who attended classes here last semester registered for the spring semester, Miss Learnard said.

The men students have a majority over the women students again this semester. There are 1135 men enrolled in comparison to 855 women. The ratio of almost two men to every one woman in the college remains almost the same Miss Learnard announced.

"This is a rather surprising statement when one considers the present draft laws and the number of high paying jobs for men at this time", Miss Learnard stated.

No figures have been compiled as yet to reveal the number of men students who are eligible for military service according to the compulsory military training law. Such a compilation would require the registering of the ages of each male student in the college.

AMS Boxing Matches Slated For April 1

With the budget of $340 having been approved by the Executive council, the first event on the Associated Men Student's calendar is the semi-annual boxing matches, scheduled to be held at the Coliseum Bowl on April 1, Jim Duryea, AMS president, announced last Tuesday.

"This date," Duryea said, "is a tentative one and is subject to change by Jim Jensen, college boxing instructor, who will have to approve on the date before it is final. This is because Jensen might think that the fighters may not be in as good a condition as they should be at that time, if this were the case the fighters might receive some avoidable punishment and cause the loss to some game of their luster."

Dance Tentatively Scheduled

After the bouts, Duryea added, a dance will be held if enough students express a desire to hold such an after event. "It is wholly up to the students of the college whether or not an informal dance will be held after the bouts," he said.

Next on the calendar after the boxing bouts a Barn Dance will be held on May 2 with the scheduled picnic still a question in the minds of the committee who are planning the event. The site for this event has not been selected as yet and Duryea invites any suggestions from the students. An idea about where the event could be held, whose band could be hired to play, or any other features which might be passed over by the committee in charge of the affair would be an added help because it would induce more student participation in the event.

Event Scheduled For City

In a recent Executive council meeting this problem was discussed quite thoroughly and a suggestion was made that the event should be held within reasonable range of San Francisco.

If the students of the college want another Mixer, the AMS will gladly sponsor such an event before the semester is over, Duryea said. If students interested in such a dance would get in touch with either Duryea, Bill Steenberg, AMS vice president or Nick Barbarotto, AMS secretary, plans will be formulated for such an event.

Band

College Band RehearsalsBegin

First rehearsals of the newly formed band have already been held and, according to Madison J. Devlin, college musical instructor, it will be ready to appear in about a month.

The band, composed of 15 members, meets every Thursday afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock. One unit of credit is given for this course. Any one having a band instrument may still enroll in the course, Devlin said.

The college supplies the students with some of the larger instruments such as tubas and bassoons, Devlin said. Students playing cornets, trumpets, trombones, or clarinets, must bring their own instruments.

The studio orchestra, which meets on Tuesday at 12 o'clock, is composed of 11 members and will play for radio programs as soon as it is ready. Except for several violins the orchestra has enough members, Devlin remarked.

The orchestra also a part of the college musical program, has not progressed as have the other two, Devlin said.

"However," he hastened to add, "it is not because of the lack of the ability, but the lack of the number." As yet the orchestra has no piano player as well as other needed instruments.

Slumber Finds Duryea, But Dean Talks On

Depressed, fatigued and overloaded with governmental activities, James Duryea, the exploited Associated Men Students president, fell head first into the loving arms of Brother Morpheus at last Tuesday's scheduled meeting of the Executive Council.

Jim Duryea
AMS Pres.

At the meeting, Dean of Men, Edwin C. Browne, began an oration which seemed to be of vital interest to those members in attendance. This group included Don Jensen, Barbara Stahlman, Gloria Olivi, Betty MacKillop, Ed Lopez, Bob Murphy, and slouched in a seat by the door sat the hero of the story.

The oration continued as the minutes ran rampant toward the meeting's climax, and then, the polite, but undignified, yawns of our hero commenced. Not wishing to disturb the silent slumber of our man, the group tip-toed out of the room leaving him to dream of bigger and better AMS smokers."

There is no moral to this tale, but it did indicate the manner in which spring fever all but led our man into a permanent hibernating state of existence.

Two Dances

CAB Schedules Mixer Next Monday As Feature Of Join A Club Week; Social Committee Plans Spring Informal For High Frosh March 13

To honor the high freshman students, the second hotel hotel dance of the semester, a "spring informal," will be held on Friday, March 13, in the Gold Room of the Fairmont Hotel from 9 to 2, according to Gloria Olivi, A. S. vice president, and chairman of the social committee.

Music for dancing will be played by Eddie Murphy. Murphy has played for several college affairs, and is quite well known to students of the college.

Semi-Formal Affair

The dance is to be a semi-formal affair, Miss Olivi said. This means street dresses for the women, and suits for the men students.

Gloria Olivi
ASSFJC Vice-Pres.

"Formal dresses, of course are accepted for semi-formal affairs," stated Miss Olivi, "but street length clothes seem to be ever so much more popular at what is known at the college as semi-formal dances."

The dance is to be held the last day of midterms, reminded Miss Olivi, and so every student should have an opportunity to attend. "Midterms will be over and so one will have the excuse 'I have to study.' It will be a sort of celebration for the survival of the fittest," she said.

Couples Only

Lately there seem to have been a few students who attend these hotel dances stag. Hotel dances are meant strictly for couples, and "stags" will not be admitted.

Admission to the dance will be by student body card only. No other admission will be charged. Only one card is needed per couple.

The question of mixer dances for the remainder of the semester is as yet indefinite, according to Miss Olivi. The spirit of the students at past mixer dances has not warranted the continuation of such affairs.

Depend on Enthusiasm

If, however, enough enthusiasm is displayed by the students, and enough students request more mixer dances, they will be tried again. These dances are planned for the enjoyment of the students and cost money, but since the students have not responded by attending the affairs, it seems to be a waste of time and effort on the part of the committee," she said.

Another semi-formal dance is being planned for out of the college on Friday, April 10, across the bay. Plans for this dance, however, have not been worked out yet. It will be held in honor of the low sophomore class.

To open the proposed "Join A Club Week" scheduled from March 9 to March 13, a mixer dance will be held next Monday in the women's gymnasium from 3 to 5 p.m., according to Dorothy Hogan, vice president of the Club Advisory Board. The mixer dance will serve a double purpose of opening the drive to stimulate active membership in college organizations and to introduce the CAB itself to the students of the college.

St. Patricks Day Theme

The mixer dance will carry out a St. Patrick's Day theme and the highlight of the affair will be a prize dance.

All members of the student body are urged to attend, especially new students of the college.

Forget your midterm worries, Miss Hogan invited, and come to the dance for it should be one of the best mixers ever given. There will be many special attractions and, of course, good music.

Charter Renewals Due

Ed Lopez, CAB president, announced that an important meeting would be held today in Room 111 at 3 p.m. for the purpose of distributing club charter renewal blanks. All charter renewals will be due on March 20.

Of course Join A Club Week is the most important item on our schedule now, explained Lopez, but I want to stress the importance of club charter renewals.

Last semester many of the leading organizations of the college were suspended including the Block S. F. and the Women's Service Society after club charter renewal deadline was extended an extra week.

Suspension Rules Enforced

Negligent organizations that failed to file renewals according to Lopez were not penalized for their actions last semester, but the policy of the CAB membership committee this semester will be to suspend all organizations that fail to file renewals. Suspension is the loss of all recognition by the Associated Students and loss of all publicity of the functions of the negligent organization.

The original purpose of the CAB was to serve as a coordinating unit between clubs in the college and the Associated Students.

At one time, said Lopez, the club board played a vital part in the life of the college but during the past semesters that part has greatly diminished. It will be the aim of the officers of the CAB this semester to gain the previous respect and authority that the club board held.

Library

Library Gains New Books, Periodicals

More than 100 newly bound periodicals plus a recent addition of books are now ready for both faculty and student use, Marcus Skarstedt, college librarian, announced last week.

Included in the newest selection of periodicals are the first few volumes of Fortune magazine, Skarstedt said. This set of periodicals, as well as others, were donated to the college anonymously by various friends of the library.

Book Subjects Varied

Among the books which are ready for present use are Harbor of the Sun by Max Miller, The Integration of the Personality by Carl G. Jung, The March of the Barbarians by Harold Lamb, Pay Dirt by Glenn Quiett, and Crusaders of the Jungle by J. Fred Bippy.

Books added to the industrial arts section include Design This Day by Walter Teague, The Technique of the Poster edited by Leonard Richmond, and The Intent of the Artist edited by Augusto Centeno. The first book mentioned in this specific group may be of a considerable aid to students interested in the field of art, for it depicts methods of introducing original ideas into commercial art, and illustrates how they may be inducted into the drawing.

Current Events Featured

Aside from having one of the finest map collections possible in a junior college library, Skarstedt pointed out that the library contains information that is almost every present day happening. Such information may be obtained from the numerous reference guides which are located on the library shelves.

A list of current library books has been posted on the library bulletin board and the staff, which includes Irene Mensing and Eleanor Blinn, who assist both faculty members and students in their selection of material for reading.

Civil Service Classes Held At College

Students Point For Army Work

Radio Men Work For Future

By Bob Catudio.

Three weeks of concentrated daily use—and the college radio laboratory is still intact.

For the past 21 days now, a score of civilian civil service students, prototypes of Benjamin Franklin, have been raising sheer havoc with the laboratory acoustics, what with spending a total of 48 hours per week studying electricity in the college's basement broadcasting studio with pay, too! The pay accorded the students is part of the national government's allotment to the United States Civil Service Commission.

Both single and married men, ranging in ages from 18 to 33, are now attending to master a two year regulation course of electricity in six months under the very able supervision of instructors Edward Abrahamson and John Bertucci, who both profess a liking to the task ahead of them.

Following formal application at a civil service headquarters, Room 119, Federal Office Building, applicants who pass service examinations are set for immediate training as radio trainee repairmen in the United States Army signal corps. Aside from having to spend six months at an accredited radio institute for preliminary schooling, there are no standard prerequisites for the course.

These men are future members of the United States Army Signal Corps. Taking their training here at the college, they study with pay for jobs which require the passing of a civil service competitive examination. This is a fine example of the part being played by education in the national war effort.

"The men are really sincere in the radio work and study that lies before them," Abrahamson remarked, "and in the three weeks of study that they've had, they've learned as much, if not more, than an average high school student would in a regular period of instruction."

Many men in the college are eligible for instruction, but Louis G. Conlon, coordinator of educational management, stressed the fact that it would be quite improbable for a student, registered in the college, to apply for instruction and still continue to satisfactorily carry his present college subjects.

In the laboratory, some of the more mechanical-minded students have been constructing model radios and tearing 'em down again purely for the sake of remembering what part goes where and why. Experiments of last week indicate the progress which has been made in the short time of basic instruction, and by the time June 22 appears, the score of electrical studying students should be able to differentiate between an ohm and a kilowatt just as easily as hurling

Education and War

Keep Studying!

IT is interesting and significant to note that the President of the United States, through his representatives connected with education in this country, has urged that all students remain in school until the government sees fit to call them for one or another type of service.

Many persons doubtless imagined that the government would be only too happy to have the enlistments in Army, Navy, and Marine Corps increase immediately, regardless of the former occupation of the volunteer, so long as the applicant was physically fit for the desired service. But it has become evident that this nation needs men on the production line, on the firing line—and in the fortress of education.

Naturally, there are some students who have neither the ability nor the inclination for service in such branches of the war effort as would require intensive or specialized training in the class room or laboratory. They would be much happier, and more effective, in one of the branches of service which comes into direct contact with the enemy. But these persons, too, should curb their initial zeal and await the call to duty—rather than rush headlong into a situation where they may not at the moment be needed.

Those students finding themselves with a flair for chemistry, or an adeptness with mathematics, or an ability in the medical field would find that their respective talent is judged much more valuable than their yet unproved ability with a rifle or bayonet. In this war it becomes increasingly evident that the men behind the the man behind the gun performs as great a service as any other in the defense of his country.

The army of fighters is dependent upon the army of production; and the army of production is dependent upon the army of trained specialists whose labors in the field of science provide the better equipment, and so the better protection, for the soldiers, sailors, and flyers.

Engineers, chemists, mathematicians, tacticians, these are the men who as students now, and experts later will furnish the final impetus in the victory push.

Youth at times decries the efforts of these men as somewhat effeminate because they do not face the dangers of actual battle. However, in these times war is no longer the glorious game of knighthood. It is infinitely more severe and rigorous, and requires infinitely more knowledge and preparation. The stakes are higher and more savagely contested.

The true patriot is often so only in his own imagination, for in time of national crisis every man may be a patriot through the efficient and reliable performance of his particular duty. Therefore the man who foregoes the subtle, inherent instinct to rush into combat when the fervor has permeated an entire people—the man who foregoes this desire and remains at his designated post even against his own wishes—he is in every sense of the word giving patriotic service in his country.

Who would deny that the young man in 1A who has been deferred so that he may work upon a higher octane gasoline, or the telegrapher who mans the shore set and directs the maneuvers of the fleet, who would deny that the service they render is not as important as the man who runs his tank through the Axis machine gun nest?

In a struggle where a thousand varied and essential posts must be manned to perfection, the ability of the nation's educational branches to supply men for those posts becomes of all importance. This college is performing that function; its students are here being instructed for future vital duty. The nation has always guarded education—now the favor may be returned.

Shots At ...RAMdom

WE SAW A BOY DROWN

Last Sunday, March 1. He was fishing off Camel's Back Rock near the wrecked freighter, Frank Buck. We saw him stand high up on the rock to reel in his line, apparently trip, and fall backwards 50 feet to the boiling surf that literally steams around the rocks below. Billy Thomas came to the top, struggling futily against the white cowled murderers that came laughing over the rocks to beat him down and tumble a soldier and Coast Guardsman that tried to reach him, against the locks.

At least 16 fishermen besides 17 year old Billy Thomas have dropped off Camel's Back Rock. Four of their bodies have been recovered.

There've been campaigns to put heavy guard rails on the cliffs that are a menace to children, campaigns to eliminate dangerous street crossings or to eliminate ruts so that we may save our precious tires.

Perhaps fencing off the path to the Camel's Back would mar the primitive beauty of Land's End. Perhaps dynamiting it would cover the rusty corpse of the Frank Buck that's such a good advertisement for our park. Maybe all this is too much to pay to save lives and broken hearts. A Coast Guard gob waxed sarcastic that day.

"Maybe after 50 guys have been washed off that rock, the city'll do something about it".

by ship, the convoys file into the Gate and with them come vague little stories of the Islands told by men who were there. Some of these, we're not supposed to believe. Some we'd like to but won't. We're in a strange position now, not knowing which direction the propaganda's coming from. In any event the government does everything it can, even if officials do ask us, "Do you believe us or what you see?"

The most ironic story we've heard recently, however, is the picking up of Jap bomber crews wearing Stanford and California graduation rings.

The old college try, with a vengeance!

A STORY

told slyly by a local wit, who we ran after with an axe but couldn't catch, goes like this.

Scene: The Brown residence. Matilda, negro maid is dusting. Mrs. Brown is filling in "O's" in an old magazine. The phone rings. Matilda answers it.

Matilda: "Hello ..... Yes ..... Sho' is". (She hangs up.)

The phone rings again. Mathilda answers again.

Matilda: "Hello ..... Yes ..... Sho' is".

The scene is repeated nine times in five minutes. Mrs. Brown becomes puzzled. She stops filling in "O's" in the old magazine.

Mrs. Brown: "Matilda, why do you keep answering the phone and saying 'Hello, Yes, Sho' is'?"

Matilda: "Ah dunno, Mrs. Brown. Someone keeps asking me if this is the Brown residence, and I say yes. Then he says, 'long distance from New York', an' I say 'Sho Is'."

Frosh Ballots Questioned; Delay Abused

• Frosh Beauty Contest
Editor, The Guardsman:

An article appeared in a recent issue of the Guardsman which began with this statement. "Freshmen of the college took the lead in the class elections last Wednesday by casting more votes than any other class."

No wonder, after witnessing the low frosh elections, the members of other classes have no desire to take part in another such exhibition.

First of all, there are absolutely no qualifications or prerequisites set down for the candidates, the nominations are left to the luck of the draw.

The nominations are limited to three candidates for each office, and while there may be a dozen deserving and qualified students in the group, among the three nominees there may not be one worthy or capable of holding office.

As if that were not enough, the voters, with the exception of personal friends, have no knowledge as to the merits of the candidate, and the election turns into a beauty contest.

It should be an honor to hold a class office, but the manner in which the freshman class elections were run this term certainly tarnishes that honor.

• Five Minutes Not Instructors'
Editor, The Guardsman:

At least one instructor at the college is unaware that the additional five minutes allotted between class periods is to enable students to be in their respective classrooms before the final 10 after bell.

This instructor evidently believes the five minutes to be an especially granted extension period for additional instruction to his class, because at every meeting, students of the next hour have to wait outside his particular classroom door until the instructor and his class finally emerge.

Letters were brought to a head a few days ago when three or four of the waiting students, seeing several other leaving the room at 6 after, ventured in and proceeded to their seats.

The instructor promptly ordered the students out with the following request:

"Will you please scram out of here? Your classes don't start until ten after the hour. Stay out until then!"

And to assert his authority, he proceeded to usher them out—personally assisting their prompt exit.

Faculty Features . . . An Instructor Who Likes Young People

By Iwanna Hayworth

"MY MAIN objective in life is to see a social equality come to pass in the world of today," says John E. Ross, A.B., M.A., and instructor in the sociology and economics department of the college. He adds, "Society owes all people the opportunity to make a living regardless of their race, creed, color, or intelligence."

Explaining how his great interest in this field has developed, Ross told of his educational background. In his words, "I'm a midwesterner, and attended grade and high schools in Pasadena, Calif.

He went as a freshman to the University of Kansas where he remained for one year. Following this he went to Kansas City Junior College. While at the university, he was Circulation Manager of the DAILY KANSAN.

His last year at this institution of learning was terminated when his health broke due to over work, thus he was, of this necessity, out College in Missouri, before returning again to the university.

At this time Ross was interested in journalism, because, as he tells it, one of his closest friends was active in this field, thus his aspirations were centered in this direc-tion of school for about three years. During this time, he became avidly interested in sociology and economics having spent a great deal of his leisure time in doing extensive reading and studying in this field.

When his health was sufficiently recovered, Ross came to the University of Arizona, where he remained for two and a half years working for his A.B. and M.A. degrees; the first of which was obtained with an English major, the latter with a sociology and economics major. He graduated from the university with honors.

During the time which he spent in college, Ross was elected to the Phi Kappa Phi; an economics society, Omicron Delta Gamma; a professional journalism society, Sigma Delta Chi; and a social fraternity, Alpha Kappa Lambda.

One summer vacation, while he was still at the University, he was appointed educational supervisor of the Arizona State Prison.

His duties collsisted of instructing the prisoner in different fields of study. Most of them wished to learn about engineering, law, medicine; and yet most of the subjects which were given were taken from lower-grade divisions.

When asked how he liked that type of work, Ross said, "I was genuinely glad when I walked out of that gate for the last time, because a person can never be certain that he hasn't made an enemy of some member."

Upon completion of his educational training, Ross came to the University of California as a teaching fellow in economics, where he remained for two years.

He went to the San Mateo Junior College next, and was an instructor there for three years. He said that while there he instructed fourteen different courses.

Following this, Ross and his wife spent a year in Europe traveling in most of the countries, meeting the different peoples, and studying their customs.

Upon his return to this country, he was made Research Economist for a National Research Project, an agency of the United States government. This organization was making a national technological study of the displacement of labor by the introduction of machinery.

His functions in this study dealt with organizing research activities, interviewing executives from coast to coast to obtain permission to gather data in their firms, and other similar.

Ross came to the college here in the fall of 1936, in the sociology and economics departments.

In the summer of 1937, he and his wife traveled in Old Mexico. They spent their time going from one section to another, studying all the while. They found Mexican people most charming.

Concluding the interview, Ross said, "I feel in times like these, there should be a change of emphasis in educational opportunities. It is extremely important to continue the educating of our youth for professional activities. However, time necessary for training in such may possibly be shortened in the interests of victory. I believe the most important job to be done right now is to defeat the axis powers. But I am also greatly interested in seeing some sort of world organization created which will make war every generation an impossibility."

Future plans, he said, include further study at the University of California.

Never interested in political life, Ross said that his main interest is the teaching of young people because he likes especially to associate with them.

EVERYTHING, well nearly everything nowadays is personalized with ones own initials. Compacts, lipsticks, napkins, sox, purses, blouses, and now raincoats. 'Twas on some bonnie lassie that last week an initialed gaberdine raincoat appeared. The initials—MW, the wearer—Marjorie Weiss.

A new substitution for hair bows was introduced by Kay Parac, last week when she appeared with sea shells neatly holding her hair in place. The shells are arranged so they resemble a daisy and are supposedly attached to a hair pin or some other hair clip. With these clips Miss Parac wore a sea shell bracelet.

FRINGED SCARFS

Collegiennes who like to wear head coverings should note the new, solid color wool scarfs, with yarn fringe around the edges. Red with white would help add some color and spirit around the campus, but other color combinations are acceptable, too.

Dorothy Ann Kraul, High Soph vice president, was very sporty looking last week when she wore a brown and tan scarf to match a brown dress and cap. Incidentally the dress buttoned with air corps wing buttons.

KNIT YOUR OWN CAPS

Student knitters around the campus after making several sweaters for the Red Cross might take a short vacation by knitting a pair of argyle sox.

These are rather difficult to find ready-made in a particular color, to match a particular sweater, and so ambitious souls can knit their own. Rumor has it that they are simple to make.

CONGRATULATIONS

While on the subject of Red Cross, orchids to the college women who made the dresses for the refugee children. The dresses are cut on a simple plain pattern, and with no trimming resemble institution garb. But some women with ambition, ingenuity, and pity for the poor children who are from war countries, added bright red rick rack braid trimming and colored belts. Others embroidered flowers on the collars and pockets, and while still others added saddle stitching, to transform the dresses. And it was a real transformation. Anyone who wants to see very cute examples of 'before and after' models need only go to the Home Economics room and see for oneself.

First aid Red Cross instruction has inspired designers to go forth and design turbans from all over head bandages, belts out of the broken rib bandage, and blouses out of several sheet bandages. Articles ready-made come in patriotic colors. Now must one have a first aid certificate to be chic?

The Man Who Came To Dinner . . . movie version excellent

The adaptation of Broadway plays to the motion picture screen has caused comment, pro and con, as to the authenticity of the play to the screen version. The Man Who Came to Dinner is one of the more recent plays that has been duplicated on the screen without the usual overdone job of deleting a good portion of the original product.

No effort was spared in the production of this film to give it that certain audience appeal. A star studded cast was the chief factor in the success of this screen version. Monty Wooley, the beard bedecked thespian, makes his second debut on the screen as the central figure, Sheridan Whiteside, noted author. The subtle sarcastic humor that Wooley puts across is done most convincingly. His role required a great deal of ability, and Wooley had no lack of it.

BETTE DAVIS SHAKES

Bette Davis, portraying the role of the author's secretary, plays the part with her usual talents. No fault can be found with her performance, and this one lacks the usual heaviness that most of the Davis films do. Usually the sole important star in her other motion pictures, Bette Davis not only has to compete with Wooley, Ann Sheridan, Reggie Gardiner, Jimmy Durante, Grant Mitchell, and others, but she has to share the honors in The Man Who Came to Dinner.

Ann Sheridan portrays the role of a temperamental, man grabbing actress, and she does it very well. She lacks nothing in putting across the role of the svelte, young thing, and her final exit in a mummy case is one of the highlights of the show.

SUPPORTING CAST SUPERB

Reggie Gardiner, Jimmy Durante, and Grant Mitchell, as supporting cast members, do a fine job. Durante provides a good amount of his peculiar humor, while Reginald Gardiner uses his inimitable manner to put across a most humorous telephone scene. Grant Mitchell, the imposed-upon host, tearing rampant into many scenes, gives a noteworthy performance.

Though most of the scenes were done in indoor locale, the photography and lighting were highlights on the technical side of the lecture. The entrance of the menagerie of animals into the production was an added variety to the film.

HUMOROUS AND DRAMATIC FILM

Combining all of these talents, actors, actresses, and technical points, The Man Who Came to Dinner is another of the better motion pictures of the current show season and can be recommended for good humorous drama.

Starring the bill is a selection of short subjects, noteworthy of mention among them is the Gay Parisian, featuring the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo. The music and dancing proves most entertaining, but the music overshadows the dancers in most parts.

Robinson

Cabbages & Kings

SOME Solomon once said that man was more vain than any woman could be.

After the dance the other night this person is inclined to agree with that wise person.

It was truly more fun to stand on the sidelines and watch the rapt-eared expressions on the faces of the dancers than it was to twist an old lady's arm getting on the streetcar.

There was one character that held his woman about a foot away from him as though she was one of the Barnsmell clan. The expressions that floated over his face would make Bette Davis turn a little blue—and not with envy.

His eyes were tenderly closed, and his mouth tilted upward at the corners. He looked very much like a frosh that has just passed midterms.

His bodily movements were superb. That is above the waist. His feet remained in just about the same spot, and he looked as though if he did move them it would be in one long, and accurate lunge.

There was another college institution there, however, that did away with all tradition what-so-ever.

Said institution was garbed just as any one of several hundred others in attended, but perched atop his head was a college rooter's cap. He must have been feeling very intelligent, almost imbecilic.

All went well until he captured another, who was not quite up to refusing his wiles, and they proceeded to have a game of tag amid the whirling couples.

With people such as this about we have little doubt as to why the nation's average intelligence is about 11 years.

FLASH . . .

There will be a very elaborate funeral held in the near future for Chosef, the cafeteria's coffee bean.

For years now Chosef has stood guard over the cups of steaming water that have been waved under him.

To some of the lucky ones he has imparted even a little taste, but this was on rare occasions. Of late with the strain of age creeping up on him, he has been less able to carry out his job. That of flavoring the cafeteria coffee.

Each morning Chosef would rise and take his place on the end of a slender string that would swing him over the hot brew but now that is all over. Chosef is dead. (We're only joking—honest.)

TWEEN YOU AND US . . .

How about some real thanks to Bob Murphy for the swell rallies that he has started this semester?

The last rally was one of the best that has been held at the college in a long time. It is beginning to look as though there is going to be something worth while coming out to look at now. Gosh, imagine, actually going to a rally when we get out of class.

IDLE THOUGHTS . . .

I wonder if Hitler's army, when they goosestepped into Russia realized they would have pimples to match?

Maybe at long last we will have the chance to find out what the real college beauty looks like if the priorities board keeps taking the cosmetics away.

Looks as though Hirohoozy and his pet, Tojo just progressed from a big bluff to the edge of a precipice.

Spirit For Dance—Not Game; Track Season Starts Today

WAS IT THE DANCE?

Along about February 17, 1942, the Ram basketball team faced Salinas Junior College Panthers here in the women's gym. A noon time rally preceded the game on the front steps of the college, and spirit rang out from all corners.

Everything went along at a high clip and that night the gym was filled with more Ram rooters than all the previous games combined for the last two years. In fact, there wasn't even room for everyone—so some waited outside.

Did the students attend because they wanted to see their team play? Did the students attend because Salinas was supposed to afford some tough competition? Did the students attend because they acquired spirit all of a sudden? And did the students attend because they wanted to cheer their team to victory?

NO—not more than five attended for those reasons!

We don't want to give the impression that dances following a game are taboo with us—they're not. We like them just as much as the next fella and think that it would be a good idea to have them after every game—

BUT, why couldn't the same amount of students have attended even without the dance? If they found the time to get away that night, why couldn't they have found the time if the game was the only attraction?

And yet, we wonder how many would have went if there was no dance—off hand, approximately a dozen!

No sir, until the announcement that a dance would follow the game, hardly anyone knew that a game was scheduled. We noticed the faces of some droops when the announcement came over the loud speaker.

Their lower jaws dropped in amazement and some remarked, "Oh, is there a game tonight? There's going to be a dance too, I think I'll go."

Anyway, the team was so shocked at the turnout that they lost the game, 48 to 41.

It was good to see a crowd of students backing them, though, and it should be done more often. Really—it WON'T hurt anyone!!

UNTIL NEXT SEASON

The basketball season, as far as the college is concerned, is over and done with. Except for Placer and Yuba, all the other junior colleges have completed their schedule in the conference loop with Marin and Sacramento finishing in a tie. Each have thirteen wins and no losses, and have yet to face each other. The game should be a killer-diller when they meet for the championship.

The Rams ended with four wins and nine losses to finish in a four-way tie for sixth place. Basketball reporter, Jimmy Lee, has compiled some interesting statistics on the Ram players. They will be found in his story which appears elsewhere on the page and reviews the college season.

TRACK GETS UNDER WAY

Trackmen will get their first taste of competition for the new season this afternoon with the Inter-class Meet. All students were invited to participate and the affair should bring out some well needed prospects.

The meet will be held on the Balboa High School track and Coach Russ Sweet expects to have a successful afternoon, marked with a few discoveries.

INTRAMURAL MEET WEDNESDAY

Next Wednesday, the eleventh, the Intramural Track and Field Meet takes place under the direction of Sweet and the capable help of the intramural board, headed by Jack Brady. The meet will carry through Thursday and Friday, to make it a three day affair.

Some of the intramural events such as ping pong and horseshoe have already been completed, but the best is yet to come.

The events and entry blanks will be published in The Guardsman as they come along, and according to Brady the program should be the best the college has ever enjoyed.

The only way that it could be the "best", however, is if students turn out to participate. Medals are awarded every semester and the competition is as good as you can find anywhere.

For instance, a game between the Ram basketball team and the Newman Club, winners of Intramural Championship, would actually be a toss up.

SPEAKING OF THE NEWMANS

The college should be right proud of their Newman Club basketball team, while we are on the subject. The club was challenged by the University of California Newman Club to a game on February 20, and the challenge was accepted.

The Bears had quite a reputation, having beaten the Sacramento Junior College Newmans, who supposedly boasted a strong quintet. But, their rep didn't hold up and the Ram Newmans took a 38 to 18 victory from the Bears.

Previous to the game, the Bears said that if the Rams gave them a good contest, they would be rewarded with an invitation to participate in a tournament against Newman Clubs from various colleges and universities in California.

The Ram Newmans not only got the invitation, but they were made one of the favorites.

Basketball Standings

Team	Won	Lost	Points
Marin	13	0	26
Sacramento	13	0	26
Manlo	7	6	14
Placer	6	5	12
San Mateo	6	7	12
Stockton	5	8	10
Yuba	4	6	8
San Francisco	4	9	8
Santa Rosa	4	9	8
Modesto	4	9	8
Salinas	3	10	6

Yuba has three games to play; Placer has two games to play.

Gaddy Reveals Ram Squad Better

by Charles G. Davis

If Ram baseball mentor, Jack Gaddy isn't a miracle man, then he is the next best thing to it.

Two weeks ago he revealed that his squad would consider themselves lucky if they win a few games at the very most. Yesterday he told us that his 1942 edition will be better than last year's nine. That's a big order, as the team last season was on the second rung of the conference ladder when the curtain came down.

Ram Infield Strong

Gaddy was all smiles when we talked with him. And he had good reason to be. Fifteen days ago he had one man, Andy Adams, his ace pitcher on the squad. Maybe it's the food Gaddy eats, but at any rate he has developed as good an infield during those fifteen days as any in the league.

At first base is Glen Claude, from Albany High School. "Our beloved coach" grinned from ear to ear when he mentioned his new keystone combination: Lawrence Olieig, who is a new importation from the state of Washington, is at short, while the other half of this combine, Rinke Darrell, is a product from Mission High. Joe Burkly, ex-Balboa High captain, is Gaddy's idea of a hustling third-baseman.

Poage Able Backstop

To handle Adams' slants is a gent named Ted Poage. Like most catchers, Poage is rugged and possesses a strong arm. With Poage behind the plate the opposing batsmen are going to hear plenty of adjectives when they are waiting for the pitch to come. Gaddy claims Poage's vocal organs are in "A-1 shape, which means he will be equipped with complete armament when the Rams play their opener against Marin April 14th.

The outfield is undecided as yet, but if Gaddy can wave the magic wand again he'll have some ballplayers patrolling the outer green.

Those mythical outfielders will be forced to carry the mail offensive burden as the squad at present is of the all field no hit variety.

Following is the season schedule as announced by Gaddy:

April 4	Marin Here
April 11	Santa Rosa There
April 21	Placer There
April 21	Menlo There
April 25	Marin There
April 29	Santa Rosa Here
May 2	Menlo Here
May 6	San Mateo There
May 9	San Mateo There

Trackmen Start New Season After Month's Training

With a month of grueling training under their red sweat togs, the Ram track squad sojourned to Balboa Field Monday, March 2, for the first of a series of time trials which will culminate in the college's interclass intramural, and tough 14 meet schedule.

"Time will tell," says Russ Sweet, Ram track mentor in regard to the status quo of the 1942 contingent.

Lack Veterans

Veterans are conspicuous by their absence with only a comparative handful of last year's squad returning. Led by Jim Skinner, Don Hewitt, Saburo Okamura, Sam Mendelson, Gene Suucci, and Jim Duryea, the team will be bolstered by impressive newcomers.

In the sprints Sweet will have Dick Peteh, 10 flat century and 22.8 furlong man; Norm Smith 10.2 century and 22.9 220 sprinter; Woody Davis 130 yard discus thrower; Bert Goebel and Bill Jennings six foot high jumpers; Bob Ojen, who pole vaulted nearly 13 feet, and Wally Thomson, a long striding distance man who stops the watches at close to two minutes flat in the 880.

Bowles Lost

Lost for the remainder of the year is Stewart Bowles, second place winner in the recent cross country run in which Jim Skinner broke the college record with Bowles close on his heels. Bowles is leaving soon for Reno, Nevada, for aeronautic training.

In all probability many of the distance men will enter the novice cross country run of four and a quarter miles through Golden Gate Park. Already signed up for the grind are Bowles, Smith, and George Yamaguchi.

It's Here—Play Ball!

Brady Plans Evening Program Of Final Events

For the first time in the history of the college, finals in nearly all intramural sports will be held one evening near the end of the semester, Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser announced this week.

This giant sports carnival will include ping pong, badminton, and volleyball, with basketball contests between the individuals and organizations surviving the preceding schedule with the most impressive records.

Entries Due Wednesday

All entries for the volleyball tournament must be in by Wednesday, March 11, Brady said. League competition, delayed by the bleacher construction will start Monday, March 16.

Basketball entries officially close Friday, March 20, and actual competition will commence as soon as possible. The Newman Club, defending champions, will be favored to retain their title, as most of the members are returning.

Two Events Completed

Rifle and horseshoe tournaments have been completed this week, with names and records yet to be announced. Ted Green, student intramural manager said. Results of both sports will be made public at a later date.

The annual track and field championships will be held, March 11, 12, and 13, with medals to be awarded the winners. There will be 12 events and possibly a relay if a minimum of four teams is entered. All men interested in competing should contact Russ Sweet, Ram track coach or Brady as soon as possible. Clubs and other college organizations are urged to show some competitive spirit, Brady said.

Urged to Compete

Students desiring information concerning intramural activities may check with the two bulletin boards in the gymnasium and the one near the entrance to the science building. Daily notices will acquaint students with all intramural announcements, schedules, and activities. Brady urges men students to compete at some sport in line with the nation's physical fitness program and in cooperation with the college body building courses.

Anyone interested in managing one of the intramural sports should apply to either Green or Brady in the men's gymnasium office. Preliminary steps are being taken to create an intramural board to decide protests, determine policies, and other problems that may arise.

Meanwhile all situations will be handled by Brady and managers Green and William Gericke.

College Squad Holds Third Place In Rifle League

With five wins and three losses to its credit this season, the college rifle team is holding fast to third place in the San Francisco Rifle Association League, according to Jim Juri, college team captain and former Rifle Club president.

Homer Pack, so far, is leading the sharpshooters with a 185.75 average for the season, followed closely by Juri, who bears a 181.38 average. Bob Ervin, Bob Reichart and Bart Bartholomew average 179.88, 179.57 and 179.50, respectively.

Preparations are under way to enter a contingent of marksmen in the annual Hearst Trophy matches, soon to begin. This is a national affair and brings in the crack shots throughout the country. Juri isn't too confident of any kind of a victory, but is certain that the Rams will give a good account of themselves.

Women's Athletics

Badminton Features Two Play Day Events

By Dorothy Hogan

"This weekend, the college will be hostess to two badminton play days", Janice Berch, president of the Women's Athletic Association, stated this week.

The first playday will be held today, from 1:00 to 4:00, in the Women's Gymnasium, at which representatives from all the high schools in this area will attend. Badminton will be played as part of the entertainment. College women are urged to sign up for hostesses to welcome guests from the high schools.

Play Day Tomorrow

College women from the Northern California area will attend the playday, tomorrow, from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. sponsored by the Northern California Badminton center of the National Section of Women's Athletics. According to Miss Francis Todd, instructor at Balboa High and chairman of the badminton committee, nationally ranking players will participate in demonstrational games. The guests will consist of one team before and eight representatives from each college.

Colleges Invited

Attending to enjoy the expert coaching by Mr. Hill in the fundamental techniques and court tactics of badminton, the colleges are Stanford, California, Mills, San Francisco State, San Jose State, and all junior colleges in this area.

The program for the day is as follows:

9:30 registration in the women's gymnasium.

10:00 coaching session by Mr. Hill.

12:00 bag or box lunch (bring own lunch).

1:30 demonstrational games by national ranking players.

Each player attending is expected to bring proper costume for badminton, a badminton racquet, tennis shoes, one shuttlecock and ten cents registration fee.

All May Attend

All college women and their mothers and friends are invited and urged to attend and observe the demonstration because of the fact of the presence of badminton stars and because the college was chosen from all the Northern California colleges.

"To welcome the college representatives hostesses are necessary, so all college women are urged to sign up today." Miss Berch said.

Rams End Season With Four Conference Wins; Dropo, Terry Star Throughout Year

By Jimmy Lee

Ending a rather disheartening season, as far as wins are concerned, the Ram varsity finished its junior college conference schedule by losing the final league tilt to Salinas Junior College, 45-43 Tuesday night, February 24 at Salinas.

The college squad, hampered all season by the small number of players on the varsity, eight to be correct, finished in sixth place, after starting the conference schedule with two wins.

Lost Four Straight

In the first of a four game losing streak, the college varsity lost to a strong Santa Rosa squad, 48-33 at the Bear Cub's home pavilion, after previously having beaten the Cubs in the first game of the series. The game was plenty rough, with 23 fouls being called during the game, with Captain Mel Dropo high point man with 11.

With the women's gym crowded with college students, the varsity fell in defeat before a surprisingly strong Salinas quintet 48-41, with Dropo high point man with 15 digits, and Jack Terry following close with 10. The game was evenly played until around the last eight minutes, when Dropo went out on four personals, and the team couldn't seem to click without him. It was in this game that Dropo hit the basket for nine straight free throws. He never missed one all night. In the San Mateo game, the Red and White couldn't hold up under their opponent's fast break, and they were defeated 52-30. Dropo was again high point man with 13.

Lose to Salinas

With every varsity man playing the final game, the college was again beaten by the lettuce boys from Salinas 45-43 with Dropo and Terry tied for high point honors with 11 apiece.

When the season ended, the varsity consisted of Terry, Adorador, and Isola at forwards; Dropo at center, Scheu, Sulprizio, and Winter at guards. Isola and Winter had to be brought up from the junior varsity.

Win Four, Lose Nine

The varsity won four games during the season, while losing nine. The Red and White holds victories over San Mateo 57-41, Yuba 41-40, Modesto 37-36, and Santa Rosa 53-48, and lost to Sacramento 38-53, Marin 45-56, Menlo 41-53, Stockton, 34-45, Marin 28-57, Salinas 41-48, San Mateo 30-52, and Santa Rosa 33-48.

In the conference games played during the entire season, the varsity amassed a total of 513 points scored on their opponents and had 622 scored against them.

In the thirteen league games, Terry scored a total of 148 points, followed very closely by Captain Dropo with 142, showing that between themselves, Terry and Dropo have scored 285 points. More than half of the whole team's score of 513 points. It is, interesting to note that Dropo fouled out only one game during the entire season, and played just about the entire length of each game.

Squad Diminishes

In the beginning of the season, Coach Tom Wilson started his squad with around eighteen players, but, as the season rolled on, players had to drop out of college to work, or were subject to draft call in Uncle Sam's fighting forces. After the practice games, the conference schedule started just as the college semester ended, and Coach Wilson was just able to hold enough men together to get two complete teams on the floor.

Above is Captain Mel Dropo in action in the Salinas tilt, when he completed his junior college conference eligibility.

Outloud Opponents

In 13 conference games, the college varsity made a total of 202 field goals, and 105 free throws, and had 257 field goals, and 109 free throws scored against them. In fouls, the Red and White has committed 178 penalties, with 177 being called on their opponents.

In other statistics, Dropo scored 55 field goals, and chalked up 32 free throws, while his running teammate, Terry scored 55 field goals, and 33 free throws. Both players have scored 110 of the team's total of 202 field goals, and 65 of the 105 free throws.

Intramural Entries Due March 11

Those interested in the opening intramural round robin must have their entries in by next Wednesday, March 11, according to Jack Brady. The following Tuesday, schedules for volleyball competition and play will begin. Entries will be accepted every day by Brady in the office of the men's gymnasium.

Managers of club or independent teams should fill out the application printed below, Brady said.

Name of college organization represented .....

If independent team, name of team .....

Manager of team: Name .....

Education Executives Visitors At College During Last Week

Educational representatives of six states who attended the convention of the American Association of School Administrators, February 22 to 26, were visitors to the college last Wednesday, according to President Archibald J. Cloud, who conducted them on a tour through the buildings.

Visitors were: Dean Jesse B. Davis of Boston University, and Mrs. Davis, Superintendent of Schools Charles B. Glynn, Birmingham, Alabama, Superintendent of Schools Fred J. Siekles of New Brunswick, New Jersey, Mrs. Willie Snow Ethridge, Louisville, Kentucky, who was accompanied by Mrs. W. Howard Pillsbury, wife of the President of the Association, Dean H. B. Wyman of the Phoenix, Arizona Junior College, Superintendent of Schools E. E. Oberholtzer of Houston, Texas, his son, Superintendent Kenneth E. Oberholtzer, who was accompanied by his wife.

Interest in College Shown

"These gentlemen were particularly interested in the view toward utility with which the college was laid out," President Cloud said. "The women, perhaps more esthetic by nature, seemed pleased and interested by the display of flowers set up by the college floriculture department. All remarked on the condition and variety of equipment possessed by the college," he added.

The convention, held in San Francisco for the first time, consisted of ten sessions in four days held at the San Francisco War Memorial Opera House. The theme of the convention was "Education for a Free People." Topics discussed were: Spiritual Values in Education, Education and Government, Morale Building, Health in Schools, School of the Air (radio), of the Americas, America and the Far East, Wartime Projects in the Schools, America's Destiny and Youth Programs for a Free People.

Room For Improvement

After a patriotic revue presented by the Public Schools of Oakland there was a joint meeting with the National Committee on Education and Defense and the U. S. Office of Education Wartime Commission, held Monday evening, February 23.

The American Association of School Administrators recognized the need for the improvement of health and guidance programs in the nation's public schools. Among other resolutions made at the convention was one for a "true integration of vocational training and work experience with general education," and for the "coordination of the efforts of all agencies to provide a complete program of education for the American people.

Parking Situation Shows Improvement Over Fall

Though greatly improved since The Guardsman's campaign last semester, the parking situation about the campus still needs more attention by new students, according to Dean Edwin J. Browne.

"There still seem to be a few individuals who do not heed signs designating the approximate level where on it's safe to park," Dean Browne pointed out. "These signs were placed for the benefit of the students. If they don't want the benefit of safety they can have a sample of those nice pink tags the police have been authorized to decorate their wind shields with," he remarked.

Hotel Division

Richardson Resigns Post

Replacing Cynthia Richardson as assistant in the operation of the college cafeteria is Suzanne Richardson, according to Hilda Watson, chairman of the Hotel and Restaurant Division.

The new assistant is the younger sister of Miss Richardson, who vacated her post to marry Harry N. Jacobs, radio engineer on the local staff of the National Broadcasting Company. Miss Richardson and Jacobs were married last Saturday at the bride's home in Berkeley.

Former Students Attend

A dinner, honoring the Association of Assistant Managers of San Francisco Hotels and Restaurants was held last night at the college cafeteria. John Gifford and J. Graham Sullivan, both formerly associated with the Division, were among those who attended the affair. At present, they are engaged in vocational education through the aid of the San Diego school system.

Students in the division are at present engaged in field work visiting hotels and restaurants throughout San Francisco and the bay area. Under the supervision of division instructors, a study will be made of hotel and restaurant management, dinging room and kitchen management, public relations and food purchasing.

Prices Generally Constant

To date, the prices of foodstuffs has not reflected the general advance in wholesale listings of food items, according to the cafeteria management. Although the increase in price of all food products has been increased 20 per cent, Mrs. Watson stressed the fact that current counter prices will not be greatly affected.

"Those of you who live at home are aware of the increased price of milk," Mrs. Watson said. "At the moment, it is not possible to retain former prices. Therefore, the cafeteria is obliged to advance the price of half pint bottles of milk to 6 cents. We are adding to our counter items a pint bottle of milk which will be sold for 10 cents, thus affording students all possible opportunity to obtain the very best in foodstuffs.

Foreign Registrants

Among the students who have registered for the spring semester in the division are Jacqueline and Monique de Belleroche, daughter of the Consul General, E. M. de Belleforn, who is now stationed in San Francisco representing the French government.

They are registered in the pantry department under the supervision of Charles R. Strandberg, pastry chef at the St. Francisco Hotel.

Students may contact Mrs. Watson in Room 107 for further information concerning the college cafeteria and the curriculum of semi-professional course offered by the division.

Medical Health Corner

"Athletes Foot," more technically known as Epidermophytosis, is caused by infection with a fungus, which is somewhat similar to yeast cells in appearance. This parasite has a high resistance and is able to live for long periods on such places as the floors of the gymnasium, shower, and locker room. This germ is difficult to eradicate from these places in spite of frequent scrubbing and disinfection of the floors.

The parasite is picked up on the soles of the feet when walking barefoot on infected places.

Infection usually manifests itself as a scaling and itching between the toes, especially when the feet perspire. The itching may be so slight that the student doesn't seek treatment until the infection has spread to the soles of the feet. Infection is easily controlled by treatment, however it tends to recur if the student walks barefoot on infected areas. Therefore, propylaxis is just as important as treatment.

The following simple rules will help prevent infection. Dry the feet thoroughly after bathing, especially between the toes. Dusting on talcum powder tends to keep the feet dry. It is difficult for infection to occur on dry feet. Change socks frequently as the parasite can live on sweaty socks. Keep your shoes dry.

In order to keep the infection at a minimum a Treatment Station for athletes foot has been set up in the men's gymnasium. Here the student can avail himself of prophylactic treatment, daily if necessary.

Do not seek cures in patent or advertised medicines. There are a dozen medicines which will clear up the infection temporarily only. Persistent cleanliness and prophylaxis will do away with the infection permanently.

Rally

Murphy Plans Gym Rally For March 19

With the announcement that there will be a rally held on March 9, Bob Murphy, rally commissioner, said that he planned to make it one that will who attended would remember.

The definite plans have not as yet been made but it is hoped that the guest stars will include Jack Kirkwood and Tommy Harris of Breakfast Club fame. There will be other student talent and yells by Jim Upp, yell leader.

Adding that he was pleasantly surprised at the size of the last rally, Murphy said that he hoped the turnout would continue to be large.

Next Rally in Gym

According to plans, the next meeting will be held in the men's gym where the new bleachers will be given their initiation. It will make rally conditions much better than has been possible in the past, Murphy said. The new bleachers will enable everyone to get a seat and they will be able to give more attention to the yelling, he added.

Upp said that he hoped to add to the collection of new yells that he has introduced so far with some more pep-raisers.

Student Aid Asked

He added that if the students would get behind him and give him the support that he wanted, they would have just about the best rooting section in the junior colleges of northern California.

Of rallies in the future, both Murphy and Upp said that they would eclipse the one past. Guest stars have been planned and student talent will be presented.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 121, according to the following deadlines:

Wednesday, 11 a.m. for the Friday issue; Friday, 11 a.m. for the Tuesday issue.

Because the Club Advisory Board recently voted to be discontinued for the month, will devote this column exclusively to club news announcements and items of interest. Any organization desiring recognition in this space may do so by submitting the material to The Guardsman office before Tuesday of each week.

Chinese Students Club . . . good news here! Over 70% of the Chinese students of the college have become members of this organization. Plans for the future include a record dance on March 9 and a bowling party on March 20th.

Campus Players . . . New members were entertained at the Hobby Playhouse last night. Dancing and refreshments as well as a program of entertainment were featured. Next meeting to be held Friday, March 13.

Home Economics Association . . .

Members interested in hearing the opera "Tales of Hoffman" on Sunday, March 5 should sign up in Room 158 before February 27. Formal initiation will take place March 16 from 4:30 to 9:30 p.m. at Sigmund Sterns Grove.

Rifle and Pistol Club . . . Refreshments and a shooting session will highlight the Rifle Club meeting to be held March 2. Discussion of coming social events.

Club Advisory Board representatives are urged to attend the meeting to be held at 3 p.m. in Room 111. Charter renewal blanks to be distributed.

Newman Club . . . Communion breakfast will be held at the Whitcomb Hotel Sunday, March 8, after the 9:30 mass at the Cathedral on Van Ness and Geary Boulevard. Meetings are held every 1st and 3rd Monday night at Sacred Heart Auditorium.

Bible Club . . . meets every Tuesday and Thursday at 1 p.m. in Room 190. The Bible and Democracy is now being discussed. All students interested are urged to attend.

Red Cross Knitters Must Have Work Checked Friday

All women students who are doing voluntary knitting for the Red Cross, are requested by Claire Cuneo, home economics faculty adviser, to bring their work to Room 158, before Friday, March 13, for checking.

Miss Cuneo is planning an exhibition to display the work being done by the women knitters.

Although no more yarn will be issued unless the army authorities find a need for it here, there is still enough left to make wool for the insides of soldier's helmets.

Ward, Colligan, Muscio Leave For U.S. Service

Granting of indefinite leaves of absences to Phebe Ward, Francis Colligan, English instructors and Wesley Muscio, business instructor, was recently revealed by J. Paul Mohr, college registrar and director of personnel.

Muscio was called for duty as an ensign in the United States Naval Reserve and has left the city.

Colligan to Ecuador

After extensive study of South America and its national policies, Colligan was selected for immediate duty on Pan-American relations among the various South American countries. Colligan departed for Quito, Ecuador last month, where he will establish his home for an indefinite period of time.

The text of Colligan's plans were not disclosed, but because of the nation's wartime status, it is assumed that his position is highly important to western hemisphere countries.

Cooper Announces 2 More Scholarships

Two additional scholarship other than those already announced, have been offered to students interested in going on with college work, Alice Cooper said, faculty adviser for the Alpha Gamma Sigma college honor society.

One of the scholarships is offered by the University of Chicago and a competitive examination will be given here at college on April 18 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Requirements For Exams

Any student regularly registered in the college who will have completed not more than 2 years of college work at the end of the academic year 941-42 may compete in the examination.

In order to participate in this examination, students must hand in their applications to Miss Cooper not later than March 28.

Applications Due May 1

The other scholarship is for the George Pepperdine College in Los Angeles, California. Applications for this scholarship may be made direct to the college and these applications should be in by May 1.

Gardeners Plan Bigger Radishes

By Claire Leeds

The second of a series of reports on a radish contest for members of the Defense Gardens class. The student producing the most perfect bunch of radishes, according to specifications of United States Department of Agriculture, will be formally acknowledged by The Guardsman.

All is ready. Official ground breaking ceremonies for The Guardsman's special radish plot mark the opening of a great campaign for producing more beautiful radishes. Enthusiasm mounts as radish lovers applaude this new defense effort.

But all is not well. It seems that spring has not yet arrived and therefore, planting is impossible. Already it is March, the groundhog has failed to emerge from his traditional hole. Because of government restrictions on weather reports, the groundhog has cancelled all scheduled appearances for the duration.

The radish campaign is seriously menaced. Moreover, the government has asked civilians not to plant vegetables because with thousands of people converting their back yards into small truck farms a run on the fertilizer market is expected.

Prospective radish cultivators, however, remain undaunted. The first 26,400 square feet of earth are plowed and fertilized and vegetable planting proceeds.

Spring, from all appearances has arrived through unheralded by the groundhog; and despite official predictions, it is aromatically apparent that fertilizer is plentiful.

And so, on the former City and County Jail, the college Defense Gardens are now in the process of cultivation. The Guardsman's radish plot itself is no ordinary piece of terrain. "In the same spot," Hary Nelson, head of the floriculture department reveals, "the prisoners cultivated their own vegetable gardens.

—When the jail was demolished a few years ago," he continues, "the WPA raised plants for the Park Commission. So the soil is good for planting.

"I am confident," Neison adds, "that we shall produce beautiful radishes."

Pollissar Appointed To Defense Position

After volunteering and being appointed to the job of training San Francisco's 20,000 air raid wardens last January, Dr. Milton Pollissar, college instructor, has organized a program for training instructors, trained them, and this week sent them to all San Francisco schools to start their teaching, according to a statement made this week by Lloyd D. Luckmann, instructor at the college.

These instructors here have helped Dr. Pollissar in his work, Luckmann said. "Glen Camp and Manfred Mueller."

Those three were given preference over other volunteers and appointed by Dulles because they had the only feasible plan that could possibly work in the short space of time allotted them to train the air raid wardens.

After receiving his appointment, Dr. Pollissar immediately called the volunteers from the legal profession, dentists, and chemical society in San Francisco, Luckmann said.

"More than 300 of these groups answered his call," Luckmann remarked. "In the short space of six weeks, he had organized his program, trained his instructors, and sent them to the public schools to start their own teaching of the wardens in the sixty-five companies of the city.

Luckmann explained that each raid warden will receive four hours of instruction per week for six weeks in first aid, how to combat bombs, chemical warfare, police and traffic duty, civilian evacuation, and other jobs which require extensive help in time of emergency.

appearing, but slowly, and that is what is what's wrong Wars are won by work and by hardships. Americans haven't felt either yet. And an overconfident people finds it hard to give extra effort and extra sacrifices.

The revenge of Pearl Harbor is up to each individual. He will have had a hand in it when it comes. And that revenge will come sooner if the individuals stop thinking that Tokyo is just around the corner.

Radish Farmer Still Waiting

Adele Vidal, college floriculture student, waits patiently, hoe in hand, for the much heralded Guardsman radish to make its first appearance above the garden sod. Radish gardens are part of the college's program for National Defense aid. Civilian workers, toiling in home gardens, will aid in overcoming vegetable shortages.

School Administrators Give Praise To President Cloud For Assistance

Having held their annual convention this year in San Francisco from February 2 to 26, The American Association of School Administrators finds itself indebted to the college president, Dr. A. J. Cloud, who was the chairman of the executive committee for the convention, for his work in rounding up so large a group of people.

The convention, which is one of the three largest in the United States, assembled a group of 12,180 teachers which is more than 400 over the number that was present at last year's Atlantic City convention, according to Sherry Shankland, AASA secretary. The enrollment of the state of California exceeded 1,000, thereby setting a record for state membership, Shankland said.

California Sends 5,180

Moreover, the institute sessions for the school districts of California accounted for 5,180 from all parts of the state, another flower in Cloud's bouquet.

President Cloud's feat is especially significant in view of war conditions which prevail throughout the country. Considering the fact that 12,180 people were present at the convention from all over the country, we really should be proud of our leader.

Mohr, Dougherty Active

Other college instructors who took part in branches of the convention were Dr. J. Paul Mohr, registrar, who was active in the National Vocational Guidance Association; and Dean of Women Margaret Dougherty who participated in the National Association of Deans of Women.

Both of these meetings took place in San Francisco from February 17 to 19.

Christopher Morley Warns Against Too Much Thinking

NEW YORRK, N. Y.—(ACP)—Christopher Morley, addressing Hunter College students here, speaked for occasional "cloudy" thinking, and took issue with a professor of English who said recently that clear thinking must precede good writing.

In praising vague thinking, the author said the "electrical twinges of intuition or inspiration are the real valuable things that ever happen."

a stone into space.

At present, the classes are divided into two sections with Bertucci instructing the women students and Abrahamson conducting the afternoon shift, 12:30 to 9 p.m. every day, sans Sundays. Officials visiting the laboratory have remarked on the seemingly studious attitude on the part of the students, but the fellows, as anyone would deem to call them, continue experimenting without batting an eye.

After the day's lessons are learned, the men start on the wearisome journey home. One of the men commutes from Vallejo, another from Sausalito, and others from Berkeley, Oakland and South San Francisco, but after putting in a full, eight hours work per day, they seldom are heard to talk about their studies.

Besides instruction in this separate course, the Federal government, through the Civil Service Commission, offers positions as radio operators, radio technicians, machinists and aircraft mechanics. The latter positions are available to men because of this nation's present wartime status. Although civil service students are making use of the radio laboratory, the college radio laboratory classes, conducted by Marie Weller, have not been disbanded.

Escorted by instructor Abrahamson throughout the laboratory, a visitor, remarking upon the general atmosphere of the group, said: "In such a complex field of study, it seems to me that the men are vitally interested in their work, yet they seem to be so happy about it."

One of the men, engaged in studying the fields of magnetic polar forces, looked up, and without disrupting his experiment, yelled back: "That's right. Slap happy."

This informal attitude which is found so generally among the civilian students of students may be strengthened by the fact that business and pleasure sometimes go well together.

New Civil Service Jobs Are Available To Students

Until further notice, the United States Civil Service Commission will offer opportunities for men and women in various positions, according to Lloyd Luckmann, college civil service instructor.

Included among the various positions are junior bookkeeping machine operators, junior stenographers and typists, junior inspector trainees, junior engineering aides, civil engineering draftsmen and aircraft radio electricians.

In accordance with national defense, positions are available for men students as radio electricians.

Students who are interested in applying for any of the positions mentioned above may obtain further information from Luckmann as to the dates of future examinations.

Job Placements Announced By Amori; More Available

Approximately 150 jobs have been filled so far this semester, 100 of which have been men's jobs, Joseph P. Amori, college employment executive said today, urging all students wishing to work to see him immediately.

"The jobs available are well diversified," Amori remarked. "Now is the time for students to register for summer employment."

Elaborating on summer employment, Amori announced that there will be many jobs available at various summer resorts and camps. He specifically mentioned such specialized jobs as busboys, life guards, craft instructors, kitchen help, camp counselors, and others.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

THIS column has from time to time directed criticism at various institutions of American life. Labor, management, government, public,—all have been criticized. At no time, however, was this fault finding meant to detract from these institutions as integral portions of the American existence.

Although the comments were premeditated they were not intended to predicate any new order; but rather an improvement, or correction of the present. It is with such an idea in mind that the following is set down.

During the course of war national morale and support of the government is of the utmost concern, not only to the leaders and directors of the effort but also to the public at large. Therefore complaints and all types of grumblings are usually taboo. Especially is this true in a totalitarian country. In democracies the case is not usually considered to be the same, even though somewhat similar.

Newspapers in America and England are allowed to offer criticism. Such offerings are for the most part essentially of the constructive kind. Individuals and operations may be scoffed at, but the ultimate aim of the criticism is directed toward a change for the better rather than being intended only as a slap at existing organizations.

A FEW QUERIES

Several questions should be asked at this time. The fact that they involve allies should not mean that fault is being found with the way things are being done. (Even so it is difficult to understand the ways of men at certain times.)

And if fault is not being found—being at the moment too well hidden—only answers to the questions are desired and through those answers a better insight into the wheels that make a war go 'round.

First of all: what is England going to do with her several million soldiers stationed in the British Isles? Germany, occupied and holding most of English raiding parties, does not keep even a near comparable force on the continent. There is no fear for the present, Tommy Atkins!

TRAGEDY NO?

Tragic case of the war (among other tragedies) is the continent of Australia. Displaying the traditional and expected support of the mother country, Australia rushed troops and supplies to the hard pressed English in various parts of the world. So what happens?

In the second place when are the United Nations going to get on the offensive—when can't they get men to the right place at the right time? If it's the fault of labor because there are no ships—then let's get on labor's neck and get the boats we need. If the fault lies in some other direction, let's fix it, fast and for good.

In the third place: do the people who are leading labor in this country realize that the public will soon turn against labor and the stability of threatened strikes and other labor difficulties? Do they realize that labor will stand to lose everything that they have gained in the past hundred years? The mere thought of men striking for higher wages when they are now being paid more than ever before is a joke.

How long will it be before the boys in the high posts in Washington, the men with the ability to pull strings and obtain fat contracts, and profitable contracts, for their favorites—how long will it be before they realize that the result of such selfish and unthinking actions is in disaster?

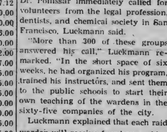
MR. ROOSEVELT

President Roosevelt said in his last speech that he did not think that the American people were at all apathetic in regard to the war. This writer disagrees, as is the American privilege, completely with this statement.

Not only are the American people for the most part apathetic, they are shirking responsibility because they do not understand that this is a most serious part of life. The American people can talk bigger and louder than any other people upon the face of the globe—and they can do less.

For the good of themselves and the rest of the peoples of the United Nations the dreamy-eyed citizens of this country had better come to. There is not going to be a second chance.

Club Advisory Board



Charter Renewal Deadline Friday March 20; Suspension If Applications Not Filed

College organizations that fail to apply for club charter renewals by Friday, March 20, will face suspension, Ed Lopez, president of the Club Advisory Board, warned this week.

Applications will be accepted throughout all of next week and on Friday a special meeting of the CAB will be held to allow clubs to submit applications. Dorothy Hogan, chairman of the membership committee, urged that all clubs file as early as possible to allow time for the membership committee to consider its decision. Any clubs that have not received a charter renewal blank may secure one from the Associated Students office.

All Clubs Must Apply

New clubs, formerly recognized clubs, and suspended clubs desiring active membership in the college must file application. The latter, in order to gain good standing, must go through a probational period of two semesters. Failure to file means suspension, and suspension means loss of all recognition by the Associated Students, as well as loss of all publicity for the group concerned.

Last semester because so many leading organizations of the college faced the danger of suspension, Lopez announced that the membership committee deemed it necessary to extend the club charter renewal deadline a week.

Even after the extension of time, not all the seven groups including two big names of the campus, the Women's Service Society, and the Block U. S. T.

New Voice Gadget Saddens Reporter

By Bob Cataldo

Nowadays, dissatisfied grouches are no longer the people who talk back with a vengeance!

Several days ago, a Guardsman reporter sauntered into Louis G. Conlan's office in the hopes of obtaining vital information needed to fill seven inches of copy space. After the office was devoid of people, the coordinator turned aside to stare point blank at something that resembled a radio of tomorrow.

There was a short, uninterrupted silence until the curious reporter demanded: "What is it?" Thus the inquiring newshound learned about the machine which was to influence him later.

Valued at more than $400, the machine, approximately four feet in height, is known as a Mirrorphone, a recent product of Western electric. A microphone is extended from the main body by means of a lengthy wire cord.

Functioning when someone speaks via the microphone to have the recorded speech played back by the turning of a small dial, this newly acquired Mirrorphone has been exceptionally valuable to students in the public speaking department and radio classes supervised by Marie Weller, college speech instructor.

The reporter's chance to hear just how he sounded in an interview was accidentally spoiled when somewhere along the line, the volume dial was never switched on—and no recording.

A week later in the office of Marcus Skarstedt, college librarian, the disheartened reporter was to finally have his chance to hear "his own self" talk. After recording a masterpiece of ad-libbed dialogue, the volume dial was turned on.

Static first, then the slightly nervous voice of a more disheartened reporter filled the office with what seemed to be a mixture of laryngitis and the melodic scratching of grade A chicken feed.

When last heard from, the disheartened scribe has had cause to believe in the motto that "serve in silence and don't scare people with your own voice." Yes, even you can boom back with a vengeance, and without even knowing it.

Radio Broadcast

College Class Gives Program On Nutrition

Climaxing seven days designated as Conservation Week by Governor Culbert L. Olson, a broadcast on the subject of Nutrition will be given today at 10:45 a.m. by the college radio class.

Under the supervision of Marie Weller, college speech instructor, the broadcast will be conducted with members of the radio class participating in a combination interview and discussion. The broadcast will be aired via the college public address system, Miss Weller said.

Stressing the need for conservation, the governor of California last week deslghated the week of March 7 to 14 as Conservation Week, a week which has been observed since the year 1935.

In his annual proclamation, the governor requested that schools and public and private agencies stress the importance of conservation. Fire Prevention, Food for Freedom and Nutrition and Thrift will headlight the program of the California Conservation Week.

Dr. Walter F. Dexter, superintendent of public instruction, urges that the conservation act of 1942 be devoted to the appraisal of every resource of the nation, and to the planning of the most effective means for using these resources for the immediate benefit of the nation.

Executive Council Goes On Without MAC Representative

From all appearances the Executive Council of the college will function without a representative of the Men's Athletic Council. At least this was the situation until this week. Since the beginning of the semester the student government of the college has been carried on without the official approval or disapproval from the MAC. No move has been made to remedy the problem.

MAC Block Controversy

The MAC was the center of attraction last semester when it had the entire college in a uproar over a controversy concerning the awarding of blocks to the soccer team. After much discussion the MAC won over, after amending the constitution and finally winning full power to award blocks, on honor previously claimed by the Executive Council itself.

Members Named

A complete roster of the Executive Council is as follows:

A. S. President.....Don Jensen
A. S. Vice-president.....Gloria Olivi
A. S. Secretary.....Barbara Stahmann
Assoc. Men Students.....Jim Duryea
Assoc. Women Students.....Betty MacKillop
Rally Commissioner.....Bob Murphy
Publication Board..Francis Christman
Club Advisory Board.....Ed Lopez
Women's Athletic Association.....Janice Berch
Athletic Council.....

Any students desiring to attend a meeting of the Executive Council may do so at any time. Meetings are held every Tuesday and Thursday in Room 254 at 2 p.m.

Preparations Under Way For Campus Players Play

Plans are under way for a play, to be presented some time this semester by the Campus Players Dorothy Hogan, president of the club, has announced.

"A play has never been presented at the college by the Campus Players," asserted Miss Hogan "but the club will endeavor to achieve the production." At present James McGill and Tom Buckley are writing an original script for the club.

Rehearsals for the production will be held at the workshop, the Hobby Playhouse on Brighton Avenue, near Ocean, every other Thursday from 7 to 10 p.m. All students interested in any form of dramatics are urged to attend the after-class meetings every other Friday at 3 p.m. in Room 258.

Men's Chorus Needs Tenors

Kiernan, music instructor, has issued an appeal for men singers in order that a chorus can be started.

Men with the ability to sing tenor are especially needed, McKiernan said. At the present, credit is given to Tuesday-Thursday classes held in Room 147.

Budget Shortage Causes Graduation Curtailment

Members of the Executive Council have taken action on the problem of covers for diplomas for June graduates. Because of curtailment of funds on every side, it was found necessary to cut this semesters budget almost $3000, as compared to last semesters expenditures.

The reserve fund for this semester is far below the usual safety mark, and Ward Nichols, Comptroller, fears any additional expenses drawn from the reserve fund would prove dangerous.

There were no provisions made for the diploma covers in the budget as approved by the members of the Executive Council. The usual sum appropriated was $300.

To assure Nichols that no further expense would be taken from the reserve fund, the Executive Council has voted in favor of discontinuing the purchasing of covers for graduates diplomas.

The problem now rests with the sophomore graduates and faculty sponsors.

Rally

Student Support Doubted For Today's Rally In Gym

The location for the rally scheduled for Thursday, March 19 at 12 noon is doomed to the fate of the past rallies, unless student interest demands the formerly announced location of the men's gymnasium, Jim Upp, yell leader, made known this week.

"We are uncertain of the student preferences for such a location," he said, "and we would like the students to either get in contact with Bob Murphy, rally commissioner, or myself if they would prefer this rally to be held in the men's gymnasium, where the bleachers will provide seats for all, or on the front steps as has been the custom for the rallies.

Prominent Guests Attend

This is the third rally of the semester, and all the arrangements for guest stars have been made.

The guests will include such well-known figures as Jack Kirkwood, and Tommy Harris of Breakfast Club fame, as well as student talent.

Included in this student talent will be Gabriel Junqua, who will give several piano selections.

New Yell Aired

Following the performances by the various guests, Upp revealed that a new yell is being introduced to the students.

"I feel that if the students will give the needed support, we will have one of the best rooting sections in all the junior colleges of northern California," he said.

Added to Upp, J. Paul Mohr, registrar, all classes will be excused for this associated students gathering.

Attendance Committee Issues Warning On Cuts

Edwin A. Cranston, recently appointed chairman of the Attendance Committee, warns students that regular attendance is required at all classes at the college. Official regulations require that those students who miss as many meetings of a course as there are meetings in a week be placed on probation in that course, "When the total number of absences equals the total number of hours the class meets in two weeks the student will be permanently disqualified and receive a failure," Cranston pointed out.

Student Responsible

Usually the instructor will notify the student by mail that he is being placed on probation. On this procedure Cranston observed that every student must accept the individual responsibility for his attendance. "Failure to receive notice of probationary status will not affect a student's final disqualification," Cranston said. "However," he added, "any student who feels that he has sufficient reason for reinstatement after disqualification should immediately consult a member of the attendance committee.

Committee Named

The attendance committee for the spring semester is as follows: Edwin Cranston, chairman, Mary Perry, Dean Edwin C. Browne, David Goldshur, Ward M. Nichols. The office hours for the members of the committee are posted on the bulletin board outside the Registrar's office.

Social

Spring Informal Honors Frosh Tonight At Fairmont Hotel; Murphy Orchestra Featured

Climaxing a week of study for mid-term examinations, the high freshman class will hold its annual Spring Informal tonight in the Gold Room of the Fairmont Hotel, according to Gloria Olivi, social committee chairman.

Students will dance to the music of Eddie Murphy and his Rio Del Mar Country Club Orchestra. This is the first time that Murphy and his orchestra have played for a college dance.

Appropriate Dress Stressed

Proper dress for the affair will be street-length clothes for the women and suits for the men students. The dance was originally scheduled as a semi-formal, but the theme was changed to be in keeping with the coming season, Miss Olivi said.

Admission will be by Associated Student card only with one card to every couple. No other admission will be charged.

Only Couples Admitted

Positively no stags will be admitted to the dance, Miss Olivi said. It has been noted, she added, that the last few dances have been attended by several "stags."

"Hotel dances are given for the enjoyment of all the college students, therefore, only couples will be admitted," she said.

Tradition Carried Out

The no-corsage rule for women attending which was begun in past semesters will hold forth again at the dance, she said.

The question of mixer dances for the remainder of the semester is still indefinite, but if student interest warrants the planning of such affairs, those in charge of such dances will make certain provisions for their being carried out, she said.

Graduation

Petitions Now Being Taken

Petitions for graduation are still being accepted by the registrar's office, although Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, requests that all students who wish to graduate and have not signed petitions do so as soon as possible.

Requirements for graduation are, the passing of the Subject A examination or of a course in English A, a total of 64 units of work including four units of Physical Education and Hygiene, passing of political science 35 or 65 or 23a-23b, and a major in a specified field of study, according to the circular of information of the college.

Upon completion of these requirements the student is given the title of Associate of Arts at graduation. To date 158 students have filed graduation petitions with the registrar's office.

Graduates Named

The petitions of the following students have been accepted and upon successful completion of this semester's work, they will receive their diplomas: Eleanor Madeline Anderson, T. Richard Angell, Jean Claire Arnold, Peter Henry Astiz, Albert Edward Bagot, Michael James Barret, Mary Elizabeth Batey, Clifford H. Bauer, June Louise Bauer.

Administration's Radio Work Taken Over By Paper

All administrative announcements which broadcast over the college public address system will be taken over by The Guardsman through the cooperation of Marie Weller, college radio instructor. This fact was made known last Monday by Lloyd Luckmann, Guardsman adviser.

The Guardsman will establish a news bureau within its staff in order that news releases may be supplied for forthcoming broadcasts. All college activities that occur on a given day will be broadcast via the public address system on that same day.

Talent Bureau Activities Hit; Improvement Promised

Because of unforseen difficulties, talent bureau activities have not been resumed this semester, according to Flosita Badger, music instructor and talent bureau adviser. However, everything seems to have been straightened out, and dates for auditions will be set for the near future, she added.

The talent bureau is a college organization with the purpose of uncovering so-called hidden talent. Students are auditioned at specified times, and a record of each audition is kept in the talent bureau files. When any special type of entertainment is sought for college affairs, or even for outside organizations, students are contacted and placed through the talent bureau.

Very often these contacts with outside organizations provide that all-important "break" so necessary to person in the entertainment field," stated Miss Badger.

Date and time of auditions will be announced when they are announced. All talented students are urged to audition.

Story Of The Cabbage Patch

From Vitamins To Piping

By Ed Lopez

Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch to be sure is an unusual story, but not half so unusual as the story connected with the college's own cabbage patch. Yes, there is such a thing, and any Doubting Thomases may see for themselves by merely walking down the path in front of the campus and inspecting the edge of the field directly opposite the main building.

There they will find a few very dilapidated heads of cabbages, struggling valiantly to overcome the weeds and grass.

Many years ago, so the story goes, before the good people of this fair city thought of education, or a junior college, that great hunk of terra firma across from the campus was a dog track. Man's best friend made a daily showing at 52.50 a chance! But the dog races were forced to go when the fairer sex of the community banded together and demanded that the good name of Ingleside should be kept clean and wholesome.

No photos of cabbages were available when Bennie Chin, Guardsman photographer, visited the plot across the road. But these men gracefully consented to pose for a shot. Here they are surrounded by their pipes. Said pipes are at this moment still across from the college—but they won't have gone.

After the capering canines were forced to leave, a number of Italian families moved onto the field to raise vegetables! They planted rows of lettuce, carrots, spinach, potatoes and of course cabbages.

To rogues of the neighborhood the vegetable garden was a paradise, for nightly they made their raids, to return home loaded with a variety of the choicest greens. In fact, half the neighborhood was found to be eating vegetable soup and mulligan stew throughout the week!—providing junior didn't get

Women and Beauty

Discretion!

ALTHOUGH times have changed and the women of America have gained rights unheard of for the female of the species, still there are a few rather inherent traits of the eternal feminine that speak poorly for the weaker sex, in that these traits still exist.

Most evident is that fact among college women. At this college the women seem to have set out to prove that they yet possess their basic privileges. That they are proving it is evident. Interested men are asked to observe the actions of ~~the female in the cafeteria~~ of this science building.

Historians tell of the use of cosmetics dating back into ancient times. Beauty experts directly attribute the radiance of Helen of Troy and the charm of Cleopatra to the magical properties of cosmetics. Ever since beauty entered the charmed circle of big business it has been proper to paint up oneself—providing that one is a woman. The encouragement of such actions perhaps directly concerns the sale and accrued profit of the business.

In no way is this a reflection either upon the use of cosmetics or the value of the product. Neither does it mean that the business itself is causing alarm to the female public. In this day and age who could imagine a woman as her natural self? Men have been so overcome by the pseudo-charm of applied beauty that they would probably not even recognize an "unpainted woman." On the other hand, men wish their companions to wear makeup; and if that is what they want they certainly get it.

Readers are asked to note the co-ed who, with complete irresponsible manner, combs her hair over the food of her companion. When the woman's hair has received its ration of brushing for the day (so that it might have a richer, more beautiful sheen) the hair is removed from the comb and thrown on the floor; perhaps to be found later on one of the tables.

After lunch out comes the handbag and from the handbag the regular assortment of gadgets. Eyebrow thingamajigs, rouges and lipsticks, powders, and numerous other mysterious and potent concoctions. In the days when mother worried over her complexion and appearance such practices were unbelievable. But progress—

In this country stress is laid upon the ability of individuals to pursue their own course. The use or application of cosmetics and kindred powders or rouges is entirely up to the person concerned. But democracy has also come up with the theory that when one infringes upon the health or well being of another that is a different story.

When, in the course of female events, it becomes necessary for one woman to add to the dangers of the modern world; when it becomes her habit to flout the rules of sanitation, to act a role which might be foreign to her—then these practices do not belong. It might be imagined that the rights of a woman supersede the rights of any other; bird, animal or fish. Men are turning the world over to women to do as they wish. But it's not so.

If the women, especially college women, knew what the men thought when the lipstick and rouge appeared at a lunch table or counter; if they had the slightest idea—well.

Readers are urged to look around at the next collegiate gathering place they happen upon. Notice the actions of the women in regard to the above—and the attitude of the men.

Shots At ...RAMdom

TWO BODIES

lay in the anemic light of the street lamp. The car was stopped in the middle of the road, its motor coughing huskily. A man's hat was cocked jauntily on a headlight that was bent back to stare upward. A man sat dumbly behind the wheel.

The usual crowd collected from nowhere, stared with morbid fascination at the shattered frame of the man who was moaning steadily a senseless mumble from his broken face. The second huddled figure was that of a small boy who lay sobbing softly on his stomach. His foot was twisted at a peculiar angle.

So much for the ghastly scene. It took place on the corner of Third Avenue and Irving Street, Thursday, March 6, at about 8:30 p.m. Nothing was printed about it in the papers. We didn't even know the names of the casualties. Simply a small boy and his father out for a walk that ended tragically.

The point is this. With all the first aid instruction going on in this city; there was not one person there who knew what to do till the ambulance came. No one was holding the man's leg still. It was badly fractured and he kept moving it, splintering the jutting bones of his compound fracture. No one attempted to call an ambulance. Every one assumed that some one else had done it.

When we did call one it was on another trip and it took 15 minutes to get to the scene of the accident. Fifteen minutes is a long time when a man lies dying.

In the event of any enemy raid this scene would be multiplied many times. If it takes an ambulance 15 minutes to get to one accident, how many people are going to die in the interim because no one, with all their first aid instruction, will take command of the situation; crowds stand staring assuming that some one else knows what to do. How many women who strut jauntily down the street in uniforms as if they had the responsibility of the United States Army on their shoulders, will keep that jaunty swagger when there's really something besides theory to practice?

HE WAS

one of those cute babies that every one gurgles about. A little man in long pants with blonde curly hair and big blue eyes. His mother was relaxed on a bench by the tennis courts and he was playing around a drinking fountain. Every time some one came to drink he'd jump and watch them with a longing expression on his face.

One of those kind old women stopped to sip, viewed the cunning child and cooed to him. She lifted him to drink, patted his little curls and departed with a sad sweet smile on her face. A bronzed young man stopped at the fountain, and he too, saw the little cherub, lifted him to drink.

By the time the little fellow was beginning to look thoughtful. He gulped down a few drops and then looked dreamily into space. The bronzed young man looked rumi-

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Adolescence noted; Direction needed; Cases exploited

• Bouquets

Editor, The Guardsman:

Who gets the credit for the interesting displays by the Floriculture Department? I'd like to say they're swell!

It seems to me that the administration ought to run a series of exhibits on all the departments in the college. Something like the Paint Technology layout, I'd suggest—or have you noticed the slick job of the Geology and Geography departments.

In my opinion the promotional value of the exhibit cases ought to be more fully exploited.

Curious

• Suggestion Seconded

Editor, The Guardsman:

I want to add my "second" to the letter by E. F. which appeared in the last RAM'S HORN regarding "Frosh Beauty Contest."

Student government cannot be expected to click if the initiation to college politics is to continue as in the past. Let the Executive Council use its imagination on this problem.

T.O.M.

• One Way?

Editor, The Guardsman:

Has anyone ever followed up the story behind the directional signs at the first floor landing of the center stairway, namely "Up only" and "Down only"? Was it a carry-over from a Hallowe'en joke?

Take 'em down or inaugurate some traffic management!

Frustrated!

• Is It Private?

Editor, The Guardsman:

Isn't it wonderful? The Fraternity spirit, I mean. For some two weeks or more we have been treated to a carnival of costumes, antics, and fun. It's been so homelike around the halls that I have had an attack of nostalgia for my dear old high school. Can't something be done to stop it?

Fraternity initiations are a necessary part of college life, but shouldn't they reflect college minds? As a disinterested observer I cannot say that I am impressed by the honor the "Frats" confer upon their pledges. I thought that fraternity business was something private and personal.

Disillusioned

FEM FADS . . . by Nancy

THE spring informal at the Fairmont tonight should reveal many delightful ideas for Easter outfits, at least by the way the women students have been talking. Perhaps because the dance is so close to Easter, women will purchase their outfits early, to avoid the rush and crowds, wear out the outfits before the holiday, and therefore get two ensembles. Nice work!

Although many of the college dances have been semi-formal, the percentage of women who wore formals was so small, that this time, Gloria Olivi, social committee chairman, decided to change the policy and announce the dance as the spring informal.

INFORMALITY DEFINED

Informal, incidentally, referring to these dances, means street length dresses. Perhaps it would be better to define it by what it doesn't mean. Informal therefore, doesn't mean sports—and doesn't mean formal. So there is lots of leeway. No one now should have trouble deciding on something to wear to the affair.

Miss Olivi, for example, will wear a new print dress of blue and white with large print flowers. Carrying out the print design are three taffeta daisies with rose colored centers (instead of the customary yellow) at the hip line. She will wear no hat, so other hat-haters can follow suit.

RED AND GREEN CONTRASTED

Betty McKillop, AWS President, will year a green jersey dress, and shoes of a contrasting color, Red, to be exact. With this dress she will wear a beige coat and hat.

Red shoes are definitely in this season and can be found with high, low and no heels, and made of suede, kid, and alligator leathers.

At the AWS fashion show last spring, the commentator mentioned that red shoes were a "must" in every wardrobe. This season they have become even more so.

THAT NEW YORKISH LOOK

Joan Wren has a biege jersey, fresh from New York, which she will wear with a large green felt hat. The jersey dress has three-quarter length sleeves, and is a two-piecer.

Kay Allen, still adhering to the semi-formal idea, will wear a long red formal with a long sleeved jacket appliqued with gold leaves.

FLOOR LENGTH DRESSES, TOO

Miss Allen is probably one of several who will wear formals. Although, formals are frowned upon at such dances, the number of students who wore them gradually decreased so greatly, that is was decided to simply call the dances informal.

However, those who like to wear formals should keep up the good work, and eventually the habit may return and dances will be semi-formal again, with more students than ever in formals.

Certainly there is something more dressier in a floor length dress, and they certainly do give a more dressed up feeling.

The Gold Rush . . . A Chaplin Oldie Becomes A Fresh Remake

Today's column is written by Ted Green

WE very rarely go to theatres on nights when there is a sign in front announcing: TONIGHT! Major Studio Feature Preview! But last week, being at a loose end, we dropped in to the United Artists Theatre, and after writhing through a little gem titled The Shanghai Gesture and a lower bracket B fillum known as Miss Polly, we and a capacity audience were treated to the remake of Charlie Chaplin's old picture The Gold Rush.

The Gold Rush was first made in 1925, and was considered by many to have been Chaplin's greatest picture. It is probably considered so by Charlie himself, as he chose it of all his films for modernization. It now has been rephotographed on new film, and has incidental music and narration by Charlie himself.

PATHOS AND COMEDY ABOUND

This picture, like most made by the famous little tramp, has large gobs of pathos mingled with the comedy, particularly in the sequences in which Charlie is around the dance hall girl he secretly loves but who merely uses him to amuse herself and her girl friends by being coquettish and standing him up on an invitation to New Year's Eve supper. This supper scene really pulled the tears in the old silent days.

On the lighter side are the parts where Charlie cooks an old shoe for himself and a starving prospector. This had 'em in the aisles. Then there is the part where their cabin is blown to the edge of a cliff in a windstorm and every movement of Chaplin and the prospector makes it tilt over the edge and back again like a see-saw. We could go on and relate most of the plot, as we usually do, but we believe you would rather see it for yourselves when it is released in a week or two.

ACTING STLYES COMPARED

The principal enjoyment your reviewer got out of the film was in comparing the style of acting then and now. Of course all the players who were playing straight to Chaplin in The Gold Rush were very, very hammy according to present standards of Hollywood, but this adds comedy to the picture that was not present when it was first released.

In watching lip movements of the actors, too, it will be noticed that they say things which they definitely would not say in sound pictures.

The mainstay of the picture, of course, is Chaplin himself, and the appeal of the little tramp in enormous shoes, derby hat, tattered coat and carrying the famous cane is as popular today as it ever way. Chaplin's greatness lies in the fact that he does not need sound to put over what he is doing in a picture, and the new The Gold Rush shows again that he is one of the greatest pantominists of this or any other recorded age.

This department unhesitatingly recommends The Gold Rush to all and sundry; to the old timers for the memories it will bring, and to the present generation as both a source of laughter and a means of comparison of Hollywood then and now.

Robinson

Cabbages & Kings

ALL this war shortage and rationing is getting awfully close to our doorstep.

The papers scream that there will be just a pound of sugar per person each week and that the clothes we wear will be cut and cut until we look like fugitives from Treasure Island's Gayway.

This last cut will effect the students of college hardest in our opinion. Just imagine, in the not too distant future, we will refer to the droop in a suit instead of the drape.

But the capping climax is the fact that there will be no more drape. This means that we will at long last find out the answer to the ageless question,

"Are those your real shoulders or did they come with the suit?"

This will probably mean that the college Beau Brummels will suddenly become like the, "I was like this 7 days ago, but look at me now," ads.

The worst part of the whole situation is that on the new "Victory" suits, there will be no lapels. Good gosh, where will we trap those blond hairs and what will become of the dandruff scales? (Advertisement.)

With it all though, we hear that even more of a catastrophe has taken place, the Army has even taken over the production of barrels, they are soon going to be made of glass!

SAYINGS

It is very often that certain piece of music or a historic fact will make you think of some person. It seems to be very prevalent around the inner sanctums of the college to point out these similarities and discuss them.

Of the ones that has been heard by this department one of the best is the one regarding Grieg's Piano Concerto. Seems that it makes people think of one of the students going to class. Starts out with him, 'him' being Dorman Potter, president of Tri Epsilon, walking up the long trek to the hill. Dorm finally decides that he is late and thinks that he had better hurry.

Seeing that he is going to be tardy, he turns around to back track but decides that it may go hard with him, so his tracks continue toward class.

Comes a storm and he battles his way through only to find that his class isn't until tomorrow, turning around, he darts down the hill to burst into the store, and collapses in a booth.

Next time that you hear the song, listen and you'll hear Dorm.

BEAUTY

The other day we were asked to give our impression of what we considered a beautiful woman. This question stumped us for a moment but after each much brain tearing thought, we answered,

"One with teeth."

It would be wonderful if all beauty could be classified. You could decide on a type that you liked and know that you get what you wanted. every time.

Even to an expert though, it is almost impossible to classify a beautiful woman. We know a girl who in this department's humble thoughts is one of the most gorgeous creatures ever created but when we broached the subject to another union member, we got the reply,

"Who her? naw, she's a jerk."

Faculty Features . . . Uncle Sam Grabs College Instructors

By Iwanna Hayworth

TODAY'S column will be devoted entirely to members of the faculty who have taken up new and additional duties for the duration of the present emergency:

It is fitting to begin by mentioning the women instructors who are playing an important role in their work in the various branches of the Red Cross.

Claire Cuneo, home economics instructor, is the faculty advisor for the group which is now spending their spare time in the knitting and sewing of different articles for distribution and use by the Red Cross.

Francis Mount, another home economics instructor, is in charge of the nutritional courses offered for and by the Red Cross.

Dean Margaret Dougherty is the coordinating director of all the work which is being done for the Red Cross.

In the Red Cross Disaster Relief, the following instructors are active:

Mrs. Laurine Bergin, Physical Education instructor; Mrs. Mozelle Milliken, hotel and restaurant division; Mildred Williams, business instructor; and Dean Dougherty.

Mabel Clay, another business instructor, has offered her services to the army air corps along with her regular duties at the college.

Phebe Ward, formerly chairman of the English department as well as being in the business division, is at present at San Diego Evening Junior College, under the direction of John Gifford, assisting in the training of women for aircraft industries, such as the Douglas plants.

And now for the men in the college faculty who either are active in defense work in a civilian's capacity, or have volunteered their services in the nation's armed forces.

Dr. Milton Pollissar, instructor, in the science department, has been appointed head of air raid warden training program and has, in his own time, organized a program of training instructors of the area, and upon completion of this training, will send them to public schools to begin training program of their own.

Another college instructor, who is aiding in defense training along with his regular work is Dr. O. E. Anderson, who is assisting Dr. Lawrence at the University of California in Physics and Cyclotron.

Francis Colligan, English instructor, has been selected for immediate duty in the Department of State in Equador. He left for Quito last month, and his present plans are to establish his home there for an indefinite length of time.

One of the first of the members of the faculty to be granted a leave of absence was Major Fred McFarland, at one time police training instructor, as well as advisor for the college rifle team, who is now director of R.O.T.C. in the city's high schools.

Captain Joseph S. Hughes, political science and speech instructor, is now in the Public Relations department of the United States Army at Riverside, California.

Major Donald Atherton, mechanical engineer, is in the United States Coast Artillery, and is at present stationed at the Presidio.

Lieutenant John Hurley, U.S.A., former Physical Education and hygiene instructor, is active in the cadet training program at the University of California. Had he not been called into the service, he was to have been hygiene coordinator.

Captain Chester Clark, U.S.A., is in the Ordnance division in Los Angeles. He formerly was connected with the chemistry department here.

Lieutenant Paul V. Wendell, at one time instructor in the accounting department of the hotel and restaurant division, is now at Ft. Lewis, Washington in the Commissary division of the U.S.A. Wendell left the college a year ago last September.

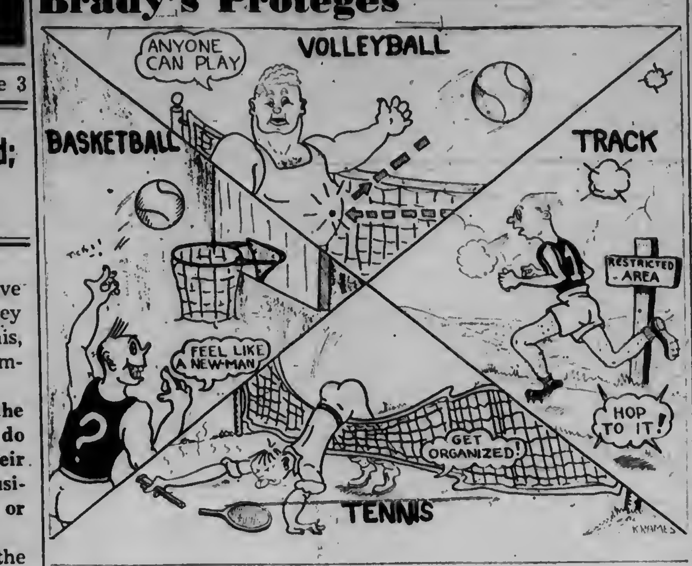
Captain Winthrop Williams, U.S.A., successor to Wendell in the hotel and restaurant faculty, left the college sometime last fall. He is now stationed in Fort Benning, Georgia, in active duty with the Army Signal Corps. He is director of the work of expert photographers in the taking of still and motion pictures of the maneuvers and training program of the enlisted men.

Lieutenant Commander F. Grant Marsh of the United States Navy, formerly chairman of the college business department is serving now as an instructor in cadet training at the University of California. Marsh was active in the first world war and came out with his present commission. When he first learned that he was to leave the college, his appointment was uncertain, therefore every issue of The Guardsman reported that he was to leave immediately. This went on for about three weeks, until his appointment came through.

When war was declared in December, Ensign Alden Smith, then of the United States Naval Reserve, took a leave of absence. He is in the Intelligence branch of the Navy now, and is still stationed here in the city.

One of the last of the faculty to be called into the service is Ensign Wesley Muscio of the United States Naval Reserve, who was sent immediately after being called, to Seattle, Washington.

Dr. Lowell Hollingsworth, college radio engineering instructor, is at present at M. I. T. He is active in Radio Research.



It is not without a certain amount of pride that we feel in having known some, if not all, of these instructors, who are giving their time and effort in the present struggle for the "survival of the fittest."

Those of us who have known these instructors, feel certain that if competent, efficient, and brilliant exhibitions of service can help to win the war, these men and women, former associates of ours, will "Keep 'Em Flying!"

Intramurals Forge Ahead; Gridiron Aces Join Navy

WHAT PRICE INTRAMURALS

With Uncle Sam's armed forces taking many prospective athletes, and the college budget slashing the amount of money allotted to the major sports of track, baseball, boxing, and tennis, the only trend and outlet of the student who craves athletic competition is naturally toward the intramural program.

Rivalry in the intramurals can be taken just as seriously as the rivalry displayed in the intercollegiate competition. Not only do the various organizations cherish and gloat on victory over their opponents, but the activities ascertain a certain degree of enthusiasm and spirit that ~~adds to a~~ typical intercollegiate football or basketball game.

The only drawback of the intramurals and the reason why the program is not highly endorsed by the colleges throughout the country, however, is the knowledge that it is non-profit bearing.

This college, regardless, has heartily supported the program, and is an outstanding justification why the students should attempt to enter the various sports offered this semester.

Ably handled by Jack Brady, who, after three semesters, has brought the intramural activities from their infancy to one of the headlining attractions of each semester to such an extent, that representatives from San Jose State and the University of San Francisco requested information concerning the operation of the intramurals.

Now that the bleachers have been installed in the gymnasium, the volleyball, free throwing, badminton, and basketball games, which are yet to come, can be comfortably witnessed.

To add color and liven the program to unprecedented heights, Brady is planning a gala evening of finals events that will feature the finalists in the volleyball, basketball, and badminton tournaments.

With cooperation from the fraternities and individual clubs, the program can be a marked success, approaching the programs of by-gone semesters.

ARMY-NAVY FUTURE GREATS

Gazing at the football stalwarts who cavorted on the gridiron for the Rams last fall, it is surprising how many are already in the Army or Navy.

Those who enlisted as bluejackets and are in the midst of their training period at the Naval Training Station in San Diego include Ed Cassidy, Bob Cavender, Don Tobin, Dutch Danielson, Jack Medrano, Art Ekdall, and Hal Corbett. Only one to wear the olive drab is Pleasanton's pride and joy, Frank Molina.

In ready anticipation of the coming conference season, Tom Wilson's tennis squad has been holding preliminary sessions to determine the ranks of the various players who will represent the Red and White in their initial match against Stockton next week.

GREELEY-AMEMIYA MAINSTAYS

Only two veterans have returned for competition again this year, namely Joe Greeley and George Amemiya. Greeley, number one ranking player for the Rams last year, will undoubtedly be the squad's mainstay, since Jack Hare, second ranking star, did not return to college. Greeley and Hare, highly praised by Wilson, said that these two performers formed the best doubles combination in the 1941 campaign. This was the main reason why the netsters finished second in the conference last year, edged out only by San Mateo in the final week.

Amemiya, however, showed great promise near the end of last season, and may develop into one of the high ranking players on Wilson's squad.

In its first match of the year, the college racqueteers dropped a close 5 to 4 decision to the California Frosh last week.

FRATERNITIES MEET

Inter-college competitive sports seem to be increasing throughout the United States, and so it has here at the college. Not only is the intramural program off to a successful semester, but the various fraternities are begining to face each other in various sports.

First of them to get off to a flying start are the Beta Phi Beta and the Tri Epsilon. Both have agreed on a football game for Sunday, March 22, and both expect to pitch their full strength at each other.

It's early for football, but—may the best team win!

Itnramural Entries Due March 20

Those interested in the opening intramural round robin must have their entries in by next Friday, March 20, according to Jack Brady. The following Tuesday, schedules for basketball competition and play will begin. Entries will be accepted every day by Brady in the office of the men's gymnasium.

Managers of club or independent teams should fill out the application printed below, Brady said.

Name of college organization represented..

Track

Squad Limbers Up; Petch, Skinner Display Form

In what proved to be just a warm-up for the college track squad, Coach Russ Sweet's cindermen held a short inter-class meet last Friday, March 6, on Balboa High School's track.

None of team were out to break records, as Coach Sweet was just having his boys limber up, and put a finer edge on their form.

This is the first time the trackmen have been clocked in actual competition against each other, and Sweet was just getting an idea as to how many men he will have on his squad this season, and also how many runners he will have in each event.

Few Competed

Not all of the team competed in the meet, as some of the team either had classes, or had to be to work.

This year, only Jim Skinner, intramural cross country record holder, Sam Mendelson, sprint man, and Bob Howard distance runner, returned to fill out some of the track team's positions. New runners have already appeared on the squad's list, as Wally Thompson, Dick Petch, Norman Smith, Joe Carlevero, and Bob King have signed up for their respective events.

Sweet said "we need high and low hurdlers bad, as well as some broadjumpers, and some quarter-milers."

Howard Winner

In the inter-class meet, instead of a full mile, only a three quarter event was run off, and Bob Howard came home the winner, stopping the clock at 3.42.6, with Thompson second at 3.48, and John Snook at 3.50.

The 440 quarter mile found Norm Smith leading the field to the tape catching the watches at 54.7, with King and Carlevero placing second and third respectively.

In the 100 yard dash, Dick Petch ran it off in the very fast time of 10.1 which is exceptionally promising for an early season workout, while Don Sherba beat out Mendelson for second position.

Skinner Romps Home

The half mile was cut to a 660 yard event, and Skinner seemed to just jog around to beat Howard by a large margin, and was caught in the time of 1.57.5, which is slow time for Skinner, but early season trials don't count much.

In the 220 furlong, Petch again turned on the speed to win his second event of the afternoon, but was caught in the slow time of 24.8 which is a slight drop for a man that ran a 10.1 century.

No hurdle events were run off, as well as broadjump, pole vault, and javelin events.

Drake Shows Promise

In the shot-put, Duke Drake, from a standing position, heaved the lead pellet 34 feet, seven inches, with Ed Sanford second at 32 feet, three inches, but in the Discus event Sanford turned the tables, and beat Drake, throwing the rubber platter 113 feet, eight inches, and Drake coming through at 105 feet even. The Discus was also thrown from a standing position.

Trials were held yesterday afternoon, and the finals will be held today at 3:00 p.m. at the Balboa track.

Out for their respective events, but not having their jumps measured were Bill Jennings and Bert Goebel, both of whom have cleared six feet in the high jump, and Bob Oyen who has cleared the pole vault bar at 13 feet. Also out, but not competing were sprint man Gene Suacci, who, when he gets in shape, should provide Coach Sweet with some needed points in the dashes, and James Duryea, AMS president.

This is Duryea's second season in track, but Sweet said that he's practicing quite hard for the past six months, and should be right up among the leaders when he gets to heaving that javelin around.

Women's Athletics

Individual Activities Under Way Monday

As if four days a week of gymnastics, body building, and hiking tours via Niagara Walk wasn't enough! Activity in the individual clubs of Women's Athletic Association will begin Monday, March 16, asserted Janice Berch, president of the organization.

Chosen at a council meeting the managers of the individual clubs are ready for publication. The managers are: Alvenise Shannon, archery; Audrey Turner, badminton; Jean Vernon, bowling; Ingeborg, Lubahn, ice skating; and Carol Graves, basketball.

Should Sign Up

Miss Berch emphasized that interested students are urged to sign up, even at this late date. Women participating in these organizations are not obliged to bring their own equipment, for the WAA furnishes racquets, balls and shuttlecocks.

The semester activity of these clubs will be a general play day at Golden Gate Park on April 25. Competitive games will be presented for all bay region junior colleges.

Meet Marin

"The WAA is having more of its share of play days this semester," Miss Berch said. "To participate in the softball playday on March 21 with Marin Junior College the WAA organized the softball club. The club will meet at 2 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The officers of the association revealed that signups are posted for the tennis tournament. Winners of the tournament will honor the Tennis Trophy with their names, as in past semesters.

Diver Needed To Bolster Swimming Team This Year

Opening a season which promises to equal that of last year's Jim Jensen, college swimming coach, announced that the college natators are in dire need of a springboard artist, whose presence will greatly increase the scoring ability of the team as a whole.

Jensen requests that any student who thinks he can dive and wants to try out for the team should report to him at once before the season gets underway.

The four swimmers who proved that they were the backbone of the team during the first meet of the season against the University of California Freshmen, are Bill Hickey, Phil De Lano, Jim Byers, and Tom Callahan. Hickey specializes in the sprints, De Lano in distances, Byers in the sprints and distances, and Callahan, backstroke. The score of the meet against the Cal Frosh was 46 to 27 in favor of the Bears.

Jensen announced that the swimming team will have five meets which have already been scheduled and possibly more if the $25 budget allows. The schedule slated for the rest of the semester will include two junior college meets, and three high schools.

Gaddy Acquires Proper Monicker

By Charles G. Davis

We are not one to judge names, but we do know an appropriate monicker when we hear it.

Take the name Jack Gaddy for instance. There's a short, sweet handle that's easy to remember. But take the gentleman who owns it. Ah yes; now you see our meaning. It couldn't fit him in a million years.

Please don't misunderstand us, Mr. Jack Gaddy is tops as far as we're concerned, but there's something lacking to it. He should have a middle name. Every distinguished person has one. Look at our president.

Silent Jack Gaddy

After seeing, listening, and talkto Mr. Gaddy, we've given to him free of charge a brand new name. Mons. Silent Jack Gaddy. That's a tag even Hollywood could go for, not to mention the women.

Maybe Silent Jack has a reason for all this hush hush business. Could it be that he has a winning baseball team, and he wants to capitalize on the element of surprise?

Behind this veil of secrecy there's a story. It's a short but patriotic one.

He's A Man for Uncle Sam

Latest reports from the navy front office indicate Uncle Sam's fleet is to be increased due to the enrollment of Silent J. Gaddy. Offhand we aren't predicting S.S.J.G. (second S. for sailor) will win the war single handed, because there's a guy named MacArthur whose doing a pretty fair job at present, but we will say he'll be an important cog in this man's navy.

The Ram baseball coach has enlisted in the capacity of physical instructor for the naval air corps and is awaiting orders.

It's the same grand and glorious tale that has been told many fold during the past weeks; the men of America joining the world's biggest and best team.

Keep 'em Flying Silent.

Boxers Start Intense Preliminary Training

Varsity proteges of the Marquis of Queensbury have already started intense training preparations in order to be at their best fighting peak when the final plans for an Associated Men Student's boxing show are completed.

The tentative date for the forthcoming ring carnival has been set for Friday, April 17, according to Jim Jensen, Ram boxing mentor. Last year's ring events were held at Coliseum Bowl, but plans to obtain the use of the Bowl this semester have not yet been completed.

Many Will Compete

Those who have signified intentions to compete in the April show include Duke Drake, Seisuke Akamini, Bob Hempstead, Dave Hunicke, Walt Seaborn, Ira Cartney and others who have been training in the men's gymnasium regularly for the last week.

Referees for the forthcoming boxing shows are Ray Lunny, lightweight star via Commerce High School, and Pat Valentino, pride of the Excelsior district. Sports writers from the local newspapers will officiate as judges and other officials.

Eliminations Will Be Held

So that only the better boxers participate in the show, elimination bouts will be held sometime before the scheduled carnival, Jensen said. This will probably mean that bouts in only the standard weights will be held.

Men who have had no previous experience in boxing and wrestling should contact Jensen in the men's gymnasium office in the near future.

Rifle Match Completed As Bain Wins Honors; Volleyball Play Begins Monday; Basketball Next

An evening of intramural sports finals, the first of its kind in the history of the college, will make its long awaited debut sometime toward the end of this semester. This fact was made known last Monday by Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser.

Results of last weeks rifle shooting match were released by Brady who pointed out the fact that more than 100 entrants swelled the list of entries to a point almost double that of last semester.

Bain Wins Honors

Ken Bains waltzed off with high shooting honors hitting a total of 96 out of 100, while Jack Cedarland captured runner-up honors with a 95 total.

Tied at third place with a score of 93 were Jim McGowan and Charles Goebel. It is interesting to note that all four place men are members of the college rifle team conducted by Allan Eisan.

With 19 entrants to date, the intramural ping pong tournament got under way this week with three first round matches being held. Escaping possible elimination in first round play were Jacob Osheroff, Allan Clapp and Dave Billings. Finals in this tournament will be held toward the end of this semester as a part of the intramural sports finale.

Entries Due Today

Today is the last day in which to submit volleyball team entries, Brady announced. With the defending champions, the Newman Club, and six other teams entered in the tournament, first round battles will be held commencing next week.

Featuring today's intramural program of events is an intramural track meet which will be held at the nearby Balboa High School oval. Sprinters will toe the mark at 3 p.m. for the first track event. All men who failed to compete in elimination trials during the earlier part of this week may run in today's meet providing they qualify for the finals by virtue of placing in preliminary trials which will be held today.

Although all of the track events will be held on the Buccaneer cinder lanes, the shot put and discus events will be conducted here on the Ram practice field.

No Javelin Event

"Javelin tossers might just as well compete in some other event," Brady said, because the javelin even will not be staged today. It has been canceled because of the danger of accidentally hitting someone with the spear."

Victors in today's "run, jump and throw" meet will receive winners' medals in the shape of gold track spikes. Second place men will be awarded silver spikes, while show place men will not be the recipient of any awards, principally because of the cost and trouble involved in obtaining the miniature track spikes.

All entries for the forthcoming intramural basketball tournament must be submitted to Brady or to student managers Ted Green and William Gerecke on or before March 19. With the defending quintet, the Newman Club, almost a certainty to enter the tournament. Brady announced that the opening round of cage play will get under way March 23. All games will be played in the men's gymnasium commencing at 3 p.m.

Boxing Gets Underway

Coinciding with the other intramural events, a boxing tournament supervised by Jim Jensen, college Marquis of Queensbury instructor, will get under way about April 1, Brady announced. So that men planning to enter the tournament can be at their physical peak, Jensen urges all men to commence their fistic training immediately.

Students desirous of obtaining further information concerning intramural activities may check with the main bulletin board in the men's gymnasium. To acquaint the lower classmen with intramural events and announcements, daily notices will be posted on these boards providing ample information, Brady said.

Brady Urges Students

In order to cope with the Federal government's present program of Physical Fitness, Brady urges men students to come out for athletics, or to do their part in obtaining the utmost of this semester's scheduled intramural program.

Anyone interested in managing one of intramural sports may do so by applying to Brady, Green or Gerecke in the men's gymnasium offices. At the present, preliminary steps are being taken to establish an intramural board, whose main objectives will lie in the arbitration of protests, determination of intramural policies, and other problems that may arise during the course of the semester.

College Ice Skating Club Presents Its Semi-Annual Pageant, Saturday, March 28

With the funds received from the event to provide further lessons for its members, the college Ice Skating club will present its semi-annual ice pageant, entitled Round the World On Ice, March 28 at Winterland, Inge Lubahn, president of the organization announced last Monday.

Featuring a spectacle which will include a naval tour to many of the nations of the world, the cast of the pageant will include many of the outstanding ice skating performers in this section of the country.

Pictured above are two of the college's top skaters, Inage Lubahn and Ray Beddow, who will be representing the college in the Round the World on Ice pageant to be held at the Winterland Ice Rink, Saturday night, March 28. Besides holding various titles, Miss Lubahn is the president of the Ice Skating Club.

Girls in Dutch, Russian, and Latin American costumes will present a colorful exhibition, matching the skill of their own specialty on ice, accompanied by fast moving men skaters, who exhibit their skill in novices.

Leading participants in the pageant, who have figured prominently in California State and Pacific Coast championships are Peggy Egan and Arnie Hallstrom, Pacific Coast junior pair champions; Marcus Nelson, runner-up Northern California novices; and Marilyn Grace, State women's junior champion.

Added to these will be specialties and group numbers performed by other leading California skaters, members of the college club, former members, graduates, and students of the college, Miss Lubahn said.

Admission to the pageant will be 35 cents.

Date For All Conference Golf Meet Still Unknown

Golf, definitely on the upswing here at the college, will have its all-conference meet at a date to be announced in May with no round robin tournament planned, Coach Lee Eisan announced.

According to Eisan, four or five outstanding golfers will probably be selected from each college entered in the tournament, but since only eight men will qualify for the championship flight, competition will be stiff.

"The first four men will receive medals in the championship flights, and the first two golfers of the qualifying flight," Eisan said.

At present, Charles Manning looms as a Ram threat in the big event.

Hotel Division

Eight Students Tour Calif. April 18 To 24

Eight of the most outstanding students in the college Hotel and Restaurant Division will make a tour of California hotels, restaurants and resorts during the week of April 18 to 24, Hilda Watson, chairman of the division, confirmed last week.

The state-wide tour is sponsored by the California Northern Hotel Association, with arrangements contracted by its secretary, Harry Troupe, who is also an instructor in the division. Since its inception many semesters ago. Since its inception many semesters ago, the trip has become an annual event.

This year, third and fourth semester students who are voted the journey, will visit Sacramento, Fresno, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, Hollywood, Monterey, Palm Springs and other cities along the Pacific Coast. Funds which have been allotted the tour will not allow visits to cities "outside the state."

Absence Leaves Granted

"Previously, the trip was scheduled to coincide with the spring vacation," Mrs. Watson said, "but since there will be no such arrangement this year, the students who are voted the trip will be granted leaves of absences."

In order for a student in the division to be selected for the trip, she or he must be voted for by the instructors in the division. The eight students compiling the highest votes will automatically be selected to make the tour.

While the contingent visits the city of Los Angeles, they will participate in the Western Restaurant Show, an event which affords spectators an opportunity to view new and more progressive methods of instruction in hotel and restaurant work. Ten students made the trip last year and those students enrolled in the division for this semester look forward to the voting day which will determine just who will comprise the group of travelers.

Field Work Program

At the moment, division students are actively engaged in field work at leading hotels and restaurants in San Francisco and the bay area. Their course of study includes hotel and restaurant management, purchasing, auditing, beverage service, stewarding and hotel advertising and promotion.

As of yet, there have been no dinners, banquets or luncheons scheduled for this week in the college cafeteria, according to Mrs. Watson, who stressed the fact that events of this type depend upon the elements which has undertaken this nation under wartime. Students wishing part time employment may see Mrs. Watson in Room 107 for information, or contact Suzanne Richardson, newly appointed assistant in the cafeteria management.

Paving At College May Begin In Few Months

Completing the erection of the bleachers in the men's gym, college construction executives today turned their heads toward the task of bringing to the college a paved parking lot, according to Louis G. Conlan, college coordinator.

"Don't be surprised," Conlan said, "if in the next few days or in at least two weeks you see construction actually beginning on the long-awaited parking lot. The materials have arrived and the task of surveying is under way."

As for the bleachers, Conlan announced that they would probably be used for the next student rally, which statement was verified by Bob Murphy, rally commissioner.

natively at the child. Then a look of horror crossed his features. He stood holding the child in front of him with that helpless look on his face. Finally the mother turned to look at the child and seeing him in the hands of a strange man, came up to investigate. The young man said something incoherent to her and blushed. She took the little fellow to the smallest room in that locale, and the young man disappeared with a healthy blush on his cheeks.

Babies are so cute, but you can't depend on them at all times.

Low Sophomore

Funds Are Low But Dance Being Planned; March Or April Date For Affair.

Despite a lack in Associated Student funds there will be a Low Sophomore dance, Jim Skinner, class president, announced this week.

This semester, as in previous semesters, Skinner said, there were no funds allotted to the Low Soph class but the social committee under the leadership of Gloria Olivi will sponsor the semi-annual class dance. Funds are provided for by the finance committee to cover the cost of this event.

"I will work in close cooperation with Miss Olivi and the dance will probably be held in the latter part of March or during April. The date has not been set as yet but my class officers and Miss Olivi's committee will get together soon and plan the event."

The dance, Skinner said, will be traditional with the semi-formal dress and corsages will be out of order as customary at all semi-formal dances held by the college during the last few semesters.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 134, by 11 a. m. each Tuesday preceding publication on Friday.

Word was received from the Japanese Students Club this week that because of the recent conditions concerning the transporting of American Japanese and aliens, the organization would not file a renewal for a club charter. Officers of the CAB received the word with grave concern and will take steps to gain permanent recognition of the Japanese students until the present crisis is over and normal conditions have returned.

The Japanese students were one of the better known organizations of the college, never failing to offer their full support or cooperation to any project attempted by the Associated Students or the CAB. Only last semester this organization was the largest single contributor to the Red Cross Drive.

The $70 sum they contributed had been raised some time before for the purpose of purchasing cherry trees for the campus.

IN ONE YEAR

Tri Epsilon fraternity is scouting around for a location for their semi-annual dance. Rumor has it the dance will be a South Sea island party . . . The Campus Players have rented a workshop, the Hobby Playhouse, on Brighton Street near Ocean Avenue, just a short distance from the college. Future programs and rehearsals will be held there . . . The Club Advisory Board mixer dance was a great success. The entire women's gym carried out the St. Patrick's Day theme with green shamrocks, clay pipes, streamers, and balloons.

CLUB NOTICES

Campus Players . . . will hold hold an important meeting to day at 3 p.m. in Room 258 to plan productions for the remainder of the semester. All students are invited to attend.

Forum Club . . . Discussion of good and bad poetry will highlight the Forum Club meeting this Friday evening. All students will meet at 58 Isadora Street at 7:30 p.m.

Newman Club . . . Sunday, March 15, is the date set for the Newman hike to Muir Woods. All members are invited, only bring your own lunch! Meet at the Greyhound Bus Lines at 9:30.

Pi Mu Gamma . . . All members, and men and women majoring in medicine and allied subjects are cordially invited to the meeting in Room 204 Tuesday, March 17, at 7:30 p.m. There will be a speaker.

Forestry Fraternity . . . a meeting March 13, at 8:15 p.m. at 580 8th Avenue. Plans for the future will be discussed, and refreshments will be served.

caught and come limping home empty handed.

A short time later, the officials of the fair city decided the field would make an excellent location for a reservoir, so the Italian families were forced to give up their cabbage raising to move on to parts unknown. Work started on the future water storage plant, but was abandoned soon afterward, and the field became a storage place for sewer and gas pipes.

After lying dormant for many months the field became quite popular with golf and model airplane enthusiasts and later the local motorcycle maniacs adopted the field as their official playground. It was quite the thing on Sundays to see these daredevils taking their weekly spins in the dust of the former cabbage patch.

One businessman, seeing a chance to make a few shekels, decided if people would come to the field to drive their golf balls they should pay for the privilege and so today we have the Day and Night Golf Stand occupying one half of the cabbage patch.

The college had just been completed and was ready for occupancy when one lone cabbage raiser returned to his old haunts to raise his precious cabbages. It was a familiar sight to the students of the college to see this rugged individual proudly hoeing and plowing his cabbages on the edge of the field. He disappeared soon afterward, leaving his healthy cabbages to be overrun by the weeds.

Report From Radish Fields

By Claire Leeds

The Japanese radish fancier is obviously an exhibitionist. He has produced the largest radish in the world, a monstrosity attaining a length of two feet, a diameter of one foot or more, and weighing as much as 40 pounds.

This Sakurajima mammoth radish may be eaten like other radishes or cooked like turnips. The Janaese propaganda minister, however suggests a special formula for the exclusive use of college Defense Garden students. He advises that they pickle the radish in denatured alcohol, add a few slugs of nitro-glycerine and shake well.

Apparently the Japanese propaganda minister is not fond of these students. This is because he has learned that the Guardsman's radish Non Plus Ultra, being cultivated in the college Defense Gardens is one of the finest species, superior even to the remarkable Sakurajima mammoth radish.

Beautiful, scarlet in color, crisp and spirited in flavor, the Non Plus Ultra is the perfect radish. As a tribute to its merits, The Guardsman is sponsoring a campaign in the interest of producing even better Non Plus Ultras. Floriculture students are now cultivating radishes and other vegetables in the current vegetable growing program.

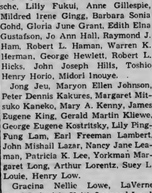
The student who produces the most beautiful bunch of radishes in a limited period of time will be formally acknowledged by The Guardsman. Judging will be in accordance with standards for bunched radishes specified by the United States Department of Agriculture.

They Receive A Good Amount Of Exercise

Warning students against overindulgence in athletic activity when they are carrying heavy academic loads, Dr. B. L. Freedlander, college health director, stresses the importance of sound programs of health activity. Such exercise as practiced in college body building classes, above, is a form of simple exercise, both light and beneficial to the student. Dr. Freedlander stresses a particular health point each week in the Guardsman, and aids students in their health problems.

Medical Health Corner . . .

Many students have a tendency to carry a too heavy scholastic, athletic and after school program. It is not uncommon to see students carrying 18 academic units, partaking in intramural and intercollegiate sports, studying two or three hours at night, working three to eight hours after school, eating irregular meals, and receiving only 5 or 6 hours of sleep. They then wonder why they feel tired, have no pep, become infected with "colds" so frequently and are losing weight.



The student who abuses himself, who does more than his body can endure, runs at least ten times the chance of becoming ill than the student who keeps his activities within the limits of his individual physical strength.

Fatigue is the precursor of more acute and chronic illness than any other symptom. Tuberculosis and influenza and other diseases are more apt to occur to these students. The strength and resistance of the body are like a rubber band; if stretched too far it will ultimately break. Each individual student must determine the limits of his physical endurance, as well as which he considers more important, his health or the many activities he is interested in. Obviously there is no choice, as without his health the other activities become impossible.

The student must also determine which is the more important to him, his academic or his afterschool program. If he must work after school to support himself in order to come to college, then he must take other extra precautions regarding his health, such as receiving eight hours of sleep, special attention to diet and reduction of social activities. If in spite of these extra precautions he feels a lack of "pep," has headaches, and becomes sleepy during class, then he must conclude that he is near the breaking point of his physical resistance and is a likely candidate for some serious disease. At this point he must decide either to stop working after school or to drop out of college.

By Francis Chrisman

RADIO commentators and news writers have had much to say in the last few days regarding the possibility of a Russo-Japanese war. Now at last Americans know how England felt before December 7, 1941.

Logic seems to indicate that Japan will not undertake an all out attack on Australia. The down-under continent is too far away from the sphere of complete domination. Australia is too close to the sphere of American domination. Naturally if the area of Nipponese control is extended an attack is likely.

JAVA QUESTION

But it is indeed difficult for Japan to extend herself farther east and south. For while she controls the waters of the China coast and the Singapore region, she does not yet dominate the vicinity of Java except on land.

Allied under-sea craft and sea-based planes may still attack on Java. They will continue to do so, because this necessitates the sending of constant convoys to that island—convoys which may be subjected to Allied planes and warships. All this tends to weaken the enemy. In the long run it is difficult to see how Java will pay dividends.

If Australia were out of the way Java could be used to full capacity. But that huge island is not over-run. Here is the only reason for expecting a sudden Japanese attack. On the other hand the odds favoring success are all on the side of the United Nations in such a move, and the rising sun must for the present bide its time.

WHERE TO TURN

For Australia is not becoming weaker each day; on the contrary. And it is to be a base of operations for Allied pushes westward. Each day the enemy waits makes the conquest of the island that much more difficult. And so, having bitten off the softer chunks of the region southeast of China, the aggressor will probably turn to the next easiest front.

There are two other fronts to turn to, and they would be more accessible than the island continent—India and Russia (Siberia).

India may be approached overland through Burma. Siberia is in the same position. Siberia is a good bet because it is close to the isles of the enemy and troops could be more easily supplied and supported. But, controlling the approaches to India, Japan may choose this country as her next victim.

SIBERIA-INDIA PINCER

In either case a pincer movement would be applied. In Siberia, Russia would find herself fighting on two fronts—therefore all United Nations help in that direction is of prime importance. In India, Germany may decide to try a march through Turkey (supplied by the Allies in anticipation of such a move) and Iran (a country controlled by the United Nations and larger than Turkey.

Because of these threats it is to the best interests of the Allied cause to hasten the Australia defenses and keep Hirohito busy in those waters and areas. Such action would detract from the strength of any additional Japanese and German pincer.

But because the ways of the enemy are strange and ofttimes tricky it is unwise to expect an attack on other places and to forget about any single spot. Were Australia to fall Japan would be able to go ahead toward Europe with complete freedom of convoys and supply ships down the China coast and through Java waters from the East Indies.

NO CERTAINTY

What may, at the moment, appear to be an abandonment of the Australia attempt might well be a feint to bring about a lessening of the expectation of attack. What may later appear to be a preparation to move in might prove to be only a sham for invasion somewhere else. The most judicious action is to arm all the allied points as strongly as possible. In this way they will not only be well defended but will be better bases from which to operate in an offensive action against the common enemy.

So while commentators and writers warn about an invasion here, an attack there, best results will be obtained by expecting an attack everywhere and taking the necessary precautions. This is why the arsenal of democracy plan is of such importance.

From all this one point is of greatest value. There should be no apathy arising from a false sense of safety. There is no point of safety in this war. All areas are liable to attack and possibly invasion. The only safety lies in a protecting army and navy and air forces strong enough to turn

Students Meet Advisers March 24; Get Deficiencies Of First Mid-term Period

Students will meet with their advisers to receive notice of their deficiencies in grades, on Tuesday, March 24, at 11 o'clock, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar. All 11 o'clock classes will be excused for meeting.

Any student who receives a grade of D or F in a course, will be given a "cinch" notice. No grades of C or better will be given to the students, Miss Learnard said.

Students attending the college for the first semester will have their "cinch" notices sent to their home.

The list of the advisers has not been changed except for the replacement of Wesley Museo by Yvonne Stoupe. Students who were assigned Museo as their adviser will report to Miss Stoupe instead. Miss Stoupe will continue in this capacity for the rest of the semester, Miss Leanard said.

Following is a list of advisers and their room numbers:

AWS Annnounces Picnic at Stern Grove

In an effort to inaugurate a new tradition and to instigate more spirit in college events, the Associated Women Student officers and members have formulated plans for a student body picnic, to be held some time in May, probably at Sigmund Stern Grove, according to Betty MacKillop, AWS president.

Under the tentative plans, the picnic will be held from 2 to 8 p.m. in Sigmund Stern Grove, on either Saturday or Sunday, the day to be decided by the students of the college. The food will be supplied from the funds of the AWS treasury.

Whether the picnic is to be held on a Saturday or Sunday must be decided by the students, because only their support will make the affair a success. Since many students work on Saturday, it means that Sunday might be the more favorable day; but some students might object to having a picnic on Sunday.

"I wish the students would let us know just what day is most convenient to have the picnic," said Miss MacKillop.

They may leave their opinions in Miss Dougherty's office, in letters to The Guardsman's Ram's Horn, to Eloise Winfield, AWS vice president, Ernestine Cervelli, AWS secretary, or to Miss MacKillop.

At present, it is planned to have students of the hotel division do the barbecuing in the pits at Sigmund Stern.

Admission is to be by student body card only. Only one card will be required per couple.

The affair is to be wholly informal and its success will determine whether or not the college will sponsor more events of this sort.

College Speed-Up

Summer Classes Possible For War Training

In an effort to attain maximum use of city educational facilities for the war effort, Superintendent Joseph P. Nourse laid a plan before the board of Education last Tuesday that would accelerate the teaching program at this college, as well as at two San Francisco High Schools.

The board is now considering two phases of the plan: establishment of summer vacation classes to speed up graduation and make students available for defense industries and armed forces and a plan to give credit of some sort for summer work in California fields and orchards, so that the threatened labor shortage may be alleviated. Recommended for use in possible summer sessions were this college and either Mission or Polytechnic High School. Courses would run for eight weeks.

Trained Men Needed

As was indicated by the visit of navy officers to the college this week, the government is interested in having students "stick by their books." Government spokesmen have often declared that "trained men" are needed. This was one of the statements of President A. J. Cloud upon his return from an educational convention in Washington D. C.

A survey is to be conducted to determine the number of students interested in attending summer classes. Meetings between the superintendent and members of the local and State Chambers of Commerce have been

Second Radio Series Broadcast March 27

The college radio work shop, under Marie Weller, faculty adviser, will present the second in a series of broadcasts entitled Americans All, Friday, March 27, over radio station KSFO.

This series, under the direct auspices of the Council for Unity Among the American People, has, in the words of David Selvin, Council representative, been designed to promote the interests of a stronger, more united America.

30 Groups Represented

"Our organization," Selvin emphasized, "represents more than 30 nationality groups among the peoples of San Francisco, and through its work the elimination of religious, racial, and nationality hatred is attempted."

Other broadcasts in this series will be presented by radio groups from the University of California, the University of San Francisco, San Francisco State College, Stanford University, and Samuel Gompers Trade School.

Greece, Armenia, Russia, Mexico, Denmark, and the Philippines, as sources for outstanding American citizens, will be emphasized through these productions.

California History Related

The program will relate some of Denmard's human contributions to California history through their broadcast of March 27. The story of California's Dane, Peter Lassen, of the first steamboat on San Francisco Bay, and other Danish contributions to California's history will be brought out by the college at this time.

"Casting is now underway," Miss Weller explained, "and regular rehearsals will commence as soon as possible." In addition to the original broadcast scheduled for March 27, at 7:30 p.m., there will be a re-broadcast Tuesday, March 30, 10:30 a.m., over radio station KSFO.

Cab

Charter Renewal Deadline Today; No Extensions!

Club charter renewals will be due today at 3 p.m. There will be no extension of time, Dorothy Hogan, chairman of the Club Advisory Board membership committee warned.

All organizations that fail to file during or up to the end of today's CAB meeting in Room 111, will face suspension, she continued. Suspension means the loss of all recognition by the Associated Students and loss of all publicity for the group concerned.

All Clubs Must Apply

Recognized, suspended, and new organizations must apply. New organizations must go through a probational period of six months before the charters become final. Organizations that have been suspended that wish to be reinstated must pass through a probational period of two semesters.

Last semester three new organizations, Peace Officers, Sigma Delta Epsilon, and Phi Lambda Epsilon, filed for charters. These organizations in order to receive their final charter, must make certain they file today.

Suspension Rules Enforced

Ed Lopez, president of the CAB, emphasized the fact that in the past the decision of the membership committee regarding the suspension of certain organizations was not taken seriously and negligent organizations were not penalized for failure to file. This semester he said the decision of the committee would be enforced and that the Associated Students, The Guardsman, and the Publicity Committee would be notified of all organizations that were to lose their privileges.

Suspension Desirable

Following today's meeting the membership committee will make a complete roster of all recognized and suspended clubs. This list will then be put before the Executive Council for approval.

Following Executive Council approval the list will be announced in the next issue of The Guardsman.

The CAB was organized to supervise the college clubs and organizations. The purpose of the club charters is to gain the recognition for groups of the campus by the college. It is to show these organizations that the college is backing and supporting their activities, and insures cooperation of the Associated Students and other groups of the CAB.

Highlight of today's meeting will be further discussion of Carnival Day, Lopez announced. Tentative plans will be presented to the club board for approval. Results of "Join A Club Week" will also be discussed.

East Bay Dance Sponsored By Social Comm. April 10

Third outside-of-college dance to be sponsored by the Social Committee in collaboration with class officers is being planned to take place on Friday, April 10, across the bay, according to Gloria Olivi, Social Committee chairman.

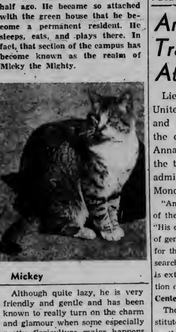
This affair will be held in honor of the low sophomore class of the college, she said.

"Because so many of the college students live on the other side of the bay," she said, "the social committee plans to hold at least one affair each semester across the bay."

Last semester the dance in honor of the high freshman class was held in the Scottish Rite Auditorium in Oakland.

According to plans already formulated, it will be another semi-formal dance. Music will be played by one of the well-known orchestras who usually play for college affairs. No corsages will be permitted.

Already this semester the Social Committee has sponsored three dances, the first of which was to honor the incoming freshman students, the second the Spring Informal, held last Friday night, and a get-acquainted mixer dance at the beginning of the semester.



The fete of future college mixer dances is indefinite, Miss Olivi revealed. As stated before, these affairs will be continued only if student enthusiasm warrants them. Students are urged to communicate their opinions to members of the social committee and any student body officer, she said.

College Cat Three Semester Veteran

By Ed Lopez

The Cat That Went to Heaven might have had quite a time for himself, but compared to Mickey, the cat that went to college he did not see anything. Yes, a cat is a member of our campus and a Floriculture major at that! He attends classes regularly, is a quiet student, and a member of the Feline Familiarus fraternity.

Mickey, as called by his friends (which includes every student enrolled in the Floriculture group), entered college almost a year and a half ago. He became so attached with the green house that he became a permanent resident. He sleeps, eats, and plays there. In fact, that section of the campus has become known as the realm of Micky the Mighty.

Mickey

Although quite lazy, he is very friendly and gentle and has been known to really turn on the charm and glamour when some especially pretty floriculture major happens to drop by the greenhouse. Micky is known to be very friendly towards everyone especially where food is concerned!

Not to be outdone by some of the college's steady twosomes, Mickey has a steady girl, too. A beautiful orange Persian by the name of Deborah. A very beautiful creature!

Deborah didn't run out on Mickey as everyone had supposed for that dapper Tom Cat on the other side of the hill. It is rumored, and there is good reason to believe Mickey is no longer a student . . . but a father.

Plea For System In Gym Classes

IN any class, other than physical education, enrollment in a certain course would mean that the enrollee would come to that class and do what he had signed to do. But not down at the men's gym. For unknown but apparently dubious reasons the staff of instructors has chosen to be different.

To note particular cases, two classes, meeting every Tuesday and Thursday, have not yet been allowed to use the gym for general activities. Students in these classes signed up for general activity; they get an extra two hours a week of body building.

Were the weather bad, causing the regularly scheduled body building classes to remain inside, there there would be small cause for complaint.

Although there was some complaining at first, students have accepted the extra two hours a week in good faith. They don't offer a single objection. But they also expect that when they sign up for an opportunity to play basketball or some other sport in a general activity class they will be allowed to do so.

This is an urgent appeal, in behalf of men students who are becoming disgusted with the operation of the physical education program, asking that the body building classes be rightfully separated from other gymnastic courses.

Navy Considers College As Locale For Government Students; Officers Tour Building In First Inspection

By Doug Johnson

That college facilities will soon be used to train naval men in the fields of radio, physics and various electrical work was affirmed last Tuesday by the visit of Lieutenant Commanders H. E. Stone, Executive Officer of the Naval Trianing School at Treasure Island, and F. B. Melendy, Officer in Charge of the Naval Education Program.

Amori Assumes Training Post At Annapolis

Lieut. Joseph A. Amori of the United States Naval Reserve, and employment executive at the college, left this week for Annapolis where he will assist in the training of navy pilots, the administration announced last Monday.

"Amori's job will be as instructor of the health program," it was said. "His duty will be to teach a program of general health corrective activities for the students. He will also do research work on blood pressures which is extremely important for the selection of men for work in the service."

Centers Established

The bureau of aeronautics has instituted a system of pilot training recently in which the University of Iowa, North Carolina University, Georgia Technological Institute, and Saint Mary's College have been designated as the centers for this training, according to the administration. This is a new system in navy pilot training.

Health Stressed

"Students, when accepted to the course are sent to these centers for a three month training course," it was disclosed. "These men are to be trained as officers and their individual programs will be worked out to suit their potentialities.

The health angle is to be stressed.

Five Instructors Named

Five men have been selected from the Twelfth Naval District to participate in the training of these men, college executives said, some of whom are: Commander Tom J. Hamilton, Howard Hamilton, and Lieut. Frank Wickhorst, former football coach at the University of California, all of whom are former Annapolis students.

"The idea of the program in which Amori will participate," it was further announced, "is to graduate 30,000 students per year from the pilot training course. Amori doesn't know whether he will be stationed permanently at Annapolis, but in the event that he is transferred, it will be to Saint Mary's College."

Amori will be replaced at the college placement office by Claude A. Silva. This statement was made after college officials had held a discussion on the subject Tuesday.

Part time placement and loci and found departments will be handled by the deans of men and women.

The two officers came to inquire about the facilities offered by the college in these fields and to find how many men could be trained here and the hours when class rooms were free.

Facilities Impressive

Both were favorably impressed by the facilities here and at present are engaged in working out a suitable schedule that will not clash with the present student program, President Cloud said.

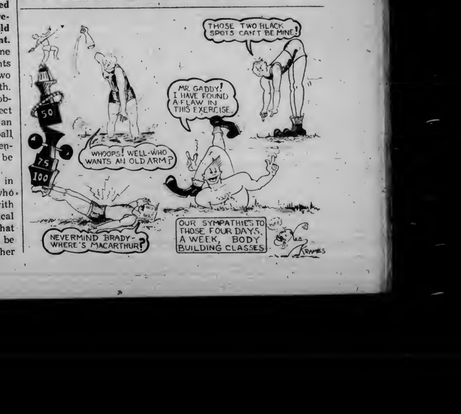
"In no way will students be shifted from their usual routine, nor will they be removed from one room to another," President Cloud stressed, "because a schedule will be worked out whereby our facilities can be used by the navy without interfering with student activities."

Need For Education Stressed

Lieutenant Commander Stone, formerly Dean of the University of California, looks favorably upon students getting all the education possible before entering the armed forces.

"The services, particularly the navy, need men with training. Students should include in their curriculum at least one course in line with national defense, such as first aid work, or vocational courses like typing and shorthand, shop and technical courses."

In accord with this viewpoint was Lieutenant Commanders Melendy's statement that men with previous training along these lines can become finished petty officers in the navy. Our purpose in training men along these lines is to make officers of them. If they have previous training such as this college offers, they would not have to undergo such an extensive training under navy auspices, thereby saving time and money for the government. Men given basic training in such courses as physics and other technical courses at college can become petty officers in a comparatively short time.



"I think that I can include Commander Melendy's sentiments with mine in saying that we have nothing but admiration for the college set up here and the cooperation offered by the college executives," Lieutenant Commander Stone said.

Old Members Make Up This Semester's Talent Bureau

The talent bureau this semester, is now composed only of students chosen last semester, Flossita Badger, faculty adviser for the group announced this week.

Many of these students have participated in programs both in the college and outside of college. A quartet, composed of Katherine Davies, Doris Crane, Pearce Davies, and Lennox Cinnamond accompanied on the piano by Gordon Brewer, will present a program of popular and classical music at a program sponsored by the U.S.O next Sunday night at 141 O'Farrell Street.

For Victory

Bonds Are Best

Rightfully termed today's best investment, the opportunity to invest in America through the purchase of Defense bonds and stamps probably provides citizens with the greatest value in the financial history of the United States. No bond issue was ever offered with greater promise of reward—and the greatest value does not accrue from monetary profits.

Although the money gained in from 10 to 12 years leaves nothing to be desired by the judicious investor, still that investor is protecting more than his financial future when he pays his $18.75 over the counter. The funds which he invests provide the defense of the right to invest Those funds are the bulwark protecting the American system of free enterprise, without which there would be no financial future for any investor in any field.

It should be clear that the government is giving people a chance to use their money in a profitable manner. If the citizenry does not awake to this fact, and to the fact that money must be had in one way or another, taxes may be supplied to gathe in the surplus.

It has never been the policy of the government of the United States to coerce its people. Such a policy is a contradiction of the system for which the war is being fought. There is ample evidence to indicate that there is no desire even now to resort to coercion. Every chance is being offered.

Axis rulers probably laugh at the almost apologetic efforts of the United States in offering up their Defense bonds and stamps. This would not be the method of America's enemies. How Americans can fail to respond to such a cause under such conditions is difficult to realize.

However, should it become necessary, the Secretary of the Treasury has indicated that the money will be gained through additional taxation. There is no return from taxes, let it be remembered. Once paid they are gone. They pay no interest—they are not redeemable in 60 days—they work only for the government.

How can the traditional hard-headed American investor let such an opportunity go by? He not only gains in money and security when he buys from the United States, but he turns aside the possibility of losing his money through added taxes.

It is no joke. The placards do not lie. If you don't get out on the battle line, even if you do, investing in your country's future could hardly be an injudicious act. Defense bonds provide the better protection and fighting strength for the brother, son, or husband who is risking more than money. In the long run these dollars help bring the war to an earlier termination. They save lives as well as protect them.

No appeal should be necessary. For the men who don't have to die, for the cities that don't have to be bombed, for the hardships that are unnecessary and the suffering that is useless—for the men, the cities, the hardships, the suffering—buy Defense bonds and stamps.

Shots At ...RAMdom

TWENTY-FOUR YEARS AGO

she would have been called a "Gold Star Mother." She's small and she's old but straight as a ramrod and there's a warm light of pride in her eyes when she speaks of her sons.

"There's Tony," she smiled, "he's been in the R. A. F. for a year now. I got a letter from him about a month ago. He's doing fine."

"My other boy? That was Joe. He was at Pearl Harbor. He was a good boy. I'm proud of him."

"Me? Oh, I get along pretty well. It was better when my husband could fish. But the Government's going to move us pretty soon. Me an' Joe, my husband, never got our papers. We're enemy aliens. I don't understand it very good."

ON THE

8:15 bus to the college we had a dream today. We'd just pulled a young lady from her seat and sat down in it and had immediately gone to sleep. We dreamed we were in a huge, oak paneled office. We were magnificent in stature because we towered over the desk and the flustered little man behind it looked up at us beseechingly. We spoke,

"You're Mr. Municipal, who runs the Municipal bus lines, aren't you?"

"Yes."

We got right to the point.

"How come the buses are so crowded in the morning?"

He thought a while, then fidgeted miserably, answered,

"Possibly because there's so many students on them at that time."

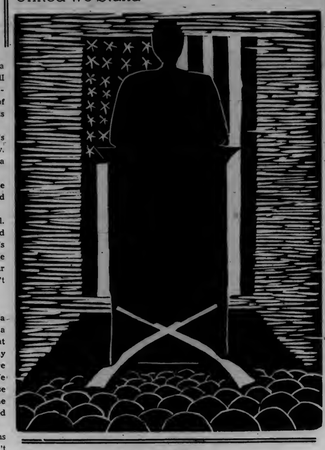
"Very well" thought out," we commended, "but why not alleviate the situation by running two buses one behind the other that would reach the college at 8:15, and another two that would reach the college at nine a.m.?"

For a moment he looked nonplussed. He made several scratches on a piece of paper, opened a few drawers, pressed some buttons Then the inspiration hit him. He beamed.

"It's because of priorities. We'd use extra gas, tires, and everything."

But we were relentless.

"Then you think it's easier to overload one bus with 70, than one overloaded bus uses less gas, has less motor strain, is easier on tires than two sets of two buses?



"Well . . ."

"You know, there's sometimes as many as 75 passengers in your early buses. The driver can only see out of half of his windshield." He's forced to sneak around curves and pray there's no one coming the other way. Do you think running a dangerously crowded bus with poor visibility, is a long term policy than giving two less crowded busses?" DO YOU?

The bubble dissolved and we were at the college. The motorman started peering us lucky guys off the top layer and we all went to classes looking like pretzels.

Equipment Lacking In Men's Gym; Plea For Action in Ex. Council

● No Soap!
Editor, The Guardsman:

With all the great numbers of loyal Americans I am in acute sympathy with the worthy conservation movement. However, I do believe all things may be carried to extremes. As Benjamin Franklin once wisely said "The most exquisite folly is woven of wisdom spun too fine."

Our athletic program has been doubled that the young man of this college might achieve a greater physical fitness This two-fold increase of activities must no doubt cost the city a large sum in towels, water, and equipment. Why do they choose to conserve on soap? Surely this product can not be so expensive as to warrant its exclusion. The value of soap as a major factor towards a healthful mode of life is almost universal in its acceptance. Therefore I extend my plea to the apparent conceiving party responsible.

I am sure this constitutes no real saving. So why don't you give us some soap?

● Gym Rallies?
Editor, The Guardsman:

Although the college rallies that have been held on the front steps of the college are very good for people think, I would like to suggest that, in the future, why not have our rallies held in the men's gymnasium?

Now that we have installed "some long-awaited bleachers," it would give students a much better approach to the program that is being put on. As it is now, the frequent interruptions of the Municipal bus is more than enough to distract anything that is going on at the moment.

● Quorum Needed
Editor, The Guardsman:

In recent meetings of the Executive Council there has not been a quorum present for three weeks. True there have been members who attend regularly but the others alternate in absence.

Why does this situation exist? People who have been elected to an office at the college should make it their duty to attend the meetings.

Faculty Features . . . Hotel Division Writer, Journalist Instructor

By Ivanna Hayworth

MRS. Mozelle Milliken, instructor in hotel and restaurant division, is now concentrating on the courses over which she has charge in the hotel and restaurant curricula.

Such courses consist of the teaching of hotel advertising and publicity, and the history of western hotels.

Details of arrangement for the field trip which hotel students make each spring semester, a state-wide tour of various hotels and resorts, is under the supervision of Mrs. Milliken, working with Harry Troupe, secretary of the California Hotel Association.

In addition to this she has charge of the publications of the hotel division annual bulletin and any other publication which the students put out.

Mrs. Milliken is assistant to Mrs. Hilda Watson, chairman of the division, in certain contacts for promoting advertising for the division itself. Aside from this she does certain general publicity work for the college.

Mrs. Milliken attended grade and high schools in Little Rock, Arkansas, then went on a scholarship to Goucher College in Baltimore, Maryland, where she, majored in journalism, English and history. After completing her academic training at this college, she later came to the University of Washington, in Seattle.

In the interim, however, she taught school in Portland, Oregon, and worked for various newspapers along with this. The latter work consisted of the writing of feature stories for Sunday magazine sections. In those days, she explained, newspapers carried a lot of original material instead of the syndicated matter as is the policy of most papers of today.

While at the University of Washington, she was a member of the Pi Beta Phi.

In talking about her collegiate activities at that time, Mrs. Milliken said,

"I didn't complete my academic training there because I had too many other things to do."

She left the university to become society and women's editor of a morning paper, the Post-Intelligencer, in Seattle, which she added reminiscently, is usually known as the seat of P-I.

At this point in the interview, she broke in with "I'll have to take the whole evening to tell my life chronologically, otherwise, I won't remember them."

About this time, she was married and moved to Washington, D. C., where she lived for several years following which she lived in Charleston, West Virginia for a time.

She then moved back out to the West Coast to Los Angeles and later on to San Francisco, where she has remained until the present time.

During all this time she contributed both fiction and non-fiction material to various magazines.

Some years ago she went into the publicity field specializing in hotel publicity and advertising. She stayed in this hotel publicity for some five years here in the city.

In addition to her main job of handling the publicity and advertising for the Hotel Whitcomb and William Taylor Hotels, a number of resort hotels here on the West Coast were her clients.

One of her longest publicity accounts was that of the Pamalpais Mountain Play for which she directed the publicity for seventeen years.

In late years, her only journalistic contributions are press publicity writing and ghost writing, particularly for trade magazines.

Mrs. Milliken joined the hotel and restaurant faculty in its second year at the college.

Since this time she has concentrated her efforts on her college activities here because it takes up all her time.

"All of my family are grown now," she said, "so now I have more time to spend in my home and garden when my work here at the college is finished.

This may seem to be an intermission after all the years which she has spent working at more than one job at a time. Of course all her work here can be classed under almost one heading, so maybe this is a "breather," but it seems to hold true that, "One only enjoys what he has to work the most for."

EASTER is only a few weeks away, with Easter comes spring, with spring comes new fashions and so on and so forth.

Aren't the spring prints that have already come out wonderful? The color combinations already seem too unprecedented, green and red, purple and yellow, beige and blue—every color imaginable. Bright colors are "in" as seen by the above color combinations.

SPLASH PRINTS PREDOMINATE

Large patterns in prints seem predominant for the minute, and then hosts of small prints appear on the scene, creating a mass of confusion. Therefore the only prediction we will make is that prints, loud, small, splashy and conservative will definitely be worn.

Dark colored sweaters have been put away in moth balls for a month or two, and soft, fleecy pastel sweaters are reappearing. Rough, knit and fringed sweaters are also new.

NOW FELT

Have you ever heard of felt clothes? Several seasons ago suede outfits were introduced by a Californian and created quite a stir. Coats, dresses, everything was made of suede, but now felt has taken its place. Skirts, jackets . . . all made of felt. One introductory model consisted of a beige flared skirt, and brown rough knit sweater.

Bags, hats and belts can be found to match the skirt, and a becoming ensemble arranged.

REPEATERS

Back to spring! Flowered chintz skirts, very full, and very flowered are back again this season. They were popular on the campus last season, and if history repeats itself will be seen lots this year. Cottons are back with low torso lines and tight bodices.

Color again creeps in this time in shoes. Shoe store windows used to be full of conservative black, brown, white, but of late they have certainly changed (for the better) and contain red, blue, green, purple, and yellow shoes made in every style imaginable. Open toes and closed—ditto to heels, platform soles studded with gold nail heads, tied and pumps.

NAN SEES . . .

Narrow red suede belts studded with nailheads to match shoes, or to dramatize a dark dress . . . while frilly collars adding glamour to the same dark dress . . . sherkin suits (Jerkins cousin) in soft, misty pastels, three quarter length sleeves, and pleated shirts . . . shirts, like the men's "P" shirts, in red, white, blue, and brown stripes. Shirley Wood was wearing one the other day in brown. Very striking, to say the least.

With cycling becoming such a national pastime, in spite of rubber curtailment, divided skirts, slacks and short outfits are especially manufactured to fill in for such needs. Blue denim seems to be ever so popular this season, as well as traditional flannel.

Cuthbertson Spectator . . . To Be Or Not To Be . . . no question about it

THE untimely death of Carol Lombard was a shock to the theatre world and a great loss to the American people, but Miss Lombard made her final curtain with all of the glory and satisfaction that she could have hoped for.

To Be Or Not To Be, starring Carol Lombard and Jack Benny in the title roles, will leave fond and lasting memories of the actress in the hearts of the American public long after the film becomes extinct.

Nazi occupied Warsaw is the setting for the film, and Jack Benny and Lombard, husband and wife, are part of a stage troupe put out of business by the German entrance. Their involvement in the plot of a German movement to crush certain patriotic families, their subsequent movements, and their final triumph over the invading foe is part of a drama that has plenty of punch.

Lombard was Lombard. She was the same girl we've seen so many times, and she fits into her parts with such professional ease. Gay, humorous, dramatic, scene stealing Lombard walks off with a good deal of the acting honors, and her contributions to this film will not be forgotten.

BENNY SHOWS TALENT

Jack Benny seemed to be a new person. His humor was revitalized, for there was none of the usual Sunday evening jokes to leave you standing in awe each time any were made. Benny, the Polish actor, was not the Benny of the Jello fame or the Benny who feuds with a person called Fred Allen. His role demanded a good deal of talent, and his battle of wits with the Gestapo proved tops.

Robert Stack, the boy who kissed Deanna Durbin for the first time, is gradually getting his star rating. As the young man who becomes infatuated with Lombard in the film, he turns in a noteworthy characterization. His walking out on Benny, who always happens to be just about ready to begin his soliloquy in Macbeth, is particularly amusing.

HUMOR AND SUSPENSE

Of course, the old stand-bys, Felix Bressart, Lionel Atwill, and others, turn in a magnificent job as the supporting cast. Their part in building up the humor and suspense is invigorating.

To Be Or Not To Be, directed by Ernest Lubitsch, presents a brand of humor that will satisfy the average movie-goer. It leaves the beaten path of baseless and overdone humor, and gives forth with a brand of unmatched facetiousness. Theatre attendance seems to have proven the popularity and the reverence due the film.

It would be a difficult job to find a fitting memorial to the late Carol Lombard but for the lovers of the silver screen her role in TO BE OR NOT TO BE will weather the years in their hearts.

Robinson

Cabbages & Kings

IT happened in another column of this paper last week.

Into the office came a very neat, folded, and plainly typed little message stating that the writer wished that the social organizations of the college would conduct their introduction ceremonies in a more subdued manner.

The letter wasn't signed with a name, who would expect it to be? After all, a person who dared to sign such an epistle would be inviting a large black mark on his name for future date books.

This department rises out of its cocoon to attempt to defend such a declaration. It is unfair and entirely unneeded!

We belong to such a group and are darned proud of it. We have had many enjoyment and have met more people since joining, and being in the process of joining, that we have in the time spent here in college.

Of the accusation that these organizations should carry on their initiations in private, we ask why!

Does the fun that is had by prospective members grate on the persons' mind. Does he, she, or "it," (sex not being known) resent the good time that is had? Or has he, she, or "it" become suddenly possessed with the idea that the poor members should be spared!

If the latter be the case, ask any pledge how he regarded his pledge session. The answer will probably be a surprise.

At any rate, if the disillusioned person who wrote the letter, for such "it" must be, ever gets a bid to join such an organization "it will no doubt change "its" mind, if "it" has one.

CONFIDENTIAL

Although the weather department has refused to confirm or deny the following in the hopes that it will scoop the country.

Spring is almost here!

Why? Well, for one thing, the young men's fancies are accelerating from a turn to a spin.

The coating of students on the front lawn is gradually getting deeper.

The population of the classes is decreasing and the space per capita at the beach is doing likewise.

Yes, all of this leads one to believe that Spring is really coming.

CLASSES AND CHAIRS

It seems that the entire faculty is against students. It is apparent in almost every room of the college that they just don't give a darn for comfort.

Look at the seats they put students into.

Posture was ruined by the chairs of grammar school and now they are trying to improve it by installing chairs in which one can't be comfortable unless he sits . . . where he is supposed to.

The chairs are no doubt very nice, as well as being very pretty, but have you ever tried to sleep in them?

They are not conducive to better slumber.

To top this off, the instructors speak in such loud tones that sleep is almost impossible even without the chairs. Oh well, anything must be endured for an education.

IDLE THOUGHTS

How will the War Production Board's restriction on chlorine affect the blondes of the college?

Well, the Japs took Singapore, but all but themselves know that they are going to Sing—apore—this is over. (OOOOOOOOOH.)

Darn little news from Italy these days . . . whatever happened to Mussolini?

Petch New Track Find; Frat Has New Formation

A STAR IS BORN

It seems that the college track team will finally boast a sprinter worth writing about. The gent we're referring to is none other than a heretofore unknown who answers to the name of Dick Petch.

Petch hails from Oakland High School, and Coach Russ Sweet describes him as one "who runs like an old hen."

Whether he runs like an old hen or not, we're right glad to see him in a Ram uniform. And what other sprinter in the last few years here at the college has ever run as fast as this new discovery?

For all we care, Petch could run like an old broken down plow horse, and, providing he continued his fine performances, he'd still look good to us.

His feat took place at the Balboa High School track during the running of the Intramural meet. Petch covered the 100 yard dash in 9.9 seconds, and covered the 220 yards in 23.5 seconds.

No, he couldn't give Harold Davis anything to worry about, but there are many sprinters in the junior college loop throughout California that will have to look at the back of Petch's head from start to finish.

Sam Mendelson finished second to Petch in the 100, and was clocked in the good time of 10.1 seconds. This time also copes with the best that a Ram athlete has accomplished in the last few forgoing seasons.

It's still early in the season and Petch should improve his time before the more important meets roll around. Who knows that by the time the Junior College Conference Track and Field Meet rolls around, the "old hen" will be running the distance in about 9.7 seconds? It's very possible.

FISTS FLY AT SALINAS

The Ram boxing team leaves at 12 o'clock today for its first conference meet of the new season. Opposition will come from the Salinas Junior College, that is, if there is to be any opposition at all.

The boxing team is at full strength for the first time this semester, and making the trip will be quite a few Associated Men Students Champions.

The squad will be led by co-captains Al "Duke" Drake and Dave Hunicke. Drake is the heavyweight champion, while Hunicke holds the 155 pound championship, both having won their titles for three successive semesters.

Ira Cartney, light-heivyweight champion; Bob Hemstead, 147 pound title holder; and Seisuke Akamini, holder of the 118 pound title, will be the others who expect to make a clean sweep of the Panthers.

FIRST BLEACHERS; NOW RING

Well, it seems like the college is really going full speed ahead. A few weeks ago the shocking news was let out that the long awaited bleachers had arrived.

And now . . . out of nowhere and all of a sudden . . . news comes that a boxing ring has been purchased and is to be used for the future AMS Boxing Shows.

While the college is in the mood for buying such necessities, can anyone think of something else that we might need?

FOOTBALL IS HERE

No, it isn't spring practice as yet, but football within the college will actually take place this coming Sunday. The place: Beach Chalet . . . The time: 1 o'clock . . . The teams: Beta Phi Beta Fraternity and Tri Epsilon Fraternity.

The game will be the first of the fraternity contests. Basketball, softball, and more football games are expected to take place in the near future.

Starting in the Beta Phi-Beta lineup are two of Coach Lee Eisan's varsity men. Duke Drake will be at the fullback position, while Jim McGowan will play his usual end.

Along with Drake and McGowan will be John Schareig, Dave Hunicke, Jack Skinner, and others who still are undecided upon. They will employ the "BPB" formation, said to be just as dangerous as the mighty "T" formation.

Of course, its results will have to wait for two days, but the Triple Es will tell you that they expect to stop anything that comes their way.

Students Requested To Sign Up For Tennis Tournament; Plaque Awarded To Winner

Accompanying the arrival of spring on the campus is the season of the traditional Tennis Tournament, an annual event at this college. Because it is necessary to formulate further plans, Bertha Keller, head of Women's Athletics, urges all interested to sign-up immediately.

Should Sign Entry

Couples desiring to compete in the contest may fill in the sign-up blank on this page and deliver to Laurine Bergin or Tom Wilson, varsity tennis coaches. To enable the advisers to choose the date of the contest, contestants are required to state the best time the individuals can arrange their matches.

"Tennis is the most popular sport on San Francisco," Miss Keller acknowledged, "and judging from the interest of the sport here in college, we anticipate a good representation for the tournament." The tournament will not be held if eight or more couples fail to register.

Guardsman First Sponsor

Interested in stimulating tennis in the form of mixed doubles. The Guardsman was the first to sponsor the affair by presenting the winning couple with the tennis plaque. Since then the presentation of the plaque has become a campus tradition.

Each year the WAA pays for engraving on the plaque, and sponsors the event with the aid of Miss Keller. As in past years, tennis balls and women's tennis raquets will be also supplied.

The date for the tournament remains undecided but it was definitely disclosed by Miss Keller that the affair will be completed by May.

Track

Squad Meets Cal Freshmen Tomorrow

With the college's first conference track meet only a week and a half away, and with the college track men competing in the Junior College All-Star meet against the California Frosh at Berkeley tomorrow morning, Coach Russ Sweet is having a tough time getting his charges in shape, due to the deluges received from Jupiter Pluvius those past few weeks.

Last Monday, March 16, the squad held it's second competitive track meet since the beginning of the semester, and some good times as well as good distances were made.

Duryea Wins

Competing for the first time this season, Jim Duryea won his favorite event, the javelin toss, by heaving the wooden spear 140 feet, six inches, to best his rival, Al Drake, but in the shot put, Duryea was nosed out by Irving Bowker, who heaved the lead ball 37 feet, seven inches, while Duryea could throw the chunk of lead 34 feet, 10 inches

In the discus, Ed Sanford tossed the rubber platter a distance of 114 feet, 11 inches, with Al Drake second at 109 feet, six inches.

Due to the time consumed to run off all the other events, no high or low hurdles were run, as well as no broad jump.

Thomsen Wins

In the opening event, the mile, Walter Thomsen won in the time of 5.03.2 with Bob Howard, a close second, but in the half mile, Howard shoved his chest over the finish line in 2.20.2, with Norman Smith galloping in to second place.

In the 440, Jim King stopped the watches at 55.3 with Joe Carlevaro battling him all the way, but King had too much kick in the final lap, and Carlevaro had to be content with second place.

Next on the program came the much-awaited event, the 100 yard dash, with the college's standout sprint man, Dick Petch, living up to expectations, by stopping the watches at 9.9. Last week, you will remember, Petch could do little better than 10.2.

Dick also showed improvement, by breaking the tape at 23.5. In this event last week, Petch ran it in 24.5.

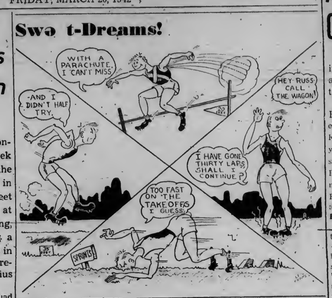
Over Yards Eleven Feet

Holding the pole vault for the first time this season, Bob Oyen climbed to 11 feet, with Al Cunningham in second place.

In the high jump, Burt Goebel outjumped Bill Jennings to take the event at five feet nine inches.

It was mostly due to the wetness of the track that kept many of the track men from stepping up their pace, and making any sort of times

Because of the rule that no block men could enter in last Tuesday's meet, Jim Skinner, outstanding miler for the college, and present intramural record holder, Gene Suacci, one of Sweet's main sprint men, and Don Hewitt, another distance runner, were not able to run.



Thirty-two Compose Roster

So far, Russ Sweet's track team consists of 32 men out for different sprints, field events and distance running. The men now out practicing almost every day at the football field, or at the Balboa High School track are Bill Adent, Allen Bowker, Joe Carlevaro, Al Cunningham, Sherwood Davis, Al Drake, Jim Duryea, Burt Goebel, Don Hewitt, Bob Howard, Bill Jennings, Deryl Kesselring, Jim King, Gus Lazoiraiks, Norman Levy, Sam Henderson, Hiro Okamura, Saburo Okamura, Bob Oyen, Doug Pearson, Dick Petch, Ralph Potter, John Prongos, Ed Sanford, Jim Skinner, Norm Smith, Charles Snook, Gene Suacci, Walter Thomsen, Clifford Wakefield, Jack Wilson and George Vamaguchi.

Jack Gaddy Leaves College For Annapolis Training

As was forecast in The Guardsman last Friday, Jack Gaddy, college baseball mentor and physical education instructor, left Wednesday for the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland. He will receive training there to fit him for physical education work in the navy in line with the war program.

Club Presents Colorful World Tour At Winterland, Saturday, March 28

Presenting a colorful world tour on ice, the college Ice Skating Club will present its semi-annual ice pageant at Winterland on March 28, entitled Round the World On Ice, Ingo Lubahn, president of the club, said recently.

With a bevy of beauties colorfully clad in their silk and satins, the club will present at the pageant stars of state and national fame who have won various titles or recognition in special events on ice. Leading the list of participants will be the Pacific Coast junior pair champions, Peggy Egan and Arnie Hallstrom.

Quartet Featured

As an added attraction several duet members, who performed recently at the Silver Skates, will do some duets. Leading the list from this quarter will be St. Moritz's Quartet, which consists of the three Hoyt's, Fletcher, William, and Peggy and Barbara DeJulio. This well-known quartet, who perform at the Berkeley rink during the University of California ice hockey games, display to the crowds precision in timing and coordination on the ice.

Other performers who will participate are Marcus Nelson, runner-up of the Northern California novices, and Marilyn Grace, State women's junior champion. These stars will be supplemented in cast by present members of the club, graduates, and former members who are now in college, Miss Lubahn added.

Peggy Egan, in the foreground, and Inge Lubahn are shown while practicing for the college's semi-annual ice pageant to be presented at Winterland Ice Rink, Saturday, March 28. Miss Egan, along with Arnie Hillstrom, is the Pacific Coast Junior Pair Champion, and former State Novice Champion. Miss Lubahn is the president of the Ice Skating Club.

Rehearsals Started

The program for the pageant is well underway in rehearsals at Winterland, Miss Lubahn announced, and the numbers that will be featured are mostly duets and large group formations centered around a particular theme or country.

The theme of the pageant, Around the World On Ice, will be followed out by colorful costumes of different nations and in the names of the separate group numbers. The performers will be clad in costumes of Dutch, Swedish, Norwegian, and many of the other countries of the world.

A complete program, listing the names of the different acts and who will perform in them, will be in The Guardsman next week so that the members of the college will be able to depict who is on the ice at a particular time.

Wizard Gaddy Fills Vacancies

By Charles G. Davis

The coming of spring not only brings the swallows back to Capistrano, but it also brings new happiness into the heretofore dismayed life of Silent Jack Gaddy.

For quite some time the Ram baseball wizard has been searching the country side looking for three able-bodied men to patrol his unoccupied outfield.

Yesterday his hunt was over.

Gaddy was like the man who scorned the earth looking for gold only to find none until it dawned on him to dig in his own backyard.

Frank Soda, Homer Winters and Ivan Sawdey were the three gems Gaddy was seeking. These men possess the necessary qualifications for a good outfield; mainly defensive ability, strong arms, and most important they have hitting power. Soda, Winters and Sawdey will play left, center and right fields respectively.

With the aforementioned in the starting lineup, Silent Jack has a complete yearling squad with the exception of harler Andy Adams. Isais and Winters saw service with Tom Wilson's eagers. Sawdey, perhaps the most experienced baseballer of the trio, was a standout in the East Oakland semi-pro league.

The infield remains unchanged. Glen Claude at first, Lawrence Olleig at second, Rinke Darrell at short and Joe Buckley at third compose a formidable inner defense.

Ted Poage, the team's leading swatsman, has more than clinched his catcher's berth.

Practicing every day at Ocean View ball park, the Ram nine should be ready for their opener against Marin Junior College, April 14.

College Tennis Squad Meets Stockton March 20

With the Stockton Junior College meet scheduled for March 20, the Ram tennis team, under the capable guidance of Coach Tom Wilson is practicing regularly.

Led by the veteran Joe Greely, the squad is rapidly rounding into shape for the coming season, and promises to be quite a bit of competition for the conference title.

Rungs of the tennis ladder are filled with names of players gunning for positions on the singles and doubles teams. Positions on the ladder were chosen at random but the players go up or down the ladder according to ability.

"Either a practice or conference match has been set with Modesto," Coach Wilson announced.

Intramural

Beta Phi Beta Frat Wins Third Annual Track Meet; Basketball Competition Begins On Monday

Minus that ever present jinx of rain, the college's third annual intramural track meet got under way with a flying start this week as the Beta Phi Beta harriers scored 15 points and a first place on the Balboa High School cinder lanes.

Following on the heels of the Beta Phi Beta winners was the Forestry Club with 11 second place points, mainly through the effort of Wally Thomsen and Jim King, winners in the mile and 440 yard dash respectively. The complete scoring of teams is as follows: Beta Phi Beta; 15 Forestry Club, 11; Newman Club, 8; Sigma Delta Pi, 6; Tri Epsilon, 5; Block Society, 5 and unattached athletes tallied 37 points.

Hurdles Not Held

The low and high hurdle events and the broad jump events were not held and had they been held, they might have had some effect on the final scoring of teams.

Wally Thomsen captured the opening event on the program, the mile run, galloping the distance in the time of 5.03.2. Bob Howard romped home behind Thomsen for the runner-up position.

Jim King and Joe Carlevaro ran one-two in the quarter mile dash, King being clocked in 55.3. The best performance of the day came on Dick Petch's 9.9 century sprint. Petch, the speedy blonde comet from Oakland High School, did a repeat in the 220 yard dash being stopped in 23.5 Sammy Mendelsohn followed Petch to the tape in both races.

Howard Wins

In one of the slowest races of the early seasoning campaign, Bob Howard and Norman Smith ran one-two in the half mile run, Howard being timed at 2:20.2. This is no indication of Howard's best times, for Howard had previously captured a second in the mile four lap grind.

Bob Oyen sailed over the bar at 11 feet to win the pole vault event quite handily. Al Cunningham captured second place behind the soaring Oyen who has vaulted 13 feet already.

Irv Bowker tossed the 16 pound iron ball 37 feet, 7 inches, more than enough to keep Jim Duryea from winning the event. In contrast to his shot putting efforts, Duryea sent the javelin out 140 feet, 6 inches besting Al "Duke" Drake who hung on to the runner-up spot.

Sanford Wins Discus

Eddie Sanford won the discus throw with a heave of 114 feet, 11 inches as Drake captured his second runner-up spot of the afternoon Charlie Goebel leaped over the high jump bar at 5 feet, 9 inches to emerge victorious. Bill Jennings took second behind the victorious Goebel.

All entries for the basketball tournament which commences Monday, March 23, should be handed in today before 1 p.m. Entries should be given Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser, or to student managers Ted Green or William Gereeke. At present, there are ten teams entered in the tournament, and expectations are hat at least 20 teams will be entered before the deadline.

In case there are more than 20 eams entered in the tournament, two leagues may have to be formed Brady said. Because of the scheduling of several physical education classes during the early afternoon hours, the basketball schedule of play will be revamped

One Played Monday

Only one game will be played on Monday and Wednesday, while two contests will be held on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. The single-billed fracas will start at 4 p.m., while the doubleheader will commence at 3 and 4 p.m.

The first horse shoe tournament in the sports history of the college will get under way Monday, March 23. Twenty-seven men have already signed up for the tournament, and more are expected to enter as the days pass. The pits for the horse shoe pitching affair will be located northwest of the men's gymnasium.

With the first full evening of intramural sports scheduled to make its debut somtime in the near future, Brady announced that finals in the cage, volleyball, ping pong and, badminton tourney will be held at that evening

Contrary to the statement published in the last issue of The Guardsman, it might be well to point out that the four top place men of the recent rifle tournament were members of the Rifle Club, and not the rifle team as was previously acknowledged.

Swim Scheduled May 1

College natators will have their chance to exploit their efforts at the college's intramural swimming tournament which will be held May 1, at the Jefferson High School tank. This means that anyone planning to enter the swimming "colossal" should commence training immediately.

Pugilists

Men's Gym Scene Of Semi-Annual Fights

Aspiring pugilists will finally have their night when the day of the scheduled Associated Men Student's Boxing Carnival is held, according to Jim Jensen, college boxing instructor.

The site for the forthcoming ring carnival has been set at the men's gymnasium, although there were some intentions of obtaining the rights to Coliseum Bowl, Market and Eleventh Streets. This will mark the first appearance of college boxers and wrestlers at the local gymnasium.

Should Train Immediately

Men who are contemplating on entering the boxing carnival are urged to start immediate training in preparation for the ring finale. This appeal is issued by Jensen who will conduct elimination bouts in the near future in order that the best men may compete.

Although he was given an invitation to participate at the first annual University of San Francisco Invitational Boxing Carnival, college lightweight, Bob Hempstead, did not compete, the result of a cold contracted the previous evening.

Those who have given their affirmative consent to competing in the AMS boxing show include Seisuke Akamini, Dave Hunicke, Ira Cartney, Walt Seaborn, and "Duke" Drake. These men competed in last year's show, and if that should prove as a sample of what to expect, the gymnasium bleachers should be packed to the top row.

Lunny-Valentino Will Referee

Referee for the April "shindig" will be Ray Lunny and Pat Valentino, while sports scribes from the local newspapers will act as honorary judges and timekeepers.

Men who have no previous boxing experience should contact Jensen in the men's gymnasium office immediately.

WAA Softball Squad Faces Santa Rosa Team Tomorrow

Tomorrow, the softball fans of the Women's Athletic Association will compete with members of Santa Rosa Junior College from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Representing the college will be the members of the newly-elected Softball Club.

"All women of the college who enjoy competitive sports and games owe it to themselves and to the college to join one of the individual clubs," invites Janice Berch, WAA president.

The managers of the respective clubs also extend their invitation over the campus. These various clubs and managers are: Audrey Turner, badminton; Alveinie Shannin, archery; Jean Vernon, bowling; Carol Graves, basketball; and Ingeborg Lubahn, ice skating.

At the end of the semester a WAA emblem is presented to those participating in WAA sports and excellent scholarship. In college colors, the award is triangular in shape and suitable for sweater demonstration. At the completion on each after-class sport, small designs are furnished. These small designs are characteristic of the organization they represent and are capable of attachment to the large emblem.

Bank

Speed Up Defense Stamp Sales Says Zarchin; Student Buying Not Good

With a vast quantity of United States defense stamps already obtained by the college bank, students are urged to accelerate the present rate of purchasing, Michael Zarchin, college economics instructor, disclosed recently.

"In comparison to other schools and colleges, the present rate in the sale of defense stamps has been extremely negligible," Zarchin said, "the sale of stamps in this college has not as yet reached a level which might be caled substantial."

Stamps in the denomination of 10 and 25 cents are now being sold at the college bank. It is hoped that students will realize the service that they may perform for their country, Zarchin said.

More Car Tickets Sold

The average, during this semester, of Municipal and Market Street Railway car tickets sales, has been exceptionally high. Last week, more than 400 car tickets were sold at the bank. According to college bank officials, this is a splendid average of sales considering the fact that the semester's registration has fallen off to 2,117 students.

Student Card Debts

With the semester rapidly approaching the halfway mark, Zarchin pointed out the fact that students who have accepted IOUs on the purchase of a student body card have been extremely slow in repaying their debt. Students who still owe money on their student body card should, if possible, make immediate payment to the college bank, Room 180.

Operated by the college comptroller, Ward Nichols, and his staff, the college bank is open from 10 to 1 o'clock daily. Collections of any sort, including proceeds from athletic events and Associated Student dues, are centralized in this office.

Summer Resort Jobs Offered to Students

Possibility of sending a number of college students to summer resorts where they will secure such jobs as bus boys, life savers, kitchen boys, and others, enlarged this week according to Joseph A. Amori, college employment director.

"I recently received a letter from H. K. Ouimet, one of the personnel mangers in one of California's foremost summer and winter resorts," Amori disclosed. "In it he said that because the ages of the University of California students make them eligible for the draft, he would have to search elsewhere for his summer help."

College Offers Experience

After investigating the ages of students of the college and also the course in hotel management which the college offers, according to Amori, Ouimet became more interested because it had more students to offer who were below the draft age and also more experienced than the University had.

"In a letter which I previously wrote to Ouimet, I suggested that applications for summer work at his and other summer resorts be sent to me so that I in turn could distribute them among the students here who would like to work in a summer resort this year," Amori said.

Applications Available

"He included with his letter a number of application blanks and said that after the applications have been filled out and sent to him that he would notify each student selected of the time sent for his interview."

Amori said that there are plenty of jobs available but that there are plenty of students to take them also. He urged students to investigate the matter of summer employment at his office as soon as possible.

Red Cross Knitters Turn In Finished Handiwork

To date, 58 articles, knitted and sewed by women students for the Red Cross, have been turned into Claire Cuneo, Home Economics adviser.

Included in the completed work are 22 sweaters, 5 scarves, 11 beanies, 9 pieces for the afghan, and 11 dresses.

Miss Cuneo has requested that all women who have contributed knitting or sewing make one plain knit square for the afghan. Also, Miss Cuneo is asking for a group of women who will sew on dresses for young evacuee girls.

Boxing Bouts Locale Changed

Location of the Associated Men Student's boxing matches, to be held Wednesday, April 1, has been changed from the Coliseum Bowl to the men's gymnasium of the college, Jim Duryea, AMS president, announced last Monday.

"Reason for the change in the location," Duryea said, "from the Coliseum Bowl to the college was because a boxing ring will be installed in the gym before the month is out."

Ring Granted By Board

A request for the ring had been made to the Board of Education by the physical education department to improve the facilities for the extensive boxing program the college carries on each semester. The request was granted a few days ago and the college boxing instructor, Jim Jensen, was assured that the ring would be installed in the near future.

With this as a basis Duryea changed the bouts to the college to eliminate the added expense of renting the Coliseum Bowl and to secure a room at one of the leading hotels in San Francisco to hold the dance after the fights. Instead both the fights and the dance will be held in the men's gymnasium.

Boxers Named

A few of the boxers who have been working out this semester in preparation for the bouts are James McGowan, Albert "Duke" Drake, Bryant Finch, Seisuke Akamini, Bob Hemstead, Dave Hunicke, Walter Seaborn, Ira Cartney, and Gene Suacci.

As an added attraction to the bouts Ray Lunny, lightweight, and Pat Valentino heavyweight, will referee the semi-wind-up and main bouts, Duryea said.

Barn Dance Slated

Next on the calendar after the bouts will be a Barn Dance. The idea for a picnic before the dance has met several obstructions and is still merely an idea.

"If enough students get together and insist that the AMS should have a picnic before the dance then there is a possibility that the idea will go unhampered in further preparation," Duryea said.

Summer Classes

Three Needs Served

Commenting upon Nourse's proposal, Louis G. Conlon, Coordinator of Educational Management at the college, declared that "the plan would serve three essential purposes. It would speed up graduation, provide workers for vital defense industries sooner than otherwise, and would enable men subject to the draft, or considering entrance into military service, to obtain the 60 units of college credit by many branches for ratings."

Conlon stressed the point that as yet only a proposal has been made, and no definite and final action has been taken.

Registrar Paul J. Mohr said that regular instructors would take over summer classes, should they be decided upon, and added that "we have facilities for training in numerous branches, summer classes would necessitate the utilization of shops and laboratories on a faster schedule."

Radish Fails To Greet Sun

The radish reporter waits in the college greenhouse for a dispatch from the Defense Gardens. As yet the famous Guardsman radish has failed to sprout. No radishes, no story. The reporter is concerned.

Leering at the radish reporter from their respective jars of formaldehyde in neat alignment on the floriculture instructor's desk, are an anemic yellow centipede, several shapeless slugs, and a foul green salamander.

The salamander is especially repulsive. It observes the reporter menacingly, its lips curled in a vicious sneer. A girl in overalls enters. "That," she says, indicating the reptile, "belongs to me."

She was planting radishes when the salamander slithered across her trowel. She screamed, picked it up by the tail, and dropped it into a jar preservative. Her lunch was spoiled.

But she had initiated a project. From day to day earthworms, beetles, sow bugs, and nameless specimens unearthed in the Defense Gardens, are added to the collection.

The Guardsman requests that students, who know the addresses of men from this college who have been inducted into the armed services, turn in the names and addresses to the Guardsman newspaper office, Room 134.

Free copies of the Guardsman will then be sent to these men upon immediate notice. These men from the college are doing their bit in the national emergency, and will appreciate any news from their alma mater.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 134, by 11 a. m. each Tuesday preceding publication on Friday.

Pocketful of Notes

"Grab a Bag Don't Come Stag" is the catch line of the Theta Tau sorority for their Sadie Hawkins dance to be held this evening at Serbian Hall, 225 Valencia Street. Dancing will be from records from 9 till ?.

All students are invited to don their hill-billy outfits and join the gang at the Dogpatch shindig. Free apple-cider is to be served. Price-50 cents per couple.

In One Ear

Eloise Windfelt and Jim Upp have begun work on tentative plans for an Interfraternity and Sorority Council dance. The purpose is to create a friendlier feeling and relationship between the social organizations of the campus.

The tentative plans are as follows:

1. Each organization shall elect a representative to discuss the plans for the dance and council.
2. Upon decision of the council, each organization will be obliged to contribute a required amount towards the holding of a formal dance in the near future.
3. Each group will be held responsible for the sale of a number of bids.

The plan was tried here at the college once before, but met an early death.

Chinese Students . . . a bowling party party is scheduled at the Chinese Bowling Alley on California Street between Grant and Kearny, this evening at 8 p.m. There will be other entertainment and all members are urged to attend.

Club Advisory Board . . . At 3 p.m. today, in Room 111, Club charter renewals will be accepted. All organizations should see that they are represented as failure to file means suspension.

Block S F. . . . Moves have been made tto reorganize the society. All active members of this group are urged to contact Andy Adams immediately so plans may be made for future meetings.

Bible Club . . . Meets every Tuesday and Thursday at 1 p.m. in Room 193. Theme for the semester is "The Bible and Our Democracy". All students are welcome.

Home Economic Association . . . New members of the HEA society will be initiated next Tuesday, March 24, at Sigmund Sterns Grove. Regular members are asked to sign up in Room 108 or 158.

Deep In The Heart Of Texas

Battle For the Skies Througout World Finds Young America's Aid

By BoB Catudio

The call to the colors echoes along the ramparts that line Kelly Field in Texas, and the battle for America begins.

High above the mass of clouds that shadow the arid plains of Texas fly, the men of the Naval Air Corps, men who hail from every nook and cranny in the United States including this college. Their objective—to learn every possible phase of naval air navigation.

No pilot's found upon the ground,
Deep in the heart of Texas.

After successfully passing a test of solo flying at one of the country's many naval elimination air bases, the student is sent to Corpus Christi's famous famed University of the Air, where 2,200 naval cadets have already been stationed.

Elimination base training for men in this sector is taken at the United States Naval Reserve Air Base at Oakland, California. Here, enlisted men are taught how to solo before leaving for Kelly Field. As a prerequisite to his advanced training, a naval air cadet must have ten solo flying hours behind him.

Their school is high up in the sky,
Deep in the heart of Texas.

When a cadet, following his departure from college, sets foot at the Lone Star station, he is entering a tough and challenging life at Uncle Sam's largest naval air field. At this southern Texas station, a cadet must train himself so that when he is a commissioned officer, he will be qualified in the art of command and ready to take his place in the regular Navy beside graduates from Annapolis.

And homework's done 'neath earth and sun,
Deep in the heart of Texas.

Indoctrination study dominates four weeks of ground work follow. With nine weeks of primary training behind him, the cadet spends the remaining days divided between the first two weeks of work, while tween his chosen squadron and ground work.

There are no crowds above the clouds,
Deep in the heart of Texas.

Next in line is the cadet's first taste of piloting heavier and more powerful ships. After dozens of hours are spent in formation flying, the rookie's intermediate instruction progresses to instrument training. Hours of endless study is spent in the Link trainer, where the cadet acquaints himself with the science of flying by instruments alone via the trick of "following on the beam."

While the yannigan is busily cutting capers over the front lawns of Corpus Christi, the Navy decides just what type of plane is best suited to the abilities of the navigator. His choice of naval planes include patrol boats, scout and observation seaplanes, and carrier-based fighters and dive bombers.

The seven months' training period is completed and the cadet is an ensign in the United States Naval Reserve or a second-lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps. Afterward, he will either be stationed at some nearby shore station or sent to duty with the fleet "somewhere on the seas."

As engines roar these eagles soar,
Deep in the heart of Texas.

The men who are selected for aviation cadet work must have a special temperament and a very high speed of mental and muscular coordination. Perhaps this is due to the fact that the Navy's two main types of planes are fast fighters and dive bombers.

They learn to tame the wind and rain,
Deep in the heart of Texas.

Men who handle the Navy dive bombers must be skilled in the use of oxygen and oxygen equipment. This is a veritable demand since the heavens are being penetrated nowadays with greater success. Thus quick and precise judgment is required of all cadets in the maneuverability of the ship he is piloting.

None over seas could equal these,
Deep in the heart of Texas.

When the bugle sounds and the rall of men is taken, the representative manpower of this college will not be lacking. One cadet who is having the time of his life in the land of the Panhandle is EUGENE T. VALENCIA.

Other cadets stationed at Corpus Christi include William Kelleher, Jr., Ira Loveland, Leland McCluteheor, Phillip Doran, James Scott, Theodore Condo, and Noble Newsom, Jr. There are many others at the camp, but their names are lost in the dust of confusion and preparedness.

Following their stay at Kelly Field, cadets are then moved to Pensacola Naval Air Base. At this southern air base, off the Gulf of Mexico, cadets are instructed in all the advance elements of flying. Afterward, cadets are returned to the Pacific Coast at San Diego, where cadets are drilled in the art of landing seaplanes on the decks of U. S. naval aircraft carriers.

For freedom's right they learn to fight,
Deep in the heart of Texas.

The ranks in the service are rapidly being filled, and the men are being schooled efficiently and hurriedly so that the nation's war defense program can be speeded up.

They fight like hell and fly as well.
Deep in the heart of Texas.

With the year 1943 approaching, the Navy will have gotten a firm foothold on its start to train hundreds of pilots per month. These "hell cats" will live by the laws of the heavens relying on their wit and instantaneous response to danger in pulling them through. It's America, tomorrow—intersection of the sun, stars and moon.—

And there will come a victory from,
Deep in the heart of Texas.

College Faculty Forms Best Seller Club

Formation of a faculty Best Seller Club has again been formed this semester, Marcus Skarstedt, college librarian, disclosed last week.

The object of a Best Seller Club is to interest members of the college faculty in reading books and magazines as a past time hobby. At present, there are 39 members in the Club, an increase of nine over that of last semester.

With the money that is received through Club dues, best selling books are purchased. Every member of the Club has an opportunity to read the books, for as soon as he finishes a book, he is given another. In that manner, books are kept in constant motion.

Government Ruling Hits College Transportation

In line with national government's priority on rubber, the college will no longer be able to transporta students to out-of-town events, Dean of Men, Edwin C. Browne, disclosed this week.

This will mean the prohibiting of athletic transportation in favor of transportation "that is absolutely necessary, the Dea nsaid. This will continue until the duration of the present emergency.

THE HOME FRONT

The whole problem of determining where and when the enemy will move is determined by the actions of our own forces. And the actions, the ability to become attackers and not merely defenders, lie in the production lines of American plants and industries. From them comes the materials and accoutrements of war which provide the impetus of attack.

America is fighting on three fronts: Atlantic, Pacific, and home. Ultimately the home front maintains struggle on the other two. Citizens and workers make up this third front.

Executive Council Moves Toward Social Policy Change

Taking action on the controversy that presented itself at the last meeting of the Executive Council, members of the student group have given permission to the low sophomore class officers to execute plans for their dance as they might see fit, but subject to the approval of the social committee.

The objection was raised by the members of the Council that the various class officers had little or nothing to look forward to in the way of activities. The Executive Council has now remedied the situation and will use the results of the low sophomore dance as a guide to future plans.

If the dance is successful, the plan may be continued in the future with all classes.

Jim Skinner, low soph president, will now be free to carry out any plans he might have for the coming dance which is to be presented sometime this month, or the early part of April.

Gloria Olivi, chairman of the social committee, will supervise the low sophomore dance, and will meet with class officers in the near future.

A Capella Choir Slated For Festival Appearance

Carrying through the annual tradition, the college A Capella Choir will sing at the Annual Northern California Junior College music festival to be held May 4, at either the College of the Pacific or San Jose State College.

Joining the college choir in song for the festival, will be Junior colleges from various Northern California areas. San Mateo, Marin, and Yuba Junior Colleges will be among the participants. "The college choir has taken part in this yearly event since 1935" Flossita Badger, choir didector declared, "and we feel this a record to be proud of."

One entire day will be devoted to festival activities with the scheduled luncheon, dinner, and dancing perhaps taking the spotlight for the performers, but with the choral numbers leading in popularity for the audience.

Medical Health Corner . . .

The importance of food and nutrition in winning the war is fully recognized. Only in a healthy body can we find the strength and skill for producing the maximum war effort among soldiers and civilians. It is estimated that 1/3 of American families are below the safety line in nutrition. In some of these families the reason is financial, but in the majority the faulty diet is due to lack of knowledge regarding dietetics.

The following is the American Dietary Pattern, prepared by the National Nutrition Conference for Defense.

Essential Daily Requirements

Milk: Children 1 1/2 pints to 1 quart. Adults 1 pint.

Egg: 1 daily.

Meat: 1 serving.

Vegetables: 2 servings. One green or yellow.

Fruit: 2 servings. One citrus or tomato.

Potato: 1 or more servings.

Butter: 1 to 5 tbs. Fortified oleo may be used.

Cereals: 2 oz. infants 10 oz. adults. This includes bread. At least half of the cereals or bread should be whole grain or enriched.

Proper preparation of the food is essential if you are to receive full value for the money spent. Vegetables should not be overcooked as this destroys some of the vitamins. Foods should not be fried if they can be cooked in some other way. Frying and roasting are destructive of vitamins.

Many people still retain many superstitions and fallacies regarding foods. Following are some of them:

1. There is no reason to eat all raw or all cooked foods. Some raw vegetables and fruits are desirable because of the vitamin content, however most vegetables retain their food value after cooking.
2. Acid foods, such as oranges and tomatoes are not acid-forming after reaching the stomach and intestines. One should not be mislead by their acid taste.
3. It is safe to eat cherries, or orange juice and drink milk at the same time. The acid fruits may curdle the milk, but the digestive juices in the stomach have the same effect.

Don't be a crank about food. Eat a large variety of foods and the chances are that you will obtain all the necessary calories, proteins, vitamins and minerals your body needs.

CHICAGO, ILL. — (ACP) — Students of liberal teachers learn more rapidly and study harder than pupils of non-liberals, reports Dr. Harry M Mason of the United States bureau of agricultural economics.

He said a national study of higher education and secondary schools disclosed a direct ratio between liberalism of instructors and the learning ability of pupils.

BATON ROUGE, LA.—(ACP)—Discovery of new source for natural musk, a rare and extremely valuable ingredient of expensive perfumes, is announced by scientists at Louisiana State University and Yale University.

Formerly obtained only from the musk deer of Asia and the civet cat of Abyssinia—sources now cut off by the war—musk now can be produced from the muskrat by a process just developed. Muskrats are found in large numbers throughout North America, especially in Louisiana, but also in Pennsylvania and Canada. This discovery may open up new markets for trappers, who up to now have been discarding the carcasses of millions of muskrats after obtaining their fur pelts.

Former College Students In Calif. Honor Society

Of 131 students elected to the Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honor society at the University of California, two represented the college, according to a report received from the University this week.

Ernest Goodman and Seth Ulman, the report said, were the two who formerly attended the college. Goodman was the valedictorian of his graduating class at the college. The fact was also brought out that all former valedictorians of the college graduating classes have been elected to the society. Both Goodman and Ulman are seniors at the University.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

It is sometimes difficult to follow the fortunes of war, or the effects which it bestows upon populations. Naturally a civilian is confronted by numerous obstacles when concerned with the present situation as reflected in the success of the armed forces; but when one tries to figure out how the public is going to feel about this or that—the headache becomes twice as bothersome.

To note a few instances of popular behavior: First of all, consider the attitude immediately following Pearl Harbor and the declaration of war. In all of America there was no loyal citizen who was not aroused, or at least excited. Even though some disdain to admit the fact—it is only a human reaction. Incredulity ran rampant. Confidence of early and decisive victory was seen in every eye and indicated in the tone of every voice.

In the second place, consider the attitude of the easily swayed after the first few months of the war: Questions asked of the Army and Navy, wagging tongues wondering what was none of their business, a feeling that perhaps all was not going too well. All this despite the urgent appeals of high officials in the war effort, including the President himself, asking that Americans bide their time for a while and give the Government a chance to get started.

As has been pointed out so many times, distances now involved are great and problems greater. It takes time to change over from peace to a war footing. This was told to the people. Still there came, after a short time of war, a feeling of doubt in the minds of some. They in turn, though not consciously, spread the feeling.

Of the first public attitude mentioned, that of high hope and morale, nothing need be said. This is the kind of attitude that is needed for victory. That is the kind of attitude that insures victory. But of the second public response much may be said.

RETREATS AND DEFEATS

Admitedly it is disheartening to hear nothing from the fields of battle. Or worse yet, as was the case in the United States, to hear only of defeats, retreats, and enemy victories. Not only was this causing shame at home, but also a doubt as to how far the aggressor would go before stopped.

However, many persons still continued to keep their faith in the forces of the United Nations. Even though defeat followed defeat, they felt and expressed the belief that eventually the force and superiority of the Allies would begin to flash a different picture on the screen of the theatre of war. Those people have had their faith rewarded.

There are probably a lot of red faces and consciences about America these days. All those who had so much to complain about, all those who were predicting the most dire and shameful reversals and setbacks, all those who were blowing off about the red tape and the inefficiency and the lack of capability—they are the quiet public today. They can see now that things have started to move, and not backwards.

LOOK TO FUTURE!

Though fore-warned, they had not fore-armed themselves. They looked too much to the present, which is always temporary, and not enough to the future, which is the only thing of certainty in the world as we know it.

Before the complaining portions of the populace had half begun, their mouths were closed by tangible and undeniable results. Mounting allied air forces in the eastern skies, mounting numbers of troops and supplies arriving at the scenes of battle, ever increasing pressure being applied against the common foe, these were arguments against which there was no rebuttal.

One lesson is to be gained here from these evident faults. Lack of confidence in the country is incompatible with the continuance of successful measures against the enemy. While it is true that over-confidence is not to be desired, it is more true—a thousand times more so—that lack of confidence is not to be desired.

No war was ever won by the uncertain minority. Faster victory comes to those who look for it, and look to the means of obtaining it rather than in the direction of doubt and suspicion.

FROM HERE ON

From here on there should be an ever increasing growth of confidence evident in this nation. No one knows how often the stories of fifth columnists become the accepted truths of the people. Even the innocently expressed doubts are apt to later reach the class of malignancy.

Registrar

Today Deadline Set By Mohr To Drop Courses

Today is positively the last day to drop courses for this semester, according to J. Paul Mohr, registrar. Any student wishing to drop a course must first gain permission of his or her adviser.

After gaining the adviser's permission the student will then be given a drop slip by his adviser to be signed by the instructor of the class which is being dropped. The drop slip must then be turned into the registrar's office no later than today.

Drop Ruling Repeated

Any slip turned in after today will not be accepted by the registrar, Miss Learnard said. No credit will be given for the work which a student has done in a dropped course.

All graduation petitions should also be in by this time. "Any student turning in a graduation petition after today will be given consideration of acceptance," Miss Learnard said.

In order to graduate, a student must have completed 64 units of work with no failure in any of these units. Physical Education and Hygiene, as well as completion of a course in Political Science 35, 65, or 23a-23b.

Other Requirements Named

The student should also have a major in a specified field and have passed the Subject A examination or a course in English A. Upon graduation the student will bear the title Associate of Arts.

Easter recess will be held Thursday and Friday of next week, Miss Learnard said. Classes will be resumed again on Monday, April 6.

Easter Recess For College Classes April 2 and 3

No classes will be held next Thursday and Friday, April 2 and 3, respectively, for the annual Easter recess. Classes will be resumed again, however, on the following Monday, April 6.

No Guardsman will be printed next week, but publication will resume again the following week.

Band Makes Debut At Next Tuesday's Front Step Rally

Debut of the newly organized college band, under the direction of Madison J. Devlin, will be held Tuesday at the student rally on the front steps, to be held at one o'clock.

For their first program the band will play "Deep in the Heart of Texas," Sigmund Romberg's "Stout-Hearted Men," and "Dancing in the Dark," by Schwartz.

"The present band is rather small in number, but it makes up in quality what it lacks in quantity," Devlin said. At present the band consists of 13 members.

The first semester that the college was located in the present building an attempt to organize a band as an extra-curricular activity without credit met with little success. The band made one appearance at the Pasadena Junior College football game with the college. After this appearance it was disbanded because of lack of interest.

The following two semesters several attempts were made to reorganize on the same basis as the first semester. Both of these attempts met with little success because of lack of interest.

At the beginning of the present semester the band was again organized as a regular course with one unit credit.

The band will play for other student events in the future, Devlin stated.

Community Sing In Rm. 200

A community sing is being held each Tuesday, at 11 a.m. in Room 200. Flossita Badger, college music instructor, conducts the group.

All students are invited to attend, Miss Badger says, and a wide variety of songs is included in the impromptu repertoire at each meeting. This is the first time that such a program has been attempted, Miss Badger added.

College CPT Pilot Trainees Solo At Nevada Sky Ranch

By Ed Coffin

Eight college men last weekend won their primary Civilian Pilot Training wings when they soloed, after almost two weeks of extensive dual instruction, at the Reno Sky Ranch, Nevada, in the Government's new program to train college men as pilots.

Jerry Bonomi, Stewart Bowles, Bill Adent, Norman Franks, Joe Del Masso, John Thiel, Frank Kushner and Ed Coffin were the first primary group to solo in the spring training period. According to their instructors, Weldon Ratliff and Norman Maither, their progress was excellent and a little ahead of schedule. Had it not been for adverse weather conditions, the group would have soloed a few days sooner.

Bonomi was the first to fly alone, with the rest completing their flights a day or two after.

A second group, which began its training a week later than the first, should solo sometime the first part of next week, weather permitting. This second group is seven in number, and a third group is expected to solo a few days thereafter.

There are 28 men from the college taking the primary Civilian Pilot Training at the Sky Ranch.

The entire program is sponsored by the Civil Aeronautics Authority and is nationwide in scope. All costs, except living expenses, are paid by the Government.

A large number of opportunities are open to the students upon completion of their training, and also at almost any time during the courses.

The entire program consists of four phases, the primary, the secondary, the cross-country and the instructor. Entrance into each succeeding phase is only upon recommendation from the preceding course. More than 200 flying hours are gained by a student completing the four.

In conjunction with the flying, a complete ground school is carried on for the primary men. They are taught navigation, meteorology and other such subjects necessary to successful aviation. The latter classes are held in the evening, four times a week, at the University of Nevada, and are under the supervision of the secondary students. Seven units of college credits are allowed for the flying and ground school.

While in Nevada, arrangements have been made with the college instructors to continue with certain subjects of the regular college curriculum. This makes it possible for the student to gain his flying training and experience without any loss to his scholastic pursuits, which is the entire principle of the Government's sponsorship of such training.

Newly Formed Counseling Bureau To Probe Post-College Careers

Why students leave college, and what happens to them after they leave, will be the main points of a counseling and guidance program inaugurated this semester, Edward H. Redford, guidance director, disclosed this week.

At present, the newly formed bureau has required all students to check with the bureau before they are granted a leave of absence. Here it will be possible to determine just how the student may be helped, both personally and scholasticly.

Questionnaires Provided

With the aid of Marion Turner, Phyllis Haley, and Claude Silva, the bureau will be able to formulate methods of finding out what is lacking in the present college program.

This week, questionnaires have been distributed to the students, faculty advisers and members of the faculty, in general. Questions dealing on suggestions on how to improve present college conditions were scattered throughout the questionnaire blank.

Absence Leaves Checked

"As it is now, students are given a leave of absence, and never heard from," Redford said. "It will be the bureau's purpose to see why they leave, and if there isn't something we can do to aid these students."

The bureau will try to meet the needs of the student, besides advising them on any particular matter that may be brought up, Redford said.

"These questionnaires that have been distributed to some of the students should be filled in with the greatest of care," Redford said, "since this will be the sole basis on which we will formulate our future plans of counseling."

Registrar Receives Applications

At present, a student's application for a leave of absence or withdrawal from the college during a semester must be made to the registrar, who will then notify the parent or guardian.

An honorable dismissal is required for the transfer from one college to another, Redford said. Unauthorized withdrawal from the college is a ground for refusing honorable dismissal and the grade of F will be recorded for all courses.

Honor Society

Coaching Aid By Members Will Continue

As in previous semesters, the Alpha Gamma Sigma Honor Society will continue to provide coaching service for the students of the college, it was announced by Alice C. Cooper, college faculty adviser of the organization.

Details are now being completed to provide comprehensive coaching to those students who need special aid in various courses and to those desiring to maintain scholastic standards.

126 Enrolled In Group

At the moment, there are 126 students enrolled in the society, according to Miss Cooper. In order to become a member, a student must be able to maintain a total of 30 grade points, excluding physical education. Any student who has attained the established prerequisites to the society may contact Miss Cooper in Room 179 in order to join.

Barbara Stahmann Elected

Tabulation of the votes cast in the recent Alpha Gamma Sigma election found Barbara Stahmann emerging victorious in the race for president. Others elected to office were Barbara Jacobs, vice-president; Joan Wrenn, secretary; and Dorris Hernried, treasurer.

office, Miss Stahmann disclosed that members of the Alpha Gamma Sigma may place their order for pins at the college bank, Room 180. A small deposit must accompany the order, Miss Stahmann said. All transactions must be completed before April 9.

Next meeting of the Alpha Gamma Sigma will be held at 10 a. m. on Wednesday, April 8, in the men's gymnasium. Dr. Robert Sibly, alumni secretary of the University of California, will be the guest speaker.

Guardsman Needs Addresses Of Students in Service

The Guardsman requests that students turn in, to Room 134, the names and location of men from this college who have been inducted into the armed services. Free copies of the Guardsman will then be sent to these men.

Broadcast

College Class Gives Program On KSFO Tonight

Americans All is the general theme of the college Radio Workshop production to be presented tonight over radio station KSFO at 7:30 p. m.

A series of broadcasts bearing the central theme, Americans All, is now being sponsored by the Council for Unity Among the American People. "Through this series, a deeper comprehension of the ideal of American unity is attempted," David Selvin, council representative, said.

Joint College Broadcast

Joining with the college in the production of this series is San Francisco State College, Samuel Gompers Trade School, Stanford University, the University of California, and the University of San Francisco. The part played by Greeks, Armenians, Russians, Danes, Filipinos and Mexicans in the history and present day status of our nation will be discussed in these broadcasts. Thirty nationality groups are represented in the Council for Unity and the small representation was chosen to typify the entire group.

The college radio workshop under the direction and supervision of Marie Weller, class instructor, will, through a dramatic production, emphasize the part played by Danes in California. Peter Lassen, the Danish immigrant for whom California's Lassen County was named, is to be among those whose story will be told on this evening's broadcast. "Lassen's influence on California's history has been marked, and his story is an important one," Selvin pointed out.

Danes' Story Featured

William Alexander Liedesdorff, one of San Francisco's first settlers, the story of the first steamboat on San Francisco Bay, and the exploration and influential experiences of other Danes in California will be brought out in Friday's broadcast.

The cast will include Peter Lassen, Andy Adams; General Fremont, Allan Abeel; Lieutenant Gillespie, Bob Murphy; Ziegler, Roger Heller; Neal, Joseph Bernier; Montgomery, Emmer Parker; Liedesdorff, Lou Clive; Peter, Pierce Davies; Elsa, Ernesline Cervilli; teacher, Diane Hampton.

Some of the cast members will double in other roles.

"Rehearsal has commenced," Miss Weller emphasized, "and success in the broadcast is anticipated."

In addition to the original broadcast to be given tonight, a re-broadcast will be held Tuesday morning, March 31, at 10:30 a. m.

Second Broadcast Planned

"The College Radio Workshop is expected to assist in a second broadcast of the series," Selvin brought out, "and through it a deeper understanding of those ideals that make us essentially American is hoped for."

The elimination of religious bigotry, of racial and nationality hatred is an underlying motive of the Council for Unity Among the American People.

Forum Sets April Deadline For Student Contributions

April 23 has been set as the deadline for student copy contributions to the Forum magazine, Winifred Graber, newly elected editor of this year's college magazine, disclosed this week.

The Forum, which is published once a year, represents the college for the two preceding semesters in the field of creative composition. Any student who has registered for the previous semester may contribute to the Forum.

All types of stories are acceptable. This includes plays, poems, short stories, satires, jokes, and any other form of writing. Only the best articles will be accepted for the magazine, Frederick Bracker, college Forum adviser, said.

Manuscripts may be submitted to Dorothy Mercer, Bracher, William Goss, John Gerstung, or Miss Graber. If the student can't contact any of these people, he may leave his article in Room 251.

J. L. Frost has been appointed chairman of the organization. A staff will be elected soon to assist Miss Graber and Frost.

Summer Session

Results Of Questionnaires Expected Soon; Students Will Determine Curricula

Results, from which tentative plans are being made to hold summer sessions at the college, are now nearly tabulated from the questionnaires filled out by students at last Tuesday's advisers meeting, according to President Archibald J. Cloud.

"The questionnaires were passed out to find the needs of college students," President Cloud said. "From information gained in this way, we hoped to find out just what subjects students of the college would desire to study during the summer session."

Week Session

To date, the time of the summer session has been fixed at a period of eight weeks, June 22 to August 14. That these plans were only tentative was stressed by President Cloud.

"Until the results of the questionnaires are tabulated, we can in no way be sure if the summer session will be an actuality," he said.

Board Must Sanction Plan

The complete plan must be presented to the Superintendent of Schools, who will study it carefully before presenting it to the Board of Education. Certain representations have already been made to the board, according to President Cloud.

"Even after it has been put before them for deliberation, the board might delay action," he remarked.

Nine Units Allowed

Students from the college will be able to take nine units at the summer sessions, enabling them to make up previous courses or get a head start on new ones. Those who planned to graduate but are prevented from doing this by the draft would be able to complete their two years of college work through this summer course.

High school students taking courses would be able to enter the college in the fall semester as advanced freshmen, according to President Cloud.

College Clubs

New High Set In Enrollment; One Suspension

Setting a new high for active clubs enrolled in the Club Advisory Board, Ed Lopez, president of the club board, announced this week that 38 college organizations will be granted charter renewals, with only one negligent group facing suspension. The Astronomical Society, single club failing to file, is now defunct, having failed to file last semester as well.

Three new organizations have applied for charters this semester, Psi Lambda Phi, social group; Bible Study Group; and Press Club, the new newswriting honor society. These organizations must pass through a probational period of six months before they will be awarded charters.

Japanese Membership Granted

The Japanese students did not file for charter renewal, but were granted permanent membership in the CAB until normal conditions have returned, Lopez announced.

The complete roster of clubs as tabulated by Dorothy Hogan, chairman of the membership committee, is as follows: Alpha Delta Epsilon, art group; Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society; Alpha Lambda Chi, social organization for women; Beta Phi Beta, social organization for men; Beta Tau, social organization for men; Bible Study Club; Block S. F., athletic society; Campus Players, college dramatic group; Chinese Students Club; Tri Epsilon, men's social group; Engineering Society; Forestry Fraternity; Forum Club, literary group; Home Economics Association; Hotel and Restaurant Society; Horticulture Club; Japanese Students; Music Club; Newman Club; Nu Epsilon Sigma, nursing major group; Omricon Phi Pi, economics honor group; Peace Officers; Phi Lambda Epsilon, men's social group; Phi Alpha Omega, men's social group; Phi Beta Rho, women's social organization; Phi Rho Pi, debating honor society; Physical Education and Recreation Majors; Pi Mu Gamma, medical majors; Pick

Monthly Debate Conference Scheduled For St. Mary's

The Monthly Debate Conference at Saint Mary's College will be held Saturday, March 28, according to Charles McKiernan, debating instructor here at the college.

The topic will be What Are the Present Trends of Democracy? Each delegate will present two speakers who will give seven-minute talks on this topic.

Saint Mary's College will serve a luncheon, and a Round Table discussion will be held in the afternoon. The main talks will be presented in the morning, McKiernan said.

All faculty members are invited to attend the conference.

Robert McCaffery, representing this college, and a representative from Stockton Junior College will meet in the semi-finals of the Native Daughters Oratorical Contest. The tentative date for the meeting is the second Sunday in April.

The finals will be held in June in connection with the annual Native Sons and Daughters Convention at Oakland.

Cloud Elected Life Member Of Cal. Educational Group

At its annual meeting, the Board of Trustees of the California Society of Secondary Education, elected President Archibald J. Cloud as an honorary life member to the organization he helped start, 17 years ago.

Editorial

What Reason For Lethargy?

Public apathy is much condemned by those who have more than a passing interest in general affairs. Here at the college apathy of the same sort is in evidence. Some would trace it to the officers of the Associated Students.

This is not quite fair. To take officers as a group and offer complaints does injustice to those who act conscientiously. On the other hand there are some among the student leaders who do not seem to have the proper understanding of just what their duties entail.

All in all, a majority of the elected student representatives are attempting to carry out programs that will be conducive to student support and enthusiasm. It might be said that all the officers are conscientious to a degree.

But the student representative or representatives who attempt to carry on their own programs without regard to the programs of other officers are hindering rather than furthering the total effort.

In the government of this college, as in the governing of the city or country, cooperation is the basis upon which the whole system depends. One or two dissenters will spoil everything. That is just what is happening at the college. There is going to be more interest in all activities or attempts if the group as a whole know what is going on and why.

There is going to be less complaining and less apathy if the leaders can get together. It is illogical to assume that the student body can get together for

Education

Must Go On

Reprinted from the Daily Trojan

THE university is a chief bulwark of civilization. In many lands its lot has fallen upon unhappy, even perilous times. Whether or not the American university can retain its essential character under the stress of grim war is an immediately crucial question.

The university exists in a very real world, and in the discharge of its social obligation it must view its world realistically, while at the same time maintaining its exalted ideals and steadfastly refusing to abate one jot or title its high character as the examplar and teacher of the better way of life. Its sails must be set to catch the breezes of the upper currents, but its course must be steadfastly toward the ample port of truth and goodness.

The true university, whatever else it may be or do, is an institution of research. It deals constantly at first hand with the sources of knowledge; it imparts newly discovered truth to students at the highest levels of their preparation; it inspires learners and young scholars to extend the horizons of human knowledge through creative scholarship and thus to serve mankind. Insofar as it fails in inspirational force, it fails to keep faith with its supporters and its community.

A university must maintain among its major divisions a well-organized graduate school, devoted to post-baccalaureate study and investigation in various branches of science, literature, and philosophy. While one institution may specialize in certain fields of study and research and another in other fields, thus exhibiting desirable division of labor in the higher intellectual realm, no assignable limit may be set to the areas of study and investigation in general. "Nothing pertaining to citizenship," wrote Richard T. Ely years ago, "can be regarded as foreign to the twentieth-century university."

In certain fundamental respects these are difficult days for universities. In the days immediately ahead, strong pressure will be felt to deflect them in this direction or that. It may become even harder than now to cleave to the objective search for truth and to insist upon the enthronement of true enlightenment. Therefore, it is highly appropriate that we who have stood for liberal culture rededicate ourselves to the noble ideals of the true university and strive with renewed ardor to hold it firmly in place as a chief foundation stone of the superstructure of our civilization. In time of stress the university, of all institutions, must not fail —it must always continue to exalt truth and righteousness.

Two Days For Defense

The inauguration of the health building program at the beginning of the current semester met with some argument on the part of students, but the value of such arguments now seem unfounded in view of events that followed.

A course of exercise at the hands of the college athletic instructors proved conclusively that college man power was soft, but exercise is remedying this situation as the semester weeks roll by.

The main purpose behind the health program was two-fold: first, an attempt was to be made to build up the college man and woman; second, and most important, the national defense program needed strong bodies and minds for the armed forces, and such a program would meet this end. We add our approval to two days set aside out of the week for the health building program.

were filing into the Civic Auditorium to see one of the greatest collection of tennis players that's ever been assembled under one roof, namely, Budge, Riggs, Stofen and Kovacs. Being rich beyond our wildest dreams that night, we blew ourselves to a seat in the dress circle and waited for the exhibition to get under way. A tall, red headed Joe in white pants squeezed past us, tramping our lustrous shine to a mass of mangled leather, and sat down. We gave him a brief dirty look and paid him no further heed 'til a plump blonde came right after him like a jeep on a spree and accosted him.

"You're sitting in my seat, young man," she rumbled pugnaciously.

We looked up with a gloating expression to see this dirty seat swiper admit his guilt. J. Donald Budge merely picked up his racquets and moved.

A famous man had trod on our toes! The only shoes on record as having been stepped on by J. Donald Budge will be on exhibit in the main show case.

the breeze with a municipal bus driver last Friday. He says busses to the college frequently carry three times as many as is allowed in a minimum safety load. Minimum safety load is each seat occupied with standing passengers standing a little closer together. Personally, we've seen the bus stop at Twin Peaks terminal already loaded over safety capacity to be jammed still further. The technique there seems to be to stuff as many students into the bus as can make their own way, and to push the rest in and close the gate as rapidly as possible while every one holds their breath.

Last Monday, however, two busses did run in a caravan that arrived at 8:15 at the Twin Peaks terminal. This system seemed to relieve congestion and it is to be hoped that it will be kept up.

very animatedly, the two chief petty officers graced quickly down Market Street. Other men in naval uniforms passed and they'd exchange perfunctory salutes and go on walking and talking rapidly.

News Posted: AWS Ballot Received; Exhibitions Praised

Editor, The Guardsman:

With The Guardsman coming out once a week, and the radio broadcasts sponsored by The Guardsman, being broadcast, news in the college really "gets around." However, for the benefit of the students who don't have class at 11, or who don't happen to be listening to the broadcast, why not have a bulletin board posted somewhere in the college where news can be read by the students? This might eventually work into a news bulletin board, club meeting board, and what have you. The idea at least could be looked into.

H. B.

Editor's Note—A bulletin board has been taken over for this use, and is located at the south end of the main floor hall, directly across from the radio classroom.

Editor, The Guardsman:

When such interesting exhibits are arranged by students and instructors of this college, it seems only fair to me that they should be given a little publicity in the college paper. We mean the spice exhibit last week in one of the main show windows in the main hall.

The exhibit was informative, well arranged, and well, we liked it. 'Nuff sed.

Please, Mr. Editor, next time let's give a little publicity, thanks or something to the arrangers of such exhibits.

A Student

Editor's Note—With only one edition of the paper a week, it is practically impossible to completely cover every event, exhibit, meeting, and so forth, that is carried on within the college.

Editor, The Guardsman:

Regarding the picnic announced in the last issue, which is being sponsored by the AWS. My vote is now cast for Sunday. Saturday, as you may know is a working day (Sunday a day of rest) and as most of us do work, I doubt if the crowd on Saturday would be very large.

Sunday many people go on picnics, anyway, providing ye weather man doesn't play a dirty trick on them, so they could just go out to Sigmund Stern's Grove for the college affair.

Incidentally, the news story said nothing about who was eligible to attend (except those without student body cards) men, women, instructors, or who?

GEORGE L. GREEN, geology instructor, is another of the very interesting personages on the instructional staff of the college.

Born in Illinois, he grew up and graduated from grade and high schools in that state.

About this time his family migrated to Oklahoma, and since he was interested in the big petroleum school at Norman, Oklahoma, he followed them and spent the next four years in school there.

He went into the field, instructing geologists for various companies all the while doing practical work in this mid-continent field thereby finishing his graduate work.

At this time the great Texas oil fields were opening up, and after spending some time there, he went on to Mexico where he was made not only geologist but also field superintendent for his company's operations in Mexico. He said, they were working among wells which would produce a quarter million barrels of petroleum a day. While in the jungles of Yucatan, Mexico, not only did he study the geology of the region, but also worked among the interesting Mayan civilization ruins.

Among the relics which he found and brought out with him were remnants of black and green jade beads which were presumably worn by one of the Mayan maidens who were annually sacrificed at sacred well of Chichen Itza.

Following his work in this region, he was sent to Colombia, South America, where he was in charge of the Atlantic Refining Company of Philadelphia. Meanwhile, Mrs. Green joined him, and they remained there for four and a half years working all the way from the very hot lowlands of Colombia to the extremely beautiful and high regions of the Andes.

Mrs. Green, a biologist, took an avid interest in the vegetation of South America. While there, she devoted her time to the study of herbs and made an herbarium which was sent to the Smithsonian Institute in Washington.

An interesting point concerning her collection was that while traveling throughout the jungles, Green said that he could collect these various herbs for her. Fortunately, since there was a very good airplane service, upon finding the plants, he would airmail them to her, whereas she would classify them and send them directly to the Institute.

Therefore, through his assistance, they were able to study this vegetation from the top of the mountains to the lowest region of the country. He said smilingly, "I got to the point where I could recognize any herb at 50 feet, almost."

However, he found four species of herb never before discovered.

"One leads a very interesting life down there," he said, "if any person is sent to a country which is not so highly developed as our own country, he must, of necessity, be everything from the person in charge down to the bookkeeper."

Since he understood and spoke the Spanish language fluently, he and his wife kept the rest of the staff organized and were the diplomatic representatives of their group.

He returned to the United States in 1938, and entered Stanford University where he did special work in engineering, geology, and mineralogy, spending three years of graduate work there.

When he was notified of his appointment to the staff here at the college at the beginning, Green was on the high seas, en route again to South America. He returned to the States again, a month late to begin his classes.

As for the teaching of geology, Green says that he likes and enjoys it very much. Every different phrase of the study brings to his mind the exact replica which he has witnessed in its native habitat.

Last summer, Green went to Canada and made a detailed study of the nickel situation in Sudbury, Canada.

Green is the president of the Junior College Council. In speaking of his activities of this organization, he said, "It is my aim to try to get the parents of the students to the college to see our numerous facilities, for if we can get these people to understand the advantages which the students will have here, it may induce them to continue the training of the students."

"It is simply essential for all students to continue their education now more than ever before. It is my opinion that the schools definitely be carried on and that the young people should realize that they are doing the most important thing by improving and continuing their educational training."

The controlling factor of any future plans which he may have at the present time is the registration in the prevailing emergency. "Unless there is a need for me somewhere else in the war production picture," he said, "I will remain here at the college doing all that I can in the educating of our youth."

In your Easter bonnet with all the frills upon it—this portion of an old Easter song is in vogue today. Easter bonnets definitely have frills upon them consisting of pleated grosgrain ribbon, feathers, veils, flowers, birds, and yes, even vegetables.

Because of priorities, there are many new fabrics. Crocheted or woven cotton cord, fine cord, hemp, ribbon, and raffia, anything that can be utilized is turned into milady's Easter bonnet.

Under the original heading for hat materials come straw, chenille, net, horsehair, pique, and felt.

Off-the-face, over the forehead, and cover one eye chapeaux are shown this spring, and three-way models can be found if you are a changeable female who can't decide which way she likes to wear them.

WHAT ELSE?

Well, now that you have a hat what else are you going to wear for Easter?

Many, many students are getting dressmaker suits that can be worn on dates, to the new informal dances inaugurated last month, to church, parties, in fact practically everywhere.

With a fancy small veiled hat, plus long gloves, bag and shoes, the wearer can go any place that calls for "dress" clothes. But take off the veiled, beflowered model, add a more tailored felt hat, and the answer is now best dressed shopper in town.

Redingcots are still popular, many come with wool coats, and print dresses, the lining of the coat matching the print pattern of the dress.

COOL COLORED COTTONS

With the arrival of spring (or do censorship laws prevent saying this?) many collegienne have begun to don washable cotton dresses. Several attractive dresses were seen last week when half the student body proceeded to get their schooling on the college lawn.

One princess line white dress was decorated with pale green colored apples along the hem line. Another was multi-colored stripes, so arranged that the stripes ran diagonal on the skirt, horizontal and vertical stripes above that.

PRINCESS LINE STRESSED

These cool cottons seem to favor princess or low torso lines, full skirts and short sleeves.

Numbered among the cool cotton ginghams are enormous flower prints, these come in play suit combinations, but the skirt and shirt might make attractive campus wear with a pair of matching bright colored shoes, and a bright flower in hair as is seen so much of late. Apparently all the gardens in the Bay area are beginning to blossom.

Incidentally, have you seen the one piece dresses that look like suits? They are very new, and attractive for springtime wear. When the weather gets cooler, just add a coat, and there you are.

Cuthbertson — Review and Preview . . . — Spectator . . . — pocketful of random notes.

THE current year came in with a wallop as far as the entertainment side of the local ledger is concerned, and it still seems to be going just as strong. Entertainment seems to have hit a high note for local reviewers of screen and stage.

On the legitimate side of the ledger the current laugh getting comedy, "Good Night Ladies," is still going strong and is slated to go on for weeks to come. Buddy Ebsen and Skeets Gallagher, holding down the star positions, and a bevy of beautiful girls give spice and humor to the comedy, which has taken San Francisco by storm and still continues with unabated fury.

The New York stage saw "Life With Father" boom into prominence a decade ago, and the current revival of the popular comedy is one that should score a hit with all who attend this production of the legitimate stage. With a setting of the late "eighies," "Life With Father" stars Percy Warram and Margalo Gilmore in the title roles, and a host of other well known Broadway notables. The curtain is slated to rise on its first performance at the Geary on April 6.

THREEFOLD KEYNOTE

Checking over the lighter side of the entertainment picture, the motion picture, we find that the screen attractions are nearly all on the gay, musical and balmy side. "Song of the Islands" brings, we surmise, the usual Betty Grable film—a well rounded performance (take it any way you like). Victor Mature, late of "Shanghai Gesture," Jack Oakie, and Hilo Hatty hold down the front seat as far as the characters go. For those movie fans who always like plenty of music, Harry Owens and his Royal Hawaiians supply the music for the film.

"Valley of the Sun," an historical epic, came to the Golden Gate Wednesday, telling the story of a fearless army scout who attempts to end the Apache uprising. Lucille Ball, Dean Jagger, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Billy Gilbert and others, head the cast. A zany, laughable stage show shares the bill with the film, starring the Ritz Brothers of motion picture fame.

Wednesday was an eventful day, for it ushered in an habitual box office attraction, Mickey Rooney, playing in the Hardy series, "The Courtship of Andy Hardy" is the latest addition to the already growing list of this family film series. Donna Reed is the new love interest in this picture with the same old standbys holding down the fort.

EUROPE SCENE OF ACTION

Spies, Nazis, intrigue, and daring are a few of the words that are being used to bill the "Lady Has Plans," starring Paulette Goddard and Ray Milland. It takes place in far-off Europe where those awful-bogey men, the Nazis, stir up a little trouble.

San Francisco welcomed "The Male Animal" to the local stage last year, but this year those who welcomed the stage show can welcome the film version of the play. Henry Fonda and Olivia de Havilland will share the top billing with Joan Leslie of "Sergeant York" fame starring in the third position. Early reports seem to favor the film.

COMIC COMING

The story of America's great song and dance man, George M. Cohan, will greet the screens throughout the country in a few months, and Jimmy Cagney is currently in production for the top billing. Walter Huston and Rosemary DeCamp, his screen parents, and Jeanne Cagney, his sister, will be part of the cast

Joan Fontaine, who already has one Oscar tucked away, will compete with Charles Boyer for top honors in "The Constant Nymph," which will also include Alexis Smith and Jean Muir in the cast. Though this picture is still in the cutting room, it will reach the public in a short time.

Maybe those rumors concerning the curtailment of so many motion pictures have some foundation, but as long as Hollywood continues to turn out more of the good films of late we can rest assured of good, pleasant entertainment for any period of time.

Cabbages & Kings

IT WAS at the dance that Theta Tau swung last Friday.

The hall was all decorated with signs asking who the girl was and how to keep from falling on the thick layer of straw that covered the floor.

Into it all came a man. And such a man. His body was covered with what looked like the remnants of a Navajo fire sale. From the bottom of the shirt there protruded a pair of spindle legs.

All was well until our eyes fell on his face. Wotta sight!

Sfeared from ear to ear was that deadly grease known as "Factor's Warpaint."

He claims that it was applied by hand, but it looked awfully good.

All in all, though, the dance was really a success. The social organizations of the college should put on more of these affairs.

Speaking of dances, told is the story of the Tri Epsilon pledge party at one of the better hotels.

Seems that the organization turned out in full force, it was supposed to be semi formal, as they wore shoes.

As the gang filed into the Mural Room they chanced to pass one of the more unfortunate members of the organizations standing by the door.

The first to enter gracefully flipped a small copper coin at said character.

Followed more and more of the tiny bits of copper until they collected into quite a bit of change.

We heard that the man is going to buy a small ave with which he will give the members of the organization abrasions on the forehead . . . oh, well, who cares for blood!!!

ATLAS, EACH AND ALL

We were walking down Niagara walk the other day when from the lawn of Balboa park came to our ears the most horrifying screams.

Seems that the gym instructors have a very menacing desire to either turn us all into Al Peterson's or kill us. We can't figure out which would be the worst.

How about some real praise for the felias that traipse down the walk just to be worn to a frazzle?

Seems that just the walk would be enough.

Wilson Promises Crown; Petch, Duryea Standouts

CHAMPS PERHAPS

"We have one of the best tennis squads in the conference and should be favorites to cop the crown this year."

Words, such as these were calmly spoken by Tom Wilson in his gymnasium office this week, who brought to light this grave information, that rival coaches, usually when approached, fear to discuss and proclaim to the world such impertinent data concerning their squad's chances.

Wilson probably came from Lon Stiner's league, as Lon outwardly boasted his Oregon State College eleven as the team to beat in the Pacific Coast Conference last year.

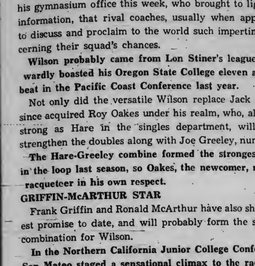
Not only did the versatile Wilson replace Jack Hare, but has since acquired Roy Oakes under his realm, who, although not as strong as Hare in the singles department, will undoubtedly strengthen the doubles along with Joe Greeley, number one man.

The Hare-Greeley combine formed the strongest combination in the loop last season, so Oakes, the newcomer, must be a fair racqueteer in his own respect.

GRIFFIN-McARTHUR STAR

Frank Griffin and Ronald McArthur have also shown the greatest promise to date, and will probably form the second doubles combination for Wilson.

In the Northern California Junior College Conference in 1941, San Mateo staged a sensational climax to the race in the final week of play, edging out the Rams for the crown, with shutout victories over Modesto, Yuba, and Marin.



Thus the peninsulans finished the campaign with 41 individual wins to 15 defeats, while the Rams closed with 38 victories and 18 losses.

With the opening of the 1942 conference race last weekend, the Rams proved they are hot on the trail for the crown which was snatched from them in the final week, with victories over Stockton and Modesto.

Perhaps, with a bit of aid from Lady Luck herself, the Red and White should topple the Bulldogs for the 1942 trophy.

Now that the Ram track season was officially opened at Edwards Field last Saturday, when Russ Sweet's cindermen faced the California Freshmen, it might be mentioned, here, that two athletes on the squad should bear attention.

"Cabby" Petch

Dick Petch, blond sensation of the Ram track squad, who recently ran a 9.9 century at the Balboa High oval, is being shown by Russ Sweet, Ram mentor, a method by which he can improve his starting ability.

PETCH WINS

Dick Petch, the much discussed sprinter who is said to amble along as a "hen" might, annexed both the 100-yard dash in 10.2 and the furlong in 22.3.

Petch won as he pleased and perhaps if he had been pressed, his time may have been better. As it was, he defeated the cream of the Bear Freshman sprinters, notable of whom are, Phil Kochevar and Leo Croce.

Handicapped by his short strides, Dick usually runs twice as far as the other contestants and is not a picturesque form of an ideal sprinter when he comes booming down the straightaway.

At present, Sweet has been teaching this promising Ram to lengthen his stride and run a smoother race.

JAVELIN PROSPECT

The other Ram to warrant acclaim is Jim Duryea, who turned a creditable performance throwing the javelin with a heave of 153 feet, 10½ inches. Far from a world's record, however, his victory is significant of the fact, that is the first year Duryea has competed in intercollegiate competition and the first time he has ever thrown the javelin.

Perhaps, when mid-season rolls around, Duryea, as well as Petch, may better his performance to greater expectancies than was anticipated earlier in the year by Sweet.

Of course, Petch is the better prospect, as he has done 9.9 in practice, but if he continues to improve, could be a clear standout to win the sprints at the Northern California Junior College Meet at Visalia later in the season.

All this has a terrific buildup, as Petch, the formless runner is taken in hand by Sweet, the coach, who teaches his protege to run more smoothly, but the combination can be broken very easily as J. Russell has the number 45 at his local draft board.

BPB HANDED VICTORY

Something must have gone wrong, but after the Beta Phi Beta Fraternity and the Tri Epsilon Fraternity were all heated up for what was to be a gruesome football engagement—there was no game.

It seems that the Tri Epsilon forgot all about it, because for some mysterious reason it failed to fulfill its challenge.

Anyway, when game time rolled around, the only team that was ready for action was the Beta Phi Beta. No Tri Epsilon.

So, as has been the custom in all sport fields, if one team fails to show for a game, it automatically forfeits its contest.

Hail the victors—Beta Phi Beta.

Ice Skating

Inge Lubahn, Barbara DeJulio Feature Attractions Of Ice Carnival Tomorrow Evening

An evening of ice skating well worth the price of admission will be displayed by the College Ice Skating club tomorrow night at Winterland from 5:30 to 8 p.m., Inge Lubahn, club president, announced this week.

Featuring the best that Northern California has to offer in speed skating, novices, and figure skating, the cast will consist of some of the top ranked performers of the leading clubs in the Bay Area. Leading the list of guest artists will be one of the members of the St. Moritz Quartet, Barbara de Julio. She will present an interpretative Cherokee Indian War Dance.

Stars Will Aid

Accompanying her will be several of the stars who put on exhibitions at the recent Silver Skates at Winterland.

Members of the college club, staging special acts at the pageant will be Peggy Egan and Arnie Hallstrom, Pacific Coast junior pair champions; Marcus Nelson, California senior champion; Marilyn Grace, State women's junior champion, and Austin Holt, California novice champion.

The main object of the staging of the pageant will be the receipts that will be derived from the show. With the money received from the event, the club hopes to provide further lessons for its members the rest of this semester and next.

Admission Charged

In this way members will be able to improve over performances at ice competitions and return with more of the laurels adorning the college's name.

Theme of the pageant is Around the World On Ice, which will be followed out by the scenery with costumes from the various countries portratied in the solos, pairs, and group numbers. Admission to the pageant at Winterland will be 35 cents and the location of Winterland is at Post and Steiner streets.

The following is a program of the pageant with the name of the number and the leading performers.

I.—Navy Swing, Adele Hay, Jan.

II.—South America, Lorraine Nopantian.

III.—French Doll, Barbara Mann.

IV.—Hawaii Calls, Egan, Hallstrom, Grace, and Nelson.

Cindermen Aid Defeat Of Freshmen

Scoring 29 points or better themselves, the college cindermen, along with three other junior colleges, defeated a strong California Frosh squad 94 3/5 to 63 2/5 at the Berkeley oval last Saturday morning, March 21.

Running against stiff competition, Dick Petch, the college flash, breezed in a victor in the 100-yard dash. Petch, noted for his slow starts, was behind until he hit the 50-yard mark. Then with a sudden burst of speed he whizzed by his opponents to stop the watches in 10.2.

Double Winner

Being the only double winner for the Red and White, Petch came back later to win the 220 furlong. He was clocked in 22.3. The "flash" was again left in his holes, but at the 150-yard mark, he suddenly "exploded" and flew to the front to win going away.

Another lad who entered into winner's circle was Jim Duryea, who, after throwing the javelin 140 feet last week, uncorked a heave of 153 feet, 10½ inches to best all competition.

The third winner for the Rams was Doug Pearson who captured the 220 low hurdles in the fast time of 27 flat.

College miler Jim Skinner, running the half mile, could get no better than a third in the 880. Skinner, because of poor conditions of the track these past few weeks needs more practice if he hopes to win any races.

Other Victors

The remaining points were acclaimed by Bob Oyen, Burt Goebels, and Bill Jennings. Oyen was second in the pole vault. Goebels grabbed third in the high jump, with Jennings tied for fourth.

Now that Coach Russ Sweet has seen his charges in actual competition, he is endeavoring to round them into perfect shape for the meet against San Mateo and State next Wednesday, April 1.

Last year, if you old college students will remember, the track men defeated the State Cubs 62 1/4 to 59 2/3 in a meet that was so close that it wasn't decided until the last event, the relay, that Red and White won to clinch the crown. In regards to the San Mateo meet, the Bulldogs defeated the Rams in another close meet 62 to 60.

New Suits Acquired

This season, the college cindermen have new sweat suits and what sweat suits! The uppers are like jackets. A very bright satin red, with two stripes on each shoulder, stripes on the collar, bottom, and cuffs, with S.F.J.C. and the person's squad number on the right side. The pants are the same bright satin red, with a white stripe down the side of each leg. The pants also have zippers going down the last eight inches on each leg, and the number on the right leg. With suits such as these, the college student won't have any trouble picking out their trackmen in future competition.

Racqueteers Open Season With Two Conference Wins

With an ease that has labeled them championship material, the Ram tennis squad under coach Tom Wilson, swept over Stockton and Modesto Junior Colleges with impressive 4-3, 5-2, match scores respectively, last week.

Paced by Joe Greeley, the Red and White contingent swept through four straight singles matches against Modesto, but faded in the stretch to lose both doubles matches. Greeley, Roy Oakes, Howie Hoggatt, Ronnie McArthur, and Gene Barrados, all won their singles matches without too much difficulty.

Against Stockton Junior College, the Rams, aided by Bob Kellog and Dick Sabotka, powered through to victory by the simple process of winning four of seven matches.

With such a strong team in excellent condition, the conference may well expect stiff competition from the general direction of this college.

Newmans Upset In Volleyball; Basketball Goes Into Second Round Of Competition Next Week

By BOB CATUDIO

Odds-on favorites to capture their fourth consecutive championship, the Newman Club fell by the wayside in the college intramural tournament as the Phi Lambda Epsilon team defeated the Newmans, 15-12, 13-15, and 15-12.

The Phi Lambda Epsilons, captained by Jack Wilson, will meet the Harbin organization, winners of the other volleyball circuit.

Throughout the volleyball campaign, the Phi Lambda Epsilons were aided by the sensational net play of Warren Croll, Clint Peck, and the ever dependable, Roy Wrige.

Finals Played in Future

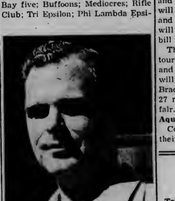
The finals in this department will be played in the future, according to Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser.

Ping pong, also known by its nom de plume, table tennis, has been completed, and the finalists are Guy Lee and Dave Billings. In the semi-finals, Lee swamped Larry Fanning, 21-10 and 21-11, while Billings defeated Abe Triguboff, 21-8 and 21-18.

Twelve teams have entered the intramural cage tourney this week, and first round games have already been started. The teams that have entered the tourney are as follows: Newman Club, the defending champions; East Bay five; Buffoons; Mediocres; Rifle Club; Tri Epsilon; Phi Lambda Epsilon, even though six members of the club are mentioned.

The personnel of the other teams that have entered the cage tourney is not known, but according to preliminary information, anyone of the remaining groups will have a better than 50-50 chance to cop the intramural disdem.

One League Formed



These teams will include the Buffoons, Rifle Club, Phi Lambda Epsilon, Goats, and the Mediocres. The latter organization is a switch-over from its previous name, the Japanese Club.

There will be only one league this semester because of the fact that only 12 teams have already entered. Only one game will be played on Monday and Wednesday, while two contests will be played on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. The single-billed fracas will start at 4 p. m., while the triple bill will commence at 3 and 4 p.m.

The college intramural horseshoe tourney has already been under way, and the final results of the tourney will not be known until next week, Brady said. At the moment, there are 27 men entered in the horseless affair.

Aquamural On May 1

College aquasplashers will exploit their best efforts on May 1, when the college intramural swimming tournament is held. This will be the third annual "aquamural," and students planning to enter the tournament are urged to contact Jim Jensen, college swimming instructor, who has been conducting daily classes at the Jefferson High School tank.

Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser, who starts his third semester in directing the intramural activities of the college.

Students desirous of obtaining further information concerning intramural activities may check with the bulletin boards in the gymnasium and science buildings, Brady said.

Baseball Squad Under New Managership Of L. Eisan

With Manager Jack Gaddy lost for the remainder of the season, the Ram baseball squad has been taken over by Lee Eisan, who will coach the nine for the duration of the war, along with his regular physical educational classes.

The only change Eisan has made to date in the Ram roster is the switching of Frank Isola from left field to the pitcher's box. In the event Isola starts future games, Nick De Voto would patrol the outer gardens.

Ted Green, newly appointed intramural manager, who has been aiding the intramural department by scheduling all of the tournament games.

New Procedure For Job Seeker Under Silva

Because of prevailing conditions, most of the college employment facilities have been altered somewhat in the past week, according to Claude A. Silva, head of the college N.Y.A. and newly appointed head of the college placement service.

Joseph Amori, who left the college last week for Annapolis, has, in turn, left his former job of college placement director to Silva. However, since Silva already had the position of N. Y. A. director, some changes had to be developed in the employment arrangement.

Still Handles N.Y.A.

Hereafter, all N. Y. A. and full-time jobs will be arranged by Silva. Part-time jobs for women students will be filled through Margaret Dougherty, dean of women's office, and part-time jobs for men, through Dean Browne's office. Silva will also handle all summer vacation positions.

"However," Silva added, "all students interested in securing any type of employment, either full or part time, will be received in my office, Room 156."

After filing an application blank there, the student will be sent to his respective dean.

"This office will be a central depository of the school for all employment," he added.

New Office Hours

Arrangements are being formulated to have the office open to applicants from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m.

Silva further stated that now is the time for interested men students to apply for resort vacation jobs. This applies only to resort jobs, as resort owners and managers like to have all positions filled early in the season.

Claire Lippert Aids Red Cross War Effort

Now engaged in a second course as a volunteer instructor in First Aid for the American Red Cross is Claire Lippert, secretary in the office of the Hotel and Restaurant Division.

Two nights each week for a period of two hours, Miss Lippert conducts a First-Aid class which is attended by 25 members of the McKinley Grammar School P. T. A. group.

Advanced Training

Persons completing the elementary course in First Aid are given certificates of completion by the American Red Cross, and are then eligible for advanced training.

Miss Lippert previously conducted a class of seventy men and women in the auditorium of the Bethel Church at 23rd and Capp Streets. On the completion of the course, Miss Lippert was presented with a letter and memento in appreciation of her volunteer service.

Instructor Called to Service

Joseph Primeau, instructor in the Hotel and Restaurant Division, has been called into the service of the United States Army.

Entering the service with the rank of major, Primeau is also entitled to wear the ribbon of the Croix de Guerre, awarded him in the last world war.

Enrollment In Science Tops College

Students majoring in science top the list of major fields of student specialization as was indicated in a bulletin released by the registrar's office this week.

Out of the college's total registration, 25.8 per cent of the total number of registered students have shown a preference toward a science major, a contrast to the .09 per cent of students having an embalming major.

Calculation Explained

"In order to show the percentage of students enrolled in each major field of study, the total number of students registered in the college was separately divided by the total number of students in each major field of study," Mary Jane Learnard, assistant college registrar, explained.

Following science as a student major is business with 17.4 per cent. The percentage of other majors is as follows: Letters and science, 15.2; civil engineering, 8.8; secretarial, 7-1; pre-nursing, 6.3; and aviation, 5.4.

Decrease In Science

The most noticeable decrease in percentage was science, falling off from 29 per cent to 25.8, while aviation has increased from 3.8 to 5.4 per cent over last semester. Academic student majors total 55.5 per cent of the college's total registration with an enrollment of 1,188 students.

The bulletin which was released by the registrar's office was issued comparing the percentages of fall, 1941, and this semester, of the number of students, and the per cent of total enrollment of the major fields of student specialization.

AWS Plans Laid For All College Picnic

Plans for the first all-college picnic to be held some time in May at Sigmund Stern Grove are being developed, according to Betty. MacKillop, Associated Women Student president.

The picnic, which was recently announced by Miss MacKillop, will be the first such affair to be sponsored by any college organization. The AWS event will be given for the enjoyment of the entire Associated Student Body and will be given instead of another dance, she said.

Under the plans, the picnic will be held from 2 to 8 p. m., at Sigmund Stern Grove. The food will be supplied from the funds of the AWS treasury. Probably members of the hotel division will be asked to do the barbecuing in the pits at the grove.

Whether the picnic will be held on Saturday or Sunday has not been decided. "We planned to announce the date as soon as enough students gave their opinions as to what day would be most satisfactory," she said. Ideas or suggestions are to be presented at Miss Dougherty's office to any one of the AWS officers, or to the Guardsman in letters to the Ram's Horn.

Radish Reporter Sees Plant Grow

By CLAIRE LEEDS

Like Sarsaparilla the Salamander and Mickey the Tomcat, the radish reporter has become sort of a fixture in the college greenhouse.

Sarsaparilla, the Salamander, a repulsive specimen unearthed in the process of planting, leers dismally from his jar of formaldihyde in the greenhouse, Mickey the Tomcat who is a floriculture major attends classes there, and the radish reporter who doesn't belong there at all sits around looking at pictures of parsnips in the seed catalogs.

Everybody looks at Sarsaparilla and squirms, pets Mickey on the head, and observes the radish reporter and laughs and laughs because the radishes are not yet sprouting. It is like that every day.

This contest, sponsored by The Guardsman in the interest of producing better radishes, began about a month ago. The floriculture student who grows the most beautiful bunch of radishes will be honored by The Guardsman. Every week the reporter writes a story following the progress of the contest.

Day after day she trots expectantly down to the Defense Gardens. No radishes. Then one day she is greeted by a beaming committee of radish cultivators. "The radishes are sprouting," they announce in a loud tone of voice.

"Sprouting," echoes the radish reporter reverently, at last they are sprouting."

"And they will be ready to pull in only 28 days," they continue eagerly.

The radish reporter screams. She laughs hysterically. Finally she stops laughing and screaming and sobs, "radishes."

"What," they demand, "is the matter with radishes?"

"Nothing," wails the reporter, "nothing whatever. Even if they have no vitamins to speak of, I love radishes. It is just this endless waiting. Waiting, waiting, Sarsaparilla the Salamander and Mickey the Tomcat sitting there gloating. The seed catalog with pictures of parsnips. Writing these radish reports every week. And waiting."

The radish reporter who at that point had reached the first stages of insanity now runs around making noises like a radish.

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 134, by 11 a. m. each Tuesday preceding publication on Friday.

Pocketful of Notes

Tri Epsilon's tentative plans for a South Sea Island party have become a reality. The dance is scheduled for Friday evening, April 24, at the Century Club, 1355 Franklin street. Auditions are being held this week to choose the orchestra for the occasion. A limited number of tickets are being sold. All students are invited to attend and may secure tickets from any member of Tri Epsilon. Bids and decorations will carry out the theme of a South Sea Island party, and all who attend are urged to come dressed for the occasion. The price is $1.25 a couple.

Theta Tau sorority's Sadie Hawkins dance really brought out the hillbilly in the students of the college. A record crowd attended and put the antics of the regular dogpatchers to shame. . . . Members of the Guardsman staff have organized a honor society for newswriting students. At present there are five charter members and faculty adviser Lloyd Luckmann. New members will be initiated as soon as plans are formulated. . . . Things are swinging right along on the plans for an Inter-Fraternity and Sorority dance. A meeting was held last Friday and tentative plans made and discussed. Perhaps Jim Upp and Elouise Windfelt, originators of the idea, can weather the hardships and find success for their plan.

Club of the Week

The Rifle and Pistol Club has determined this semester to make itself the leading organization of the college. Sponsored by Al Eisan, it is a social organization for students who are interested in the art of rifle and pistol shooting.

Growing from a handful of enthusiastic members, the Rifle Club now boasts a membership of 135 active members.

Officers of the group include Bob Ervin, president; Alice Danner, vice-president; and Carol Machol, secretary-treasurer. Other officers of the group are Ray Garcia, Jim Juri, Bob Riechard, and Homer Peck.

Social affairs are the highlight of this active group, they having already held a picnic and skating party. Tentative plans favor a dinner dance.

In-Service Training Program At College Aids City Smoke Eaters

Manfred Mueller, college chemistry instructor (pictured above), is in the midst of preparing a chemical experiment. The men in the group are members of the San Francisco Fire Department, who are already in the process of completing a three months course of Fireman Chemistry.

Firemen Play Hookey From Their Jobs, But Learn Chemical Firefighting Here

By BOB CATUDIO

While the firemen are away the arsonists will play—but only for the time being.

Those perennial words of ancient justice, fight fire with fire, have been dusted off and given a touch of glamour by 190 of the city's firemen, who start their second week of receiving chemical instruction at the college.

Following a series of informal conferences among President Archibald J. Cloud, Registrar J. Paul Mohr, and college chemistry instructor, Manfred Mueller, it was decided, quite unanimously, to inaugurate a Fire Department chemistry course for the city's local red-togged "smoke eaters."

The college had hopes of attracting 40 firemen for the course, but curiosity won out, and 190 firemen showed up, putting an "iriumatic" smile on the faces of Messrs. Cloud, Mohr and Mueller.

The tentative outline of study has been arranged so that the chemistry course will be finished by June 5, a result of 24, three-hour Monday-Wednesday meetings. There will be no laboratory work, according to the present schedule of training.

This modern educational craving came about as a result of the men's wishes to better themselves in the technique of present-day science brought about by the current war. In order to execute their plans, an educational committee of the San Francisco Fire Department banded together, and following Fire Chief Charles J. Brennan's approval, the plan was adopted at once.

Study will include the physical and chemical changes of the elements, compounds and mixtures; the study of the atmosphere; acids, bases and salts; explosives and fertilizers; metals and fuels; and hydrocarbons and their derivatives.

"This is the start in what might be termed an adult educational training program," chemistry instructor Mueller explained, "and if the program goes along as we have planned, this chemistry course for firemen should benefit the whole community should a major catastrophe suddenly strike this city."

After their three months' period of training, these 190 men, originators of that blazing "hot foot," will return to their respective station houses, a bit wiser and more "hep to the jive," as one of the men put it. They will not only have learned about the fundamentals of chemistry, but they will have learned about poisonous gases, incendiary bombs, the properties of water, and, of course, the methods of applying the Indian sign on a three-alarm blaze.

When the fall semester approaches, it will be the hope of the educational committee to include physics on its present program. This will mean the study of refrigeration, electricity, light, and heat and sound—and any other branches of study that they think is necessary.

The firemen will receive their instructions whenever they are off duty, and they may not receive two consecutive days of training, due to this irregular system. Although the city's hook and ladder squads have been busily training hundreds of auxiliary firemen in the plan for Civilian Defense, it was made known that this current program is in no way connected with Civilian Defense.

Three months of study will not only aid Mr. Abercrombie Q. Citizen, but it will aid the fireman himself when promotional examinations are held every four years. The next departmental examination is slated for 1946, which will mean that the fireman will have plenty of time in which to increase his forte of knowledge.

Two weeks, and the study of chemistry for firemen is rapidly nearing the grandstand turn. In fact, it is no longer a "chemystery," but an approach to the betterment of the city's firemen.

Mosaics Almost Completed At North End Of College

By ARTHUR COHEN

The mosaic at the north end of the building is nearing completion.

Hermann Volz, well-known painter and artisan, with the help of eight men, is finishing the first of a pair of mosaics for the college.

Under the auspices of the Federal Works Project Administration, work has been underway for the past two years on the north end of the building.

The mosaic, now in the last stages of completion, is approximately 42 by 55 feet, and will portray the Interaction of Science, according to Volz.

Special Marble

The marble used on the mosaic is of a special quality, and must be acquired from the four corners of the earth.

Each piece of marble used in the project is separately cut and sandpapered by workmen well skilled in the art of marble work. Upon completion of the work, the marble chips will again be sandpapered, giving the stone a highly polished finish.

Volz said that the characters in the mosaic dealt with no definite person or persons in the field of science or invention, but dealt chiefly with the influence of youth and education on the whole, and its relation to the two subjects.

New Plans Underway

Plans for the mosaic that will occupy the south end of the building, Interaction of the Mechanisms, are now under way in the WPA workshop. Many months are required to put the plans for the mosaic on paper as each stone must be measured to the merest detail.

Both Pertaining To Science

Because of the fact that the building now being used for all the college classes will some day be the Science Building only, both of these works will be pertaining to technology, and to its allied branches.

Volz, whose works have been exhibited throughout Europe, and are included in many private collections on the continent, came to California in 1933 and in 1939 painted the huge mural on the facade of the Federal Building on Treasure Island.

As well as having travelled the world, Volz, who was born in Zurich, Switzerland, has studied at some of the most famous art academies in Europe, including the Academy of Fine Arts in Vienna, and various academies in France, Spain, Italy and Holland.

College Choir Will Perform Palm Sunday

Making their first spring public appearance since the recent educators conference, the college A-Capella Choir will sing at the Howard Presbyterian Church, Palm Sunday, March 29, at 11 a. m.

Easter Music Selected

Palm Sunday's program will include two groups of songs. The first group will be composed of Easter songs, Ave Maria Stella by Grieg; Jesu, Priceless Treasure by Bach; and Ballad of Trees and Master by Mathew. The second group will include the hymn, Beautiful Saviour by Christensen, with a contralto solo by Bernice Hayes; Hosanna by Jones; and the Negro spiritual Good News.

Kiwanis Appearance

The Kiwanis Club will play host to the choir at its second spring appearance, Tuesday, March 31, at the Fairmont Hotel. The choir will sing for the annual Easter Luncheon of the Club.

The program will include both secular and religious songs in keeping with the Easter season. The choir's participation in this annual affair has gained traditional standing.

Three Receive Charters

Three organizations, Peace Officers, Sigma Delta Pi, and Phi Lambda Epsilon will receive their charter this semester, Lopez said, having passed through a probational period of six months.

Carnival Day plans are still being discussed by the CAB and are now in the hands of a committee headed by Ray Garcia. Should Carnival Day fail to become a reality, Lopez, explained, the CAB would probably present another mixer dance for the Associated Students sometime during the latter part of the semester.

Low Sophomore Dance Slated For April 25; Scottish Rite Temple In Oakland Is Site

April 25 has been chosen by the social committee for the third out-of-school dance for the semester, which is slated to be held at the Scottish Rite Temple in Oakland, according to Gloria Olivi, social committee chairman. The dance is to be given by the low sophomore class, but will be under Miss Olivi's sponsorship.

At a meeting held last Thursday, low sophomore president Jim Skinner and his committee, consisting of Kay Kreifels, vice president, and Josephine Raolia, secretary, began to formulate plans for a Cotton Bowl Dance to be held on Saturday night, April 25 in the Scottish Rite Auditorium, on the shores of Lake Merritt, in Oakland.

One Event In Oakland

Because so many of the students live across the bay, an effort is made to hold at least one event a semester over there. Last semester's high freshman dance was held in the Oakland Scottish Rite Auditorium.

The Cotton Bowl, first such event to be held by the students of the college, will have a southern theme. Cotton formals will be stressed for the women students, with dark suits the proper dress for the men. The auditorium will be decorated with greenery, and will effect a southern atmosphere.

Orchestra Unnamed

An effort was made to obtain Benny Watkins and his Ten Dominoes for the affair, but Watkins' band had to be eliminated from the list of potential players because of the change of date from Friday, April 10, to Saturday, April 25.

Remaining orchestras to be considered for the dance are Sal Carson's, an Oakland musician, and Larry Cannon's orchestra. Cannon has played for several former college affairs.

Instead of the dance which was scheduled to be held Friday, April 10, a mixer dance will be given in the Women's Gymnasium.

strengthening bulwarks, are not needed in this war.

Should there be new reversals or periods of crisis, it is not only the duty, but it is in his interest, for every conscientious American to take heed of the past few months. Harder work, more and sterner sacrifices, less talk, are the keys to the storehouse of victory. That storehouse shelters the universal liberty that America fights for.

Why stand around in idle conversation when strict adherence to duty would open that door?

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

In the last, or rather the first phase of the current war, profiteering by individuals, either on their own or as companies and corporations, raised a question as to legitimacy. It has been claimed that during that time huge fortunes were made by those who supplied the accoutrements of combat.

An effort is being made at the present time to remove all chances of a repeat performance.

No decision seems to have been reached that would indicate that there was a successful curb put on war profiteering in the 1917 affair. There has been no indication that such a curb has been established for the present crisis.

Quite to the contrary, that there is so much activity in Washington concerning profits of war manufacture points to the fact that the problem is unsolved at the moment. Conscientious congressmen and government officials are, for the most part, attempting to put an end to an unfortunate situation.

And, in truth, is the situation so unfortunate? Readers may judge for themselves. People should, however, be cautioned against undue criticism and intolerance. Doubtlessly the businessman is entitled to his degree of return for labor and capital expended. There are those in America who would be only too glad to see the country split up into bitter factions—the condemnors against the defenders. That is not the cause for this article.

AN ENEMY?

On the other hand, if returns can be shown to be completely out of proportion, then the person or persons who take those profits are doing as great damage to the cause for which this fight is being waged as are the more easily recognized enemies of democracy. It is incredible that men could have the callousness to profit in the face of war; while their own countrymen are giving so much more and receiving so much less (in a materialistic sense only) on fields of battle.

Yet there can be pointed out innumerable incidents in which men have put materialistic gains before service and conscience. Towards such men are directed the endeavors of Congress, as regards war profiteering. Toward men of this type are considered bills directed and proposed laws intended.

Revealed 100% increases in income, profits adding to millions, new and dubious bonuses—these are not indications of legitimate and proper profits. Does a fat check for the employer's favorite secretary point to the discovery of a million dollars hidden under a woodpile? There is additional cause to doubt when it is found that the employer's company was on the verge of collapse before the war came.

WASTE!

The problem is even more striking when it is realized that planes, guns, and ships are being utterly wasted because of excess profits—assuming that such animals do exist. The ships needed in the battle of the Pacific are the return to some corporation, the supplies requested by MacArthur may in part lie in the wallet of some financeer.

Such facts are no cause for alarm. Things go like that. They are recognized and are being combated. All branches of the service have price inspectors and investigators who, though powerless to punish now, may soon be empowered with stinging retaliation. The government is not expected to be bled, and at the same time to hold out no hopes for retribution.

However, such factors should not be forgotten by Americans. It is well to know where the sympathies of one's neighbor lie, with or apart from the national effort. Not toward the creation of disunity, but for the sake of all concerned.

AND IN HISTORY

Much history has been written of the sacrifices and hardships suffered by entire peoples during times of oppression; much has been said for the courage with which entire races stood against the aggressor or common enemy. Even now, embroiled as we are in destruction and unnatural chaos, there are those who stand as examples. As all other nations, America has had, and now has, such heroes.

But how much has been written or said of the seamy side of patriotism? How much has been recorded for posterity of the gain made by the men who profess wisdom in time of war, and find it all too hollow and unsatisfying?

If profiteers can, with complete

War Training

College Begins Instruction Of Navy Enlistees

Training of naval men in the fields of radio, physics and various electrical works, has been started this week by the United States Navy, Louis G. Conlan, college co-ordinator of educational management, disclosed this week.

Following the approval of Lieutenant Commander H. E. Stone, Executive Officer of the Naval Training School at Treasure Island;

F. B. Melendy, Officer in Charge of the Naval Education Program; and President Archibald J. Cloud, the first group of men from Treasure Island has already arrived.

Navy Makes Tour

Last week, Cloud was conducted on a tour of the Navy's base on the Island inspecting the extensive and efficient machinery set up, and the two classes of men, enlisted and junior officers. According to Lieutenant Commander Stone, a vast majority of the men stationed at the island are college men.

So that the Navy's program would not interfere with the present college program, a suitable schedule was worked out, Conlan said. The first group of men, approximately 20 in number, will leave the island in naval busses daily in order to study here at the college.

First Studies Started

Already, the men have commenced their study of physics and their training in the machine shop is in the elementary stage of study. Stone, formerly Dean of the University of California, points out the fact that students get all the possible education before entering the nation's armed forces.

"Of all the services, the Navy, in particular, is in need of men with training," Stone said. "Students should include in their curriculum at least one course in line with national defense, such as first aid work, or vocational courses like typing and shorthand, shop and technical courses."

Associated Men's Barn Dance Date Given For May 2

Although the details are as yet indefinite, the date of the semi-annual Associated Men Student's Barn dance was announced this week by Jim Duryea, A.M.S. president, as May 2.

"Because of the shortage of tires," Duryea said, "we will hold the dance somewhere accessible by bus route. We would like to hear the opinions of the men students on the matter of where the dance will be held and what orchestra will be hired. This is their dance and we are anxious to hear their opinions."

Former Student Aids England's Royal Air Force In Drive At Nazis

By Bob Catudio

A rattling stream of hot lead at a late model Nazi Messerschmitt pursuit plane over the choppy waters of the Mediterranean Seas—and score another bullseye for James Peck, ex-collegian, now in the service of the British Royal Air Force in the Mediterranean.

Pilot Officer James Peck

On patrol duty from the British air base on the tiny island of Malta, six members of the Second American Eagle Squadron sighted a band of Nazi flyers zooming toward the island for an attempted "umpteenth" attack. Peck, and air buddy, D. W. McLeod, Boston, Massachusetts, maneuvered their speed burning RAF Spitfire into a "lead pouring" position as the Germans approached.

Then, like the marahuana pipe dream of a Hollywood scenarist, all hell seemed to break loose as both squadrons frantically zoomed over the island in another rebellious dog fight. Bursts of machine gun fire from the Spitfire commanded by Peck and McLeod sent one Nazi plane careening and twisting to a cobalt Mediterranean grave.

As the battle progressed, Peck and his New England co-pilot sent another Deutschland "blitzkrieg buggy" to rest—and the day's work was over! The skies near Tripoli sank into darkness waiting for another attack, and six members of the RAF would be ready and standing by.

Peck, following his graduation from Berkeley High School, enrolled at this college in January, 1939. He majored in—you guessed it—aviation, and following his parent's approval, he commenced taking flying lessons at the Oakland Municipal Airport.

When Peck enrolled in the RAF, after obtaining his private flyer's license, World War II had already started. He was shipped to Burbank, California, where he received his preliminary air training, and then to Ottawa, Canada, for sophomore "toughening up" with the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Peck landed in England late last year, and immediately, he was taking a part in RAF raids on the Nazi-held coast of France blasting ammunition dumps, supply bases and radio stations. Several months later, Peck was among the volunteers for service in the Mediterranean, according to Associated Press dispatches released.

He was stationed at Malta, a wind swept, sea sprayed island no larger than a cake of soap in Fleishhacker swimming pool. Nevertheless, Malta was smack dab on the sea route between Sicily and the Third Reich operations in Northern Africa.

The news from distant Malta has been extremely scarce, but the dispatches which have already been received are most gratifying. So it's hats off and flags on high for th 20-year-old James Peck, Berkeley's Yank in the RAF.

Ex-Council

"Buy A Jeep Week" Postponed At College; Details Lacking

Plans for "Buy A Jeep Week" were nipped in the bud at last Tuesday's Executive Council meeting. The plan to stimulate the sale of war saving stamps through a "Buy a Jeep Week" was presented to the council some weeks before by Jim Duryea, Associated Men's Student president.

After a period of discussion, the plan was placed in the hands of the Welfare Committee, headed by Sam Mendelson, but as yet nothing has developed.

At Tuesday's meeting the plan was once more brought to the attention of Executive council members, but was soon dismissed because of the fact that Committee Chairman Sam Mendelson failed to carry on further investigation of the original idea.

Plan Proved Successful

"Buy a Jeep Week" has been successful on many other college campus. The University of San Francisco raised enough money through their drive to purchase the equivalent of five jeeps, instead of the single machine they had set for a goal. The purpose of the drive is not to actually purchase the machine, but to sell the number of war stamps totaling the cost of these vital cars. A jeep cost approximately $500.

Members of the Executive Council, Don Jensen, Barbara Stahmann, Gloria Olivi, Betty McKillop, Bob Murphy, Jim Upp, Francis Chrisman, Janice Birch, and Ed Lopez, aggreed with Duryea that the plan has great possibilities in raising the sale of war stamps here at the college.

Stamp Sales Low

Michael Zarchin, college economics instructor, disclosed recently that in comparison with the other colleges the present rate in the sale of war stamps has been extremely negligible at this college.

The drive for "Buy a Jeep Week" would make students realize the service they may perform for their country through the purchasing of war stamps. (See editorial comment.)

Pre-midterm Dance Today In Gym 3 to 5

To replace the night dance originally scheduled to be held this evening, the Social Committee has arranged a mixer dance to be held this afternoon in the women's gymnasium from 3:15 to 5 p. m., according to Gloria Olivi, Associated Students vice president and Social Committee chairman.

In place of the night dance tonight, a Cotton Bowl will be sponsored by the low sophomore class in collaboration with the Social Committee.

Before Midterm Mixer

The mixer dance this afternoon is to be a regular mixer with dancing "off the record." "Everyone is invited to the mixer this afternoon," announced Miss Olivi, "to celebrate before midterms."

Several new records have been purchased for the dance, Miss Olivi said. They include sweet, swing, and rhumbas.

The Cotton Bowl, which will be held on Saturday, April 25, in the Scottish Rite Auditorium in Oakland, is to be the dance to honor the low sophomore class of the college. Low Sophomore President Jim Skinner and his appointed committee are working on plans for the decoration of the hall.

Jack Seltenrich Plays

The setting is to be southern, and greenery and other appropriate decorations will be fixed. Music for the affair will be supplied by Jack Seltenrich and his ten-piece orchestra. Vocal selections will be rendered by Sonya Shore, his featured singer.

Seltenrich and his band have played for several outstanding events, among which have been the Bachelor's Ball, the 1941 Auto Show, and the Pepsodent Show. For the latter two occasions, Seltenrich's orchestra was incorporated with that of Skinnay Ennis. For the Cotton Bowl, however, only the ten-piece dance band will play.

Miss Shore, the vocalist, is also rather prominent in the entertainment world, having a radio show twice a week.

College Man In Semi-Finals Of Oratorical Contest

Robert McCaffery will represent this college in the semi-finals of the Native Daughters Oratorical Contest this Sunday, according to Charles McKiernan, college debating instructor.

He will compete with a representative from Stockton, the winner going to the final contest to be held in June in connection with the annual Native Sons and Daughters Convention in Oakland.

Summer Session

Eight Week Course Of Study Approved By Board Of Education

Approval of the proposed summer session to be held at the college has been granted by the Board of Education, according to J. Paul Mohr, college registrar. The session will last for eight weeks from June 22 to August 14.

Students will be allowed to take a maximum of nine units, enabling them to make up deficiencies or complete courses necessary to their curriculum. They will be given the same credit as if they had taken the course in a regular college semester.

High Schools Eligible

Graduating high school students will also be able to take advantage of the summer session, and will be allowed to enter the college in the fall as advanced freshmen.

The session has been scheduled to enable students who wish to graduate early and who also wish to speed up education in keeping with the present times.

Results Revealed

Results of the questionnaires filled out by the students of the college several weeks ago, revealed that approximately 814 students are interested in a summer session, Mohr said. The same questionnaire is now being distributed to the June high school graduates.

Students who take a three unit course will have to attend classes five times a week for an hour instead of the three times a week for 50 minutes, class schedule now. Two unit courses will be held four times a week for an hour at each meeting, and three hour laboratories will be held twice a week, Mohr said.

Hygiene and P. E. Offered

Hygiene and physical education will be offered for credit, but these courses will not be compulsory to attending students.

A definite program of courses to be given has not been formed as yet. This will not be done until the high school questionnaires are returned to the college. Only the courses which are most requested will be given, Mohr confirmed.

Tenative Courses

Based on the questionnaires distributed to the college students, a tentative list of courses which may be given has been drawn up. The courses are listed in name only and no number is included. At present it appears as if the following courses will be offered, Mohr said:

- Navigation
- Bacteriology
- Botany
- Business
- Civil Engineering
- Chemistry
- Economics
- Floriculture
- Hygiene
- Mathematics
- Mechanical Engineering
- Physical Education
- Physics
- Spanish
- Zoology
- Radio Engineering

Floriculture will be the study of growing Victory Gardens, and their development. The questionnaires seemed to show an apparent lack of interest in history, political science, languages except for Spanish, arts and music.

Most of the students wanted courses in sciences and engineering, the poll showed.

Sweetheart Contest

Affair Slated For Soph Week May 18 to 22

Elections of the sophomore sweetheart and the freshman king will be conducted by Jack Skinner, upper class president, and Win Golden, lower class head, during the week of May 10.

Details, which have already been worked out, present the following program: May 8, presentation of the candidates for the two crowns; May 11 to 15, pictures will be on display in a first floor show case; May 14, preliminaries will be run off; May 19, final elections will be held; May 23, winners are to be presented at the semi-annual sophomore formal.

New Plan Begun

Student leaders have inaugurated a new plan of selection differing from that used in past semesters. Under the newer system college clubs and organizations will sponsor contestants.

Women's groups are being asked to sponsor both men and women. Men's groups will be asked only to submit the name of some man whom they wish to back. This plan has already found some criticism on the part of college organizations.

Student officers say that because it has been found more difficult to get men to run for the award, in comparison with securing women entrants, all clubs will be asked to submit the names of men whom they think capable of winning.

Hi-Soph Week Event

Election of the sweetheart has been a featured event of high sophomore week for many semesters. The election of a frosh king, however, was but recently established in college affairs.

The winner among the women students is presented with a perpetual trophy and gifts from several clubs. Last semester an attempt was made to have the king and queen attend the soph formal together. The plan was not looked upon with much favor by all concerned and with the cancellation of the formal because of the war the whole thing was forgotten.

There has been no such suggestion made so far this semester.

Hotel Division Graduates Serve in Armed Services

Graduates of the hotel and restaurant division have been serving the United States in all branches of the service.

Lieutenant Tom Caswell, Army Air Corps, and Private Faxon Bishop are with the army of defenders at Bataan. Also in the Army Air Corps are Lieutenants Ernest Box and Lester Asbury, who are instructors at the army air school at Stockton.

Wenzel Peck, a recent visitor at college, is a survivor of the torpedoed oil tanker, Montebello. Peck's visit to the college was made possible by his transfer to the coast by the Union Oil Company and his advancement as Port Steward at the company's offices at Wilmington, California.

Bus Passenger Reveals How Human Sardines Are Canned

Overcrowding of Municipal busses which carry students to and from the college has caused some concern among students. The situation is best explained by the photograph of a bus employee filling the conveyance to the "very gilis" with human lives. Besides the discomfort and inconvenience that such commuting brings, the present method violates safety measures.

By Doug Johnson

My friends call me Johnny and I'm just another jerk without a car, so I have to ride to school in a Municipal bus to make my 8 o'clock class in time. I never thought I'd land on the front page of the Guardsman because I had a beef, but I guess this is pretty important to all us students.

The picture shows that I'm not the only guy that gets jammed into Municipal busses already loaded well beyond what would seem to be maximum safety limit.

Sometimes we have to get in front and have to stand up against the windshield, and sometimes the driver can't see very well when he has to go around a corner. When he goes around a right turn we all sway toward him. No one's When he makes a turn to the left we all sway toward him. No one's fallen in his lap yet or had to grab his arm to keep from falling down, but that's only because we try hard not to.

We're all pretty good natured about it, though, and sometimes the drivers crack wise, like the time he offered his seat to a woman student. We all thought that was pretty funny. Another time he said, "Buddy, you're practically sitting in my lap now. Why not come all the way and be comfortable?"

"I can't, I'm holding up my friend," the guy said.

We all thought that was pretty funny, too.

There's always a couple of guys standing on the little step by the rear door and when some one has to get off before the bus gets to the college, they have to step off and let the passenger off. Sometimes they don't get back inside quick enough and the last guy gets the back of his lap stuck in the door. Everybody just howls when this happens.

One time I was standing very close to a guy that was telling his pal how awful he felt. He said he had a headache and his eyes ached and he ached all over. He coughed and we were standing so close together that some of the spray fell on my face. The next week I had the measles and missed all my finals. I'll bet a lot of diseases are spread on buses that are so overcrowded.

It sure would be a shame to have one of those buses turn over or have a collision because the driver couldn't see so well. A bus with about 90 passengers on it must be rather hard to handle. That little emergency door wouldn't be much good, either. Even if one of those busses same to a quick stop there'd be a few cracked ribs and sprained wrists. Centrifugal force is pretty strong with a mob like that. It would be a pain in the neck to the city, too, because I imagine there'd be a lot of law suits.

It would seem to be common sense to run two busses instead of the usual one at certain hours when student traffic is thickest. This would prevent overloading and reduce motor strain on the hills. It would probaby save a lot of rubber, too. I've heard the tires scrape up against the fenders when the bus is really loaded.

I'm not such a good writer, but I think I've put down my beef, so I'll quit right now. I hope somebody sees this who can de something about it, because like I said, I'm just another jerk that has to ride on these busses and I sure hate to go around catching measles and flu, and arrive at my early class feeling like a pretzel from being trundled to school in a gas driven turkish bath.

A smart business man would insure the whole lot of us, naming himself beneficiary, and just wait.

For The War

Student Aid

Following the inauguration of the defense program and the supplementing of that program by declarations of war, voluntary public contributions to America's battle have evidenced an ever increasing rise.

At the very start of the war, before the people had been sufficiently introduced to the necessity of new and stricter sacrifices and contributions to the effort, the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States had expressed the opinion that perhaps additional amounts would have to be taken legally in addition to present and anticipated taxes.

The Secretary declared that in the sale of bonds, offered the public as a financial aid in carrying on the war, there had been such a lack of response that some drastic step on the part of the government seemed certain.

It was at this time that sales began to mount. People found hundreds of ways to buy bonds, new savings plan were begun, radio programs and quiz shows gave bonds or stamps to fortunate winners in place of money.

This sudden show of support was not the result of an awakened partriotism, but, on the contrary, of an awakened understanding. Americans began to see just where and how strongly they stood.

Newspaper editorial writers were prone, in the days of late December and early January, to chastise the public for their lack of support. However, it was not much the reprimanding of the press that produced the desired result. Nor was it the pleas of government officials; nor was it their warnings. Sales boomed because the American people thought that it was to their advantage to create such a boom. Undeniably, they were correct.

More and more is this being realized. More and more will it be realized by those who are not yet convinced. The black line on the chart of total sales will continue its present trend of acceleration.

The aforementioned now boils down to the part individual institutions, as opposed to individuals, are playing in the current struggle. People as individuals are performing admirably; with institutions such is not always the case. Many colleges and universities either are planning or have already started drives to aid in bond and stamp sales.

The inauguration of such a program at this college, while imposing upon a present schedule of civil defense instruction, red cross work, and other war instruction, is of sufficient worth to be added to any plan now in operation. The Executive Council has recently discussed various methods by which students may be induced to make additional purchases.

Naturally enough, there should be no inducement necessary. The obvious is inducement enough. However, the need is such that campaigns of all sorts are welcome.

A bureau has been set up in the college bank at which stamps are sold. Sales are not going well. Which is another good reason for beginning the suggested plan.

It might be well for the ruling student group to look deeper into the matter. There do not seem to be any objections, or reasons for objections, on the part of the administration. All that is needed is a serious inquiry into the methods by which the whole thing may be conducted.

It was mentioned above that the idea was brought before the Executive Council. However, that was two weeks ago. Since that time the whole suggestion has seemingly been forgotten. No motions have been made in one direction or another. The proposal has neither been killed nor given sufficient excuse to remain alive.

Certainly it is worthy of serious consideration. Perhaps it is also worthy of concerted action. At any rate, it is worth a try.

REMEMBER

Last semester when we did half a column on an old gentleman called Lightfoot Henry, the guy with the aluminum foot who used to tap up and down the Embarcadero? He was one of the last of the old wind ship sailors who went through the Gate under a full spread of canvas. He was full of stories about the sea, clipper ships and old time seamen. He often expressed caustic contempt for "steam scow sailors," as he called them.

"They ain't real sailors, boy," he'd say. A sailing ship was a grace-full thing. These coal buckets just point their bow where they want to go and go tearing along like a dirty old plow."

He had a lot to say about present day sailors that can't be reproduced here, but, the reason we mention him again is that he died a short time ago at the honorable age of 73, an age which his carriage and mental agility belied. He'd lost his foot in the Orient when a quarantine boat was leaving his ship and her mooring line fouled up and pulled his leg through a chok. He had an aluminum foot made but his sea career was over.

Seamen at the Union hiring hall used to kid him about his foot because they knew he didn't mind. He'd been around so long that they were all sure he'd live forever. The last time we saw him a stevedore was talking to him.

"That's one thing the worms won't get when you die, Lightfoot," he said.

That sounds like pretty rough humor, but the old man "went along with the gag."

"When I die I'll leave it to the aluminum drive, son, It'd melt where I'm goin,' anyway."

So, that's the end of old Lightfoot Henry."

WE TALKED

With a fellow down at the seaman's hiring hall who just came back from the east coast after he'd taken a ship for Africa. They were at sea when Pearl Harbor happened.

"We didn't believe it at first. We were sitting in focsle talking at about three thirty when all of a sudden the steward came down and started unscrewing the light globes. The old man had ordered him to remove all exposed lights. The rest of the trip we were all blacked out."

Even then they couldn't realize it, even though they sometimes heard over the ship radio that such and such an American ship had gone down, or was asking for help. It was brought home to them pretty vividly when they were entering Port of Spain, Trinidad. There was ship ahead of them and they were right in the entrance of the harbor.

"We were just drooling along at about quarter speed ahead when a Heinie sub popped up about 200 feet from this ship ahead of us. She ignored us completely and went after the other ship with her gun. The ship took three direct hits, then she brought a heavy machine to bear on the sub, and that poor

RAM'S HORN — Don't wind 'em—fly 'em; students want 'cafe' order

We Are Americans

Editor, The Guardsman:

With all the poems, essays, stories, and articles that are written, with all the pictures of old Glory waving significantly in the breeze, it seems only fitting that the flags in our classrooms should be kept flying.

Americanism is identified by the waving flag—we are Americans—young Americans, so why not identify ourselves.

Nearly all the classrooms, maybe all of them, have the American flag hanging from a pole in front of the room.

Now, I'm not asking that students be requested to pledge their allegiance to the flag before every class begins, but I am asking that someone fix the flags so that they will wave in the breeze. Most of the instructors open the windows to let a bit of fresh air blow freely in, and if the flags were properly unwound from the pole, they could blow and wave with the same breeze.

This would be much more patriotic, it seems to me, than just letting them wind themselves around the pole, and stay there until the college building itself blows away.

Make Way

Eidtor, The Guardsman:

I, like many of the students of the college, eat in the cafeteria. But for heavens sake, why doesn't the hotel and restaurant division officials, the cafeteria workers, or somebody try and arrange a little order in the place during the rush, or peak hours, which I find to be between 11 and 1 p. m.

A person finds himself in line which usually begins near the cashier box. Very well and good, but several young things in a hurry rush past and mess up the line, they want a hot plate, then decide a salad would be better, and then come back for the hot plate. This all tends to make the line very confusing, disorderly, and to send ones frame of mind soaring high into murderous atmospheres.

If a one way sign was put up, or students were told that they could get around just as fast if they actually stayed in line(which I believe is a fact) or if both sides of the cafeteria were opened, matters could become much better.

FEM FADS . . . by Nancy

THE EASTER PARADE is over. Clothes are now hung up, hats and veils set on high where they won't get crushed, classes have started, and the world hangs out it familiar 'business as usual'sign to continue on its way.

Just because Easter is over, is no sign that clothes buying has stopped, or even slowed up. Social events also have their B. A. U. sign out, and go on forever. Especially on this campus. Within several weeks a Cotton Ball, the High soph formal, and another mixer in addition to several club dances are slated forthcoming events.

OH! THE COTTON BALL!

To us the Cotton Ball seems the best idea the college student officials have had in many a month. Cotton formals, as the occasion seems to demand, get better looking each summer, and women who don't leave the city have very few chances to don one. Nothing seems more spring like, cooler, delightful, and danceable as a billowy, light colored dotted Swiss, picque, and so forth. But more on this later.

For those students who like loud, large Hawaiian prints, Audrey Dolan has an eye-opener. It is an honest-to-goodness print from Hawaii with white flowers on a Chinese red background. Miss Dolan, thinks that it is too loud so declines to wear it.

RIBBONS AND MORE RIBBONS

Tyroleon costumes are still in the picture, according to a downtown store that has very full biege skirts trimmed with varied colored ribbons around the hemline decorating their counters. The skirts can be worn with pastel sweaters, shirts, or matching biege blouses with ribbons of the same colors.

After Easter fashions worn by Florence Espinoza on Monday included a coral colored wool jacket. The jacket was becoming for its straight lines,making for simplicity.

ORIGINALITY VS. VARIETY

Incidentally have you seen the jumper dresses with which one can wear different colored shirts, and transform the whole outfit. Some of them have flowered strips of braid running around the hemline (what again?) while others are plain colored.

One woman we met had on a deep tan one, with which brown would have looked tres bien. "But," the women said, "brown is what everybody expects" so she wa getting a yellow or blue shirt to wear with it. Those colors, would look just as well, and perhaps even better. What is better than originality, anyway.

From The Hall of Montezuma . . . To The Shores of Tripoli

This Column Was Written By Bob Catudio

WITH FLAGS waving and bugles blowing, and with a plot as common as a pair of worn out tires, Twentieth Century Fox' multi-colored extravanganza, To The Shores of Tripoli, made its San Francisco debut this week at the Fox Theater.

There is nothing startling about the plot of Darryl Zanuck's latest Technicolor opus, but this celluloid box-office coin collector has been assembled from the cutting rooms just in time—in time for public morale, and a shot in the arm for the men in the armed services.

MARINES FORM CAST NUCLEUS

Starred in this story of America's lovable leathernecks are John Payne, Maureen O'Hara and Randolph Scott, while 5,000 marines at the San Diego Marine Training Base form the nucleus for the remainder of the cast.

John Payne, following his recent performance in Remember The Day, turns in a typical Payne job, but Maureen O'Hara, who is cast as a military nurse (red hair, Irish dialect, and blue eyes included) is definitely out of place in a flicker that gives out with red, white and blue every second it stays on the screen.

NO NEW PLOT

Payne is seen as a cocky, fresh upstart rookie from Culver Military Academy, while Scott is his master sergeant. The stale, and tiresome method—rookie tries to outsmart sergeant, sergeant tries to get even, and both get in "dutch" with he commanding officer—dominates the major portions of the picture.

Others in the cast include William Tracy, Minor Watson, Russell Hicks, Nacy Kelly, and Frank Orth. Filmed entirely at the leatherneck base at San Diego, the film depicts the methods of training men for service in the Corps. Feature two on the menu is an opus entitled The Night Before The Divorce with Lynn Bari, Mary Beth Hughes and Joseph Allen Jr.

With goose pimple standing out on the customers like beacon lights in a fog, The Invaders opened at the Orpheum this week, despite its shortened delay. Concerning the adventure of three German-sailors who become stranded on Canadian soil when their submarine is blown to bits by English dive bombers, The Invaders co-stars Lawrence Olivier, Raymond Massey, and Leslie Howard.

MUSICAL SEASON FORTHCOMING

The 1942 edition of Earl Carroll's scantily clad beauties came to the Golden Gate Theater this week, and with a new comedian in the personage of "Doc" Rockwell, Broadway's zany rocking chair story teller. The Mexican Spitfire at Sea is the offering at the Golden Gate. This is another in the zany, comedy series co-starring Lupe Velez and Leon Errol.

Commencing April 22, the rhumba king of rhythm, Xavier Cugat, will make his San Francisco stage debut at this same theater. Cugat, who has held sway at New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel for the past eleven seasons, will feature the type of music that has made Havana and Rio de Janeiro the vacationing "musts" south of the Mason and Dixie Line.

Robinson

Cabbages & Kings

INTO OUR office the other day came a suggestion that the college have a "Buy a Jeep" week.

Now this in our minds, is the height of absurdity.

What difference does it make if we buy a Jeep or a Spitoon as long as our Uncle gets the money?

What difference does it make if we buy a bomber or Shoelace just as long as the dimes and quarters keep rolling into the treasury.

Now we have what we think is a pretty good idea. Why not just buy a hunk of freedom?

After all, without this, we won't be able to buy anything, not even a ticket to Lu Watters.

So we suggest that the college hold a "Buy a Ton of Freedom" week.

Let each dime buy a pound of said essential: At this rate we will all be contributing to the right to say that we don't like our Latin instructor and that we would like to send the guy who thought of Body Building to the Land of the Everlasting Bonfires.

We would be buying the right to sleep late if we wanted to take a cut in Speech and the right to read just what the editor of our paper thinks about the international situation.

We will be buying the right to disagree with our Poli. Sci. instructor while with the same pound of freedom we could guide a bomb to Tojo.

So we suggest that instead of greeting your fellow goon with, "What's cookin'." Scream quietly at him. "Buy a stamp and help set those heels back on their Axis."

BOOK DEPARTMENT . . .

Of all of the books written about the old San Francisco and of Barbary Coast, or Sidney Town, there seems to be little mention of the college site.

Seems that there were really five fires that razed San Francisco pre-1906 but no one talks about the real menace of the city.

Now there was a place, the old county jail.

There seemed to be grand jury investigation about the "establishment" every other week.

At one time the trustees got the brilliant idea of installing steel hooks in each cell so that the "guests" might hang their garments. Said hooks set the taxpayers back the sum of $1.30 a piece. When the number of cells is taken into consideration, this is quite a sum.

Drugs were smuggled into the place at every turn. In hollow heels, under the covering of golf balls (before the priorities board) but in our minds the prize goes to the character who brought it in a ball of yarn.

The dope (in the yarn) was of a dry powdered type that was retrieved by drawing the yarn through the wire of the visiting room partitions.

Imagine going to all that trouble to get a dope into the place.

Now all they have to do it graduate from high school

IDLE THOUGHTS

It wouldn't be the college without:

The few students falling over themselves in a last rush to an 8 o'clock.

Bleary, peeping eyes that peer at the world in distaste of an early Monday morning.

Content expressed on the faces of those students baking in the sun back of the building.

Smiling faces contrasted to "Midterm Blues" after blue book time.

BERTHA KELLER, B. A. M. A., chairman of the physical education department, is a former resident of Spokane, Washington.

Since her advent to the upper division of grade school, Miss Keller has been interested in physical education as a channel into which her interests could be centered. "I played my first mixed tennis match when I was in the seventh grade," she said.

When in high school, she decided definitely to major in this field while there, as well as later in college. The students at that time were fortunate, she said, in having a very fine program for their activities.

She was very interested in many sports, and captained the swimming team, as well as participating in numerous tennis matches.

Perhaps many students here at the college will be suprised to learn that Miss Keller was attending high school when members of her classes left for enlistment during the first World War. Later, she said, many of these fellow students who returned attended the University of Washington.

Upon deciding to attend the University of Washington, she majored in physical education, with her minor in physiology, and obtained her B. A. while there.

She was president of one of the first high school girls' leagues, but being not only interested in athletics, she was quite active in student association groups.

At University of Washington she was elected president of Mortar Board, a national honorary organization for leadership in both activity and scholarship; was active in both the Associated Women's students and the Women's Athletic Association, and was a member of the Physical Education major's club.

While speaking of awards which she had won as a result of her athletic activities, Miss Keller mentioned the W blanket which many of the students here at the college have probably seen and wondered why it should have any special significance attached to it. This award, she informed me, was given to women as well as men for participation in athletics.

She was president of the Delta Gamma Sorority and was sent to the national convention in Spring Lake, New Jersey.

Another convention which she attended, and this time as a representative of athletics, was at Palo Alto. At that time, she said, Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, was a student at Stanford, and a member of the welcoming committee for the visiting students from the other universities and colleges.

"One of the reasons why I have always been so interested in Physical education," she remarked, "is because it offers an opportunity to lead girls in very wholesome social recreational activities;and I feel the things which they learn through sports help them very definitely to become better citizens."

Miss Keller joined the instructors' staff here at the opening of the college. where there was, she said, no equipment at all. This last foil is probably remembered by older or former students, but according to Miss Keller, students didn't seem to mind going all over the city to respective places for their P. E. classes as much as present students dislike the trek down the hill to the gymnasium.

She was pleased to be asked to come here to the college to help in the development of the college. "Of all the levels of education," she said, "to me this is the most interesting."

Miss Keller's first teaching was at Monterey High School, following which she taught at Washington State College at Bellingham as a substitute instructor.

An item which may be of interest is that while at the University of California, one of her pupils was noon other than the present Mrs. Laurine Kulin Bergin, another of the college's physical education instructors.

In 1929, Miss Keller attended Columbia University in New York and ~~obtained her M. A. while~~ there. Following this she went to Purdue University in Lafayette, Indiana, where she introduced a teaching education program, and remained there for five years.

Miss Keller attended Hoover's White House Convention for child health, and was active chairman of publicity for the national convention here for the year of 1939. She is the president this year of the unit of the S. F. Unit for Health, Phy. Ed. and Recreation. Just a few days ago, Miss Keller attended the state meeting in Sacramento as a representative of this group.

In speaking again of the college here, Miss Keller said, I like the junior college very very much because we have such fine cooperative feeling between the administration and college departments. As for the college any future plans which I may have is that I would like very much to see a lot more done in the way of co-educational opportunities in the fields of sports."

Track Team Not Up To Par; Ted Theodus Joins Navy

NOT SO HOT

The miserable performance of the Ram track team in its recent triangular meet with San Francisco State and San Mateo Junior College should not disillusion the ardent track followers of the Red and White.

There is a reason for everything, so we submit the following:

Number one, Dick Petsch was held out of the 100 and 220 yard dashes. Number two, Jim Duryea did not compete in his favorite javelin event. Number three, enough points to capture the meet were not acquired.

As it was, State made a runaway of the whole affair with the Bulldogs from the peninsula finishing second. There is no use mentioning where the Rams ended—your own assumption should do right well.

Petch has been suffering from a sore leg muscle, and it is still undecided whether or not he will run against Santa Rosa tomorrow. If any signs of the injury are still shown, Coach Russ Sweet will withhold his star sprinter, claiming—"There's no sense in ruining a boy just for a dual meet."

In the case of Duryea, Sweet said, "It's just the usual injury that comes to a javelin thrower from throwing the spear the wrong way."

Sweet had more to say concerning the meet tomorrow. "I don't know how we'll be because many of the fellows have been down with the measles or the flu and are just recovering."

Everything looks just fine, doesn't it?

HEATED FEUDS IN INTRAMURALS

The intramural basketball league is somewhat of a hot affair. It seems that everyone is gunning for everyone else with a little more fire than usually comes with this type of competition. In other words, there is more rivalry this semester than the league is accustomed to.

Proof of this was the defeat of the highly favorite Newman Club by the fast improving Deadeyes. It was the first defeat of the Newmanites in cage play for quite a spell.

Now the Newmans are all heated up and want to get even. The Deadeyes see a chance for the championship, so they are all out after the Rifle Club. The Rifle Club wants to hold their lead, so they are desperate to beat anyone who comes their way. The fraternities hold their little grudge battles, and the whole thing is coming along just fine.

TED THEODUS, TOO

Another of the former college prominents is serving in Uncle Sam's great Navy. This time the catch was made in the person of Ted Theodus, who played an important role in the activities of the college during his stay here. He not only captained the Ram soccer team to the Conference Championship, but was also the A. M. S. President.

It was through his efforts that the soccer team was given block letters after the Men's Athletic Council had refused to recognize their championship, claiming that only three junior colleges comprised the conference.

He is stationed at the Alameda Naval Base, with duties as a machinist's helper.

STILL MORE JOIN

The last to leave the college and enter the Navy were Ed Cassidy, star end on the 1941 football aggregation, and Bob Cavender. They are at the United States Naval Training Station in San Diego, where they have been training for the last two weeks.

They have turned out for the Navy baseball team, and writes back Cavender—"I already have the left field berth cinched over Wally Berger."

Berger, incidentally, played in the major leagues before joining the Navy. For this reason, we are inclined to believe that Cavender is only foolin'.

Marvelous deduction, wasn't it?

GLINDEN LOOKS GOOD

The boxing team may still be as good as it was cut out to be, but for some reason it has only managed to win four matches in the last two meets against Salinas and Modesto.

Both the Panthers and Modesto handed the Rams a terrific beating, and in each meet the Rams garnered but two wins. Ed Glinden, furious 127 pounder, was the only fighter to come out victorious in both his encounters, which caused Coach Jim Jensen to comment that he has the makings of a fine boxer.

Glinden boasts a terrific right hand which comes out of nowhere. It is variation of the famed bolo punch and thus far has proven to be quite successful.

However, he may not compete in the Northern California Junior College Boxing tournament at Modesto tonight unless he is fully recovered from a bad case of the flu which he suffered over the Easter holidays.

The boxing team will leave at 12 o'clock today for the matches, where it hopes to be more successful than in the past.

Track

Cindermen Meet Santa Rosa Tomorrow; Petch Doubtful

With Russ Sweet almost in the khaki of Uncle Sam, the college track team will leave for the inland city of Santa Rosa, where they will face the Santa Rosa Junior College Oaks in a dual meet tomorrow.

The men of Santa Rosa's Dick Blewitt will have a 50-50 chance to upset the slightly favored Rams. Top man of the Oak squad is undoubtedly one Irving Moore, ex-Piedmont High School pole vaulter, who has already penetrated the heavens as far as 13 feet, 6 inches.

Have Standout Roster

Other top notch performers are Jess Billings, ace 440 yard dashster; Frank De Lazzer, freshman high jumper and timber topper; Steve O'Meara, sprinter; Jack Jacobs, hurdler; and Carman Dougan, Oak miler.

With Dick "Cabby" Petch ready to return to work following his recovery of an injured ankle, the Rams will travel to the Oak campus in full strength for the first time this season. Petch has already run a 9.9 century sprint, but when he faces Steve O'Meara of the Oak squad, he will face a competitor who has stopped the watches close to 10 seconds flat.

In the last track meet, a triangular affair, San Francisco State College walked off with first place honors, scoring a total of 71 1/3 points. San Mateo, thanks to the efforts of Larry Stoeven, ex-San Mateo High School star, finished second with 54 points, while the locals, minus the services of many of its better performers, trailed both squads with 26 2/3 points.

Oyen Wins

Points came when Bob Oyen captured a first in the pole vault, and a tie for first in the high jump; Sammy Mendelsohn finished third in the century, and fourth in the furlong; Bert Goebbel managed to capture a third place in the high jump; Bill Jennings finished right behind Goebbel for a fourth place in (you guessed it) the high jump; and Doug Pearson picked off a second place in both timber events.

During the late afternoons following the Kezar "Grecian party," rain, rain, and more rain has hampered the Rams in no uncertain terms. Coach Sweet has had to cancel the local's practices because of the sudden and uncalled for deluge of water.

There are plenty of IFS concerning this meet tomorrow, but IF the men, who are under the IF classification come through, the Rams may ride home from Santa Rosa with its cinder scalp of the season.

One of the big question marks of the afternoon will be whether or not Jim Duryea, who has sailed the javelin out to the 153 feet mark, will be able to repeat his performance, which was accomplished in the meet against the California first year men. If Duryea is able to fling the lengthy spear out 145 feet, he may well come out on top.

Rams Weak

Save for the high jump, the Rams are noticeably weak in the field events. Perhaps their greatest need, at the present, is a broad jumper who can jump better than 20 feet.

Skittering Doug Pearson, Ram hurdle skipper, is a lead pipe cinch to take a second (and even a first) place, even though Oak star, De Lazzer, is mighty good, according to press releases from Santa Rosa.

As it stands now, the Rams, in their red woolen sweat suits, will be out to win their absolutely first cinder meet of the early season campaign.

Baseball

Nine Journeys North; Adams Mound Choice

Dressed in its best bib 'n tucker, Lee Eisan's newly acquired baseball team opens their 1942 season against Santa Rosa, on the latter's home field tomorrow afternoon.

This should be the Rams second game, but Easter vacation at Marin Junior College caused postponement of the season's opener scheduled for last Saturday. Coach Eisan believes the delay has helped the college nine polish the rough edges.

Adams Injured

Andy Adams, the mister big of the Rams pitching staff, is a doubtful starter. The college physician states that Adams has a sprained ankle, that might force him to the sidelines, so he may not be able to perform his regular mound chores. Be it the case that Andy can not play, Frank Isola, the 'jack of all trades,' will hurl for the Rams. Like Adams he is a right handed chucker. Juston "Nick" Devoto will fill in for Isola in right field should he get the starting role. Devoto is a huge outfielder who bats and throws right handed.

Eisan, who took over the coach's job when Jack Gaddy was called to the colors recently, says, "We have a fine defensive ball club, but we lack hitting power. If the boys don't find their batting eye, we might be heading for stormy weather."

Lineup Released

And, he continued, that isn't the way to pilot a club which has great possibilities to cop the pennant. Hastily he added, that is if they start hitting the seed square on the nose. No, no one knows anything about this Santa Rosa gang, but we're going into them with both barrels firing."

Probable starting lineup for the Rams is as follows: Isola, left field; Homer Winters, center field; Ivan Sawdey, right field; Glen Claude, first base; Lawrence Oiteig, second sacker; Rinke Darrell, shortstop; Joe Buckley, third base; and Adams and Ted Poage composing the battery.

WAA Play Day Tomorrow At San Francisco State

Tomorrow, one of the most important events of the Women's Athletic Association spring calendar, the sectional play-day, will take place at San Francisco State College, Janice Berch, President, announced this week.

Those interested in the Play-day may sign up for individual sports today in the Women's gymnasium, informed Berta Reid, publicity manager of the organization. The individual sports scheduled for the event are volleyball, archery, tennis, badminton, modern dancing, horse shoes, and ping pong.

By participation in these sports, a presentation of a large red and white emblem is made at the end of the semester.

Boxing

Pugilists Enter Tournament At Modesto Tonight

Sans the fisticuffery trademarks of bruises, cauliflower ears, and what not, the college boxing team will travel to the campus of Modesto Junior College tonight, where they will compete in the Northern California Junior College Boxing Tournament. The first battle is scheduled for 8 p. m.

The very recent trip to the inland valley metropolis resulted in Modesto taking five out of the seven brawls. Only winners for the locals were Jim McGowan and Eddie Glinden.

Drake Loses by TKO

In the top attraction of the Modesto "hay maker festival," Marshall DeBisschop of the home team put the damper on Al "Duke" Drake for a two round technical knockout.

It was a slugging bee from start to kayo, but DeBisschop came out on top, thanks to a sledgehammer right to Drake's chin.

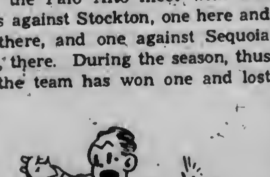
Coach Jim Jensen's remaining heavyweight, McGowan, the seemingly quiet, dark complexioned battler, took a four canto decision from Modesto's Lee Quartaroli, while Glinden, the blond 127 pounder, won his second consecutive brawl of the season in turning back Russ Freeman, Jr.

In the other matches (all setbacks for the Rams, incidentally), Frank Brown defeated Hubie Athayde, Shields Henderson TKO'd Henry Lowe, Sam Johnson decisioned Dave Ilunicke, and Emery Jones won over Johnny Scherba.

Boxing Carnival Delayed

Boxers who did not make the inland city trip were Gene Suacci, Bob Hemsted, and Seisuke Akamine. Had these fellows gone, the decisions might have been reversed.

As was previously acknowledged, the forthcoming Associated Men Students' boxing carnival MAY NOT be held this coming April 17, according to Jim Duryea, AMS chieftain. However, when plans are formulated and approved, the boxing show will be held (the date is still unknown) in the men's gymnasium following the acquisition of a brand new boxing ring by the physical education department.



Swimming Squad Defeats Berkeley For First Win

Winning its first meet of the current season from the aquasplashers of Berkeley High School, 32 to 16, the college swimming team traveled to Palo Alto Wednesday to meet the prepsters from Palo Alto High School.

"No fast times were recorded at the Berkeley meet," Coach Jim Jensen said, "because the type of pool at Berkeley was not of the straight-away type."

The results of the Palo Alto High School meet will not be known 'till later because of the sports page's deadline.

The team will end its short season after the Palo Alto meet, with two meets against Stockton, one here and one there, and one against Sequoia High, there. During the season, thus far, the team has won one and lost one.

Intramural

Rifle Club Surprise Squad In Basketball Conference; Remain Undefeated To Date

By BOB CATUDIO

As the intramural basketball tournament approaches the half-way mark, an unheralded quintet, the Rifle Club, has rammy-shackled itself into an undisputed first place in circuit "decimal society."

Compiling a record of five straight victories, the uncanny "weapon wielders" have slowly but surely crept up the ladder that leads to the crown by virtue of plastering five setbacks on teams of second division caliber. They have yet to face a "reputable" opponent, but that will come next week.

However, the top percentage fellows, led by the slightly myopic Jim Juri, Dave Oas and Bill Mahoric, must have something on the bouncing spheroid beside five pair of hands.

Spartans Surprise

Right behind the high flying rifleers are the Spartans and the Deadeyes. The Spartans, captained by Ted Samuel, have one of the best balanced teams in the tournament, and at present, they are one of the top tourney favorites to walk away with the crown.

Ray Shea, ex-Galileo High School cager, and the stocky, bull-shouldered Julio Gahn, are undoubtedly the best defensive duo in circuit play, bar none. Capt. Samuel and John Quacci along with pivot man, Clyde Ramsey, add the rest, namely, backboard control, offensive drive, and a "fluid drive" attack.

Surprise team of the league is the Deadeye five, a team composed of five—count 'em—small guys! The up-court posts are manned by diminutive Lester "Salt" Marcus, All-City 130 pound cager via Balboa High School, and Frisco Sartor, the hot 'n' cold cage connector.

Hard working Frank Lavezzo sets up the offense from the center key, while Aldo Bindi, the galloping chieftain, and Lou Dimatiney set off the Deadeye attack from the guard positions.

Jones May Leave

With Bob Jones on the verge of accepting an offer by the Oakland Recreation Department, the East Bay Five, may go into their remaining contests without the high scoring ex-Roosevelt High School basketeer. Jones, with 48 points, is one of the better forwards to cavort in the league.

Hampered by the schedule, the defending champions, the Newman Club, have played but twice, and met defeat once. With Jack Koster pushing 'em in from the corners, and with ambling Bob Marcus tipping 'em in from the front, the Newmans will start slapping the ball around once they get a "real" start, and that should be coming up pretty soon now.

Guard Perry Thornton, strangely enough, has been making more than his share of Newman Club points judging from his "best yet" game against the Deadeyes. Hal Woods and Bert Acton are the remaining Club back court guardians.

With a record of "3 and 3," the Phi Lambda Epsilon quintet almost did the impossible the other day, when they lost out to the Deadeyes, 50 to 42, despite the absence of high scoring Jack Wilson. The court play of Bob Haines, Arlie Charters and Bing Kirk, however, more than made up for any noticeable deficit.

BPB Fair Squad

Looking more like a 1942 edition of Shakespeare's Comedy of Terrors, (or Errors) the Beta Phi Beta five stands right smack in the middle of the league. With Lawrence Marchetti and the once injured Jack Skinner at forwards, the Beta Phi's have been handicapped by lack of rebound height.

Francis Chrisman, Nick Barbarotto, and Johnny Scharetg, comprise the rest of the team, even though Al "call me a longshot specialist" Drake, Jim McGowan and Jack Sullivan stand around for any emergency.

The rest of the teams entered in the intramural cage tournament conducted by Jack Brady have shown nothing that might indicate their improved basketball status. These teams include the Esquires, the Buffoons, Tri Epsilon, Mediocres, and the Goats.

Mediocres Revamped

Because of the fact that a few of the Japanese students have left college, the Mediocre quintet line-up has been revamped so much that it appears more like a patched up crazy quilt. The losses of Mitsuo Matsunaga, Minori Tanaba, Jim Matsumoto and Jack Hirose has more than put a damper on the Mediocres' chances.

Commencing May 1, college aquasplashers will exploit their best efforts in an intramural aquamural, which will be staged at the Jefferson High School swimming tank. This will be the third annual affair, and men who plan to enter the "water party" should contact Jim Jensen, college swimming instructor, who has been conducting daily swimming classes at Jefferson.

Student Guidance

Results Of Questionnaires Expected Next Week; Various College Problems Probed

Questionnaires, which were passed out last week by faculty members, and advisers, are now being correlated and arranged for present and future reference, and results will be announced next week, according to Edward H. Redford, college guidance director.

Questionnaires that were handed out to all members of student and faculty sections dealt mainly with the problems of the college student at college and at home. Questions concerning the suggestions on just how to improve present college condition dominated a section of the questionnaire.

PURPOSES LISTED

The dominant aims of this semester's bureau will concern the reasons why students leave college, and what happens to them after they leave. Presently, this newly formed bureau has required all students to check with the bureau before they are granted a leave of absence. Thus it will be possible to determine just how the student may be helped, both personally and scholastically.

With the aid of Elizabeth Stetson, Phyllis Haley, Claude Silva and Marion Turner, the bureau will be able to formulate methods of finding out what is lacking in the present college program.

"As one of the points to be stressed, it will be our duty to determine how we can help the student who must be granted a leave of absence," Redford said. "We will do all we are able to do just as soon as the results of the questionnaire are made known."

MEET STUDENT NEEDS

The bureau will attempt to meet the needs of the student, besides advising him on any matter, whether social or scholastic, that may be brought up, Redford said. At present, a student's application for a leave of absence or withdrawal from the college during a semester must be made to the registrar, who will then notify the parents or guardians.

An honorable dismissal is required for the transfer from one college to another, Redford said. Unauthorized withdrawal from the college is a ground for refusing honorable dismissal and the grade of F will be recorded for all college courses.

Forum

Student Work Must Meet Apr. 24 Deadline

Copy deadline for this year's Forum is April 24, Dorothy Mercer, one of the faculty advisers of the annual magazine stressed this week. She urges that copy be turned in immediately, as this date is not far off.

Manuscripts, including short stories, poems, plays, satires, and jokes may be given to Miss Mercer, Frederick Brecher, William Goss, John Gerstung, or Winifred Graber. Copy may also be left in Room 251.

Regular Activity

The Forum magazine has been established as a regular activity of those students interested in literature. In past semesters the publication has been printed.

However, it has been announced by Forum club officers that this time the work will be mimeographed.

No definite news has been released regarding the cost or planned method of distribution of the magazine.

Limited In Past

In the past only a limited number of copies were made.

Members of the Forum club are holding regular meetings to smooth out any difficulties which may arise and to determine exact methods of judging student contributions.

Post-War Education For Canadian Student Fighters

MONTREAL, CANADA—(ACP)—Canadian students who quit their classrooms to join the dominion's armed forces will be able to complete their studies at government expense after the war is over.

This is the substance of a recent federal order. Students will have their fees paid and in addition receive a weekly subsidy.

Hotel Division

New Course Now Offered To Students

Beginning Monday, April 13, the college will offer training in Canteen or Communal Feeding, the administration has announced.

Using the facilities of the college cafeteria and proferring the volunteer services of faculty experts Hilda Watson and Ernest J. Hjorth, of the hotel division, the college gives this course in cooperation with the San Francisco County Nutritional Council.

Outline To Be Followed

The course will follow an outline submitted by Mrs. Watson and Hjorth, and will cover a two week period of forty hours of practical experience combined with eight hours of lecture and discussion applying to the work. A series of these two week courses will be offered during the remainder of the semester.

Candidates for this training will be accepted in groups of ten and will be selected by the Nutrition Council from among the women who have completed the basic nutrition courses as offered by the council in various sections of the city.

Arrangements Worked Out

Arrangements for the training at the college have been worked out by the college administrators with Dr. Dwight Wilbur and Dr. Ann Purdy, heads of the council, according to President Archibald J. Cloud.

Headquarters of the Nutrition Council are located at 135 Polk St., where details of the basic training may be had. Information on hours and days for the college classes may be obtained from Mrs. Watson, in the office of the hotel division at the college.

Scholarship

Offer Made By California To JC Graduates

The Julia Prindle Nelson Scholarship in Government is being offered to a junior college graduate for the academic year 1942-43, A. J. Cloud, president of the college has announced.

The scholarship, sponsored through the University of California School of Government, has a stipend of $400. The appointee will assist in departmental asignments, in addition to the academic work for credit, Cloud revealed.

Graduates Only

Candidates for appointment must be graduates of junior colleges and be eligible for entrance to the School of Government.

Cloud said that applicants would be considered on scholastic attainments, professional interests, and personal characteristics. A statement from the applicant's adviser indicating aptitude and interest in this field, and evidence of high scholastic standing should accompany the application.

The scholarship will become effective either in the new summer session, or in the traditional fall semester, Cloud pointed out. Information may be obtained by applying to John M. Pfiffner, Acting Dean of the School of Public Administration.

Apply To Registrar

Students fiinterested should apply at the registrar's office. In addition to the Julia Prindle Nelson offer there are other scholarships for students given during the school year. The office of the registrar will also supply information on any of those now available or anticipated.

Scholarships are offered in several types of training and study, to many universities and colleges both within and outside of the state.

Summer Work Applications Accepted At Job Bureau

Applications are now being accepted in the placement office from the students of the college for summer resort work, according to Claude A. Silva, college placement director.

Because resort owners want to have all positions filled well in advance of the summer season, these applications are now being taken. Other summer employment applications may be filed later, he added.

CAPITAL to CAMPUS

ACP's Jay Richter Reports from Washington

Student affairs are now more than even concerned with the happenings at the nation's capital. Here are facts obtained by a reporter who devotes himself only to news of significance to the college reader.

By Jay Richter
ACP Washington Correspondent

For those who are wondering what to do during a war-time summer vacation, here's a suggestion: Check with your postoffice for tips from your nearest Civil Service field office on temporary jobs. In addition to whatever openings might normally appear, there are reports that offices of "decentralized" government agencies are short-handed. Hundreds of their employees elected to stay behind in over-crowded Washington rather than move into "the field."

Look for "reactivation" of CAA training programs in some 100 colleges and universities where the CAA program had been allowed to lapse. The expanded program for next year, announced recently by CAA and the War Department, will require use again of dormant college facilities, and possibly establishments of new ones, too. Goals are for an increase of 20,000 in both elementary and secondary training courses. Men who are accepted will acquire status as enlisted reserves in the air corps or will, on finishing, serve as CAA flying instructors.

The President's recent executive order on federal agencies has important implications for college students. Briefly, the purpose is to convert government to war work—and that speedily—by loosening hiring requirements, and by facilitating transfers from agency to agency.

This means greater efforts than ever will be made immediately to put college people into jobs for which they are trained. And if they find their jobs do not suit their talents, the order makes it unnecessary for them to get their superior's permission to transfer to another agency—so long as the agency to which they are going is considered more important to the war effort than the one they are leaving.

Previously an agency could hold the employe who wanted to transfer. Some bureaucrats clung to the prerogative despite the urgency of war work in other agencies.

The order also does away with almost all Civil Service Commission examinations. Hiring will be done on the basis of training and experience.

One thing about the order, in case you are interested in long-term employment: new employes have no assurance their jobs will last once the war is at an end.

Signs point to a major Washington effort to sell the University of Iowa's "Phoenix Fund" post-war scholarship plan to all U. S. colleges. If the idea can be "cleared" through Treasury department bigwigs, the Department's Defense Savings section will attempt to get a national educators' committee to back the plan. This committee, in turn, would attempt to build up well-oiled organizations in colleges throughout the country this Spring and Summer—preparatory to a campaign splurge when Fall terms open.

Briefly, the Iowa plan provides that each student buy a 10-cent Defense Savings Stamp each week to build up post-war scholarship funds for students in the armed forces.

It is unlikely, according to nation-Selective Service headquarters, that any student in the 20-year-old draft age group will be called up before June. New draft registrants won't be completely classified until sometime in May.

General Hershey's office has cleared up the confusion on how new lists will be integrated with the old. The answer is, they won't be. Not exactly.

Instead the war department will begin an entirely new plan, about June 1, of specifying not only quota numbers but also the age group from which quotas are to be filled. Thus, if the army says it wants men 21 to 35, the old list will be used; if it wants men below 21 or above 35, the new list will be used.

The latest advice to collegians from Selective Service is still, "stick to your college work until you're called." Patriotic fervor has its place, but a wild rush of volunteers will only serve to complicate planning.

Plan Southern Theme For Soph Dance In April

Amid "magnolia blossoms, cotton trees, and other scenes adapted from the old south," the semester event of the low sophomore class will be held April 25 at the Scottish Rite Temple in Oakland, Gloria Olivi, social committe chairman, revealed this week.

The social committee and the officers of the low sophomore class, president Jim Skinner, vice president Kay Kreifels and secretary Josephine Rasolia, are collaborating to present the Cotton Bowl Formal.

Cooperation Asked

All attending are urged by the officers to carry out the theme of the dance. Cotton formals will be worn by women college students, and men will wear dark suits.

All students, whether or not in the low sophomore class, are urged to attend this event.

Orchestra Chosen

Orchestra chosen was that Jack Soltenrieh's orchestra will play for the affair, after being chosen over several other musicians. The southern dance is the first of its kind to be sponsored by students of the college.

"The dance will be held in the East Bay," Miss Olivi said, "because it is the custom of the college to hold at least one dance in Oakland to accommodate students living there." The last dance to be held at the Scottish Rite Temple was the high freshman dance of last semester.

Work Of College Women For Red Cross On Display

This week, in one of the show-cases on the first floor, there has been on exhibit, examples of the knitting and sewing being done by the women of the college. This work was completed under the direction of Claire Cuneo, Home Economics faculty adviser.

For women who still wish to donate time to the Red Cross by either knitting or sewing, new yarn has arrived for sweaters. There is also yarn for beanies and still some wool for dresses.

Measle Epidemic Warning Given

By Dr. L. Freedlander,
College Physician

There is a severe epidemic of measles at the present time. The State Department of Public Health is reporting about five thousand cases a week. There is also a moderate incidence of German measles. It it important that these diseases be recognized so that the spread of the infection to other people can be checked.

Measles is readily diagnosed by a typical rash. If you have any recent skin eruption, report at once to the college doctor or your own physician. The rash if often preceded by a head cold for two or three days. There is usually a fever also. Take your temperature if you don't feel well.

The patient with measles is infectuous to others for a period of 4 days after the appearance of the rash. The San Francisco Health Department demands that you stay out of school for 14 days whether you feel sick or not. All cases of measles must be legally reported to the Health Department. For German measles the quarantine period is seven days.

1. If you have a rash, report to your private doctor or to the college physician.

2. Remain at home if you have a head cold with fever.

3. If you have measles and have not seen a doctor, telephone the Health Department and report it. Also telephone the registrar.

Sun In Bad With Students Who Look To Coming Of Spring

By Ed Lopez

"The flowers that bloom in the spring, tra la!" Yes, spring has arrived with its flowers and grass and the air filled with songs of birds and the buzzing of bees. The picture is almost perfect with one exception. . . where the ---- has the sun gone!

For weeks students of the college have waited in anxiety for the first day of spring. Waited patiently to rid themselves of raincoats, umbrellas, rubbers and other winter apparel. Prepared themselves for carefree days in a simmering sun.

Finally Old Sol made his appearance in San Francisco and the college student had cause to rejoice.

Each day Old Sol shed his warmth over the campus, his rays penetrating every nook and cranny of the building, inviting students to leave their studies and enjoy the coming of spring.

More than half the college populants accepted the invitation without delay and the lawns and walks were clustered with groups of students basking in Natures natural Vitamin D.

Spring fever was more than prevalent during those happy days and almost everyone seemed content to just lie in the shade daydreaming and carrying on listless conversation. The talk was of picnics, moonlight hayrides, fashions, and above all Easter vacation.

With visions of a four day siesta in the sun, students left the college Thursday with Old Sol still beaming brightly. Women students of the college rushed about making plans, and purchasing their inspired "zoot suits" for the Easter parade, while the men students made plans to take advantage of the moonlite nights.

But as fate would have it Friday morning, Sol had made a hasty retreat and on his heels followed the last of winters rain storms. For four days it continued to rain and not even on the gala Easter morning did the rains cease. Students who proceeded to display their Easter fineries got more than their spirit dampened before the day was over.

Ironically Old Sol was ready to greet students as they trudged up the hill to morning classes last Monday morning. But Sol shone in vain. Students ignored his rays. For groups gathered on the lawn or strolled on the walks.

Buds can bud, flowers can bloom, birds can, sing, and bees can buzz, but Old Sol is in the doghouse for the duration, and even spring won't get him out!

conviction as to the right of the course they pursue, continue such methods, they should be welcome to them. That they depend upon secretive planning is proof of the opinions in which they hold themselves. But they will soon find that they are neither welcome to those methods nor will be allowed to continue them.

This is no time for complaints. A glance into the scope of things, though, never did any harm. Especially when that glance proves so revealing. It has been taken. The results of that glance are beginning to take shape.

Campus Players Plan First College Production

For the first time in the history of the college, a semester play will be presented by the Campus Players, and with the exception of a few roles, the plays have been cast, James McGill, casting director, announced this week.

The three one-act plays scheduled to go into production immediately for the latter part of this month are Juliet and Romeo, by Harry Wagstaff Gribble; The Eve in Evelyn, by Glenn Hughes; and The Brink of Silence.

An important meeting will be held today in room 258 at 3 p.m. Students interested in any form of dramatics are urged to attend.

By Francis Chrisman

It was mentioned a while back in this column that perhaps India would be a more prospective suitable subject for Japanese experimentation in new orders than would the down-under continent of Australia. Subsequent events seem to have borne out the indications that pointed to such a move.

Excessive lengthening of communications and supply lines through waters too far from home bases to be relatively free from the menace of United Nation sea raiders, ever growing opposition, establishment of unified commands, these point to an attack elsewhere than Australia.

That attack is on its way. Perhaps even now it is being carried out. Assembling of enemy units in the waters off India and the ever tightening move, on that one quarter civilized (in one sense of the word) and three quarters native country, through the approaches of Burma indicate that the hour is at hand.

AN OLD STORY

Invasion and the struggles it brings are nothing new to the inhabitants of India. For centuries they have been either the active combatants, or the reluctant adherents to new and different conquests. Alexander the Great marched into parts of the land. From there on India has had no peace.

Prior to Alexander there are records of wars and conquests, and counter wars and counter conquests. After Alexander they continued: the warlike tribes from the north, war and more war, culminating in the English acquisition and the establishment of some sort of peace.

It is probably because of these incessant struggles between invaders and invaded, and because of the great gap created among the people by religious differentiations, that invasion is looked upon much the same as were all the rest.

OTHER INVADERS

In the past there was opposition, who knows how gallant? And in the past, with the exception of England, the conquerors were men whose culture was in the same plane if not in the same level, and whose interests were based upon other, and more ephemeral, desires. The conquest by England certainly has left the country more educated and more advanced in most respects.

This discussion does not of necessity contend with the Indian philosophy of unworldliness. Volumes would be needed. However, the chance to employ without restriction within the near future their own worldly philosophies of unworldliness rests with a continued English supervision, or with Allied cooperation.

Can it be imagined that the new order would tolerate such "foolishness?" No more so than it could be imagined that a free people would tolerate such similar "foolishness" on the part of a conquered America. Those beliefs and ideals which are common to a people conquered must surely give way to an Axis minister for general enlightenment. That's what all the fuss is about now.

And with a surplus population the mass liquidation of a few million would in no manner detract from Axis plans for India. In fact, it would lend authority to the words of the wise boys from Berlin and Tokio.

FUTURE FREEDOM

That too would not bother the Indians as individuals. The philosophy of many of them also includes unselfishness, to coin a word. But even so the leaders of India are attempting to accomplish what they believe is best for the 380 million both for the present and for the future. With this in mind it is not difficult to understand how the present policy of India is greatly endangering the present and future freedoms of a people who until the dawn of the present age had known nothing but abject poverty.

Such a country as is India, having such natural wealth and potential economic ability, having the essential factors to build a strong and independent nation, having the way shown and the road opened — and having spurned autonomy—that is the submission of innocent persons to danger by unwise and unneeded action of the few.

India is a cog in the gigantic wheel of conquest and defense. If conquered she reverts to a medieval stage far worse than she has known for a thousand years; if defended she not only continues along the progressive lines already established, but she aids it the assumption of a promised self-government when the war is over. The mere fact that she has been assured freedom when the war is over is proof enough of the side

STUDENT LEADERS FORMULATE PLANS FOR DRIVE TO PURCHASE 'TON OF FREEDOM'

Sweetheart-King Elections

Women Entrants Must File Names In Student Office Monday; Selection Of Candidates Set For May 19; Men Selected By College Clubs

Queen

Names of women candidates who wish to run for the title of Sophomore Sweetheart, must be turned in to the Associated Student-office by Monday, April 20, according to Jack Skinner, high sophomore class president.

Each club or college organization has been asked to sponsor one woman for the contest. "This does not prevent any woman from running on an independent basis, however," Skinner said.

Candidates Rally

The candidates will be presented at a rally to be held at the El Rey theatre on May 8. Pictures of each competing woman will be displayed in a first floor show case on May 11. Preliminary voting will be held on May 14.

Final selection will be made on May 19. The winner is to be presented at the semi-annual sophomore formal, which, this semester, will be held at the St. Francis Yacht Club.

New Selection Plan

Student leaders have begun a new method of selection this semester. Previously no attempt was made to gain the support of college organizations in sponsoring candidates for either the sophomore queen crown or for the freshman king.

It is expected by student leaders that because various groups are sponsoring their own candidates elections will be more hotly contested than in previous semesters.

Winner of the sweetheart crown will be presented with a perpetual trophy. She will also receive permanent gifts from college fraternities.

The coming election will be the highlight of soph week, which will culminate in the formal on May 23.

NYA Jobs Still Available Here For College Students

NYA jobs are still open to students who wish them, Claude A. Silva, NYA supervisor, announced early this week.

Because the semester is so far advanced, many students probably feel that it is too late to apply for NYA positions, he said. That is not so, Silva added. The NYA budget does not close until Tuesday, June 2, and that leaves approximately a month and a half to work.

There is an abundance of jobs now, Silva revealed, and applications for them will be accepted in Room 156, the Placement Office.

That too would not bother the Indians as individuals. The philosophy of many of them also includes unselfishness, to coin a word. But even so the leaders of India are attempting to accomplish what they believe is best for the 380 million both for the present and for the future. With this in mind it is not difficult to understand how the present policy of India is greatly endangering the present and future freedoms of a people who until the dawn of the present age had known nothing but abject poverty.

King

"With each leading organization submitting a candidate, the Freshman King contest is functioning according to schedule," Win Golden, low freshman president, stressed this week.

The contest to determine the "umph-boy" of the campus will be held simultaneously with the Sophomore Sweetheart contest, which is being conducted by Jack Skinner, high sophomore class president.

New Title

Freshman King, the new title to be bestowed on the winning candidate was changed from last semester's Freshman Apollo with the intention of getting a larger number of competitors.

The preliminary candidates will be introduced to the college at a rally in the first part of May. Pictures of all those running will be posted in the hall on May 11. The preliminary contestants will be chosen by May 14 and, the finals will be posted by May 19.

Candidates to Wear Tags

Identification tags will be worn by preliminary candidates when each of the organizations have submitted the names of their representatives to Shirley Cook, secretary of the class.

Endeavoring to eliminate competition, the four sorrorities of the college will collaborate to make the award. The sorority presidents are Shirley Wood, Theta Tau; Jo Ann Hall, Kappa Phi; Patricia Niemeyer, Phi Beta Rho; and Lois Stienhart, Alpha Lambda Chi.

Golden urges all clubs to submit the name of their candidate as soon as possible.

Ex Council

Service Group May Be Formed Soon At College

Tentative plans have been formulated by the members of the college Executive Council to form a Service Society. This new organization will be a coeducational honor society, giving recognition for the outstanding students of the college. The plan was submitted by Jim Duryea, Associated Men's Students president, at last Tuesday's council meeting.

Details Listed

Details of the plan are as follows:

1. Members of the Executive Council will choose ten members from the low sophomore class who have been outstanding in various fields while enrolled in college. Every field will be considered. Cooperation, activities, athletics, scholarship, and extra curricular, will be taken into consideration.

2. Upon graduation, the members of the Service Society will be presented with an award of some kind.

3. With the Executive Council, the departing Service Society members will aid in the choosing of the ten new members.

Similar Plans Used

The plan is similar to those used on various high school, colleges and universities campuses.

At present the college has put two awards recognizing the outstanding students of the college, the Presidents Plaque, and the Scholarship, award, and these are presented only at graduation.

The Executive Council will continue discussion of the plan. When a final decision has been made it shall be announced by The Guardsman.

Furniture Men Will Hear College Choir

The A-Capella Choir will continue its series of spring appearances with a performance at a luncheon of the California Furniture buyers to be held at the Furniture Mart Auditorium today, Friday, April 17.

"This is a return engagement," Flossita Badger, choir director, pointed out, and appreciation is extended those who again issued the invitation." Songs rendered for the occasion will be varied in form, bearing no central theme.

On College Council Program

The next choir appearance will be at the college Tuesday evening, April 28—the meeting of the Junior Col-

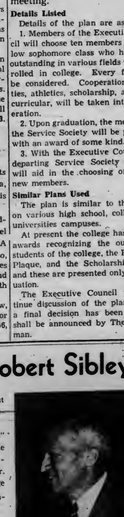
California's Robert Sibley In College Appearance



By Bob Catudio

History was in the making last week—or at least that was the general impression!

With "the hands in the pockets" appearance reminiscent of the late Will Rogers, the University of California's perrenial freshman, Dr. Robert Sibley, addressed the college student body in the men's gymnasium last week.

The middle-aged alumni secretary of the Berkeley campus spoke to an interested gathering, and his features were indeed a combination of the ex-Claremore County cowboy star plus those of the modern Middle Western poet, Carl Sandburg.

With a thatch of hair streaked with gray, smoky-blue eyes indicative of mass mischievousness, and a voice as magnetic as that of FDR, Dr. Sibley's talk proved to be a comedy monologue (a la Red Skelton), and a "serious" talk on science and its achievements today,

Dr. Robert Sibley, alumni secretary of the University of California, whose recent "informal" talk at the Alpha Gamma Sigma assembly proved to be quite a successful venture. Following his visit to the college campus, Dr. Sibley returned to Berkeley, where he has been accomplishing so much of his recent work.

across the Bay talked quite informally about the University of California's giant cyclotron, which will soon be put in operation by its inventor, Dr. David Lawrence.

Dr. Lawrence's, "atom smasher" will aid science and mankind in no uncertain terms, according to Dr. Sibley. If the giant cyclotron is a success (and there is no doubt about that), cancer, one of mankind's greatest mysteries, can be quickly cured by the simplified operation of Dr. Lawrence's machine, an instrument that won for him 1940's Nobel Prize in Science.

The treatment of cancer today is accomplished by radium rays, but radium is as scarce as a brand new pair of 700 x 15 tires, and as costly as a diamond-studded chinchilla wrap.

"The life of a scientist is not all peaches and cream," Sibley explained, "but one of concentrated effort in an attempt to aid man. The scientist may be working to uncover a certain formula, and he may find out about something else equally as important as that which he was seeking."

"Life on a university campus is not as austere as many people have been led to believe," Sibley said, "but life on any campus is just as human as anywhere else."

As an example, here's a story Sibley tells about one of Berkeley's "proudest" professors:

It seems that one day, this dignified professor, who happened to be using the telephone at the time, told the telephone operator to go to (you know where!), when he found out that the line was busy. The startled telephone operator reported the incident to the college prexy, who later told the "self-esteemed" professor that he must ring up the telephone operator and apologize.

Well . . . word got around the campus that the "prof" was going to apologize, and when the day arrived, everyone on the UC campus picked up their telephone receivers and listened in.

"Are you the telephone operator that I told to go to hell the other day?" cruffly demanded the "prof."

"Why, yes!" answered the girl.

"Well, then, don't go," yelled the "pride infested" professor.

Everything was not all side-splitting humor, and the guest from

AMS

Marin Site For College Barn Dance

Starting at 6 p. m. in the form of an eyening picnic, the semi-annual Associated Men Students' barn dance will be held this semester on a Saturday night, May 2, at the Fairfax Barn and Park in Marin County, Jim Duryea, AMS president, disclosed this week.

"We are very fortunate in getting this pavilion," Duryea revealed. "It is easily twice as large as the Richmond pavilion, which is fairly large in itself."

Accessable by Bus

Duryea said that the barn was located approximately 17 miles from San Francisco via the Golden Gate Bridge in Marin County. He also assured men students who are not sure of using their parents' cars that the Greyhound Bus Line runs directly to the park.

"We have not as yet selected an orchestra for the dance," he remarked, "but a committee headed by Bob Oberall is working diligently to find a suitable band for the occasion. A committee led by Bill Steenbrye was responsible for the rental of Fairfax Barn."

Provide Own Lunches

Duryea urged women students to cooperate with the idea of the evening picnic by bringing some kind of a lunch for herself and her escort. He explained that due to daylight saving time there will be plenty of time for playing baseball, riding horseback, and dancing to juke box music before the actual dance starts.

First Performance By Band May 26 in Men's Gymnasium

Under the tentative title of Victory Varieties, the college band will give its first concert of the semester on May 26, at the men's gymnasium, according to Madison J. Devlin, band instructor. Also appearing on the program will be the A Capella choir, the orchestra, several quartets and solos, and some dance numbers.

Details of the program, such as program, length of time, and hour, have not been worked out as yet, Devlin said.

The band is also scheduled to appear for the next-rally on May 8 where the candidates for the Soph Sweetheart will be presented to the Associated Students.

Treasury Department Approves College Defense Stamp Campaign; Program Slated To Begin April 27

With the approval of the Treasury Department, this college will inaugurate a Buy A Ton Of Freedom campaign Monday, April 27. Main object of the campaign will be to add impetus to the sale of war stamps.

This idea was offered in a column of The Guardsman last Friday. Following encouragement of the San Francisco War Savings Committee plans were begun to make definite arrangements for rallies, stamp booths, and additional methods of boosting sales.

Differs from Others

Differing from the arrangements made at other colleges and universities in the Bay Area, the goal set will not be for definite war materials or supplies but for a large amount of war stamps. Those in charge of the entire affair have not made plain the connection between the name being given to the campaign and the method which will be used to connect that name with the campaign aims. However, it is thought that the aim will be a ton of stamps sold to or by students.

On the first day of the drive there will be a desk in the center of the first floor hall at which students may purchase stamps. It is expected that several prominent persons will be brought to the college by the committee in charge to aid at this desk.

Giant Rally Tentative

Also planned, but still in the tentative stage, is a giant rally at the El Rey theatre on May 8. It is hoped that well known columnists and writers, as well as other prominent persons will attend. Details as to time and program are still to be determined.

A committee has been chosen which will arrange for a display in one of the show cases on the first floor. Members have already begun work on this phase of the Buy A Ton Of Freedom drive. Purpose of the display will be to illustrate to students just exactly what their purchases will provide for the armed forces of the United States.

Dean Edwin C. Browne has given this student drive his full recommendation. "I feel certain," he said, "that students will get behind this idea and give it their cooperation."

College Plan Cited

A letter has been received from Vincent I. Compagno, who is connected with public subscriptions to the war effort, which says in part:

"It is only through such unselfish efforts on the part of the citizens of this country that we shall attain victory and attain it soon. . . . I feel sure that such activity will result in many hundreds of tons of freedom for us all."

The Guardsman will follow the campaign and publish figures of regard to the success of sales in each issue.

AWS

Women Form Plans For All College Picnic

Arrangements for the first all-college picnic to be held in Sigmund Stern Grove about the second week in May will be discussed at a meeting of the Associated Women Student officers this morning, according to Betty MacKillop, AWS president.

The first all-college picnic will be sponsored by the AWS in an effort to instigate new spirit into college events. It will take the place of another college dance or similar affair.

Games and Dancing

Under the tentative plans are included such entertainment as games and dancing. A barbecue prepared by the hotel division will be served. The plan of having picnics and college barbecues was introduced at Stanford and the University of California. The enthusiastic reception with which the idea was met prompted AWS officers and members to arrange for similar activities.

Reservations were made to have Friday, May 8, set aside as a possible date for the affair. Final selection of the date, however, will depend upon selection by the students. Besides the date reserved, both Saturday and Sunday have been considered as possible times for the picnic. Students have been urged to submit their opinions to AWS officers and members as to the most suitable date.

Final Teas

Latest AWS affair this semester was the final in a series of teas given for the high school senior women of San Francisco high schools. Among those present at the tea, which was held on Thursday, April 9, were seniors from Balboa, Commerce, Mission, St. Rose, St. Johns, Notre Dame, Presentation, St. Brigid's, St. Paul's Star of the Sea.

Purpose of these affairs has been to give the high school senior women an inside view of college life. An opportunity to tour the building, meet faculty members, AWS officers and members was presented to the visiting guests.

A special notation of thanks has been offered by Miss MacKillop to the women who served: Eloise Winkfeldt, Ernestine Cervelli, Gloria Olivi, Barbara Stahlman, Sally Nelson, Jean Hunter, Joan Hunter, Nancy Nagle, Gerry Magee, Fleeta Alexander, Pat Ilg, Kay Purce, Marie Richardson, Leona Smith, Florence Espinoza, and Gloria Baireuther.

Junior College Art Display Will Be Shown Next Saturday

Northern California Junior College art will go on display next Saturday, April 18, for an entire month in the DeYoung Museum of Art.

Richard Allman, faculty adviser for the Alpha Delta Epsilon, the college art society, has said that many college students here are expecting to exhibit work. As a jury at the museum must first pass on the work to be shown, it is impossible to determine just who the exhibitors will be.

Among other colleges also exhibiting work are Marin Junior College, Santa Rosa Junior College, San Mateo Junior College, Salinas Junior College and San Jose State College.

Forum Club Offers Prize For Student Contributions

A prize will be offered by the members of the Forum Staff, for the best single contribution to the annual magazine, Winifred Graber, editor of the magazine, announced.

The staff members this year include in addition to Mrs. Graber, Helen Birkett, J. L. Frost, Catherine Ohnemuller, Edith Hendry, and Barbara Norville.

Contributions should be turned in to Dorothy Mercer, Frederick Brecher, William Goss, John Gerstung, or Mrs. Graber before April 24.

Any type of writings will be acceptable, including plays, short stories, satires, or poems, Mrs. Graber said. A successful meeting was held by the club last Friday night.

Any interested students are urged to attend these meetings, where those present discuss timely subjects.

The Forum represents the efforts of the college for the past year. Any student who registered last fall can contribute to this spring's magazine.

Apathy

Victory Menace

There is an evident tendency to take the words of leading industrialists and put into them more than is really meant. The public is told that the productive possibilities of these United States far and away surpasses that of any of our enemies. This is true.

However, these words are not meant to imply that because of either real or potential ability to turn out war essentials the course of the war is already correctly charted. These words are intended to establish in the minds of Americans the forces which their nation can put behind the war. They are not intended to waft the public into a sleepy-time self-assurance that despite the carryings on in other parts of the globe, all will come out in fit style, so why worry, why over-exert oneself?

It must never be forgotten that Germany has acquired the great factories and arms plants of conquered nations. The works of Czechoslovakia, Belgium, France, are turning out machines and supplies for the invader. Is the output of the United Nations equal to the output of Japan, Germany, Italy and the rest of Europe? Can the factories of England, Australia, India, Canada and the United States put out in competition with slave labor? Doubtlessly so!

But, because this is a war being fought on a world scale, so also must production be considered on a world scale. That half of the world which is already under the blessing of the new order is handicapped in numerous ways. The labor of men is neither efficient nor effective when those men are serfs. Slow-downs, sabotage, illness, and unrest all tend to decrease the total output.

Lined up against the workers of Hitler are men working freely in jobs which they want to do. They are higher paid, better equipped, and the material they turn out is greater both in quality and quantity.

However, there are millions of men and women working on both sides, though perhaps some work unwillingly. The war supplies that are turned out by enemy labor are not so small that harm cannot be done. Witness the course of fighting to date.

But, say many, soon the production of the United Nations will outstrip that of the Axis. This is evident, taking into consideration the steady rise in output; therefore as soon as production reaches a certain point the war will be over. Beautiful logic!

Of course, other considerations must be made. Suppose the war was lost before the factories got started; suppose we needed men to fight and had to take them out of the factories; suppose an invasion ruined Detroit! These things may not happen. Pearl Harbor, Manila, Bataan, Singapore might not have happened, either.

It should easily be evident that any attitude tending toward apathy or smugness was not intended by those great industrialists when they told of America's established or potential industrial capacity. The very interests of these industrialists is at stake; certainly they have no reason to mean other than the very words they say.

Through all the history of American wars runs a current of lethargy within the ranks of the people at home. In each war it was a long, long time before the public awoke to the complexity of situations. Because of these mental lapses on the part of the public, because of the so-what attitude and the what-do-I-care philosophy, because of these things America has come close to losing more than one war.

In peace times the blame for conditions may be placed upon Congress, the President, the Army, the Navy, on almost anything. Today the blame reverts to those who previously did the blaming. Things should now be taken at their face value only. Dreams of the future should be left for the future. Those who feel otherwise are only rocking the boat. There is a storm.

BESIDES

Ruining a perfect race of house boys, the war has cast a beam into the dark corridors of the Japanese mind.

"One never knows what they're thinking," is the usual complaint from householders.

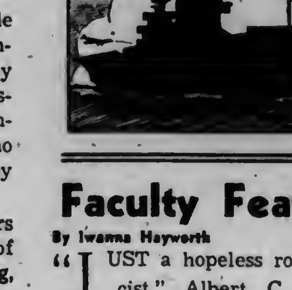
Probably the truth is that this aggravating aura of sinister mystery that seems to surround our alienated little brown brothers is that in contrast to us American blabber mouths, the wily Jap doesn't go around shooting his mouth off.

A local home owner who has employed a Japanese gardener for the past 15 years and who kept him in service after Pearl Harbor because he was a second generation American and because it seemed to him that any one who'd reaped the benefits of the "Great American Freedom" for so long could only be loyal. "We are not fighting the Japanese people," he thought, "we are fighting their leaders."

The order for evacuation to Manzanar went into effect. The little Japanese gardener paid his last visit to his old employer, who patted the little fellow on the back and said banteringly:

"Now you won't be able to send me that Japanese kimono will you?"

"If we win, I fix you up with wooden one mighty quick, though," replied his "faithful" servant.



AND IN

those dark days for Tokyo when the Japanese were being forced to fight or look ridiculous, when one of our naval leaders said that we could beat the Jap Navy "some Thursday," the Japs were grasping at straws. Anything that would serve as propaganda to bolster the quivering public was employed. We quote an issue of the Nichi Nichi of Tokyo for August 20, 1941:

"The United States should realize that our navy is a weapon to be reckoned with. The Japanese navy could throw an effective blockade around Australia, thus keeping wool from reaching the States. As North American winters are severe, the number of deaths by freezing would be appalling."

Soon, perhaps, Nichi Nichi will state in a self-righteous editorial:

"We have no quarrel with the Australian people. We are shooting at their sheep. The fact that they got in the way of our shells is no fault of ours."

Bus story praised; Soccer team award Corridor Crowded

Editor's Note: Students or faculty members wishing to author letters should leave them in The Guardsman office, Room 132, before 11 a. m. on Tuesdays. They should be addressed to the editor. Any subject is acceptable, although letters dealing with the college are generally preferred. All contributions will be published in this column, but it may be necessary to edit those which are too lengthy.

• Let's Hope

Editor, The Guardsman:

Finally after so much "beefing" about the crowded busses someone, namely Doug Johnson, has put the complaint into black and white.

The picture of the bus starter at the Twin Peaks tunnel actually pushing students in the already crowded bus must prove something.

Let's hope that with the picture, the article, the measles epidemic in the college, and additional other factors will give a hint to the officials, and if possible they will provide us with another bus.

Thank you, Guardsman, and Mr. Johnson for the fine publicity. Let's hope it does some good.

A Bus Rider.

• Where's the Trophy

Editor of The Guardsman:

The championship soccer team which had such a tough time in acquiring their due reward as champs last semester has a gripe.

Although many of the students of the college don't believe that the team deserved the award sweater, I believe that the trophy which the team received should be placed next to those in the award case in the lobby. It was received into Miss Mary Jane Learned's care several weeks ago and since then no one has seen it.

Most of the fellows of the team have never seen the trophy, and Coach Jim Jensen has not seen it. We, of the soccer team, would like to see what we won. Requests to the administration to place it in the award case has failed, so we appeal through the voice of The Guardsman to have the trophy displayed.

John Lazar, Captain.

• Clear the Path

Editor, The Guardsman:

Can't you do something about the crowds of men and women who continually block the middle of the corridor near the front steps just between classes?

Every day there are "seemingly millions of people" clogging the corridor, and one has to make a detour via Phelan Avenue in order to get past the milling congregation.

How about doing something about this problem, so that people can cross the front-door corridor before the snow sets in?

Mr. D. Tour Past.

WITH magnolia blossoms, green ferns, a large full moon, and sweet soft music, what more could one want as atmosphere for the Cotton Ball planned for April 25. Very little—unless the women want cotton formals.

Now here is where the trouble comes in. Many of the larger stores about town shrieked in horror when the words "cotton formal" was whispered in their ears. One department buyer shook her head sadly and said "No"—No formals because of national defense? Because it is too early for cottons to be shown! We could find no answer. Only that if you want a formal to wear to the ball you'd better hustle up right fast and either make one, or run the town over and try to find one to your liking.

HIDDEN MAGNETIC POWER

For some reason cotton formals have always held a special magnetic power; for when one looks at the nets, taffetas, and velvet gowns on racks, and hangers in the stores, the cotton ones seem so much cooler, so eye-catching, or should we say delightful, delectable, and de-lovely.

And now that the time comes to wear one, it seems highly unfair to organized students of the San Francisco Junior College that there should be a scarcity of them.

THE FASHION PARADE

However, in order that you may see what is being shown, here are a few birds-eye views of several models.

A large flowered print with a full skirt, the print cut so that the flowers run diagonally from the middle front seam, a bouquet or flowers made of the same print, and a non-wrinkling linen bolero in either red or green.

Another popular style seems to be the old Gibson Girl fashion. A white blouse with a flowered skirt, and red gathered midriff.

One ultra smart dress was made of multi-colored print, cut low at the neckline, and bound with 3 inch grosgrain ribbon. The binding went around the hemline, and neckline, and also served as the shoulder straps.

SIMILAR STYLES

As may be noticed from the above descriptions, the majority of the dresses follow one set style; of course the materials are all cotton, and are bright, lively colors, and they differ. So there is room for a little variety.

A dress completely out of this category was a baby blue starched voile with a simply enormous skirt, and trimmed with narrow white pleated ruffles. The dress was made for a "luscious blonde"—and who knows but that one of our blondes will get it!

For those little seamstresses among our college students, some very chic models might be designed even in the short amount of time left. Chintz, and dotted swiss always make good-looking dresses, and formals are no exception.

Farewell and good luck!

"JUST a hopeless romanticist," Albert C. Lee, speech instructor, says of himself while giving various accounts of his colorful and very interesting life up to the present.

He was born in Calcutta, India, of American parents. Both parents were active in the educational field in India at that time and his mother is at present supervisor for a large plant under construction by the British and Indian governments.

Lee spent his early childhood intermittently in India and elsewhere. "I was among those shipwrecked on Midway when I was six years of age," he says, "and—we'll go on from there."

Between the ages of 13 and 15, he was again brought to the States, where he remained for his further educational training.

Upon his graduation from Berkeley High, he attended the University of California and graduated from there in 1924. His major subject throughout being English with a minor in Art. Following his graduation he did post-graduate work also at the University.

Upon leaving the University Lee made his third trip around the world; and it was this time, he said, that he did quite a lot of study. His first two trips were made in his younger years along with his parents during different vacations.

It was about this time that Lee sponsored an art movement in India.

Throughout this interview, Lee would break in occasionally with, "but you're not asking any questions at all!" Thereupon he would cheerfully resume the brief sketch of his life.

Perhaps it would be well to build an imaginary scale of his likes and dislikes, although as it became more apparent as time went on that his likes far outnumbered any feeling against anything.

"I like to raise Scotty dogs," he said with a whimsical smile, "and I collect Gay Nineties books—the prices of which may range all the way from twenty-five cents up to fifteen dollars, and by the way, I have acquired quite a collection of these books."

He likes, or then perhaps loves is a better word for it, drama, and feels that it is the greatest single art form in existence.

Together with this, he likes and tremendously enjoys Shakespere, and says about the latter, "I believe that the modern student can understand and appreciate the Shakesperian masterpieces."

As for preferences for food, Lee likes all types of casseroles and souffles, h-mm-h! . . . The last-mentioned and certainly not the least liked bit of culinary art is "just plain hot dogs and sauerkraut."

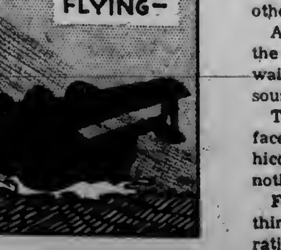
He is interested in making things with his hands such as silk prints and linoleum cuts.

Since he is a great lover of good music, he has a varied assortment of piano recordings, symphonies, and choir selections.

"For amusements," he said, "I enjoy sitting in my car and listening to the radio (remaining stationary, of course, to conserve my tires) and just imagining the scenery flashing by the windows."

Few people are quite so versatile as is Lee, whose vocational abilities are numerous. He said, "I have been a professional actor, lecturer, missionary, sailor and short story writer, comic verse composer, and a troubadour with a touch of 'a la Sandberg.' Incidentally I might add," he said, that sort of thing just doesn't work."

As for favorite authors, he says, "Lanterns On the Levee," stories of romance (and it was here again that he emphasized anew the fact, "I am a hopeless romanticist") drama, and the essay; however, I do not feel that it is as great an art form as drama.



He speaks three dialects and reads Sanskrit a little.

Lee is the sponsor of the Campus Club Players, who are this week staging a campaign for membership. "I would be interested," he said, "in having any student come to me to have their voice 'diagnosed' and perhaps I could be of some assistance to them in correcting any speech difficulty which he might have. Many people do not realize the importance of their voices," he said.

Reverting again to his views on present day affairs, Lee said, "I believe that the young people of today have been given a tough row to hoe, but I think they have the stamina to come through, for these reasons: They have adaptability, and a genuine love of their country.

"I met and shook hands with Mahatma Ghandi one time," he said, "and was acquainted with Tagore, the famous Hindu poet, who died recently."

Closing the interview, Lee said: "I would like to offer my services to any student who feels that he could use corrective assistance in his voice problems. Any ideas which the students may have in regard to the possibility for a dramatics course will receive encouragement from me."

Donna Reed Gets Top Role in MGM's Random Harvest

ANOTHER outstanding graduate of the Andy Hardy Family series, beautiful Donna Reed, wins her most important role to date in James Hilton's "Random Harvest." She will play the second feminine lead in the Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer picturization of the best seller, which co-stars Ronald Colman and Greer Garson.

Miss Reed, a former Los Angeles City College campus queen, was featured in The Courtship of Andy Hardy, and is soon to be seen in the latest Dr. Kildaire film, Born To Be Bad.

Barbara Stanwyck

STANWYCK LENDS A HAND

It was a long scene, running over two pages, but seven-year-old Larry Simms seemed to know his lines.

However, Barbara Stanwyck, with whom he was working in a scene for The Gay Sisters, at Warner Bros. Studio, realized, as did the others on the set, that something was wrong. Larry's heart didn't seem to be in his work. His delivery lacked expression. Finally, Barbara took Larry to one side for a confidential talk.

"Larry," she said kindly, "you don't seem to be interested in this scene. Is something the matter?"

"Gee, Miss Stanwyck," said Larry, almost in tears, "you'd be upset, too, if you'd just broken the crystal on your very first wristwatch."

Three Guys Named Joe is the title of an original screen story just purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer. The story deals with the post-mortal adventures of three happy-go-lucky American fliers who perish in a plane which has been sabotaged by a Jap agent.

"INVADERS" STARS THREESOME

This week's scheduled film fare at the local Market Street theaters offers quite a bit of variety. The Invaders, co-starring Laurence Olivier, Leslie Howard and Raymond Massey, still continues to hold forth at the Orpheum, with its companion feature, a comedy sequel to Hal Roach's Tanks a Million, entitled Hay Foot, featuring William Tracy, James Gleason and Elyse Knox.

Adapted from the Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall best seller, No More Gas, Charles Laughton, Jon Hall and shapely newcomer, Peggy Drake, star in The Tuttles of Tahiti, slated for a Golden Gate debut, while William Holden, Brian Donlevy and Ellen Drew top the Warfield bill in The Remarkable Andrew. Number two film is A Gentleman at Heart, with Cesar Romero, Carole Landis and comic Milton Berle.

TECHNICAL ADAPTATION OF CLASSIC

Filmed in gorgeous Technicolor, The United Artists will offer the classic immortal, Rudyard Kipling's Jungle Book, starring Sabu as the jungle boy, Mowgowli, Rosemary de Camp and Joseph Calleia. Adapted from the "Laughin' and Lovin" Broadway stage hit, Henry Fonda, Olivia DeHavilland and Joan Leslie co-star in The Male Animal, coming to the Paramount.

The Fleet's In makes its local anchorage at the Fox Theater this week, and with the cast of characters headed by sarong-less Dorothy Lamour, William Holden, Eddie Bracken, Betty Hutton (she's on the Pepsodent air show with Bob Hope), and Jimmy Dorsey and his orchestra, featuring blonde and lovely Helen O'Connell, handsome Bob Eberle, Cass Daley and Gil Lamb.

AMERICA is at war! This is no new statement. You have heard it countless times before. Why then are we echoing it? Well, we wish to rise in protest of something that we heard the other day.

We were sitting in a class when we heard someone say to a student that we could lose the war. Now maybe we are sticking our necks out, but we wish to declare that we can't lose it.

No, we aren't experts in Political Science, and we haven't read all of the latest books on economics, but having seen people, we think that that is evidence enough.

We were looking at the giant Examiner presses the other day. It suddenly came to mind that that press was a working model of our democracy.

Although it may not look so good at the present, it didn't look as though they would ever get that paper out on the streets at the rate the presses were going. Maybe that is just where we are now. At the point where the little wheels are beginning to turn the bigger ones. This goes on until there is a machine created that nothing on the face of the earth can stop.

But now the question of fuel comes to mind. What is that machine going to use to progress? Well, it doesn't use gasoline. It doesn't use crude oil. Perhaps the type of fuel may seem a bit odd.

This gigantic effort runs on your dimes. Oh, yes, it runs on the smile that you have when you enter a church, too, but that is really the spirit that you have behind the dime.

It progresses on quarters. These tiny bits of metal turn big bits of metal into churning wheels of defense, and now . . . offense.

And so to President Roosevelt's plea for aid, we would like to add one of our own: Buy your right to breathe TODAY! Support the "BUY A TON OF FREEDOM CAMPAIGN."

SEEN IN THE HALLS

We saw Dick Daneri in the middle of the hall the other day, teaching the women of the college to do the "schottische."

For those of you that are still deep in the woods, this is a dance that they do in Switzerland or some other place.

According to Dick it is quite simple. First you hold the woman's hand and put your other arm about her waist. Then you both run like heck to music that sounds like a boogie beat with the hiccoughs.

This is loads of fun until one of you fall flat on your face from either sheer exhaustion, or you, too, have hiccoughed. Rise gracefully and continue as though nothing had happened.

From reports, Dick is all right but we can't help thinking what a mess he's going to be when they start rationing that cloth about the shoulders.

Newman Club Defeated By State; Sweet To Depart

NEWMANS' SURPRISE

Showing an amazing reversal of form and playing ball of major league caliber, the Newman Club basketball quintet, however, met defeat from the hands of the San Francisco State College Newman Club squad last Friday night, 46 to 37.

The game, held in Berkeley, was one of the many played in the Newman Club basketball tournament, composed mainly of Central California teams.

Although the score may indicate that the college squad went down to humiliating defeat, this was the opposite case, when the roster of the State squad is taken into consideration.

Except for Tom McCarty, high-scoring forward, who failed to play, the State basketeers should have been rightfully called the San Francisco State varsity. When the Rams took to the floor for the opening tipoff, they faced a squad which was the highest-scoring quintet in California for the 1942 season. Yes, the Gators had Leo Fredrickson and Emil Fanfelle at forwards, Norman Keller, at the pivot post, and the two giant guards, Jim Keating and Carl Gustafson.

True, the Ram Newmanites used a few players who were declared ineligible to compete in the college intramural tourney, chiefly Bob Roberts and Marty Toly, the Tom O'Neil-coached Rams managed to win the consolation game over California, 47 to 28.

At the outset of the State game, the Red and White squad forged into an early lead, but were overcome in the final minutes of the first half, with the Purple and Gold enjoying a 19-17 intermission lead.

With Jim Keating tipping in sensational field goals and the passing of Emil Fanfelle setting up beautifully-set plays, the Staters pulled away by a comfortable margin midway in the second half, 35 to 21.

The gap was narrowed down somewhat as the Rams made a futile bid, but the brilliant Keating kept peppering away at the hoop to safely cinch the contest for the Buchanan Street men.

Perhaps with the confidence gained through this game, the college Newmans may sweep through the remainder of the opposition in the intramural tourney. With either the Spartans and Deadeyes favored to cop the title, the race appears wide open, and as to who will win—well, anyone can write his own ticket to that matter.

ONE VICTORY—TWO DEFEATS

Last week, Coach Jim Jensen and three members of his boxing team journeyed to Modesto, where the trio matched blows in the Northern California Junior College Boxing Tournament.

Of the three bouts, only little Don Louie wound up a winner for the Rams. Eddie Glinden, who was undefeated in intercollegiate competition, was upset, losing a three-round decision. Because Glinden was recovering from a case of the flu, may have been one of the reasons why he was unable to continue his victory string.

Tom Llewelyn also lost a close decision, and by an oddity was declared the winner at the end of the bout. It seems that one of the judges made a mistake by putting the wrong name on the slip of paper handed to the referee, and not until Llwelyn was ready to leave, did he know that he lost.

SWEET JOINS GADDY

Not only did the college lose Jack Gaddy to the Navy, but it appears the coaching staff will receive another stiff blow in the very near future.

Russ Sweet, popular track mentor, is expected to depart for Annapolis, where he will join Gaddy, and receive instruction as a physical instructor. Sweet enters as a Lieutenant, Junior Grade.

Incidentally, John Hurley, former swimming coach of the Rams, was recently promoted to a position of Captain in Uncle Sam's Army and has been assigned to Fort Jackson, Florida.

Eventually, the staff will be dwindled down to five men, namely Lee Eisan, Jack Brady, Tom Wilson, Jim Jensen, and Al Eisan. It is rumored that Brady will assist Eisan next fall in the capacity of line coach.

RACQUETEERS NEAR CROWN

Perhaps, the words of Tom Wilson a few weeks back were not idle words after all. Wilson predicted a tennis championship for the Rams and after three conference matches, the Rams have won 15 individual matches while losing but six. If the squad maintains this pace, the racqueteers can easily establish a better mark than made by last year's team. As you know, the squad won 38 matches and lost 18.

WHO IS RIGHT?

The other day in the men's gymnasium an argument was brought up which concerned basketball and the opinions were voiced by Tom Wilson, Jack Brady, and Jim Jensen. Here is the argument. When a player takes the ball out of bounds under his own basket, and on so doing, hits the backboard supporting the basket, and is recovered by his own teammate, is the ball in play, or should the ball be awarded to the opposing team?

Jack Brady maintained that the ball is still in play and Tom Wilson, who is the college basketball coach and referees games in his spare moments, argued along with Jensen that the ball should be given to the opposing squad. After hearing both sides of the argument, what do you think?

MEASLES PLAY HAVOC

It seems that the recent epidemic of measles haunting the college campus has more or less upset the schedule of league games in the intramural competition.

The Deadeyes have lost Frank Lavezzo and Lester Marcus to the terrible bug and Nick Barbarotto, Beta Phi Beta's dime store cager, has also been out of action for the past week.

These two casaba teams faced each other during the week, with the Deadeyes coming out on top 60 to 52.

Rams Face Marin, Menlo At Stanford Tomorrow

If Old Man Weather holds back his tears, the triangular meet between the Rams, the Mariners from Marin, and the Oaks from Menlo will be run off as planned tomorrow, at the Stanford track, 10 o'clock in the morning.

In pre-game figuring, the Ram cindermen should place enough men in different events to come out a possible winner.

Petch Out

The team will probably again lose the services of Dick Petch, the fast-stepping sprinter in the 100 and 220 yard dashes. But the Red and White still has a chance to win these events with the veteran Sam Mendolsohn hitting the tape the winner in both events, and Don Scherba as a possible second or third.

Also back in form will be Jim Duryea, outstanding javelin tosser for the Rams. Jim has been nursing a sore elboga (elbow), but says it feels swell now. So far this season, Duryea has thrown around the 154 mark and has hopes of doing better.

Another point maker will be Jim Skinner, running in the half-mile and mile. Jim is slowly rounding into shape, and if he can step on it like he did in the cross country run last semester, he will be up among the winners.

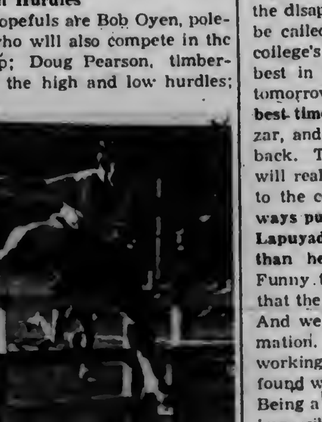
Pearson In Hurdles

Other hopefuls are Bob Oyen, pole-vaulter, who will also compete in the high jump; Doug Pearson, timber-topper in the high and low hurdles; Deryl Kesserlring and Jim King, 440 yard dash men; Walter Thomsen and Bob Howard, 880 and mile runners.

Burt Goebbel and Sam Mendelsohn will be very busy tomorrow morning for they are slated to be iron men. Goebbel will high jump, broad jump and run the low hurdles, while Mendelsohn, aside from the 100 and 220, will also broad jump. Coach Sweet's idea is to get as many men in the different events as possible to get the odd points, or have the points broken up in case of a tie.

Bowker Doubles Up

The other men that Russ Sweet hopes will come through are Irving Bowker, shot and discus thrower; Bill Jennings, high jump and discus; Ed Sanford, in the discus; Cliff Wakefield, 880 yards and relay; Jack Wilson, 880 yards, and John Bertucelli, shot and discus.



In regard to Petch, Coach Sweet said "there's no use working him if his leg still bothers him."

It is still doubtful whether Jim King or Joe Carlevaro will be eligible to compete, due to past credits or grades.

Barksdale-Chapman Again

The Rams' and Menlo's entries in the high jump and broad jump events will have a busy morning, with the entry of Marin's two ebony twins, Don Barksdale and Frank Chapman. Both have cleared six feet four inches in the high jump, and have broad-jumped around the 22 feet eight inches mark.

The times and distances of the contestants from Menlo and Marin are not known, but in all probability the meet will be very close.

"Skittery" Doug Pearson (above) is one of the main reasons why the Rams have garnered more than enough points in the timber-topping events. Pearson will compete tomorrow, when the locals meet Menlo and Marin Junior Colleges at Angell Field, Stanford.

Jensen Swimen Meet Stockton Tigers Today

Meeting today in their first of two meets scheduled for this semester, Ram swimmers compete against Stockton Junior College at Jefferson High in Daly City this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Faced with the realization that they are going to have only two junior college meets this semester, the college swimmers are out to win their third meet of the season. With wins against Berkeley High, a recent win over Palo Alto High, 36 to 29, and only one defeat received from the University of California Frosh, the college swimmers have a good chance in copping the meet, Coach Jim Jensen said skeptically.

Wright Favored

Against the Bengal Tigers today at Jefferson, Jensen expects to meet some stiff competition from two boys who are among the top men in their respective events. Don Wright in the breaststroke will prove a tough competitor for Richardson of this college because his times have been close to national records, Jensen explained.

"Another boy who has had good times all season," Jensen said, "is Tiaola in the 220 yard sprint and the quarter." He will prove more than a match for DeLeano in those events."

In all high school meets the entrants from this college have been limited to one event and the relay for each swimmer and this cost the college aquators many points several times. This afternoon Jensen is doubling up the entrants in each event and in this way he expects to sneak away with added points, heretofore missing in the score.

Defeat Palo Alto

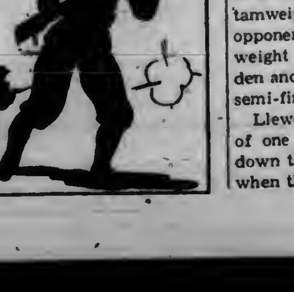
In the recent meet at Palo Alto, the college team came out ahead in the score by winning all but one first place, the 50 yard sprint. It was won by Keeler, and Byers of this college came in second. In the other events the Rams swept all the first places with Bill Hickey winning the century; Phil DeLeano, furlong; Morris Richardson, 100 yard breaststroke; and Tom Callahan, backstroke.

The two relay teams won their race with ease, Jensen said. The medley relay team, composed of Callahan, Richardson and DeLeano, won in a slow time, while the relay team of Byers, Hickey, Jim Duncan and Myron Jacobs won in a similarly slow time.

Signups Taken Now For WAA Recreation Leaders

Co-operating with San Francisco's "Hail America" program, the Women's Athletic Association and Associated Women Students of the college invite all interested to sign-up for the position of Volunteer Recreation Leaders, Bertha Keller, women's athletic instructor, announced this week.

This recreation program for younger women is organized by the Recreation Committee to meet physical fitness needs of youth. To these college women signing up, a short training course will be offered by the Department of Physical Education in volunteer leaders to prepare women to lead hiking and play games.



"Two junior college leaders will be assigned to take one of the many hiking clubs for a half day Saturday hike some day this spring," Miss Keller added. "We urge college women to volunteer and thus render a good service to the city," ended Miss Keller. More details will be related upon signing up.

"Along with other WAA plans," Janice Berch, president, relayed recently, "the individual after-class clubs are functioning according to schedule."

Eager for competition, the basketball club offers a challenge to any group interested in playing basketball.

Arrangements may be made by contacting Carol Braves, manager, by leaving a note in the WAA manager's box in the women's gymnasium. The first tournament is scheduled for as early as April 22 at 4 P. M.

Ram Mound Ace: Wins Two Games

By Charles G. Davis

Running the Bases. . . . In blitz-like fashion, Andy Adams left for Southern California last week. Purpose of this excursion was to show the Brooklyn Dodgers how good the great Adams could hurl when he sets down to work. Results of the one-man invading force to Los Angeles was two wins and no defeats. Scores, Adams 6, opposition 2; Adams 8, other side 2. . . . Andy said that he had men in the outfield, just in case one got by him. . . . And let's see Dave Hunicke and Ed Glinden in action more often. Both boxers are crowd pleasers.

What the intramural basketball tourney lacks is Jack Terry. We can remember the times he'd shoot by the big guys, leaving them nearly stranded in mid-court. He had speed, spelled with a capital S. . . . The college track team might have a high jumper who can climb toward the six foot mark. . . . We've seen Burt Goebbel clear six feet a year ago, and he's certainly capable.. That the bad weather prevailing during this track season might have something to do with the disappointing marks can almost be called true. . . . Let's wish the college's sprinting sensation the best in the triangular track meet tomorrow. Petch might break his best time of 9:9. The meets at Kezar, and the wind should be at his back. Two-tenths of a second less will really look good in print, wind to the contrary. . . . What has always puzzled us is, Why was it Ed Lapuyade didn't see more action than he did during the season. Funny thing, we had the opinion that the college had good cage men. And we weren't alone in that estimation. Our operators have been working overtime, and they've found what caused the lack of wins. Being a student of college makes it impossible for us to divulge the information, but being a reporter we will have to write between the lines . . . If it wasn't the players' fault alone, then who else can one blame? That's right, marvelous deduction Watson. . . . And while we're in the mood, just ask Andy Adams who's the second best ball player. He'll tell you. . . . Good work, Coach Jensen, we're glad the Ex-Council (wot a farce) approved you the dough to take your beak busters out of town to a meet at last . . . Off the Record: Our beloved editor, Bob Marcus, is ushering out at the ball park these days. Always good to have a chum in a key position, huh Robbie! . . . Just a reminder that Jim Skinner will break two minutes in the 880 yard race tomorrow. . . . Don't make a liar out of us, chum. . . . And with all this bad weather and such, how's anyone going to get a look-see at our fast improving baseball team? . . . Anyone get a letter from our old pal "Silent" Jack Gaddy? . . . Whats this we hear about Russ Sweet and the Navy? Seems all the soldiers are athletic instructors, people remark.

Speaking of Ex. Council, why does a good javelin thrower like that guy Duryea want to be in politics? Stay away, Jim, you've made a name as a track man, now don't have people judge you as a second-rate politician. Might throw your arm out shaking your fist. . . . Roaming through the gym yesterday. You'd be surprised how many fine basketball players don't want anything to do with the college varsity. Take Terry out of the lineup and we'd bet on five men from the college against any five on the varsity. But without Terry—You bet we respect him. He's good.

Boxing Squad Victorious In One Bout At Modesto

Only three boxers plus Jim Jensen made a repeat journey to Modesto last Friday night, and only one boxer returned home with a Northern California Junior College title tucked away for future use.

The lone winner for the locals was Don Louie, 118 pound Chinese bantamweight, who won out when his opponent failed to make the classified weight of 120 pounds. Eddie Glinden and Tom Llewelyn lost out in the semi-finals.

Llewelyn lost out by an ironical act of one of the ring judges, who put down the wrong name of the winner when the fight ended.

Three Teams Deadlocked As Basketball Conference Nears Final Week Of Play

By Bob Catudio

Four weeks of hectic cage play and the college's semi-annual intramural basketball tournament continues to ramble onward with upset after upset marring the "solid" predictions of balcony dopesters.

As it stands now, the Spartans, Deadeyes, Rifle Club and the Newman Club will be staging an undeclared cage war attempting to knock each other down the ladder. The only other teams with even a semblance of a chance of catching up with the four leaders are the East Bay Five and the Beta Phi Betas.

Newmans Explode

This week, the highly-touted Newmanites ran wild—yes, ran wild—as they plastered an 84 to 36 defeat on the poor and bewildered Phi Lambda Epsilons.

After Perry Thornton sailed in for an easy lay-up shot, the Newman Club began to take things in hand, and bucket after bucket for point after point were tanked from all and any angles by the Newmanites. In the first quarter, the Club five lost the services of center Bob Marcus, who sustained a twisted ankle in practice.

However, that made little difference, as forwards Jack Koster and Bob Cavanaugh went to work pumping 'em in from both sides of the basket with the aid of Bert Acton and Hal Woods. This should not disillusion any Phi Lambda Epsiloners, for the court play of Bob Haines, Roy Wride and Arlie Charters futilely tried to stem the avalanche of Club baskets.

Rifle Club Upset

The Rifle Club, previously undefeated in tournament competition, fell before the fast-breaking attack of the Deadeyes, a team composed of five men no larger than "a bunch of peanuts on the half shell." They shelled the "wily weapon wielders" to cover, winning out, 44 to 25, thanks to the efforts of forwards Lester Marcus and Frisco Sartor. However, the backboard defensive play of dark-haired Frank Lavezzo, Deadeye pivot man, more than kept the score of the Riflers down to a minimum.

Comptometer scoring seems to be the forte of every team in the circuit as evidenced by last week's session of play in the men's cage emporium.

Included in last week's play is a high-scoring Spartan triumph over the hapless Buffoons, 68 to 23, which would seem to indicate that the organization will be one of the top-heavy favorites to capture the tourney diadem.

Shea-Gahn Star

The defensive feature of the Spartan aggregation has been the play of two men, namely, Ray Shea and Julio Gahn. These two men have been the backbone of the Spartan team game in and game out, even though the Spartanites have received considerable aid from blond Clyde Ramsey and Johnny Quaccia.

In their last outing, the Beta Phi Beta quintet, which has been revamped for the "umpteenth" time, has finally found a starting combination which is worthy of mention.

The addition of Francis Chrisman at guard and Jack Skinner at another backcourt spot has assured the Beta Phi Beta's chances for improvement, as well as an occasional win. Chrisman, ex-Lowell High School cager star, put on an exhibition of "aeronautical" long shooting that even amazed the best of cage fans. Nick Barbaretto, who is as healthy and fresh as an imported daisy, Johnny Scharetg and Lawrence Marchetti comprise the bulwark of the BPB team.

East Bay Ekes Out Win

The East Bay five, and this time with Bob Jones, just did outscore the Buffoons the other afternoon, when they eked out a 43 to 40 triumph. With John Petocelli on the sidelines, the "across the bay" fellows have fallen down in their last couple of games like a termite-infested apartment building.

Down "where the mountains meet the sea," are the Esquires, Buffoons, Tri Epsilon, and the Mediocres. The last two teams mentioned have broken up, but the Mediocres, with a majority of their starting members heading for inland Manzanar, the Mediocres have been importing fellows to cavort for them in each contest.

Towards the end of this semester, when the intramural cage circuit does an "el foldo," this department will attempt to corral an All Intramural Basketball team with the help of Jack Brady, league director, cage referee, statistician and faculty intramural adviser.

East Bay Five Favored Over Beta Phi Beta Today

Today's games will be played in the men's gymnasium commencing at 3 p. m.

Feature cage contest will be the one involving the East Bay Five and Beta Phi Beta. The game is rated as toss-up, but the Invaders from Oakland may win out, according to advance information eminating from the local "gym" onlookers.

In the other fracas, the Esquires will face the Phi Lambda Epsilon quintet in a battle to stay out of the lower circuit division.

Touch-Tackle Starts May 4

As soon as the waters from heaven stop, the college's intramural touch-tackle football league will get under way on May 4, according to Brady, but entry blanks should be handed in on or before May 1. Men planning to enter teams in this forthcoming extravaganza should hand in their blanks to student managers Ted Green and William Gerecke, or Brady.

Commencing May 1, the college's annual intramural swimming meet will be held, if plans are successfully formulated, at the Jefferson High School tank. Men who plan to enter this "aqua-mural" are urged to contact Instructor Jim Jensen immediately. Jensen has been conducting daily swimming practice at the peninsula pool.

Badminton, April 24

On April 24 a badminton tournament will get under way with all games beig held in the men's gymnasium. Because of the intermittent rain, the college horseshoe tournament has been slow in getting under way, but expectations are that it will be completed before the end of this month.

The finals in all of the tournament games will be played sometime toward the end of this present semester, Brady said. This will mark the first time in the history of the college that such an event as this will be held.

Schedules for all events to be held in the men's gymnasium will be posted on the main bulletin board in the science building, and on the three bulletin boards in the "gym."

In regard to the horseshoe tournament, it was pointed out by faculty intramural adviser Brady that men who have entered in the competition should come down to the gymnasium and find out when they are scheduled to participate.

Despite its "delay," the college's annual intramural boxing show will get under way in the very near future, according to boxing coach Jensen. Anyone planning to enter the ring carnival is urged to get in touch with Jensen, who will prescribe a daily training schedule of routine exercise.

Instructors Aid In Sign-Up For Sugar Rationing

To assist in sugar rationing duties on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, May 4 to 7, all San Francisco Public School teachers have been designated by the proper authorities to aid in the registration for sugar rationing, according to Edwin C. Browne, dean of men.

Distribution of booklets for sugar will be carried on in elementary schools and in some junior and senior high schools in the city.

Services Offered

To aid in districts where population is heavy and in districts comprised of numerous foreign born, where registration will be difficult, instructors of the college have offered their services.

This, however, will in no way effect classes at the college. All assistance will be purely voluntary, and will be given at times when the instructors have no classes, Browne added.

Two Shifts

Instructors have been asked to select shifts in which they may do this work. One shift begins at 8 a. m. and ends at 1 p. m. The two others are both four hour shifts, beginning at 1 p. m., and at 5 p. m.

Sugar rationing has been expected momentarily for the past several weeks.

Tuberculin Tests Held At College

By Dr. L. Freedlander, College Physician

The tuberculin test is a harmless skin test. It shows whether or not there are tuberculosis germs in the person's body. It is these germs that cause tuberculosis, or consumption as it used to be called.

The doctor puts a drop of liquid made in the laboratory into the skin. If in ~~two (2) days~~ there is a raised spot (which also may be red) at the place where the test was made, the test is positive. That means that there are tubercle germs somewhere in the body.

A positive test does not mean you have tuberculosis. In the high schools about one out of every three students is positive. In older groups the number of positives is usually greater. These should all be x-rayed. Tuberculosis is a serious disease. Each day, it kills about 200 persons in the U. S. It spreads from one person to another; it is important to find the spreaders.

This year the College has started a tuberculosis testing program in order to make sure the students are free from this disease. In this campaign the group tested showed about 40 percent positives. Out of this group we can expect one percent to show active tuberculosis. Those in the group reacting positive are followed up by an x-ray and consultation.

The approximate cost of this program is about $200. This is extremely inexpensive because for every active case detected it saves the city and county about $3,000, which is the cost of treating an advanced case of tuberculosis, not to mention the infection that a tuberculosis case spreads if one remains undetected. This does not include the cost to the individual in terms of happiness, health, and personal success. This loss cannot be counted in dollars and cents.

Your College plans to extend this program and make it an annual affair, so that the entire student body may assure itself it is free from tuberculosis.

India has made a bad move, it may spell temporary disaster to her cause. It does spell, at any rate, a setback to the work which has thus far been done in the interest of Indian liberty. Such an offer as she had does not arrive every day.

Again war has come to the gates of India. Is she ready? How strong is her defense, how adaptable to offense are her forces? We shall soon know!

War Discussion

College Host For NCJCA Tomorrow

Representatives of 16 junior colleges will meet tomorrow in the college cafeteria for an annual spring meeting, where the subject, The Junior College and the War, will be discussed, William Kratt, president of the Northern California Junior College Conference, disclosed this week.

The guest speakers for tomorrow's luncheon will be Dr. Frank Hart, of the University of California School of Education, who will talk on Educating Civilians for Defense; Ensign U. Wyatt, of the United States Navy, will speak on the Navy's new V1-V5-V7 program; and Sergeant James Greenwell, of the United States Army, will talk on What the Army is Doing.

The luncheon will be under the supervision of the college Hotel and Restaurant Division conducted by Hilda Watson, and Ernst J. Horth will preside as chief chef for the occasion.

Music for the occasion will be provided by the music department of the college under the direction of Florence Badger. The program schedule was not released by Miss Badger.

Social

Oakland Scene For Next Dance Sat., April 25

Unique plans for the first college "Cotton Bowl" are under way according to Gloria Olivi, Associated Student vice president, and social committee chairman. The dance is to be held on Saturday, April 25, in the Scottish Rite Auditorium in Oakland in collaboration with the low sophomore class.

Theme of the dance is to be southern, and decorations and setting will feature greenery and typical southern decorations, low sophomore president Jim Skinner revealed.

Jack Seltenrich and his popular ten-piece dance band will play for the affair. Seltenrich has been connected with such bands as that of Skinnay Ennis, at the Auto Show and on the Pepsodent program.

Featured vocalist with Seltenrich is Sonya Shore. Miss Shore is also prominent in entertainment circles, having been featured on a local radio program twice a week.

The dance is to be held across the bay, explained Miss Olivi, because at least one dance each semester is held in Oakland or its vicinity in consideration of the traveling difficulties encountered by East Bay students attending dances held in San Francisco.

Placement Bureau Reveals Shortage of Woman's Jobs

Disclosing that there is a marked shortage of summer jobs for women students this year, Claude Silva, new college employment head, announced this week that requests for women workers would probably be coming into his office certainly within a month.

"The summer jobs that are open at the present time are summer resort jobs and concern men students mostly," Silva explained. "Regular summer jobs in the city are hard to get because there is a demand for office workers and others immediately. Most employers do not care to wait until summer to hire their personnel, supply of which has been shortened by the war."

However, according to Silva, many part time jobs are still available and there are also a good many business jobs open. He urged unemployed students at the college to see him as soon as possible in regard to immediate part time or summer employment.

"You never can tell," he remarked, "I may be able to get you just the job you're looking for that will fit in nicely with your program here at the college. As for summer employment, there are countless jobs open if the students will only try to get them."

From Lowell High School-- Students In College Life

By Bob Catudio

Meeting the needs of high school graduates, this college is established to provide further training and instruction in both academic and terminal studies. From schools within the city, from surrounding cities, and from various states and foreign countries, students have enrolled here for collegiate training.

Largest group from any particular school is that from Lowell High School. These students have entered almost every branch of college activities. Their alma mater is represented in sports, social activities, clubs, and student government by alumni now enrolled in this college.

Of those who have received special honors or deserve special mention the list is headed by the students who participate actively in political affairs, representing the college's 2200 students in various offices and through their membership on governing bodies.

Bonnie MacPherson holds the highest office to which a first semester co-ed may be elected, that of low freshman vice-president. Miss MacPherson is a student in the Division of Business Training and a member of the Kappa Phi Sorority. Bob Murphy, a major in speech and radio production, is Rally Commissioner and a member of the swimming and wrestling teams. Marshall Hyde, a fellow member with Murphy in the Order of the Ram and Beta Phi, is chairman of the Scholastic Council. This semester's high freshman secretary is Gloria De Martini, a member of Theta Tau.

Prep gridiron fans will remember Jack O'Brien and Jackie Sloan. O'Brien is registered in pre-med and Sloan is an engineering student. Former members of the Block "L" society now active in college sports include O'Brien and Sloan, Dean Marcucci and Nick Devoto (baseball), Vozcain Tashin, Cliff Wakefield and Doug Johnson (track), Don Welcome, Charles Davis and Joe Greeley (basketball).

Tennis men Jim Weller and Joe Greeley (the latter is number two man on the college team) are working under Coach Tom Wilson who has a team which is destined to capture the NCJCC tennis championship.

The Rifle Club, one of the standout organizations in the college, is under the presidency of Robert Ervin, while Henry Pierle and Earl Sobel, former members of the ROTC unit at Lowell, are also prominent in the club.

Marjorie Weiss is one of the better feminine bowlers in the college, and in the whole city. June Walsh, last semester's women's yell leader, is enrolled in pre-nursing, and Ramona Vincent, floriculture major, is vice-president of the Floraculture club. Prominent among the low freshmen women are Mary Alice Scott, who was president of the Girls' Council at Lowell; Betty Giles, vice-president of her high senior class; Marjorie Tomlinson and Nadine Lapkin.

Four members of the Guardsman staff are from Lowell, and they include Francis Chrisman, editor; Doug Johnson, columnist and feature writer who authors Shots at RAMdom; Charles Davis, sports reporter, and former editor of the Lowell; and Marjorie Weiss, reporter.

With the addition of Madison Devlin, former band and instrumental music instructor at Lowell, to the college faculty, many of his former students have enrolled in his courses. James Weller, Lee Appel, and Dick Farrell are among the members of the first band and orchestral units of the college.

Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college scholarship society, is a select group of students who have maintained at least a "B" average during their previous semester in college. Among those students in the college honor society, the list includes Patricia Niemeyer, letters and science major, and last semester's Associated Students' secretary. Miss Niemeyer is a member of Phi Beta Rho sorority and an active worker on the college social committee. Robert Ervin, Herbert, Waechtler and Henry Pierle are also Lowell alumni who have merited the Alpha Gamma Sigma pin.

A recent survey of the 315 students who have registered from Lowell High School shows that the popular majors fall equally in the college preparatory and terminal fields. Greatest enrollments are in Business Training, Civil Engineering, Medicine and Commerce. Nursing, History, Chemistry, Home Economics, Journalism and Aviation comprise the other majors elected by some fifty-four of the group. Freshman Sidney Sommer is the lone Lowell grad majoring in the Hotel and Restaurant Management course. Slightly more than half of the Lowell enrollment signified their majors as Letters and Science and General College.

College Librarian Announces Release of Pertinent Books Intended For Student Use In Study Courses

A new group of books, covering many subjects, is now available for student use in the college library, according to Marcus Skarstedt, college librarian.

Several garden books including The Garden, a well illustrated edition by Weldefare, a group of psychology books, books on personal hygiene and etiquette, history books especially useful in Robert Parker's history courses 28a and 28b are representative of the variety of publications received. The history books include a 17 volume set of New World History by Francis Parkman.

The American Sense of Humor, by E. B. and K. S. White, is termed most enjoyable by Irene Mensing, librarian. Among the other books in this group are The Doctors Mayo, by Clappesattle, An Introduction to Television, by Hylander and Harding, The Ralston Ring, by Lyman; Our Singing Country, sequel to Folk songs of America, by the Lomax Brothers.

Several new sets of books arrived in this shipment. The new sets include 10 volumes of the works of Robert Burns, 10 volumes of the works of Longfellow, 23 volumes of John Burroghs, 23 volumes of Nathanial Hawthorne, and 7 volumes of Alfred Lord Tennyson. The books here listed are only a small percentage of those available.

Students are hoped and expected to enjoy these books, Miss Mensing announced, and they will be placed on the shelves today.

Former Students

College Men Work Clippers To Honolulu

Two former college students are now employed by the Pan-American Airways System. Both men were formerly of the Hotel and Restaurant Division.

Robert L. Klingler has taken over the job of flight steward on the Clipper flying between New York and Honolulu. Klinger, mail clerk at the Palace Hotel for the past year and prior to that, front clerk at the Sir Francis Drake Hotel, graduated from the Hotel Division two years ago. His appointment to Clipper service was announced by T. Kent Morris, chief steward on the line.

College Training Important

Sterling Silver is in Pan-American catering work in New York. A statement made by Morris mentioned that "both these young men have been well trained in the fundamentals of back of the house work through their college training and are just the type for which we are looking for present employment and future promotion."

Verner at Canal Zone

Jack Verner, who completed the course last June, is now a camp superintendent for one of the Kaiser Construction Camps in the Canal Zone. According to letters received by his former instructors, Verner has charge of the feeding and housing of some 400 men in a jungle camp.

A new member of the Marines is Ralph Parkes, formerly of the Hotel and Restaurant Division, who signed up recently.

Dramatics

Three Plays Under Way By Campus Players

For the first time in the history of the campus, a dramatic group, the Campus Players, will give a production in the form of three one-act plays, Dorothy Hogan, president of the organization, said this week.

"All students interested in any form of dramatics are urged to join, because it is vital to the club's existence to have a larger enrollment," added club officials. "At present 25 members constitute the group."

Albert C. Lee, newly chosen adviser of the organization, offers instruction in all phases of the theatre.

The material scheduled for production immediately for the latter part of this month is Juliet and Romeo, The Eve in Evelyn, and The Brink of Silence. According to James McGill, casting director of the club, all but a few roles have been cast and rehearsals are to commence this week.

An important meeting will be held today in room 258 at 3 p. m. to discuss a membership drive.

Stamp Sales At College Show Drop In Past Months

That the sale of Defense Stamps at the college has been exceedingly poor since the drive began more than a month ago was made known last Tuesday by Michael Zarchin, chairman of the committee for the sale of stamps here.

"A student committee has been organized," Zarchin disclosed, "to help in the sale of stamps which is headed by Jack Robinson. To give you some idea of how poor the sales have been, I can say that we have sold less than 80 dollars worth since the drive began. This is less than 10 dollars worth per week."

Zarchin urged students to support the boys at the front by enlisting in the support of Uncle Sam.

California Garden Show Tickets At Reduced Prices

Again this year, the California Spring Garden Show is offering a reduction in the price of admission tickets to the instructors and students at the college.

Coupons may be had by anyone interested, through the college horticulture class. These coupons are good on opening day only, April 28, and may be exchanged at the Box Office with 30 cents.

The garden show will be held at a new location this year, Lakeside Park, on the shores of Lake Merritt in Oakland. The theme is to be "Pan-American Gardens."

University of Texas pharmacists are studying methods of growing, harvesting and curing Castillan Malva, a new medicine that is expected to revolutionize treatment of wounds in wartime.

CAPITAL to CAMPUS

ACP's Jay Richter Reports from Washington

WASHINGTON (ACP) — Each day adds to the likelihood of all-out registration of women-power (ages 18 to 65). Secretary of Labor Perkins predicts that to 15,000,000 workers employed in war industries by January, 1943, 5,000,000 will be women.

The swing is most dramatic in war industries. Less startling—but of more practical value to college women—is the fact that the swing is taking place in almost every field.

The Federal Government is leading the way. Not to mention those hired "in the field," 600 women are arriving in Washington each week to enter Federal service. Many of them are hired for administrative, professional and subprofessional jobs—as economists, public relations experts, ammunition inspectors, dieticians, medical technicians, and ordnance inspectors.

Uncle Sam is using them, too, in skilled and semi-skilled fields—as gas mask inspectors and assemblers, arsenal apprentices, mechanical time fuse workers, examiners of knitted and woven articles, power sewing machine operators. . . .

Right now Civil Service is looking for women mathematicians to make computations in ballistic testing for war agencies. Requirements call for two years of college with three semesters of mathematics. Formal title of the job is "Assistant Technical and Scientific Aid," starting pay, $1,620 annually.

For those with just one year of college, the job to apply for is that of "Junior Technical and Scientific Aid." Emphasis on college physics and chemistry is required. The pay is $1,440.

There are also vacancies right now for women "Junior Physicists" (especially those trained in radio or sound) at $2,000 a year. Requirements are four years of college—24 hours of physics. Seniors who qualify will be hired pending successful graduation. If your major is chemistry instead of physics, apply under the "Junior Chemist" classification.

Incidentally, there's no intention of shouldering college men out of this job picture. However, current vacancies are for women. The obvious inference is that men will be needed elsewhere—and government officials have hardened themselves to the fact. Men can apply for the jobs mentioned above. They aren't as likely to get them at present, that's all.

Alumni of 651 American educational institutions are represented at the "University of the Air," the Naval Air Corps training base at Corpus Christi, Texas. Included are one college of osteopathy, two schools of divinity. California, with 453 students from 61 schools, has more cadets than any other state—20 per cent of the Corpus Christi "student body."

The Norwegian legation in Washington points out that students have joined their teachers in resisting Nazi dominations; a case in point, the "Stavanger incident." When Stavenger students heard their school was to be taken over by Nazi troops, they sneaked into the school building, stripping it of fixtures before the Nazis arrived. Some 9,500 of Norway's 10,500 teachers have resigned in protest against a Quisling order to join the Nazi Teachers' organization.

More than five per cent of the nation's 20-year-olds who registered in the last draft are college students—some 136,700 of them. They were assigned order numbers March 17 and prospects of an early military career are very real for most of them.

The War Department says that beginning June 1, quotas will probably call for men in both the first (21-35) age group and the second age group (20 year old and 36-45 year olds).

Local boards have been instructed to mail questionnaire to registrants in the second age group in "sufficient numbers to insure filling of the June call entirely from this age group if necessary."

The U. S. Office of Education here reports that world war has brought students from 70 foreign countries to American colleges and universities during the last year.

And now, about the history!

It marked the first time in the history of the college that a student body assembly, gathered in the men's gymnasium, actually sat down, and this time, not on the hardwood floor. There were many "pioneers" present, and they blazed the way forth for modern posterity by listening to Dr. Sibley on folding bleacher seats.

Shortage Makes Necessary Return of Red Cross Wool

Claire Cuneo, home economics instructor, has requested that those women who have been issued wool for Red Cross knitting work return it to her as soon as possible. A shortage has made this request necessary.

Women are asked to comply whether or not they have finished the project upon which they are working.

Various garments have been made by college women during the semester for Red Cross relief and other purposes. A display was made of accomplished work in one of the first floor show cases, illustrating a part of the effort being made by the Red Cross toward the war.

WAR DRIVE BEGINS NEXT MONDAY

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

Spring, 1942, brings the antithesis of normalcy. But never was Spring looked to with such expectancy. What about the much heralded Nazi offensive?

From various reports that have come out of England, Russia, Germany and France in the last few weeks, it seems evident that Hitler is almost ready to march into his giant fiasco. The report that he is massing troops in south Russia, and that resistance to the Soviet offensive is increasing, coupled with the fact that new equipment is appearing on the Russian front, all this would seem to indicate that the great show is about to begin.

What Success?

As to its success? Hitler and his generals, what there are left of them, have cause to worry on this score. In the past the Nazi army has had to think little about able opposition. It was so well prepared and equipped that it merely rolled over the foe. At the most it was always a matter of time.

That has been changed. The Russians have had a great deal to do with bringing about that change. Because the Germans failed to go as far as Moscow their plans fell behind schedule. And every bit of ground they now lose puts the schedule that much more behind. It means that the spring offensive will have to make up lost territory before it can start to accomplish the task for which it was predetermined.

And what is more, the opposition which the fresh troops of Hitler will have to face is going to be of equal caliber to that of the famed Nazi legions. An army moves on wheels, and mechanized equipment is of the essence. Russia is getting that equipment, has been getting it for many months.

Burden of Defense

However, in Russia the entire front is of such length that it is necessary to keep far more than a million men fighting on the various sectors at the same time. Stalin does not know where the Nazi offensive is going to strike hardest. He may have some good ideas but he is not certain. This increased burden to the defense makes a continued offense of the first importance.

Hitler will leave the north alone. The south offers much more. There are the oil fields and the possible union with troops of the rising sun. Therefore Stalin and his men are looking to the south for the first great push.

How Strong?

How strong will that push be? England has been causing increased anxiety on the western front. Germany must worry about an invasion of the continent by Allied forces. That is why their ablest general has set up headquarters in France. That is why Laval has assumed control over the fake French Government of Vichy. That is why the French fleet will soon be in German hands. That is why troops are being bled from the smaller nations of Europe.

Hitler faces stronger opposition in Russia. He faces increasing force on the western battlefront. He faces uprisings in the conquered countries. He faces dissention among his people because of the mounting privations of the war. How strong does he dare make his Spring offensive on any one front?

This phase of the war is one differing from former phases in that land taken must not only be patroled but protected against recapture by the enemy. When Hitler took Belgium he had all of it, the same in France, and Holland, and all the others. But now, if he takes a portion of Russia equal even to the whole of his present empire he does not have it completely. The battle goes on and on and on.

Win Quickly!

All the while Axis reserves are being drawn upon, destroyed, or rendered useless by Allied attack. To win Hitler must win quickly, and that is not being done. More than

Midterm Grades Given Next Monday At 11

Students will meet with their advisers to receive notice of their grades for the second time this semester on next Monday, April 27, at 11 o'clock, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar. All 12 o'clock classes will be excused for the meeting.

Any student who receives a grade of D or F in a course, will be given a "cinch notice." No grades of C or better will be given to the students, Miss Learnard said.

Frosh Cinches Mailed

Students attending the college for the first semester will have their "cinch" notices sent home. Students who were assigned Wesley Muscio as their adviser will receive their notices from Yvonne Stoupe, who has replaced Muscio as adviser.

This will be the last advisers meeting of the semester. Students will not meet with their advisers after the final examinations.

Final grades may be received by leaving a self-addressed stamped envelope with the registrar's office, or, by waiting until registration for the next semester gets under way.

Club Advisory Board Will Sponsor Novel Mixer Here

Friday, May 15, has been proclaimed Baby Day! The Club Advisory Board will sponsor the day and will hold a mixer dance from 3 to 5 p. m. in the Women's Gymnasium at the end of the festivities. Baby Day has been a favorite attraction on many other campuses, but this is the first attempt at establishing such a custom here on the campus.

Costumes

All students will be urged to wear costume suitable for the occasion and the entire day will be donated to Kid Kapers, followed by the scheduled mixer dance.

The plan has been approved by the members of the Executive Council, and the Social Committee headed by Gloria Olivi has pledged its support.

The CAB had originally planned a second mixer dance for the students of the college with a theme of April Showers, but upon the suggestion of a club representative the plans for Baby Day were submitted for approval.

AMS

Barn Dance Committee Hears Bands

Possibilities were announced this week by Jim Duryea, Associated Men Students president, that Art Weidner, noted Bay Area orchestra, would be hired for the AMS barn dance to be held in Marin County on Saturday, May 2.

"A committee headed by Bill Steenberg is looking into the hiring of an orchestra," Duryea explained. "They have not as yet found one but it looks as though Weidner will be the choice. Weidner's orchestra has played at some very prominent occasions in the past. He played at Bob Hope's last auto show here in San Francisco and he also played at the last policemen's ball. We will be extremely lucky if we can get his band to play for us."

Admission Free

Duryea disclosed that the dance would be free of charge and that the only requirement would be an Associated Student card presented at the door to the barn. He reminded students that the dance would be held at Fairfax Barn and Park in Marin County, about 17 miles from San Francisco.

"The place is easily reached from San Francisco," he remarked. "Roughly, after crossing the Golden Gate Bridge, it is four miles west of San Rafael, which is easily reached from the other side of the bridge, and from there it is approximately two miles west of San Anselmo."

Student Aid Sought

Students were urged to cooperate in putting on the dance. He reminded them that it would start at 6 p. m. in the form of an evening picnic with plenty of time for playing baseball, badminton, and other sports, as well as dancing to juke box music before the actual dance starts.

"This is one of the most promising occasions of the semester," Duryea said. "We have a beautiful site, plenty of free food, and loads of hay, as well as a swell orchestra. No one can afford to miss this dance and wouldn't if he were in his right mind. Choose your women now men, and get ready for the time of your life."

Requests For Summer Work Still Accepted

Practically the entire supply of summer resort jobs open for college students has been exhausted, Claude Silva, college employment executive, disclosed last Tuesday.

"Students who desire summer resort jobs, which consist in many camp duties such as setting dinner tables, life saving, and cleaning camp, had better see me before April 27 if they expect to get those jobs," Silva warned. "After that date the few offers for such jobs that I have on hand will be withdrawn."

Defense Jobs Certain

Silva remarked that no city summer employment has been sent to the college placement office as yet but he assured students that by the middle of next month he would have many offers among which he predicted that there would be a considerable amount of defense jobs in plants and shipyards throughout the Bay Area.

"The placement office has positively been promised several offers for defense work during the summer," Silva explained. "The only trouble is that the demand is for men workers. Seldom do I receive any offers for feminine employees for full time jobs. As for part time jobs during college, I have several wonderful opportunities for anyone who is interested enough to inquire about them."

Jobs Listed

Jobs include opportunities in an Oakland chain store, male ushers in city theatres, jobs for women offering either room and board or room, board, and salary, delivery jobs on afternoons and Saturdays, child supervisor and director, dishwasher, secretarial work for a woman, newspaper work in the afternoon.

Social

Southern Theme Dominates Low Soph Dance Tomorrow Night

Scheduled for a Southern theme in music and decoration, the low sophomore class of the college in collaboration with the Social Committee will hold its Cotton Ball tomorrow evening from 9 p. m. to 12 midnight at the Scottish Rite Auditorium in Oakland, according to Gloria Olivi, Associated Student vice president and Social Committee chairman.

In accordance with the established custom of conducting at least one dance each semester across the bay, the low sophomore class has chosen to accommodate the East Bay students by holding its Cotton Ball in Oakland. Last semester's high freshman class dance was also held in the Scottish Rite Auditorium.

Seltenrich's Band Chosen

The band which has been chosen to play for the affair is Jack Seltenrich's prominent East Bay band. Featured vocalist with Seltenrich is Sonia Shaw.

Seltenrich's band has had experience in playing for several Bay Area college dances, and has also been incorporated with that of Skinnay Ennis for the last auto show and for the air broadcast of the Bob Hope Pepsodent Program.

Vocalist Prominent

Miss Shaw also is prominent in the entertainment field, having been featured vocalist of the National Broadcasting Company network. Miss Shaw has her own program twice a week over NBC blue network.

Decorations for the dance are being prepared by Jim Skinner, low sophomore class president, and his committee, comprised of class officers Kay Kriefuls, vice president, and Jo Raoli, class secretary.

Semi-Formal Setting

Proper dress for the dance will consist of formals for the women students and dress suits for the men students. In keeping with the theme of the affair cotton formals will be prominent, and women students who have them are urged to year them. The no-corsage rule will as usual be enforced.

Admission to the Cotton Ball will be only by student body card. Each card will admit a couple, and no other admission will be charged or accepted.

Stags Outruled

Stags, Miss Olivi warned, will not be admitted. College dances are intended for the entertainment of the entire student body. No outside-of-college event is intended as a mixer or get-acquainted affair. Mixer dances are planned for this purpose. "This is an official announcement," she stated, "and all would-be offenders are informed of this no-stag ruling."

Originally scheduled to be held early this month, the dance to honor the low sophomores was postponed so that the class itself could take a greater part in the arrangement and assembling of plans for the dance, under the guidance of the Social Committee.

Forum Deadline Today; Extension May Be Obtained

Today is the deadline for contributions to Forum, Winifred Graber, editor of the magazine, stressed this week.

Anyone whose material is not quite ready may get a short extension by seeing Frederick Bracher or Dorothy Mercer in Room 251, Mrs. Graber pointed out.

A prize is offered by the forum staff to the person who turns in the best contribution.

The manuscripts may be submitted to William Goss, John Gerstung, Miss Mercer, Bracher, or Mrs. Graber. Articles may also be left in Room 251, Mrs. Graber said.

Mary Jane Learnard, Phylis Haley Get Phi Lambda Posts

Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, and Phylis Haley were installed as President and Recording Secretary of the Northern California Alumni Section of Phi Lambda Theta, women's educational honor society, last week. Their term of office will be for two years.

Sweetheart-King Election

Tentative Candidates List For Soph, Frosh Crown

A tentative list of candidates has been arranged for the title of Sophomore Sweetheart and released by Jack Skinner, high sophomore class president.

The candidates and their sponsors are:

Theta Tau	Barbara Trgenauler
Phi Beta Rho	Ginger Luke
Rifle Club	Irene Sotak
Lonely Heart Club	Matilda Mortigia
Kappa Phi	Betty MacKillop
Bachelor Society	Lucille Landresse
Campus Players	Janet Baccur

Two Candidates Doubtful

The Lonely Heart Club and Bachelor Society candidates are doubtful runners, Skinner said. There are many organizations that have not sponsored a candidate as yet but are urgently requested to do so in the near future by the sweetheart contest committee. The names of independent candidates will also be accepted, Skinner revealed.

The candidates will be presented to the associated students at a rally to be held in the El Rey theatre on May 8. Pictures of each candidate will be placed in the first floor showcase several days later, and the preliminarys will be run off on May 14. The candidates' pictures will also be run in a later issue of The Guardsman.

Final Election May 19

The final election will be held on May 19. The winner will also be presented with a plaque as well as ruling over the High Sophomore formal which will be held at the St. Francis Yacht Club on May 23. She will also receive gifts and prizes from various college fraternities.

The method of selecting the candidates is different this semester from that of past years. Previously all students had run on independent tickets. Skinner expects a more hotly contested campaign if the idea of organizations sponsoring the candidates is carried out.

Freshman king selections, held simultaneously with those of the sophomore class in choosing a queen, have already gotten under way. Names of candidates are now being accepted by Win Golden, low freshman president.

This contest, with each leading organization of the campus submitting its own contestant, will determine the man considered by students to have the best college personality. Last year's winner was Jim Skinner.

Contestants Listed

According to Golden the following candidates have been submitted by campus clubs and organizations to vie for the title:

Charles McCari	Theta Tau
S. Mohorovich	Phi Lambda Epsilon
Henry Tierce	Alpha Gamma Sigma
Glenn Maehl

Although plans for the contest are far underway, names of candidates are still being accepted by officials of the contest. It is necessary for more organizations to submit contestants to present them in the rally on Friday, May 8, at the El Rey Theatre.

Name Changed

With the intention of getting a larger number of competitors the title of the winning candidate has been changed from last semester's Freshman Apollo.

Officials state that candidates are to be judged on "umph" not "omph," of which there is a distinct difference.

New Books Available In College Library

New books now being processed, will be ready for use in the library in the near future.

"The subjects of these books are not limited," Irene Mensing, librarian, explained, "with a theme range of from gardens to war lands, and plenty of reading pleasure in between. 'Inside Latin America,' by John Gunther, is now available, and has been acclaimed as well worth while."

Varied List

The balance of new books includes Thailand, the New Siam, by Virginia Thompson, a combination historical-geographical guide book to Thailand; California, by Caughey, a book including many points on the history and present day status of California; Versailles, 20 Years After, by Birdall; The Pressure Boys, inside story of lobbying in Washington, by American Correspondent Kenneth Crawford.

The Aztecs of Mexico, by Vaillant, has just come in, as has Plan Your House to Suit Yourself, by Rogers. The former describes the peoples and points of interest of the Mexican Aztecs, the latter is a guide to good taste in furniture buying, room planning, etc.

Dean Browne Stresses Parking Restrictions

Warnings have been issued by Dean Edwin C. Browne that students meet parking regulations and refrain from parking in restricted areas.

Signs, the dean stressed, have long been posted, indicating where cars are not to be left. Restricted areas include the sides of hills on either side of the main building and the back.

Rear Lot Reserved

Space in the rear of the building is reserved for those given special permission to park there. There is no excuse for any than those authorized parking automobiles in this space, the dean said.

Those who fail to meet regulations will find their cars tagged, Browne said.

Repeated Warnings Given

Warnings have been issued to violators of parking rules each semester for the past year. A great deal of space has been given over by The Guardsman toward the solving of this problem.

Dean Browne, in speaking of the problem of parking, also mentioned that actual work has begun on the long promised parking lot. At the beginning of this semester word came from the Administration that surveying operations had been started, and the work now under way was predicted to begin soon. Various delays in weather and unforseen obstacles held back construction operations until now.

Woman Knitters Requested To Return Red Cross Work

Women students who still have not brought their Red Cross knitting or sewing in to be checked should do so immediately. Repeated warnings have been given by Claire Cuneo, adviser, and action will be taken if women do not report soon.

Campaign To Aid Victory Ready; Arrangements For Giant Rally Friday, May 8

Announcing that the college would launch its Buy a Ton of Freedom campaign on Monday, April 27, Don Jensen, Associated Student president, said that this would open one of the most active periods in the history of the college.

The plan as outlined states that instead of buying a jeep or a bomber or any other thing as specific the students buy the stamps for the sake of the freedom that they will bring.

Drive Begins Monday

Beginning Monday morning there will be a desk in the alcove to the left of the center hall. Two women from the Women's Service Society will operate it.

Today there will be a display in the center showcase showing just what the stamps will buy. Throughout the campaign there will be other displays pertaining to national defense.

Speakers Promised

On Monday and throughout the rest of the sale there will be some person of prominence at the desk to aid in the sale of stamps during the noon hours. Among these will be noted authors, speakers and other prominent persons.

During the drive there will be numerous smaller events to build up the sales.

Dance Arranged

On May 1 there will be a dance in one of the gyms. The music has not been settled as yet but it is certain that it will not be from records. Admission to the dance will be one 10 cent stamp per person.

Plans are now being made for a giant rally at the El Rey theatre on May 8. Rally Commissioner Bob Murphy promises that it will dwarf all previous rallies.

Members of the committee in charge of staging this event at the El Rey believe that they will we able to obtain the services of several prominent entertainers for the affair. Details are only tentative at the moment.

Length of the rally will probably be two hours, student leaders have said.

Local Newspaper Sponsors Contest For School Week

Contests suggested by the San Francisco Call Bulletin in conjunction with Public Schools Week were approved by the Board of Education which met last Wednesday, April 15.

Students may participate in contests requiring artistic and editorial skill for a prize of $25 in war bonds. For further information inquire at the GUARDSMAN office.

LIBERTY LIMERICKS

A sailor named Patrick O'Shay
Said—"I've just collected my pay,
And nuts to the blondes,
I'm going to buy bonds—
They'll come in real handy some day."

Together For

War Drive

PARTICIPATION and cooperation in the recently announced Buy a Ton of Freedom campaign is the one requisite upon which the success or failure of the entire venture will stand or fall.

Much time and effort has been put in by those students in charge of running off the plan. The coming rally, in particular, has had more attention devoted to it than is usually the case with rallies. The drive was really supposed to begin a week sooner, but it was decided that the extra time gained by postponing it could be ably used in planning and preparing for events in the future.

This issue of The Guardsman carries the announcement that the campaign will start in earnest next Monday. This issue of The Guardsman also carries the details of forthcoming events to gain student support.

It is imagined that many of those attending the college, and instructing here, are buying war stamps and (or) bonds at their favorite postoffice or place of business. Of these persons it will be asked that they buy at the college bureaus which are now being set up.

But more important, those who have neglected or put off making any purchases are the ones who should really add something to the campaign.

There is no logical reason why those now contributing to the war effort can not contribute through lanes being contributed at the college. Those who are not contributing, and it is assumed that they intend to do so at some time, might as well start now and help to Buy a Ton of Freedom.

Students might not be expected to buy bonds outright; on the other hand there will probably be some instructors who will purchase them. It would be interesting to note whether instructors or students put more support behind the present plan, relative to their respective numbers. Instructors are in a more favored position, but from the standpoint of any and all contributions, of any and all sizes, the eventual winner of such a contest would be difficult to predict.

The faculty is too often in the background in cases such as this; that is, the initiative and the actual doing is left to the students. Perhaps for ordinary campaigns that would be all right, for ordinary campaigns faculty advice would suffice.

But this is not the ordinary case. It is such that it merits the active support and participation of instructors as well as students. There is no reason to doubt that instructors or students will fail to co-operate in the plan. It is felt that better results will be obtained if members of the faculty get into active and evident participation.

Students would be foolish to imagine that in the past rallies or any other student body activity went ahead without the advice and consent of either faculty or administration. Such advice and permission were absolutely necessary.

This present campaign has progressed with the advice and assistance of faculty and administration members. They have, however, worked in the background—the credit does not always go to them as it should.

The successful completion of this drive will, in a large part be due to them. It would be nice if one of the members of the Administration could start the ball rolling by buying the first batch of stamps. Student leaders might also lead the way. It is their idea, certainly they are going to participate in more than arrangements.

Co-operation and participation of faculty, students, Administration and student leaders will assure a successful campaign. Let them all get together. The cause is one that affects the combined groups. Let's have a combined effort.

Shots At ...RAMdom

YOU might as well realize right now, as you start to read this column, that we haven't any material for it, so don't be surprised at anything that pops up. These are just little thoughts that race across what we laughingly call our brain as it strives desperately to record our unparalleled experiences, and the result is

THE FOLLOWING:

"Why do women look in a mirror to comb the hair on the back of their heads, how sailors get along without having any pockets in their pants, why they wear bell bottom pants anyway, because on a ship you'd think they'd always be catching on things, and if it's true that sailors carry their combs in that little place in back where they lace up? Is it true that "women who wear slacks shouldn't turn their backs"? Why don't we have a few anti-aircraft guns on the San Francisco coast? Why do women carefully explain when they leave the table that they're going to powder their noses? We hate liars.

"SHE

didn't like my apartment, so I knocked her out." Why is the guy who gargled this little quip in our ear still alive? We had a hammer and it would've been so easy . . . mish with parsley.

By the way, if you're down town and you want a cab late at night when they're hard to get, breeze up to one of the hotels and stand in front. Usually the doorman will get one for you. Of course, if you're some distance from a hotel with a doorman you'll either have to walk to where there is a doorman or take a cab there. So you see, either way is effective.

We actually got a cabby who wouldn't accept our tip because he said if he'd known the city a little better the charge for the ride wouldn't have been so much. This was so unusual that it left us a bit dizzy. Cabbies usually take so long making change that you automatically tell them to "keep it," or just take half of it so you can go into the house. But, perhaps this guy already had a dime, or thought that we needed it more than he did, which was probably correct.

I wonder why taxis don't install juke boxes. Perhaps it's because this city doesn't encourage taxi dancing.

WEATHER

reports have been cancelled all along the Pacific Coast because of possible aid to the enemy. We don't actually miss the things because you could never depend on them, anyway. We have a special one here, though, that was given to us by a certain agent who has agreed to keep sending us reports if we'll quit trying to tell jokes. His latest is that there will be high winds all along the Pacific Coast SO, now when you see a guy sitting at a typewriter with a dreamy look on his pan and a fleck of foam at his muttering lips, you'll know that he's probably trying to write a column, and you'll know just about what he's thinking. Of course some of those things he thinks about cannot be discussed till you're of age.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Cafeteria Trouble

Editor, The Guardsman.

As student manager of the cafeteria, I wish to thank your correspondent "R.C.I." for his timely letter regarding cafeteria service.

As pointed out by him, much of the crowding at the counter might be obviated if students will refrain from changing their minds and turning back when half way down the line.

Other present causes for delay are—occasioned by recent loss of help and inexperienced help through Japanese evacuation, and the fact that most of our hotel students now have full-time outside of class hours and are not available for cafeteria work. New help is being trained as rapidly as possible.

At the same time may we point out to students several ways in which they may help us alleviate these conditions?

Because we now have only three clean-up men to replace a former staff of ten, we ask that students refrain from putting trash on the water glass and silver service stands and that those who bring bag luncheons take the trouble to put papers and banana peels in trash receptacles provided for that purpose. It will also help us greatly if students refrain from buying sandwiches for lunch determine their choice before hand and thus relieve the congestion at the sandwich stand.

Student Manager,

What, None Yet

Editor, The Guardsman.

After an hour of body building, and an hour of spirited basketball in the gym, we go into the shower room and find NO soap; not even the slightest trace of that stuff, if which rubbed on our tired bodies, will make us clean again.

We take the case to the busses after a gym class, for fear that we may be the unfortunate victims of b. o. We wouldn't want people to think that we have just come from a 4-H Farm Club hog show.

So..how about having the physical education department do a little pondering on the subject of putting some soap in the men's gymnasium shower room.

Leif Buoy.

Thanks Pal

Editor, The Guardsman,

May we congratulate you for the new stories on high school graduates. Besides creating better public relations the article will achieve the purpose of a college paper that we think has been rather neglected. That is getting student interest by names. Keep up the good work and remember "names make news."

Faculty Features . . . "The Man With The Hoe"

Today's column was written by Claire Leeds.

HARRY NELSON heads one of the most unique of the college's well known semi-professional departments; the floriculture division. Nelson is no mere supervisor, he goes out in the field and plants things, and pulls weeds, and hoes, and cultivates, and has a lot of fun like everyone else connected with the floriculture division.

Nelson invites all students and instructors to visit the vegetable and flower gardens and the greenhouse at any time, and offers information on gardening to anyone who is interested.

Those who have already taken advantage of this invitation to inspect the floriculture grounds are impressed by the extensive area cultivated by students. The curricula has been expanded to meet the interests of those who wish practical gardening experience for their own use in home gardens, as well as those of floriculture majors who are being trained to enter some phase of the profession.

With many years of experience in this field, Nelson instructs principally classes in nursery and greenhouse technique. He was recently made president of the Pacific Coast Horticulture Society, one of the oldest organizations of its kind in the West.

Nelson first worked with floriculture as a student in high school. He later attended the University of Southern California, and the University of California at Berkeley. As a landscape gardener at San Pedro, California, he initiated his professional career in floriculture.

His teaching experience began at Los Angeles where he was a cadet teacher in the public grade schools, instructing various aspects of agriculture, horticulture and floriculture. Employed at the Aggier and Musser Seed Company in Los Angeles, Nelson was flower seed salesman for most of the Pacific Coast area. At that time he also taught floriculture in the adult evening high schools at Los Angeles.

In San Francisco, Nelson became manager of Hallawell's nursery, where he was first associated with the Junior college. The embryonic floriculture department held its first classes in nursery practice, conducted by Nelson, at Hallawell's. When the college building was established he accepted a permanent position as floriculture instructor here.

Supervised by Nelson, John R. Herman, instructor of landscape architecture, and Henry Schrumpf of Mohr-Tamke Florists, instructor of flower shop practice and flower arrangement, the division stresses actual practice and field work as well as technical study. Under the direction of Nelson, a course in Victory Gardening is offered, not only to students at the college but to adults desiring a knowledge of gardening technique, who attend special evening and afternoon classes offered by the division.

Similar classes in flower arrangement conducted by Henry Schrumpf, and classes in landscape gardening conducted by John Herman, are offered to students and adults. Courses to train apprentices in flower shop work are now being designed.

"We will maintain the courses in flower arrangement, vegetable gardening and landscape design, for students and adults as long as people are interested," Nelson said. The division hopes to continue instruction through the summer.

The floriculture division was created to meet the demand for trained specialists in the industry," Nelson pointed out. "Placement of our graduates is nearly 100 per cent."

Floriculture graduates receive positions in seed houses, with retail florists, mail nurseries, wholesale, nurseries, florist green houses, as landscape architects, landscape gardeners, and in Civil Service positions.

The curricula includes practically every phase of the field.

Nelson believes, as do the other floriculture instructors, that gardening is especially valuable in boosting public morale during troubled times. He has noted with pleasure the enthusiastic enrollment of both students and adults in the newly organized floriculture classes.

More and more people are finding that gardening is fun. The floriculture division hopes for an even greater enrollment in future semesters.

Cuthbertson The Remarkable Andrew . . . equally remarkable photoplay

Spectator . . .

HISTORY books indicate that Andrew Jackson died in 1845, and little did we expect to see the great Jackson cutting up in anything but an historical film, but even Hollywood will fool you on that score.

The Remarkable Andrew, before its release, was hailed as "the most side-splitting, surprise-full adventure you'll see this year . . . a remarkable picture about a remarkable guy."

STAR STUDDED CAST

Starring Brian Donlevy, William Holden and Ellen Drew, The Remarkable Andrew is a humorous offering, but it also carries a lot of punch in more ways than one. Holden, as Andrew Long, a hardworking city bookkeeper in Shale City, Colorado, is being forced into accepting the blame for a deficit in city treasury funds by unscrupulous politicians, headed by Porter Hall. Just when the jig is about up the historical figure of General Jackson strides into the scene to clear up the mess. Ellen Drew, as Holden's fiancee, adds her bit of feminine appeal and humor to the goings on.

Brian Donlevy, portraying the role of Andrew Jackson, stole the show from beneath the noses of every other character.

CHANGE OF ROLE FOR HOLDEN

William Holden, late of Texas stardom, is not the two fisted, adventurous person we've been seeing in his past films.

Holden assumes the role of a quiet, unassuming accountant, bent on marriage when he gets a raise, but destined for a room with bars until the gallant entry of General Andrew Jackson.

Ellen Drew, sweet faced feminine lead of the film, gives a typical Drew job. Her facial expressions are enough to floor anyone, and her contribution to the film was good, even though she did seem to be held in tow by bigger name stars. We're watching for the day when Ellen Drew ventures forth in a film without the frequent stiff competition.

TIME AND LIFE SAVER

After the long glamour bobs that college women have affected as long as colleges and saddle shoes have existed, a shorter style should be a life as well as time-saver.

Hats look well with this hair style, as they are now being designed with this idea in mind. Little beflowered pillboxes, knitted and woven beanies, and literally a hundred others fit the style to a T.

That ends the hat problem."

If one belongs to a military organization, or if women are drafted to form a women's auxiliary army the cuts will look very jaunty with a military cap.

At the outbreak of the squabble we were a member of a women's military organization and the man sergeant in charge simply "blew his top" when he saw a woman with a long glamour bob or frizzy permanent gumming up her overseas cap. His military blood boiled when he thought of the men and their regulation haircuts, and saw the women with their sloppy hairstyles. Like any 'hard boiled' sergeant he didn't make any bones about it. He simply didn't like long hair with the caps—and he said so.

HAIR APPARENT

Speaking of hair and the absence of bobby pins what will all the Joe Colleges do when they finally grow their Hollywoods and find there are no bobby pins to hold their hair back?

This generation of men has never been faced with a hair pin problem, but apparently a problem is arising.

VICTORY TRAIL

With the conference tennis season already past the halfway mark, and with three matches yet to be contested, Tom Wilson's racqueteers, it now appears, have a better than average possibility of copping the conference crown.

Already met and defeated have been the contingents from Stockton, Yuba, Sacramento and Salinas. From this array of matches, the following results have been compiled: 22 individual victories plus six individual losses.

Upon entering the final drive for the championship, the Ram racket wielders must face Marin and Menlo, apparently easy opponents, but in the case of San Mateo, a far different story may result.

In the first place, the peninsula squad is the defending champion, and it's match with the Red and White will be played on the Bulldog home courts, always regarded an advantage to the home guard.

The Rams, however, with the crown in sight, may prove a tough outfit themselves, what with the undefeated Joe Greeley and Roy Oakes combining strokes.

Both Greeley and Oakes are undefeated in singles and doubles play, and with the improving George Amemiya playing the brand of tennis which he has long been capable, forming the other doubles combination with Ronnie McArthur, look for the Rams to win the 1942 tennis championship.

TAILBACK UNCOVERED

As the atmosphere of spring still haunts the campus, Lee Eisan's spring football attempts to ready the squad for the fall campaign may not go for naught, however.

Through the past several weeks of constant practice, Eisan has uncovered a prospect in the person of Carter Corey. Corey has shown himself an able runner and passer, particularly displaying an aptitude of finesse in handling the pigskin.

Perhaps if Turk Terzian, star tailback of last season, fails to return to college, Corey may fill the bill at the quarterback post.

Another prospect who has shown promise is Herb Jensen, an end, who is adept at pass snagging and has caught Eisan's eye because of his blue like fingers.

Other notables who will prove valuable cogs this year will undoubtedly be Al Morris, John Prongus and George Stokes.

DEADEYES VS. SPARTANS

Finally after many weeks of competition, the intramural basketball round robin conference will bring together the Deadeyes and Spartans in the feature and final attraction of the carnival night planned by Jack Brady.

This contest should prove very interesting as the Deadeye speed will engage the slow, deliberate plan of attack planned by the Spartans.

From this corner, the sharpshooting ability and speed of Les Marcus and Frank Lavezzo will overshadow the Spartans. However, with Clyde Ramsey, Julio Gahn and Ray Shea hitting their peak, the game may prove close indeed.

Brady, as an added attraction, has asked Lloyd Leith and Ernie Bailey, reputable Pacific Coast Conference officials, to tool their whistles for the game.

On this night, also, the finals of the volleyball, badminton and ping pong competition will be staged.

TRACKSTERS FINALLY RUN

Apparently with the deluge of rain halted momentarily, Russ Sweet's cindermen journey to Stockton this afternoon meeting the Stockton Cubs.

Rained out in the dual meet against Menlo and Marin last Saturday, Sweet can only hopes that his men are in good enough condition to win the meet.

Dick Petch, out two weeks with an injured foot, is expected to compete in both the 100 and 220, but too much shouldn't be expected of him in his first outing.

Ever since the Ram speedster ran a 9.9 century in practice, ambitious track fans have been more than anxious for him to better this performance.

Petch will do right well if he wins both races, and his 10 points will add considerably to the Ram point total.

If Petch should falter, Sammy Mendolsohn will take up the burden in the sprints, and even he, is capable of approaching 10 flat in the century.

Ram Racket Wielders Defeat Salinas, 7-0; Top Favorites To Win Championship Title

Blasting their opponents off the courts with all of the skill of a Lockheed aircraft mechanic unscrewing a lead bolt, the men of Tom Wilson's "racqueteering Commandos" captured all seven of their matches from Salinas Junior College last Saturday "ayem" on the Balboa Park courts.

Tomorrow, these same Rams will meet Menlo Junior College at 9:45 a. m. on the Balboa courts.

With only three conference dual matches remaining (Menlo tomorrow, San Mateo and Marin) the Rams stand a fine chance of snatching the Northern California Junior College Tennis Championship; their greatest threat being San Mateo Bulldogs, a team built around the veteran, Jere Selover, ex-San Mateo High School sensation.

Greeley Wins

In last Saturday's top-billed match, Joe Greeley, the barrel-chested bombardier via Lowell High School, was extended to an extra set, but he stormed the net on the next serve to slam home a perfect placement past the bewildered Salinasite, Gene Franco. Greeley won out by a score of 7-5, 6-2.

Roy Oakes, seeded number two on the locals, walloped Salinas' entrant, Dante Gargullo, while Fred Griffin did likewise to Bill Gruber. Ronnie "General" MacArthur, the elongated, towering stork-legged lefty, southpaw used his way to an easy 6-3, 6-0 win over Bob Scravani.

In the fifth singles match, George Amemiya turned back the futile challenge of Jim Harper with a 6-2, 6-1 triumph. This made it a clean sweep —five matches, five wins and ten straight sets.

Rams Win Doubles

The doubles duo of Greeley and Oakes shelled the Salinas combination of Franco and Gruber with a 7-5, 6-1 win, while the MacArthur and Amemiya pair trimmed the duo of Gargullo and Scravani. In the number two doubles affair, the "vegetarian city" invaders resorted to a high lobbing, deep court offensive, an attack destined to maneuver the Ram couples out of position for any return "quickie" over the net.

Coach Wilson, the cagey, soft spoken tennis mentor, is a bit skeptical concerning the chances of his Rams to bring home a championship, and he appears even more skeptical as to the outcome of next week's Battle of the Century with SM's suburbanite Bulldogs.

Already, the locals have disposed of Modesto, Stockton, Yuba, Sacramento and Salinas Junior Colleges, and after the quieted savage fury which they reaped upon the poor Salinas aggregation, it would appear that the Rams are in complete earnest concerning their three remaining matches.

Match play results: Singles—

Greeley (SFJC) def. Franco (SJC), 7-5, 6-3; Oakes (SFJC) def. Gargullo (SJC), 6-2, 6-4; Griffin (SFJC) def. Gruber (SJC), 6-2, 6-4; MacArthur (SFJC) def. Scravani (SJC), 6-3, 6-0 and Amemiya (SFJC) def. Harper (SJC), 6-2, 6-1.

Doubles — Greeley and Oakes (SFJC) def. Franco and Gruber (SJC), 7-5, 6-1, and MacArthur and Amemiya (SFJC) def. Gargullo and Scravani (SJC), 8-6, 6-3.

Cindermen Journey To Stockton Today

In the hopes of erasing the defeat suffered at the hands of the Tigers last year, the Ram track squad will journey to the College of Pacific oval in high hopes of winning their first dual meet of the season. The pole vault and javelin events will start at 3 o'clock, with the mile run commencing promptly at 2:30.

Due to the wetness of the track, the squad has had to do most of its practicing in the gym, but Coach Sweet hopes that the boys will be in top shape by meet time.

Petch May Run

There is a strong possibility that the squad's star sprint man, Dick Petch, will be in condition to compete, whereby the squad will have a virtually a cinch in the 100 and 220.

Many of the college students will remember the great squad that Coach Russ Sweet had under him last season. Bob Lowrey, great 880 and mile runner, Bert Korn, outstanding college dash man, Jack McKeekin, another fast dash man, Keith Groswird, high flying pole vaulter, George Canfield, star quarter-miler, and Stan Young, Bob Coulter, Bill Watkins, timber-topper in the high and low hurdles, and Jim Skinner, dependable distance man.

Nosed Out

The Rams were leading Stockton up until the last field event, the discus, when the Tigers took a first and second to win 74-70.

Potential Ram Track Champs

By Charles G. Davis

Skipping the ropes, and learning the same . . . Latest reports from Russ Sweet's track front has Burt Goebel, star high jumper setting a new college mark with a leap of over six feet, two inches . . . That type of jumping is good enough to cop the Northern California championship. If Goebel and sprinter Petch improve at the rate they have been, the Rams might have a couple of really outstanding track men . . . on second thought, better make that three outstanding men. Can't forget Bill Oyen, the pole vaulter who is flirting with 13 feet. Won't be long before he is going steady with her. Both Oyen and Goebel are from Poly High . . .

And while we are on the subject, sprinter Sammy Mendelsohn happens to be the guy who forced Petch to better 10 flat in the century . . . Sam would be No. 1 dash man at any other junior college in the Bay Area, if there wasn't a gent called Petch lingering somewhere in the woods. Yes, but there wouldn't be a war if there wasn't a littler too . . . And who's the gee who forms the "All Intramural Cage Teams?" Speaking of basketball, wasn't our last championship outfit during Dutch Conlan's era. . . . Looks like the boxing ring will be completed in time for the intramural fights. That night should be in everyone's date book. Rumors are that a dark horse will enter the 127 lbs. division. Ed Glinden will be in the opposite corner awaiting him. That should be the fastest and wildest scrap of the evening.

Does any one know whether or not basketball shoes are on the priority list? Drop us a line will you please.

Touching all bases . . . What worries Lee Eisan's baseball squad is not the hitting anymore, but it's the weather. Only during the past few days have they been able to enjoy a practice without wiping mud from their eyes. . . .

Ram Swimmers Defeated By Stockton Cubs, 49-25

Meeting disaster against an aggregation of the combined efforts of the College of Pacific and Stockton Junior College swimming teams, the college splashers were swamped last Friday 49½ to 25½ at Jefferson High pool.

Sweeping seven out of the nine events the swimmers from the Bengal metropolis proved too much for the Rams. Times made by Bob Wright and Tuioli of Stockton, in the 440 yard race and the 200 yard breaststroke respectively, equalled those times in the local university meets the following day. Tuioli's time in the quarter was 5:01.6 and Wright's time in the breaststroke was 2:29.6. Coach Jim Jensen seems to think that the two fellows are the best in their particular event on the coast this year.

For the Rams, Tom Callahan and Bill Hickey won the only two first places in the meet. Callahan won the 150 yard backstroke and Hickey won the 50 yard sprint plus a second in the 100 yard sprint. Others from this college placing in their event were Byers, tie for third in the 50 and a third in 100; DeLano, second 220 and 440; Filer, third diving; Richardson and Jacobson, second and third breaststroke. Stockton won both the medley relay and four man relay.

1942 Spring Semester All Star Team Selected; Deadeyes Face Spartans In Championship Game; Newman Club Quintet Sets New Scoring Mark

By BOB CATUDIO

With this week's cage play hitting the "el foldo" mark, the Spartans and the Deadeyes escaped last week's ruckus of attempted upsets by ending the college's intramural basketball tournament in a "tighter than a wet knot" tie for first place.

In last week's play, the Spartans knocked over the downtrodden Rifle Club with a 28 to 22 win, but only after the club had fallen apart in the last minutes of the lower half. Julio Gahn, the Spartans' facsimile of "Angelo," pumped in 11 points to lead the Spartan offensive, despite the attempt of Keith Tomley, the Rifle Club southpaw forward, to overhaul a five point lead, which was more than enough to sew up the game.

Newmans Win

With only FOUR men, the enigmatic Newmans toppled the East Bay Five, 42 to 38! Playing without the services of their starting guards, the Newmans revamped their lineup with Jack Koster and Walt Luthi at forwards, and Bob Cavanaugh and Bob Marcus at the guard spots. Using a box zone defense, the shifty Newmans crowded the center key forcing the Oaklanders to shoot from outside the foul line.

Luthi, Koster and Cavanaugh each tallied 12 points, while Johnny Petrocelli and Bob Jones led the losers with 14 and 12 points respectively. The win shoves the Newman up to third place in the intramural cage standings, and it practically eliminates the East Bay Five from further contention.

The college intramural boxing carnival will be held Friday, May 15, in the men's gymnasium starting at 7 p. m. This will mark the first time that the carnival will be staged here at the college. There will be nine boxing matches, according to Boxing Coach Jim Jensen, who predicts that the "largest crowd ever" will be in attendance.

Lose Three Straight

After compiling a record of five straight wins, the Rifle Club hit the skids, losing three ball games in a row. Only Tomley, the dark-haired basketeering lefty, has been able to hit the basket. The play of Dave Oas, Bob Ibarolle, Jim Juri and Bill Mahoric, although consistent, has fallen off in the last weeks by leaps and bounds.

During this semester's play in the local men's cage emporium, the games have been well played. The numerous defaults that marred last semester's league were few, and the manner in which the games were run off was much better.

In the early part of the tournament season, the semester's high scoring mark was shattered twice—and by the same club, namely the Newman Club, whose present standard is 84 points!

Mediocres Withdraw

Save for the unfortunate withdrawal of the Mediocres from the circuit, and for the questionable withdrawal of the Goats, the 12 teams provided enough good play to warrant better attendance.

Sometime in the near future, the league-leading Spartans and Deadeyes will face each other for the intramural diadem, according to Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser and director of league play. As it stands now, both teams are evenly matched and are again at their full strength, a catastrophe that was caused by the merciless measles bug.

The Spartans will start Johnny Quaccia and either Ted Samuel or Ed Lapuyade at forwards; Clyde Ramsey at center, and "Bud" Gahn and Ray Shea at the back court positions. They will face the Deadeyes' starting lineup of Les Marcus and Frisco Sartor at forwards; Frank Lavezzo at the pivot post, and Aldo Bindi and Bill DeMartini at the guard spots.

Spartans Beat Deadeyes

In their first meeting, the Spartans walloped the Deadeyes 36 to 25, but this may be accounted for, since the Deadeyes were "unorganized" and ill-equipped in manpower. Since that day, however, the Deadeyes have waded through intramural opposition winning a total of ten straight contests.

According to the advance information emanating from the local bucket parlor, the odds (if there are any) will slightly favor the more experienced Spartanites, who already have one game to their advantage.

The college's annual intramural touch-tackle football tournament will get under way on May 4, according to Brady, but entry blanks should be submitted to student managers Ted Green and Bill Gcreeke, or Brady.

Now that the rains have "hoboed" their way to the southland, the semi-annual intramural horseshoe tournament has finally started, and the contestants are almost entering the third round of matches. Because of the rains, the "horseless" affair will be completed before the end of the month, according to Brady.

After due deliberation and one month of heavily concentrating guess work, it has arrived, —our ALL-INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL TEAM for this spring session of 1942.

Our five men are LESLIE MARCUS, JACK KOSTER, BOB MARCUS, BOB JONES and JULIO GAHN. These are the men who have borne the brunt of their respective team's attack, a factor which is more than enough to merit their being chosen on our "dream" team.

Mideet Forwards Named

At forwards, the selection dwindled down to the Newman Club's Jack Koster, and to the diminutive, blond, high scoring ace from the Deadeyes quintet, Leslie "Salt" Marcus.

Bob Marcus, 6 foot, 2½ inch center from the Newmans, topped the intramural tournament pivotmen, although much consideration was given to the hard charging Deadeye center, Frank Lavezzo.

Normally a forward or a center, this department has placed Bob Jones of the East Bay Five at a guard spot along with the stocky, rock-ribbed Spartan guard, Julio Gahn. Jones' play for the across the watery divider Five has been consistent, and his playing has had a hand in almost every one of his team's triumphs.

On the runner-up team, this department has placed at one forward, Keith Tomley, the Rifle Club's southpaw midgeteer, and Johnny Quaccia, of the Spartans, one of the cleverest backboard defenders in the circuit. Lavezzo wound up at center on the number two team as a result of his rapid-fire, aggressive team play.

Second Team Selected

The guards on the consolation five are Jack Skinner, of the Beta Phi Beta quintet, and Ray Shea, another one of the boys from the Spartans. Skinner is placed on the number two team because of his brilliant floor play, his leadership, and his desire to keep plugging away even in defeat.

Shea's selection was simple! The ex-Galileo High School cager proved to be one of the Spartans' main weapons, by virtue of his point gathering, defensive play, and speed. Others who could have placed on the second team included Perry Thornton, Jim Juri and Bob Cavanaugh.

As it was, this department's All-Intramural selections have met with the UNANIMOUS approval of Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser and director of intramural activities.

Brady Speaks

Last semester, an All-Intramural five selected by Brady included Al Adendorf, George Lyons, Bob Roberts, Marty Tovey and Jack Hare. Koster and Marcus, who have been selected on this semester's first string, were placed on the second team.

When asked who would win if last semester's All-Intramural team met this season's team, League Director Brady remarked:

"Last year's team would give this semester's team a good battle and, in fact, I wouldn't be a bit surprised if they might win! This semester's selections have been quite good, judging from the fact that the calibber of material in the tournament has been slightly lower than those of previous seasons."

With this semester's intramural cage play finished, faculty adviser Brady has hopes of attracting more basketball teams than were entered his season. Because of the fact that only 12 cage teams formed the circuit, it was not necessary to divide them into two different leagues.

ALL Stars!

The Guardsman All-Intramural Basketball Team for this semester, spring 1942, was a "toughie" to select, but here are the five men who have been selected for the first string.

(Top to Bottom): Leslie Marcus, forward, Jack Koster, forward; Bob Marcus, center, Julio Gahn, guard; and Bob Jones, guard. The Spartans and the Deadeyes, whose teams tied for first place, will meet each other sometime in the near future on an Intramural Sports Night.

College Participation In Public Schools Week Includes Annual Tour; Guest Speakers Featured

College participation in San Francisco's Public Schools' Week will begin April 28, when the college will be host to the parents of college students, George Green, president of the college council, disclosed this week.

Frank W. Hart, professor in the School of Education, University of California, will be the principal speaker, and following Dr. Hart's talk, there will be a panel discussion concerning his lecture. Members of the faculty who are to discuss Hart's thesis are Louis G. Conlan, Edward H. Redford, and Marcus Skarstedt.

Annual Open House

Ogen House at this college, an organization which is an annual event and affords the students' parents a chance to find out what goes on behind the scenes in the daily process of education here at the college.

The college council, an organization of both parents and instructors, has been uniting their efforts so that Tuesday's Open House will attract more visitors than have previously visited the college.

Choir Sings

A part of the evening's festivities will feature the college A-Capella choir. Under the supervision of Flosita Badger, the choir will sing several selections. Open House will begin at 8 p. m., in the college library, and following Dr. Hart's talk, visitors will be conducted on a tour of the science building, according to Green.

The first Open House night was held in November, 1940, when dedication ceremonies welcomed San Francisco citizens to a day at the college.

Homecoming Day was held in April, 1941, and following a tour through the newly erected science building, alumni of the college were invited at the unveiling of Fred Olmsted's statues of Thomas Edison and Leonardo da Vinci.

Advance Noted

From the few traditions established in 1935, six years have seen an extension of college activity, and a widening horizon. Music, debating, publications, clubs, athletics, student government, all have developed within themselves that they may, to its best interests, serve the college.

Scholarships

Ten Offers Now Available For AGS Members

There are ten scholarships available to members of Alpha Gamma Sigma, California Junior College Honor Society, as reported in "The Torchbearer of Alpha Gamma Sigma" published by Fullerton Junior College.

Each chapter of AGS may submit one candidate for each of the tuition scholarships. However, only students who may qualify for permanent membership should be considered. Applications should be in not later than May 1, 1942. For further information, those interested may contact Alice Cooper, faculty adviser for Alpha Gamma Sigma.

Colleges Represented

Colleges offering scholarships are: College of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons, Los Angeles; College of the Pacific; Dominican College, San Rafael; LaVerne College, LaVerne; Mills College, Oakland; Occidental College, Los Angeles; Pomona College, Claremont; University of Redlands, Redlands; University of Southern California, Los Angeles; Whittier College, Whittier (available only in College of Letters, Arts, and Science).

Scholarship Granted

A former member of the college, Constance Wong, has obtained a full tuition scholarship to Mills, where she is majoring in Economics and Scholarship.

She is chairman of the Chinese group there and plans to complete the work for the A.B. degree there. Miss Wong also received the $50 award in 1940.

Exhibition Set For Next Sun. Apr. 25

The college, civilian defense center for the West of Twin Peaks district, will be the scene of an extensive demonstration of Red Cross facilities next Sunday, April 25, from 12 noon to 4 p. m., according to Edward H. Redford, college guidance director.

A dress rehearsal was held last Wednesday for the demonstration, according to Redford. Civilian workers went through the complete routine that would follow a civil catastrophe. Splints were set on "broken" legs, head bandages adjusted to "fractured" skulls and "shock" victims taken care of.

Hospital Set Up

"An emergency hospital will be set up for Sunday's open house demonstration," Redford explained, "and the public will be shown the competency of Red Cross workers trained at the college." Nearly all the college will be used for the display, he said.

Store rooms on the ground floor of the college are crammed with hundreds of blankets, bandage wraps, splints, and other materials for civilian emergency work, according to Redford.

"Much of this material will be used at the demonstration," he said.

Purpose Stated

"We hope to show through this demonstration how far advanced is our division in treating all types of casualties which might result from civilian bombing and straffing by the enemy," Redford said.

The four hour exhibition should demonstrate treatment of virtually all casualties that would result from such a raid," he said.

Student Service

Guidance And Counseling Program Holds Informal Meeting Next Tuesday In Room 100 At 3 p.m.

To aid students who have had difficulty in studying, the recently formed college guidance and counseling bureau will hold an informal meeting for students next Tuesday, April 30, Edward H. Redford, guidance chairman, disclosed this week.

The meeting will be held in Room 100, and will last an approximate one hour and a half, commencing at 3 p. m. Any college student who has had difficulty in his studies is invited to attend the meeting, according to Redford.

"We have formed this new branch by request," Redford said. "Many students, already, as well as others have asked us for methods of better study, and at this first meeting Tuesday, we hope we can discuss any matter that may be brought up concerning better studying habits."

Study Habits Test

When students attend the meeting, they will be given a Study Habits test. This is to determine what faults in studying the student may have been carrying out. The student will be seated on where he stands in regard to the other students who take this same test.

Faculty instructors have been requested to submit a list of students' names to the college guidance bureau. Also, the names only of those students who seem to be having difficulty in understanding their subjects, or for other reasons in this same category.

Additional Meeting Planned

Members of the guidance and counseling bureau who will discuss study habits problems at Tuesday's meeting are Elizabeth Stetson, Phyllis Haley, Marion Turner and Redford. Any other guidance meeting will be held May 5, starting at 3 p. m., in Room 100.

Students may arrange an appointment with any member of the guidance bureau if they find that they are in need of suggestive study rules. If any member of the student body or faculty has any suggestion that might help present matters, they may contact Redford in his office, Room 150.

Pocketful of Notes

The tentative plans for a South Sea Island party started by Tri-Epsilon will come to life tonight at 8 p. m. in the Century Club. This is the first attempt at this type of dance, but from the way the students of the campus are responding to the theme, Tri Epsilon will have a full house.

All students who are planning to attend are urged to wear costumes for the occasion. Decorations will carry out the South Sea Island atmosphere, and free Hawaiian punch is to be served. The Century Club is located at Franklin and Sutter streets, San Francisco. Music will be by Norman Carroll and his orchestra.

Students who may still want to purchase bids may do so at the door. The price is $1.25 a couple.

Club of the Week

No other organization has struggled so hard to establish itself as the Campus Players. Under the leadership of Dorothy Hogan, this dramatic group has worked especially hard this semester to present a program for the members of the Associated Students. Their hopes will come true sometime this May when they will present three one-act plays.

Campus Club Notices

Theater Club . . . Hike to Muir Woods this Sunday, April 26. All students will meet at 5th and Mission streets by the Greyhound Bus terminal. Bring own lunch.

Phi Lambda Epsilon . . . Roy Wride, President of the Phi Lambda Epsilon Fraternity, has announced plans for the remainder of the semester.

The annual Phi Lambda picnic committee headed by Frank Isola, will be held at the termination of the semester.

The open dance, committee headed by Stan Seagren, will be held at either the Sir Francis Drake Hotel in San Francisco, or the Claremont Hotel in Berkeley. Seagren also heads the committee for an old fashioned farmyard dance.

Other events include a weekend trip to the Santa Cruz mountains, an ice skating party, a swimming party, a closed dance. . . .

Debate

College Takes Part In Coast Student Meet

One member of the college debate team will compete in the annual Pacific Coast Student Congress to be held tomorrow at the University of California, Charles McKiernan, debating coach here announced.

The general topic will be Post-War Reconstruction, and will be divided into Domestic Reconstruction and International Reconstruction. The representative from this college will be chosen from the following: Anthony Cosola, Gareth Goldberg, Diane Hampton, Robert McCaffrey, Roger Souza, John Sullivan, and Jim Upp, McKiernan revealed.

Timely Topic

It is fortunate that this problem was selected, McKiernan said, as the debate team has been studying this tended by San Jose State College to subject for the past few weeks.

An invitation has also been extended a team from this college in a discussion program, McKiernan stated.

America's Role Today

The tentative date of the meeting is either May 21 or 22. The subject to be discussed is What Should be America's Role in the World Today? The problem-solving discussion will be used, in which two speakers from each college present the analysis, two solution speeches, and the evaluation of the problem.

The invitation was offered through Henry Leland, Forensics Manager at San Jose State College. The debate team there is planning a trip through this area, meeting teams from various schools and colleges here, McKiernan said.

Dr. John H. Furbay of Mills College has been drafted as lecturer to army officers and enlisted men on the subject of West Africa.

At This College -- Graduates Of Mission High Are Active

By Bob Catudio

Providing a wide variety of opportunities for high school graduates, this college is established so that training and instruction may be given to those who wish to go to advanced fields of knowledge.

Although there are not as many graduates registered in this college in comparison to other secondary schools, students from Mission High School have entered almost every branch of college activities. There are representatives from Mission in sports, social activities, clubs, and student government.

"Clinky"

Outstanding among Mission's graduates is Helen Crienkovich, national women's diving champion and a contender for last year's award as the woman of the year in sports. Miss Crienkovich is a major in physical education, is a licensed airplane aviatrix, and upon her completion of study here, intends to be an instructor.

Leading the list of students are those who have been active in student affairs and through their membership on college governing bodies. They represent a portion of the college's total enrollment of 2200 students.

Asta Hansen, a pre-medical major, is this semester's treasurer of the Nu Epsilon Sigma sorority; Faye Logan is a recreation major, and a Phi Epsilon Rho sorority member, while majoring in English is Marguerite Martin. Miss Martin is also a member of the Forum Club, and the Pick and Hammer Club.

Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college's honor society, is an organization formed to honor students who have maintained a scholastic "B" average during their stay at this college. Missionites on the honor society include George Cowie, Harold Juster, Marie Soehner, Mildred Ungar and Betty White.

Former members of the Block "M" now active in college sports this semester include Darrel Keirsh, Jim Corrigan, (baseball); Ed Glavis, (football); Jack Koster, (basketball); and John Lazar, (soccer). Ex-Missionites Bob Marcus and Jack Koster were selected on the college All-Intramural Basketball Team this semester, while another intramural competitor is Fred Norton, a police science major.

Members of the college Hotel and Restaurant Division are Charles Highsted and Edward Nylund, while Robert Chow, a civil engineering major, is the lone Mission graduate member of the Chinese Students' Club. First semester students here at the college include Bessie Davis, a dietetics major; George Jackson, aviation major; and Rodney Silk, a pre-dentistry major.

There are two members of the Guardsman newspaper staff from Mission High School, and those two are Bob Catudio, sports editor and alternate author of RAMblings, and Jack Robinson, reporter and columnist writer of Cabbages and Kings.

The Ice Skating Club boasts of the membership of Dorothy Morlan and Art Hudson, both active participant in the college A-Capella Choir is Eleanor Soloman.

Women who are engaged in Women's Athletic Association work are Rosalinda Heppel and Georgia Theodus; Mildred Kipp, a biology major, is out for archery, and Edna Smith and Ruth Vladyka are members of the college Home Economics Association.

Other students from Mission include Doris Gray, social science major; Andrew McDevitt, majoring in aviation; Beatrice Sanguinetti, English major; and Homer Wm. chemistry major, and a Phi Alpha Omega fraternity member.

A recent survey of the total number of Mission High School graduates now attending this college shows that the popular majors fall mainly in the college preparatory and terminal fields. The greatest enrollments are in Civil Engineering, Business, History, Aviation, English, Chemistry and Pre-Dental.

Accounting, Hotel and Restaurant, Home Economics, Police, Journalism, Pre-Nursing, Pre-Legal and Physical Education comprise the other majors selected by some 63 of the group. Slightly more than two-fifths of the Mission enrollment signified their majors as Letters and Science and General College.

Guardsman Radish Blooms!

Following a campaign that has carried through the greater part of the current semester, The Guardsman has finally succeeded in getting radishes raised. They are shown heer in wheelbarrow lot—an exhibition for th doubtful and the scornful.

The Final Report - Radishes Are Redeemed At Last

By CLAIRE LEEDS

At last the radish is redeemed. An attractive, crisp and succulent addition to any meal, the radish, but a sadly misunderstood vegetable.

Guardsman readers have asked, "What is the meaning of this ridiculous campaign for raising beautiful radishes? Why radishes?

The radish reporter explains that all of this began years ago. As a child, the reporter had a constructive if peculiar practice of secluding itself in closets and stringing together yards and yards of paper clips. Well-meaning but misinformed relatives decided what was the matter with the child. It was vitamin deficiency.

"Eat the nice spinach," they coaxed. "Spinach has vitamins A, B, C and D respectively. Also eat carrots, broccolli and parsnips. They have lots of lovely vitamins."

They did not understand. The only vegetable the child really liked was the radish, and the radish has no vitamins to speak of, much less calories. So they would not allow the child to eat radishes. They gorged it with brussles sprouts, turnips and cauliflower. Everything but radishes.

The reporter has since given up stringing paper clips but never has it forgotten the radish. So, when students began planting vegetables in the college Victory Gardens it wrote radish reports for The Guardsman in the interest of producing better radishes.

After weeks of waiting, they were ready to pull. They were beautiful radishes, and everyone loved them. Floriculture student Ramona Vincent even agreed to pose with them for a picture. For once all of those other nice vegetables with vitamins were ignored.

The radish was at last redeemed.

AWS

All College Picnic Planned By Women

Arrangements for the first college picnic to be held at Sigmund Stern Grove in May were discussed at a meeting of the officers of the Associated Women Students last week, according to Betty MacKillop, AWS president.

Instead of another dance or similar affair, the women students of the college are planning an all-college picnic. Thus far, the plans are quite tentative, and arrangements for the carrying out of the plans are still rather vague.

Date Indefinite

Tentative date for the picnic is still Friday, May 8. Although in some respects, the date was chosen temporarily because of the lack of opinions rendered by the students, both the tentative date and some Saturday or Sunday in May have been considered for the picnic.

Preparations for the picnic include a barbecue, prepared by the hotel division; entertainment, consisting of games and dancing, and a general good time for all, promised Miss MacKillop.

Student Support Sought

Whether or not this affair will become a college tradition will depend upon the success of this first picnic.

Support of the entire student body is being sought for the success of the event.

Sweetheart Elections

Queen Candidates To Be Introduced At Theater Rally May 8; Lucille Landresse Withdraws From Race

Several more candidates have been added to the list already submitted to the Sophomore Sweetheart contest and one contestant has dropped out of the list, Jack Skinner, high sophomore class president, revealed.

Lucille Landresse, who was sponsored by the Bachelor Society, has withdrawn her name. To date the list of candidates reads:

Theta Tau ..... Barbara Trigenauer
Phi Beta Rho ..... Ginger Luke
Rifle Club ..... Irene Sotak
Lonely Heart Club ... Matilda Mortigia
Kappa Phi ..... Betty MacKillop
Campus Players ..... Janet Baccus

Presentation At Rally

First presentation of the candidates will be at the rally to be held in the Red Theatre on May 8. Each candidate's picture will be placed in a showcase in the center of the building. Pictures of the contestants will also be run in the Guardsman at a later date.

Preliminary elections will be held on Thursday, May 14, and the finals will be run off on May 19. All men college students will be allowed to vote for the contestant. The contest winner will rule over the college during high sophomore week and will also preside at the High Sophomore Formal to be held at the St. Francis Yacht Club on May 23, Skinner said. The winner will also receive gifts and prizes from various fraternities as well as the plaque which is annually presented to the victor.

"Having sponsors nominate the candidates will probably lead to a more hotly contested race," Skinner said.

Social Climax

The Sophomore formal which is held semi-annually at the end of each semester is the final social event of the year. Bert Whiting and his orchestra have been chosen to play for the dance this year, Skinner revealed. Whiting has played for several Stanford and California dances in the past and is well-known throughout the bay region.

Price for the bids will be $1.50 and the affair will be strictly formal, that is, tuxedos for the men and formal dresses for the women. The no corsage tradition has been waived aside for this affair.

Army Cadet Charles North Wins Wings In Texas

By Bob Catudio

"The best class to graduate from Kelly Field—"

A band of United States Army Air Corps cadets, flying above the hangars of a Texas air base, land in perfect formation and taxi their Curtis P-38s into position. Their wing commander is one Charles A. North, a fullfledged cadet colonel, and one of this college's top ranking graduates.

Cadet North's rise to sudden prominence at Kelly Field is a story within itself, and the manner in which it was accomplished gives rise to one's belief in the success of Horatio Alger. Following his graduation from this college in December, 1941, North enlisted in the U. S. Army Air Corps and was immediately sent to a preliminary air base training camp at Santa Maria, California.

As a pilot, North made a "better Grasshopper!"

Every time that he tried to pilot a plane in for a landing, his plane had different ideas and his precision tests had failed. He was given his chance to make it up by proving that he could "land" a plane without shaking up the Southern California coast. North passed this opportunity by, but Kelly Field still awaited him!

After successfully passing a bombardier and navigation examination, the 21-year-old North was finally shipped to Kelly Field. He spent hours and hours of indoctrination study, physical exercise and flying in formation, battle maneuvers and-echelon.

Cadet North was again ready for the oncoming acid test, and he would not fail!

Now passed with "flying colors" —in fact, he was graduated top man in his class with the rank of cadet colonel, received his commission as a second lieutenant in the U. S. Army Reserve, and was appointed to the 83rd Squadron.

On graduation day, General Robin A. Day, Post Commandant at Kelly Field, reviewed the class, and it was then that the veteran campaigner made a most "outstanding statement:"

"This is the best class to graduate from Kelly Field."

After General Day had pinned wings on the men in the graduating class, he invited several of the men (North included) to a special banquet given at the Officers' Club. This was the first time that a Post Commandant had taken the time to inspect and review a graduating class at Kelly Field.

North received his early education at Lafayette Grammar School, where he was first elected to any type of office, that of student body

CAB

Baby Day Event Of Club Group Will Be May 15

Anything goes on Baby Day, Friday, May 15, it was announced by Dorthey Hogan, chairman of the Club Advisory Board's proposed Baby Day committee. The plan for Baby Day was offered to the club board some time ago by a representative of the Campus Players and has since been adopted by the club in an effort to establish a new custom on the campus. The Executive Council has given its approval and the committee for the day will work hand in hand with Gloria Olivi, chairman of the Social Committee.

"Baby Day has been a favorite on many another high school and university campus, explained Miss Hogan, "and there is no reason why Baby Day shouldn't be a huge success here on our campus."

Student Support Sought

All students will be urged to attend college in costume. Any costume characteristic of kid days that is in good taste and not too extreme will be the order for the day.

A mixer dance will bring the day to a close. Music will be from records, and the women's gymnasium will be decorated to carry out the baby theme.

"The key point in the proposed Baby Day will be the cooperation of the students of the college," said Miss Hogan. "I know we can count on the various fraternity, sorority and club students to do their best to make the day a success."

Arrangements Discussed

A meeting of the CAB will be held today in room 111 at 3 p. m. for the purpose of discussing the plan and assigning committee heads to work on the plan. All clubs are urged to be represented.

A new plan for the election of next semester's CAB officers is to be submitted to the board for approval by Ed Lopez, president of the group.

The plan will call for candidates to run for office on their own initiative, instead of the usual nominations. Details will be explained at the meeting today.

Constitution Change By Ex-Council Bared

Members of the college Executive Council indicated last Tuesday at a regularly scheduled meeting their wish to change that portion of the constitutional by-laws providing for the purchase of sweaters with Associated Student funds for members of college teams winning championships.

Mention of the matter was first made through the finance committee by President Don Jensen. It was pointed out that the reserve fund, held in readiness for any sudden necessity had been drastically reduced, and that any further reduction was virtually impossible.

Hugh McNerm, Finance Committee chairman, who brought the matter to the attention of the Executive Council, stressed the point that it would be unwise to plan on further expenditures, other than those deemed necessary.

Tennis Team Hit?

In view of the fact that the college tennis team is on the verge of a championship at the present time there was some discussion among council members who felt that the tennis team was entitled to sweater awards, providing they remain undefeated.

It was pointed out, however, that no change would be made before the next two weeks, at which time the tennis team will have probably completed its season.

No Definite Action

Although no definite action has been taken by members of the Executive Council as yet, inquiries are now being made by them into the power invested by the constitution to the Executive Council, looking toward the revision of the by-laws in question.

It is probable that definite action will be taken at the next meeting, Tuesday, May 5.

Freedom Drive

Sales Favorable In College Effort; Giant Rally Set

The college's war drive campaign got under way last Monday with the sale of over a ton and a half of freedom, basing figures on a standard of one pound for every ten cents, according to Jim Upp, campaign committee.

The barometer in the center hall skyrocketed with the sale of approximately $273 in stamps and bonds.

Stamp Booth Open

With the location of the booth in the center hall, the Woman's Service Society has arranged to have it available to students and faculty members each college day from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m.

The principal purpose at the moment, according to Upp, is not only to get the students and faculty to buy bonds and stamps, but to promote vigor into the national drive.

"If each student," Upp continued, "will buy just one ten cent stamp each day it will cause the barometer to soar."

Guests Slated

With the concentration on the rally scheduled for the 8th of May, the committee is planning on having several stars of stage, radio, and screen.

Being held at the El Rey theatre, the rally will be one of the best that has ever been held in the city, according to Bob Murphy, ostensible committeeman.

Upp expressed his disgust at the number of students on the committee who have not completed their tasks. The only active members of the group include Jim Upp, Janice Turner, Barbara Stohmann and Marshall Hyde.

Liberty Queen

Another highlight of the campaign is the choosing of a "Liberty Queen" who will rule over the rally on May 8. According to the members of the committee, the choice without debate is Lucile Landress, a withdrawn candidate for the crown of Soph Sweetheart.

Miss Landress was chosen at a meeting held last Tuesday.

Upp expressed the wish that all students would ask their friends to give full cooperation to the drive.

AWS Picnic Planned For Friday, May 8

Final arrangements have been made for the all-college picnic to be held after the rally at the El Rey theater on Friday, May 8. The picnic will be an Associated Women Student sponsored affair and will take place from 5 p. m. to 7:30 p. m. at Sigmund Stern Grove, Betty MacKillop, AWS president revealed.

Chairman of the arrangements and picnic is Eloise Winfield, AWS vice president. Miss Winfield obtained permission from the City Hall early this week to use Sigmund Stern Grove for the purpose of the all-college picnic.

As was first announced, admission to the picnic will not be limited to couples. All Associated Student card holders are invited to attend. Each card will admit only the bearer.

Sign-Ups This Week

An arrangement for sign-ups for the event was started on Wednesday of this week. The deadline for signups has been tentatively set for Wednesday, May 6. Names are still being accepted in the Student Body office.

Purpose of the sign-up system of students is to determine the approximate number of students planning to be in attendance. The number should be known for the ordering of food, she added.

All expenses for food and other needs which are incurred will be paid out of the AWS fund, Miss MacKillop announced. This is definitely an AWS sponsored event, for the purpose of entertaining the entire student body. Instead of another dance or similar affair, the women students of the college chose to attempt to instigate new spirit and possibly a new tradition to the college. Following the lead of Stanford and the University of California, the picnic theme was chosen.

Informality Stressed

"The picnic," Miss MacKillop announced," will be a wholly informal affair. After all," she pointed out, "informal doings are the best means of getting acquainted and having a general good time."

AMS

Marin County Site Slated For Barn Dance Tomorrow Evening; Weidner's Orchestra Will Play For Occasion

Cowboy and cowgirl outfits will be resplendent tomorrow night at the semiannual Associated Men Students Barn Dance being held this semester at Fairfax Barn in Marin County, according to Jim Duryea, AMS president. Art Weidner's band has been acquired for the occasian, he announced.

"The dance will start at 6 p. m. in the form of an early evening picnic," Duryea said. "There will be plenty of time before the actual dance starts to play baseball, badminton, and dance to juke-box music."

Weidner Elected

The committee headed by Bill Steenberg, which was in charge of choosing an orchestra, spent quite a while hearing various bands, according to Duryea, and they finally chose Art Weidner. He is noted for playing at Bob Hope's last auto show held recently in San Francisco under Skinnay Ennis' orchestra and at many other prominent occasions.

"This dance has always been hailed as the biggest and best of any semester here at the college outside of the Soph formal," he remarked. "This time it will be twice as good as ever. We have a beautiful location, a good band, and all the free refreshments anyone could hope for. Admission is free with presentation of Associated Student cards at the door."

Location Told

Duryea said that the Fairfax Barn is located 17 miles from San Francisco. He directed students to cross the Golden Gate Bridge and to keep on the main highway for about eight miles and then to take the cutoff to Fairfax. He said that anyone in Fairfax would know where the park was.

"Another route which is longer," Duryea said, "is to follow the main highway straight into San Rafael and there take the cutoff to Fairfax. This route is not as congested but it is longer in distance."

The dance, Duryea warned, is for couples only and no stags will be admitted. Refreshments will consist of apple cider and cookies. The actual dance will start at 8 p. m.

Buses Scheduled

"Greyhound buses are scheduled to leave from Fifth and Market Streets in San Francisco every half hour from 5 to 8 p. m.," he revealed. "In addition, a bus will leave Fairfax Park at 12:30 in case there are some who are unable to get their parents' cars because of the present tire shortage."

Duryea also extended cordial invitation to any of the faculty members to attend the dance.

Registrar

Summer Session Plans Approved By School Head

Approval of a curriculum for the summer session to be held at the college between June 22 to August 14 has been granted by the Board of Education, according to J. Paul Mohr, college registrar.

All students will be eligible to attend the summer session regardless of their grades during the preceding semesters, as will all graduating high school students. A maximum of nine units will be offered to those taking the session. "Students will be given the same credit as if they had taken the course in a regular college semester," Mohr said.

The session will enable students to make up deficiencies or complete units necessary to their curriculum. Hygiene and Physical Education will be offered for credit but these courses will not be compulsory.

New Hours

Students who take a three unit course will have to attend classes five times a week for an hour instead of the three times a week for 50 minutes class schedule now in effect. Two unit courses will be held four times a week for an hour at each meeting, and three-hour laboratories will be held twice a week, Mohr said.

Courses Listed

Based on the questionnaires distributed to the college students about a month ago and to graduating students of the local high schools, a list of courses has been formed. The list includes aviation, bacteriology, botany, business, chemistry, civil engineering, economics, floriculture, German, hygiene, mathematics, mechanical engineering, physical education, physics, physiology, political science 35, Spanish 20b, zoology and radio engineering.

Noticeably absent are courses in history and English.

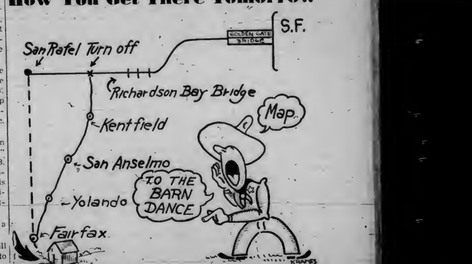
Registration for the summer session will be held on June 22, the day the session starts. No faculty members will be imported to teach any of the courses, so students may not expect any change in teaching personnel.

Today at 1 p. m. there will be an assembly in the men's gymnasium for men students only.

Representatives of the United States Navy, and members of the college administration, will address the men on the opportunities for officer training in the Navy, Naval Air Corps, and the Army Air Corps. .

See story on page four, column one.

Supply of Summer Resort Jobs Exhausted, Says Silva



Practically all the summer resort jobs are now filled, according to Claude Silva, chairman of the placement committee.

Other working opportunities are not yet definite, but Silva said that there will probably be opportunities for anyone who wants work.

Full time work will be prefered in office work, but jobs in defense industries will be available for the summer, Silva pointed out.

NYA students are asked to turn their time cards in today.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

UNDER the heading, Surprise Package for 1942?, Time, the weekly news magazine, offers to readers the suggestion that perhaps Hitler will not launch his main Spring offensive against the Russians.

"Hitler," says Time, "who loves surprise, might surprise the world this spring and summer by striking west instead of east. He might attack Iceland, or Ireland, or Scotland, or England.

Success in any of these attacks would do two things which Hitler has always felt it necessary to do: they would protect his rear and divide his enemies."

Time is an excellent news source, but this quotation lies in the realm of conjecture, and rather illogical conjecture at that. The article referred to bases its conclusions upon several points:

1. The whole German fleet is assembled between the Hook of Holland and Trondheim, Norway.

2. A British claim that about half of the Luftwaffe is drawn up on the invasion coast.

3. Field Marshall Gerd von Rundstedt, ostensibly Germany's best general, has been transferred to France.

4. Petain is out and Laval, the traitor, is in.

5. Germany has been building gliders and transports all through the winter. (Another English claim.)

Of these five points only one, the last, gives any real indication that a push to the east, rather than to the west where expected, is the next Nazi endeavor. And even this may not mean that at all.

DOES HITLER FEAR

The fact that the best general the enemy has, and the fleet and the air force are in one spot, may indicate that Hitler fears greatly that an invasion to the west is coming from the Allies. It would seem logical to assume that, having failed to bring England to her knees when the odds were all in his favor, Hitler would not now attempt the same thing again when the odds are more nearly even.

Peoples of the allied nations have been looking for an invasion of the continent for the past month or so. They have drawn their expectations from the gigantic raids being conducted by the RAF all over Germany and German-held country. The last speech of Adolf indicates that he fears things are not going according to schedule. Perhaps this is why there is such fierce resistance on the shores in the west of England.

On the other hand, what about the lack of manpower stationed there? When the commando units landed last week they found little opposition on hand. Does this indicate a mass German offensive?

ABOUT LAVAL?

Because Petain is out and Laval in does not mean that there is going to be an attempt to move to the east. Rather it means that the hold of the Nazis over the French people is complete, that the French fleet will soon be available for war work—for cutting the life lines from the United States to Russia and the British Isles.

Concerning the last reason for voicing such dire fears, that Germany has been building gliders and transports all through the winter, this points neither to the east nor west. One would think that it pointed to the west, however, because the armies of Germany are hard pressed there and if a push is made they will be needed—and they are needed more on the east front than to the west at the moment.

LET'S SUPPOSE

Let's suppose that Hitler and his generals did decide to invade England for once and for all, and to get rid of that pesky little island and its people who have been causing so much trouble of late. What to do?

First of all, a fleet of invasion transports, the gliders and air transports may be useful but hardly decisive in any major encounter. Minus a fleet of invasion transports in the face of the worst bombing raids of history? Quite a job!

But suppose the ships are there. Then what? Get the men and the planes there too, and the available sea power. According to reports this has been done—with the exception of getting the men. Then what?

War Drive

Keep Buying

FROM first appearances it would seem that the present Buy a Ton of Freedom campaign, being run off by students in the interests of victory, is lagging. Business at the stamp and bond booth in the hall of the first floor does not seem to be overwhelming. But first appearances are quite deceiving.

In the first half day of sales over $275 worth of bonds and stamps were sold. This is a remarkable record for the college. If such support continues there is no doubt but that actual sales will far surpass any expectations that were held, however optimistic.

A majority of this first half day's business was accounted for through the sales of bonds of the $50 and $100 variety. The remainder was in smaller bond sales and stamps.

Naturally it might be expected that the first day's sales would be promising—that is usually the way things go in campaigns that have been pre-announced two weeks. The doubt as to whether or not such promising sales and student support will continue. (Student and faculty support, to be more correct.)

With more conscientious faculty members and students leading the way there should be no reason why the remainder will not follow.

Those who have not yet visited the booth in the first hall are buying their stamps and bonds elsewhere. There is no real reason why they should do their buying here, other than that it shows a united student support for the drive.

And this united support of the Buy a Ton of Freedom drive is an essential to the increase and maintenance of spirit, to the success of the campaign, and to the further establishment of this institution in a well earned, more prominent place in the matters of the community.

Education In War

YOU inhabit an oasis of the good life in the midst of whirling anachronism of the desert. You are suspended in time for a few moments of peace and beauty before you graduate to take your place in the world of marching armies. No serious sacrifice has yet been asked of you.

Your brothers who graduated last June and the Junes before that are many of them already in the armed forces. Boys whom I admitted to college just the other day are writing me that they are commissioned in Navy or Marine Corps—some on the Atlantic patrol, some in the Caribbean, some awaiting orders . . .

What then are you here for? Why do you come to Amherst when the world is at war? What is a college for in such a world? And what is your responsibility this afternoon?

Obviously you have a responsibility. Society, in offering you the opportunities of a college education instead of war material, does not do so for your personal pleasure and enjoyment. It does not single out a few young men for a pleasant holiday while it is enlisting your brothers for war work. Colleges must take their full share of responsibility in the emergency and you as college men must each do your part. You are here to train and develop your minds, to acquire so much of the common heritage of our Western civilization as you can assimilate, to keep your bodies fit, and to develop those traits of character and of intellectual integrity on which can be built a better social organism. This is a serious and a difficult program. It is a program which will enlist the best you have.
—President Stanley King, Amherst College.

Shots At ...RAMdom

AND

where is "the heathen Chinee?" Did he disappear with the glamour of gold rushes, blazing '44's, and men with strong feet and cigars? Is Bret Harte's record the last that will keep the memory of this peculiar breed alive?

We ran across an anachronism the other day: a regular story book Chinese that said "velly fine" and "American" and all stuff like that there.

Why he should be washing dishes and bussing at a joint like Gypsy's out on El Camino Real, we'll never know, because no one ever looked less like a Gypsy than Wing.

"No, I not Gypsy, but I one damn fine dish washer an' rail road man," he said in answer to our chuckling inquiry. We, then, asked him what rail road he'd been connected with.

"I work for Central Pacific. I build that railroad. I one damn fine rail road man. Central Pacific still running."

So, little by little, we got Wing talking and when finally he went to sleep quite peacefully where he sat we knew we were looking at a very old man or a damned good liar.

Wing came to California in 1868 with a bostload of laborers to work on the Central Pacific railroad. That would make him about 89 now, because he must have been about 15 then. He's been saving his money to go back to China, and was on the point of going last year, but something developed then that kept him from going. Now, with the war, and the Japs, etc., he can't get a ship that'll guarantee his safe arrival in China. It's very important that he arrives in China to be buried.

"If I buried in sea I give to 33 diffunt Hells, you bet," he chuckled almost gleefully.

"What about the Japs, Wing, what do you think about them?"

"Japan one big mess of garbage dumped off west coast of China. All Japs are garbage. I show you what I do Hirohito."

He disappeared through a door and emerged again with a huge bread knife, which he held before him like a sabre, in present arms.

"I clut him 1,000 times all over. Then I let him commit hari kari."

We left Wing with his gory dreams. He was smiling peacefully as we made a "z" line for the door, and no doubt he dreamed he was face to face with Hirohito, his trusty bread knife raised.

SAILORS

are a very close mouthed breed, very careful about shooting off their mouths in such a manner as to endanger the safety of their ships and fellow seamen. We were taking the air in Golden Gate Park the other day, and started talking to a blue jacket.

We couldn't find out a thing about the Navy except the name of his ship, when he came in, where it was moored, and when he might leave.

We promptly forgot our information as soon as it was given to us, but maybe the next guy will write it down. They tell the darndest workers to "serve in the service." Doesn't it count for men in the service?

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Need for firemen stressed; sympathy for Muni bus starter

● Information, Please

Editor, The Guardsman:

Since we of this college must follow air-raid precautions while in or about the building, evidently we should be prepared to do something about any bombing that should occur beside cowing in the basement. The school has certain equipment and, though not professional, men to handle that equipment.

I propose that the auxiliary firemen in this school be placed under competent leadership at strategic positions during an air raid, or an alert, or that they be allowed to leave the building for the nearest fire department where they may be able to do some good, or, the best, do both. From my knowledge the following equipment is at hand:

4 hoses on each floor and 1 under stairway on fourth floor.

4 tanks on each floor and 1 under stairway on fourth floor.

1 dry outlet on second floor.

It is desired that this equipment be not used unless necessary. If the tanks are used someone should be notified to refill them. If the hoses are used once they must be replaced or they will rot and be useless. Therefore we must not take things into our own hands but have a responsible leader in order to have this equipment if needed. But if there is no one to take care of it, to use and to handle it when the time comes, then let the hoses rot and tanks go dry, and the fires burn.

(The chief engineer was an appreciated source for much of this data.) —Anonymous.

Editor's Note: So what?

● Jack—An Good Joe

Editor, The Guardsman:

I'll admit the buses are crowded to the guards, and I'll admit that student health is at stake with so many students in the buses, but why pick on "Jack," the starter at Laguna Honda Tunnel.

After all, it isn't his fault that so many students want to get to class on time, and fight to get in the buses, crowded or no. He didn't ask to be head pusher(er) for the Municipal R. R. & Co.

A few more buses added to the line, or traveling one after the other as they have done in the past would relieve the situation, and make Jack seem an all around good guy, a good Joe, to the students.

FEM ADS . . .

by Nancy

INDEED it is with great chagrin, trembling hand, and violent red face that we write this column, as it has been pointed out by store-windows, latest newspaper fashion columns, and store advertisements that we prevaricate. You know, lie, distort truths, and so forth. For two weeks ago before the cotton ball, we wrote on how difficult it was to find cotton formals. We stressed the difficulty in finding them particularly—citing examples of stores and buyers that said, "Oh, but me deah, cotton? You'll find none of it made into formals this season."

After going through the same proceedure at several stores, we wrote the classic column. And And within a week windows were plastered with cotton formals, San Franciscans were told how cotton would be most popular—how everything would be made of cotton especially formals.

That's the story. Perhaps the Junior College is too far advanced for San Francisco stores and shops to keep up the pace.

AND YET MORE

It is perhaps sticking out the neck to repeat more cotton fashions at this time, but with the delovely, delightful days that have been showered upon us, it seems logical that there will be more to follow, and collegiennes always want wash dresses to alternate with sweaters and skirts during such be-eutiful weather.

Incidentally, a barn dance is being held within our midst Saturday night, and wash dresses are in order there, too.

SALAD DRESSES

Vegetables add distinction to a yellow glazed chintz dress. Carrots, corn, radishes and all sorts of salad makings in their own colors imprinted on the yellow background.

Stripes and checks are back again, come spring, in pastel hues, blues, pink, red, brown. Many of these are low torso styles, some buttoning down the front, others not. One had several tiers of cotton lace running around the skirt, and one or two around the hem.

One very becoming print was a pale orange dotted pique with several lovely blooming roses scattered here and there. It had large patch pockets (what, no priorities?) and a large bow sash in the back.

Seersucker suits are very popular this spring, they are two-piece wash suits, some worn blouses and dickies, while others are not.

For the barn dance students wishing to know just what to wear may be aided by noting what dancers at the San Francisco State College barn dance wore. Wash prints were accepted generally as uniform, but there were also "clam diggers" who wore short slacks and denim culotes.

Short sox, and saddles also were in abundance.

Prize of the week goes to a red and white striped jumper dress, with large green apples scattered among the stripes.

Catudio Reap The Spectator . . Wild Wind

WITH "box office appeal" plastered all over it, Cecil B. DeMille's Reap the Wild Wind southwestered itself to town last week amid the echoing acclaim of the local gentry.

This super 30th anniversary production has all of the qualities that have made DeMille epics coinage successes. It is filmed against the stormy and turbulent background of the Florida Keys, a breeding nest of ships' scavengers and wreckers that preyed upon American commerce in the 1840's, until Loxi Claiborne (Paulette Goddard) takes a hand in the proceedings.

Raymond Massey

GODDARD THE VAMP

She finds herself a handsome, husky sea captain in the person age of Jack Stuart (John Wayne), and later she tries to vamp Steve Tolliver (Ray Milland), a Charleston sea lawyer whose firm has been desperately trying to convict a rapscallion sea pirate, King Cutler (Raymond Massey) and his brother, Dan, (Robert Preston.

A ship wreck off the Keys, a Charleston court room murder trial, and an underwater battle by Tolliver and Stuart with a "ten armed" giant squid forms a nucleus for some DeMille magic. Loxi, spirited, tempestuous and beautiful, moves gaily along and slowly loses her make-believe Suthin' accent. She innocently shocks Charleston society, witnesses a shipboard slugfin' bee, and soberly watches the steamer Southern Cross crash into the reefs.

AWARD DUE LYNNE OVERMAN

Acting honors go to Lynne Overman, whose portrayal of a salty, bewhiskered sea captain may place him in line for a coveted "thespianatic" award. Like Northwest Mounted Police, there are two love affairs; one, the Milland--Goddard-Wayne triangle, and the secondary one between Robert Preston and Susan Hayward, Loxi's film cousin, who perishes on the ill-fated Southern Cross.

Miss Goddard, who improves with every role, makes a believable Loxi, a sort of a Scarlett O'Hara of the 1840's, while Milland, stuffed in laced "glad rags," makes the most of a none-too-good role, that of a Charleston barrister. John Wayne, Hollywood's reticent cowboy star, does the best acting job of his career in portraying a sympathetic sea captain who defaults his best gal to his lawyer pal, wrecks a ship he dreamed of commanding, and loses his life to stone for Drusilla's (Susan Hayward) death on the Southern Cross.

SATURDAY EVENING POST STORY

Based on a Saturday Evening Post story by Thelma Strabel, and with a screen play by Alan LeMay, Charles Bennett and Jesse Lasky, Jr., the cast of thousands includes Walter Hampden, Janet Beecher, Martha O'Driscoll, Charles Bickford, Hedda Hopper, (she's a film columnist, too!) Louise Beavers and Ben Carter.

"RTWW" is a powerful, lavishly produced film crammed with typical DeMille adventure from reel one to the finis. The technicolor process, in particular, deserves mention because of its sweeping spectacle in revealing the translucent hues of the sea, and of the cobalt, greenish-blue of the underwaters. This is DeMille at his best, and the Spectator readily stamps an OK on "RTWW."

Robinson

Cabbages & Kings

IN the past issues of the Guardsman, there have been quite a lot of good pictures printed.

The readers of said paper merely take these photos for granted with little thought or concern as to where they came from.

Well, we never thought of them especially until from the front page of the paper leered the pushing back of "Jack," the best bus pusher in the business. About this time we began to wonder just where the paper got such swell pictures and we set about to find out.

With our magnifying glass in hand we were hot on the trail and finally after much hunting we found the reason poised under a radish leaf, camera in hand and waiting for Claire to smile.

At long last he was confronted and an interview demanded of him. First we were told that his name was Bennie Chin. Other than that we couldn't find out much, but we can describe him to you.

He's about 5 feet 5 inches of laughing Chinese with straight black hair. He is usually wearing a brown loafer jacket which does not reveal his true character and always present is his suitcase with the stenciling, "Bennie Chin—SFJC."

And so, to Bennie, this column is dedicated. For his long hours of mostly unappreciated work without grumbling, it seems that he deserves it.

DEMOCRACY IN ACTION

It happened the other day in one of the colleges many corners where Ferdinand reigns supreme. One of the potential gun bearers of the U. S. was asked to give his idea of what democracy really was.

He thought for a while and reflected:

"Well, if you want to decide what time you want to get up and you all gather around and talk it over . . . that's democracy. If someone screams in your ear, 'Get the S&&s!!! up an' in a hurry,' that's your top sergeant."

CAMPUS SITEMS

Interested onlookers staring at a display of miniature battleships, ocean replicas of Uncle Sam's mighty armads.

Sunny college afternoons, when guys and gals get together exchanging glances, gossips and examination facsimiles.

This "Californeinian" weather—rain, sunshine, rain and last Friday's Sarongaroo.

Dilapidated junk heaps snugly caught in an arena of mud—a glowing reminder of the days gone by, "union" prioritized" buggys rumbled about.

And the look on Joe College's kisser, when he learns the truth about today's V-1, V-5, V-7 naval programme.

AND IN CLOSING

One thing that the people of the allied nations have to be thankful for is the fact that Italy is fighting on the side of the axis. Say, whatever did happen to Mussolini, anyway?

Faculty Features . . . Education Through Student Initiative

Today's column was written by Claire Leeds.

THERE probably isn't any student in the college who hasn't at some time or another, seen the tall, dark, and very striking Jennet Henderson, instructor, walking into the registrar's office, or down the hall.

Miss Henderson is at present a member of the business faculty staff. One of her classes, and no wonder that the students all are in favor of her method of instruction, is a course in business English, and the students are not pushed to complete their work, but rather left on their own initiative to finish the work required in the course.

Another of her courses, penmanship, is also carried out with something of the same idea in mind. She remarked that in those classes it didn't matter the type of script which the student was accustomed to producing, her purpose in such a class was to help iron out any special difficulties which the students might have in presenting legible and clear handwriting.

Miss Henderson was born in Southern California, where she attended grade and high schools. Following this she attended the junior college in Riverside. At the junior college, she was treasurer and president of the Associated Women's Students and later vice-president of the associated student body.

After graduating from junior college, she came up to Palo Alto to attend Stanford and remained there during the interim she was getting her A. B. degree.

While at Stanford she worked on the Daily Stanford for one year in the business department. In conjunction with her major, which was, and this hasn't been mentioned before, economics and history, with a minor in geology, she was a member of the History club.

Her last year she read for one of the professors in the economics department. This last activity, she said, took up most of her time, thus she did not join in any special extra-curricular activities.

While yet in Stanford, she placed her application in as a member of the faculty of this college, which at that time was being organized.

Upon her graduation, she went to Southern California to visit her parents, and while there received the word that her application had been accepted.

Her first position on the staff was as an instructor in the economics department; and later on she did some work with the geology students in their laboratory work.

As has earlier been stated she is now a member of the business personnel. "I think," she said, "that I enjoy teaching in the terminal curriculum more than any other, because it seems to me that the students have more purpose at times than many of the regular university-transfer students.

"The junior college level of students is my preference of all fields of education, for the students have ways of viewing things with a more adult viewpoint than high schools, and yet there is something more interesting about it than the higher levels of education.

"My earliest ambition," she said, "was to go into library work, somewhere in the business angle of it. At that time, however, there was quite a fluctuation of people in that line of work, and I was dissuaded from choosing such a venture. At the present time I am very thankful that I didn't go into it, as I realize that I wouldn't have been suited to that type of work.

"This summer, I want to work here in the city, but if I don't, I'll probably visit my parents in Southern California. My brother is a technical engineer in Paramount studios, and it is always fun to go there and stay a few days with him.

Her travels may be numbered under the heading of the United States, Canada, Alaska, and parts of South America.

One summer, she spent her vacation with a former instructor of the college here, who is at present making her home in Colombia. Having never studied the language, Spanish was something new altogether, however, Miss Henderson says, "The people are quite expressive, and one is usually able to discern the meaning almost without any knowledge of the language at all. One evening, at a party given in honor of certain visiting notables, she was introduced to a charming young lady, the introduction being, of course, in Spanish. Miss Henderson had by this time become sufficiently familiar with the language to make the necessary required answers. Later on, the lady came over and said, "My goodness, I didn't know you weren't a native here; I, myself, was born in London." (Incidentally, Miss Henderson laughed), "I felt flattered to think that my attempt at the language had escaped so successfully without criticism."

Miss Henderson, with her pleasing personality, and aforementioned striking beauty, is a favorite with many of the students. She is the sponsor of the Kappa Phi sorority.

Conference Meet Tomorrow; Rams Mimic S. F. Seals

CONFERENCE MEET TOMORROW

Tomorrow afternoon in the county seat of Santa Rosa, the annual Northern California Junior College Conference track and field meet will swing into action with cinder squads from every junior college in this region dualing for honors.

The main item of the day will be the attempt to dethrone Sacramento, champions of last year, who, at this stage of the proceedings, rule as favorites to repeat their victory, and any chances of an upset that may be in the offing seem highly improbable.

Perhaps Sacramento has the most outstanding athlete in California today, in colored Joe Batiste, who hails from Arizona.

Batiste's favorite events are the hurdles, and not only has he defeated the top notch junior college hurdlers, but has romped home with victories over the most feared timber artists in the nation. His most recent win was over John Biewener of Southern California.

If Sacramento becomes pressed for points, Batiste may be forced to throw the javelin, the discus, broad jump, and high jump as well, which he was compelled to do in the meet against the California Freshmen earlier in the year. He will truly be the star of the meet.

In the conference meet of last year, Joe scored 10½ points himself, an amazing effort of athletic prowess for an individual.

Coach Russ Sweet takes a squad to Santa Rosa, which is not blossomed with the stars that represented the Rams in the meet of 1941. His main hopes of sneaking in for points will be chiefly in the field events, with Burt Goebel in the high jump, Bob Oyen, the pole vault, and Jim Duryea in the javelin.

However, if Dick Petch recovers sufficiently from an injured leg to compete in the sprints, he has a reasonably good chance of annexing both the 100 and 220. Petch has been out of action for the past three weeks, and it would be questionable if he would be in the best of condition if he should answer the call to his starting block.

In Oyen, the Rams have a competitor who has precariously vaulted within 12 feet all season, and would acclaim great recognition should he approach the conference record of 13 feet, 6¾ inches set by Keith Groswird of the Rams last year.

Sweet intends to take an entire squad along tomorrow and hopes for the best against the heavy odds that stare him in the face.

PHOTO FINISH

To who will receive the 1942 tennis championship trophy and all the glory is certainly undecided. With a few weeks lingering on the conference schedule, the race has been narrowed down to three teams.

These are the Rams, San Mateo, and Modesto. To date, Wilson's men have won 22 matches, lost six, while San Mateo has won eight and lost six, and the Modestoans, with 20 victories and eight defeats.

The Rams' aspiring hopes were hampered somewhat with the news that Fred Griffin, number three man, has been declared ineligible. His eligibility may be regained, however, when the Rams meet San Mateo next week.

RAMS vs. SEALS

Today, the college baseball squad headed by Andy Adams, giant right handed hurler, meets the combined efforts of Menlo at the Junior College.

In past games the Rams have more or less resembled the San Francisco Seals at the plate, not being able to buy a baschit for themselves. Although weak in hitting, the squad has a strong defensive infield, good pitching and catching, but this is offset by a weak outfield.

Probably the best fielder on the club is Frank Isola, who strangely, is the best hitter.

Swimming Aquamural Today At Jefferson High Pool; Softball Entries Taken Now

Without any fanfare or hullabaloo, the college's fourth annual intramural swimming meet will be held today at 12:20 p. m., in the Jefferson High School tank, in Daly City.

The events listed for today's AQUAMURAL include the 50 yard breaststroke, backstroke and freestyle; 100 yard freestyle; 150 yard three man medley relay; and the four man 200 yard relay.

With Irv Bowker and Richmond Seeley seeded one and two by intramural director Jack Brady, the college intramural badminton tournament ends its first week of match play. Twenty-seven men have signed up for the singles events, and 18 have entered in the doubles affair, according to Brady.

Softball Entries Due

Entry blanks for the college's forthcoming intramural softball tournament must be submitted to Brady on or before May 8. Games will be held on the college football practice field, and the starting times of games will coincide with the starting times of the recently completed cage tourney.

Four teams have already entered the intramural six man touch-tackle football tournament, and with play scheduled to commence Monday, May 4, more teams are expected to enter. The four sextets already entered are the RAMblings Wrecks, captained by George Stokes; Rabbits, Clyde Ramsey, captain; Phi Lambda Epsilon, Jack Wilson, captain; Biffe Club, Jim Juri, captain; and Tri Epsilon, Phil Hyde, captain.

Tennis Sign-Ups Taken

Hampered by Monday's light morning showers, the college intramural horseshoe tournament has been slow in progressing, but the final rounds of competition should be completed by Friday, the end of the month. The pits are located northwest of the men's gymnasium, adjacent to the college archery range.

Men who plan to enter the intramural tennis tournament are requested to sign up now in the gymnasium office. Competition in this tournament will begin as soon as possible, Brady said.

Thornton Speaks; Petch Has Rival

By Charles G. Davis

My mamma done tole me . . . Perry Thornton, of the basketball Thorntons, reports after sizing up the situation carefully that "the book store has more operators than Carter has pills. And ain't it the truth. . . . If Jim Duryea hadn't told this Dept. that the intramural fights would be held May 15, we most likely would have gone to our grave without giving the matter much thought. As it is, we seem extremely interested in the bouts, so interested in fact, that we took the time and trouble to scoop all other college papers in regards to just who that dark horse is who is scheduled to fight Ed Glinden for the 127 pound title. Being the crack reporter we are, we found out through the usual channels who the mystery man is. He answers to the name of Seiskue Akamine, nothing else.

And how do you feel about the idea of having women life guards, chum? Ah, we thought so! Not to offend the sweetheart contest committee, but it seems as if they overlooked the best prospect for the crown. Ever hear of a lovely little flower named Violet Johns? Yep, that's the life guard for us. Oh, if she could only swim!

Seeing as how our name has been slighted from the Freshmen King Rule, we naturally feel hurt. Don't you, brethren? We almost agree with their choice of candidates; almost, but not quite. What has caused us no end of trouble is: Why don't the belles go for sports writers. Maybe them on the average sports scribblers are by far the best, outside of the cinema boys. If the members of the fourth estate are a little on the mediocre side, (and there are times when everyone has a bad year) why don't the belles go for the athletic type of man? That is, perhaps, the gals best bet.

. . . One of our agents smuggled this dispatch out of Stockton, "No high jumper can climb over 4 feet 10 inches." Comparatively speaking the Rams have quite a man in the person of Burt Goebel. He's done 6 feet 3 inches, although he stands a mere 5 foot 9 inches. How many inches UNDER your height can you leap? . . . And State Teachers College has found a man who can give Russ Sweet's star sprinter, Petch, a good race. Jim Keating is the name, and he's done 9.8 in the century. . . . That guy Phil De Lano is our idea of a fine swimmer. His specialty is the 220 yard freestyle, and he covers the distance in fast time.

Did you know that Don Jensen, student body prez, has been noted as a star soccer player. . . . Plug by request dept. Maybe we would be taking business away from the want-ad section of the paper, but as things now stand, Andy Adams, the baseball flibbuster, is searching the woods for someone who would like to make a trip up to Alaska with him. We warn you chum, it's not going to be as sweet as it sounds. Remember, Adams is planning to go with you. And who knows a bigger, more jolly character than the ace Ram Hurler. . . . If the college baseball team plans on winning many more games, Adams' arm will have to hold out longer than Corriegidor.

Tennis

Racqueteers Meet Menlo This Afternoon On Balboa Courts; Marin Match Postponed

After their complete whitewash on the bewildered Salinas Junior College racqueteers, the local tennis team went into a temporary "hibernation" as a result of last Saturday's postponed dual match between the Rams and Marin Junior College.

The match was postponed by the mutual consent of both coaches, according to Tom Wilson, the locals' tennis mentor. Today, at 1 p. m., on the Balboa Park Courts, last week's postponed dual match will be played, and with somewhat of a revamped line-up.

Griffin Ineligible

Because of the ineligibility of third singles man, Fred Griffin, Wilson will start Gene Barrados playing the fifth singles matches against the Menlotes. Joe Greeley, Roy Oakes, Ronnie MacArthur and George Ameniya will retain their regular ladder positions.

The Rams will face Menlo today in the following order: 1, Greeley; 2, Oakes; 3, MacArthur; 4, Ameniya; and 5, Barrados. The doubles combinations will have Greeley and Oakes number one, and MacArthur and Ameniya, number two, according to Coach Wilson.

With only the Menlo match today, San Mateo and Marin Junior Colleges remaining, the locals will be out to "win as many matches" as they are able. If they get past the invading Oaks today, they will then have to face the defending champions from suburban San Mateo.

Meet Changes Next

Next week's Battle of the Century will take place on the Bulldog home courts, and according to all precedence, the home team should have a very slight psychological advantage.

Top man of San Mateo's tennis squad is Jere Selover, former singles champ of the Peninsula Athletic League. The ex-San Mateo High School sensation, and once a gaspil under Tom Stow who has developed such greats as Don Budge, Frankie Kovacs and Sarah Palfrey Cooke, has been number one man for the champions for the last two seasons.

Other men that comprise the SM roster include Carl Henoch, Jackie Ulrich, ex-Burlingame High School mainstay, Bob Nourse, Don Schmidt, Craig Holder, Lionel Olsen and Roy Kramer. From these players named, will be the five men who will oppose the locals.

Won Four, Lost Three

To date, the Rams have disposed of Salinas, Sacramento, Yuba, Modesto and Stockton Junior Colleges, with scores ranging from complete whitewashes (ask Salinas and Co.) to "4 and 3" triumphs.

Coach Wilson, who DOES NOT come from the talkative syllable league of Oregon State's Lon Stiner, professes a bit of skepticism concerning the titular chances of his "racqueteering Commandos."

Swimming Season Finished For Rams; Callahan Stars

Setting of a new pool record in the 50 yard sprint last Friday at Stockton Junior College by Jim Byers of this college featured the victory of the Bengal splashers over the Ram squators 49 to 25.

With their ranks depleted by the measles and the lack of any divers to compete, the Rams put up a valiant fight in trying to overcome the star-studded Panthers. In a previous our meet last week against Sequoia High the college splashers tied them 32 to 32.

The meet against Stockton Friday was the last for the college natators and they ended their season with two victories, three defeats and one tie. Outstanding swimmer in meets this season has been the consistent winning of Tom Callahan in the backstroke. He is the only swimmer on the college team who has not suffered a defeat in the six meets which the Rams had this season.

Named as outstanding competitors that the Rams have met individually this semester, Coach Jim Jensen said that among the opponents two stars have stood out. Both are from Stockton, Bill Wright and Bob Tiabolli in the breaststroke and the 440 sprint.

"These two boys, especially Wright, could compete against any college on the coast and would probably beat all competition," Jensen said.

Baseball

Adams Faces Menlo J.C. Today

Lee Eisan's hot and cold baseball team face Menlo Junior College in their fifth conference game today at Ocean View Ball Park. Game time is 3:00 o'clock.

The locals split a double header with Piedf, winning the first tilt 12-1, while dropping the abbreviated contest 6-3. Andy Adams was credited with the win, and Macchia was charged with the loss. Frank Macchia gave up three hits, but issued eight walks. Four walks and a double was his undoing in the fifth frame.

Defeat Menlo

Adams, who has two wins and a loss chalked up against him, is slated to face the Oakies. Adams hurled four-hit ball when he defeated Menlo 9-0 two weeks ago. The peninsula men should be no puzzle to him, as they were lucky to garner four hits off the Ram hurler during their first meeting. When Adams won from Placer, he was given staunch support. The Eisan men hit with runners on base, and played errorless ball.

According to Eisan, "We are learning to hit the ball harder, and when needed most." The coach was referring to the Placer contest. He continued, "Our boys might go the remainder of the season without a loss. Don't laugh, 'cause we are in shape, thanks to the recent bit of sunshine."

Poage Best Hitter

Ted Poage, the big catcher, is to date the leading hitter for the Rams. To Eisan's delight the infield has made only three errors in the last four games. "Many a hit has been turned into an easy out due to the alertness of the inner defense," Eisan remarked.

Nick Devoto, utility outfielder, has left school to work in a defense plant. Devoto played right field when Frank Isola was pitching, and his bat played a prominent part in the Rams' win over Placer.

Track And Field

Ram Cindermen Compete In NCJC Finals Tomorrow At Santa Rosa; Team Hopeful

By James Lee

With high hopes of placing at least three men in first or second positions, the Ram track squad will journey up-state tomorrow in answer to an invitation to the Northern California Junior College Conference Annual Track and Field Meet, with the first event slated to start at two o'clock sharp.

The meet will be held at the Santa Rosa Junior College track, in Santa Rosa, California, with 10 to 12 junior colleges competing.

Three Ram Hopefuls

Coach Russ Sweet's three hopefuls are Doug Pearson, Bob Oyen, and Burt Goebel.

Pearson will compete in the 220 low hurdles, and, if he lives up to past races, he should come through with at least a second in both events. He will also run in the 120 high hurdles. He will be furnished with ample competition in Joe Batiste, sensational colored sprint and timber-topping ace from Sacramento Junior College.

The second ray of hope for the Red and White is Burt Goebel, star broad jumper and high jumper. Goebel has hit six feet, three inches in the high jump, and although his actual distances in the broad jump aren't known at present, he should be pushing himself up to the first and second placers in his respective events.

The third ray of sunshine hitting the tender spot of Coach Sweet is Bob Oyen, pole vaulter. Bob should take at least a third, for there are only two other vaulters that will give him competition, the first being the high school star, Irving Moore, now attending Santa Rosa. His best height to date is thirteen feet, six and a half inches.

Petch Doubtful

A doubtful starter for the college spikemen is dash man Dick Petch.

Petch is still suffering from a sore thigh muscle (a la Klemmer).

He would have been a strong contender in the century, with his 9.8 race a few weeks ago, and his 22.3 in the 220.

The following is a list of the men going to Santa Rosa and the events they will enter.

Because of the absence of enough trackmen, the college cindermen were beaten by a fairly good Stockton contingent last Friday, April 24, to the tune of 81-46.

Pearson Wins

Bob Howard took a second in the mile, Jim King placed second in the 440, Sammy Mendelson placed third in the 100, Doug Pearson ran a beautiful race to win in the high hurdles, but "corked" out on the last two hurdles and lost in the 220 low hurdles. This was partly due to his having to run the first four hurdles on a turn, Stockton not having a 220 yard straightaway. The cindermen were tossed out of the 220, but made a clean sweep in the high jump, with Goebel winning the event. Bob Oyen won the pole vault, with Walter Thomsen, a surprise starter, tied for third, with the remaining cindermen placing second in the broad jump, second in the discus, second in the javelin, and a third in the shotput.

Many of the college students will remember the conference meet last year held at Sacramento, and won by the Panthers.

In the meet the Rams placed sixth, with Keith Groswird soaring to a record-breaking height of thirteen feet, six and three-fourths inches, to set a new conference record.

Batiste Returns

Also gaining points for the Red and White were Bob Lowrey, who won going away in the mile, in 4:32, Jack McMeekin, who took a fourth in the 440, and Bob Cuitler, who tied for fourth in the high jump.

The meet was generously supplied with stars, in the person of Joe Batiste, colored hurdle star, who was high point man for the meet with ten points, and Harold Davis, the "fastest human on earth," representing Salinas, who ran in two events, the hundred yard dash, and the 220. Davis tied his conference record of :09.6 in the 100, and easily won the 220.

Salinas, mainly through the efforts of Davis, in the sprints, placed second, while San Mateo, Santa Rosa, Modesto, the Rams, Stockton, Marin, and Placer all finished in that order.

Helen Crlenkovich Defends Diving Title This Month

Entry blanks have already been mailed for the women's springboard diving championship to be held at the Fairmont Hotel Terrace Plunge Friday, May 15, according to a news item printed in a local San Francisco newspaper.

One of the first to submit their entry blank was the college's most outstanding woman athlete, Helen Crlenkovich, holder of the national women's diving championship, both outdoor and indoor. This will be the first time in five years that San Francisco has played host to a national swimming or diving championship.

With the national swimming meet being staged in the Bay City, it will mark the first time that the comely diving champion will have had a chance to defend her laurels at home. Under the careful guidance of Phil Patterson, Fairmont swimming instructor, Miss Crlenkovich has been practicing daily at the Terrace Plunge.

The strength of Miss Crienkovich's opposition is not known, but according to advance information, swimmers from the Atlantic seaboard may not come to the Pacific Coast in great numbers, what with priorities, shortages and the like running rampant throughout the nation.

Miss Crlenkovich will defend her indoor swimming title, a title that has been successfully defended for the last two years. Because of the sudden outbreak of hostilities in the Far East, (meaning World War II) the San Francisco diving queen did not go to Hawaii, where she was to have given several diving exhibitions.

General Assembly For All Men Today In Gym For Details Of Army, Navy Cadet Program

Today at 1 p. m. a general assembly will be called in the men's gymnasium for men only, where naval representatives will discuss the application of students to the Navy V-1 program, J. Paul Mohr, registrar, announced.

Members of the college administration will explain the opportunities recently made available by the Army Air Corps. Louis G. Conlan, coordinator of educational management, has been in consultation with army authorities concerning this new development.

Information for applicants to the Navy's V-1 program may be had in Room 136 today from 1 p. m. until 5 p. m., when representatives Ensign W. W. Wyatt, Captain Leland Sherman, M.D., and Yeoman Crothers will be present to examine and interview those interested, according to Edward H. Redford, college guidance director.

Opportunities Presented

This will be the last opportunity for students to obtain information on naval commissions in any branch of the navy. "In betweeners," or students older than 20 years and 60 days should avail themselves of this opportunity. The San Francisco recruiting station expects a communication from Washington, D. C., regarding their status in the V-1 classification.

Students definitely decided to enlist under V-1 will be given a preliminary medical examination by Naval Doctor Leland.

Program Explained

The Navy V-1 program permits the student to complete 60 units in his college curriculum before being called to service unless an added emergency necessitates his services. Upon completion of 60 units, the applicant is given an examination by the navy to determine whether they will be entered in V-5 or V-7.

Those who qualify for the V-5 division, aviation ensign, will be sent immediately to government aviation academies, while those who qualify in the examination for V-7 will become candidates for ensigns.

They will remain in college until they have received their degrees, then sent to Northwestern University or Columbia University, where they will complete their training for administrative functions in the navy.

Books

New Additions To Library Listed Today

New books, covering a variety of subjects, are soon to be placed on the library shelves for student use, announced Marcus Skarstadt, college librarian, early this week.

Skarstadt further stated that all the books received in April will be listed on today's book list.

All This and Heaven, Too, by Racheal Field, has just come in, and is a book well remembered by those who read it. Meet the South Americans is a new book by Carl Crow.

New Books Named

Others in the shipment include Vicente Guerrero, a study in patriotism by William E. Sprague; Alfred I. Dupont, the family rebel, by Marquis James; Language in Action, a guide to the most correct, effective usage of the English language, by Samuel I. Hayakawa; The Crisis of Our Age, Pitcrim A. Sorokin's diagnosis of the causes of the present world situation; two new Muzzey United States History books, The United States of America through the Civil War, and the United States of America from the Civil War; Old Tippecanoe, biography of William Henry Harrison, by Fremont Cleaves, also Edith Cavell by Helen Judson.

Two books by John Masefield Poems and Ballads by the Sea, and In the Mill, are included in the list Your Next Job, a new book in the college library, by Frances Maule author of She Strives to Conquer, is a guide on how to get a job and how to keep it. Blood, Sweat and Tears is Winston Churchill's autobiography, and, according to authorities, provides interest, information, and reading pleasure.

Best Plays in the Library

Burnes Mantel's Collection of Best Plays for 1940 and 1941 is in the library, and contains the contemporary and "long running" productions Arsenic and Old Lace, My Sister Eileen and others.

Mission to Moscow, a record of confidential dispatches, official and personal to the State Department, is by Joseph Davies, former ambassador to Russia.

Song Fest

College Choir In Meet At Stockton

The college A-Capella Choir will join other California Junior Colleges in song next Monday, May 4, at Stockton's College of the Pacific.

The occasion is the annual Northern California Music Festival. Each year Yuba, Marin, San Francisco, and other junior colleges (San Mateo, Salinas, Modesto and Santa Rosa) from this vicinity, meet to sing and pass the day under conditions favorable to a good time.

There was, for a time, fear of the cancellation of this anticipated event because of the present rubber shortage. Chartered buses were to furnish transportation, and, as reported by Flosita Badger, choir director, there were no charter buses, the choir was to dismiss the idea entirely.

Arrangements Made

Arrangements have since been made, whereby the trip can be made by train, and participation is again possible.

"Every year since the instigation of an A-Capella Choir in this college," Miss Badger reported, "it has been possible for us to attend the music festival."

Dinner Planned

The day will terminate with dinner and dancing and a concert by College of Pacific, "with," in the words of a choir member, "a good time expected by all."

Choir selections to be rendered at that time will include:

Weep O Mine Eyes........John Bennett
Ave Maris Stella ....Greig
The Ballad of the Tree and the Master
A Chant Out of Doors............Mathews

M. Bradley, director of the A-Capella Choir at the College of the Pacific, is, according to Miss Badger, "a gifted young composer."

Sorority, Fraternity Dance Oakland May 16

First all-college sorority-fraternity affair to be sponsored by the students of the college will be held on Saturday evening, May 16, at the Bellevue Hotel in Oakland, from 9 p. m. to 12 midnight, according to Jim Upp, Associated Student yell leader and chairman of the Sorority-Fraternity Council.

Purpose of the affair, revealed Upp, is to provide for more coordinated activities among the students of the college and among student organizations.

Participants Named

Organizations and representatives thus far reported as participating in the Sorority-Fraternity Council Dance are: Bill Moon of Beta Phi Beta; Bill Steenberg of Tri Epsilon; Jim Upp of Beta Tau; Eloise Winfeldt of Theta Tau; Marge Wagner of Phi Beta Rho; Jane Johnson of Kappa Phi, and Jo Raiola of Lambda Chi sorority.

With the backing and consent of Gloria Olivi, Associated Student vice president and Social Committee chairman, Upp promised that the affair would be an all-college event.

Noel Thomas Plays

The band which has been selected to play for the dance is that of Noel Thomas, prominent local musician. Vocalist with Thomas is Bill Stoker, who was formerly with Kay Kayser, of Musical College fame.

War Story--With The Navy Somewhere In The Pacific

(Following is the report of a young American serving on one of the ships that provide life for allies fighting all over the world. It consists of a letter, undated, from an unknown destination.)

By Norman Smith

U. S. Pacific Fleet
Aircraft Battle Force,
U.S.S. Lexington

"Our ship experienced a little excitement a couple of days ago, and also a bit of action. We were steaming along, minding our own business, when out of the sky a squadron of Japanese planes appeared. There were two attacks in all. Out of the first swarm of nine two-engine high altitude bombers, only one plane managed to return to its base safely, all of the others crashed into the sea in heaps of burning wreckage.

In the second attack, which followed the first by some 20 minutes, there were about 10 of the same type planes and all but two of these plunged into the ocean where wreckage was already strewn for miles.

There was a rumor about that another Nipponese squadron was headed our way, but it turned out to be false as we were not bothered again.

The day following, we picked up a newsflash from Tokio, saying that the Lady Lex was sunk and that all Jap planes returned to their base safely.

Judging from the reports, you can see how much propaganda the Nipponese are using to break the spirit of the U. S. and to convince their own people how confident of victory they are. Please don't believe these reports as nearly all are untrue if reported by the Japs."

According to the above letter, the prosaic form of which typifies the terse style of the service personnel, the full and undoubtedly vivid details of what was a great sea battle somewhere in the Pacific, must be recorded by the individual imagination.

Another example of how the people of America are rapidly beginning to realize the horror of war and conditioning themselves to it may be noted in this letter from an 19 year old blonde daughter of a U. S. naval commander who was killed in action on Black Sunday at Pearl Harbor.

The following excerpts are quotes from the letter:

"My father was killed December 7, and we were rushed out of Honolulu three hours later, and practically all we had with us were our hula skirts and a few odds and ends.

"From December 7 until January 1, we didn't turn on a light as there were blackouts every night. We were living, 12 of us, in two little rooms, sleeping on the floor on mattresses. I got into San Francisco New Year's day, and felt like turning on all the lights in the hotel and just leaving them on!

"The trip over was really awful and after the bombing I worked as a nurse in the hospital taking care of the sick mothers and children.

"I was just starting Spanish lessons when the bombing started and school ceased. After the bombing there was no more school to attend, but I am continuing my education here in Jacksonville, Florida."

Perhaps these letters, and countless others like them, will bring home to the American people the fact that the youth of our nation is playing a vital role in the present theater of the world's holocaust.

Washington High School Graduates At The College

By Bob Catudio

One of the leading schools in the total number of students registered at this college is George Washington High School. They have representatives in athletes, social affairs, clubs, student body government, scholarship and music.

Top student among George Washington's many graduates is Betty MacKillop, who is president of the Associated Women Students. Miss MacKillop, a combined music and Letters and Science major, is a member of the Alpha Gamma Sigma and Kappa Phi sorority, and is an active participant in the college A-Capella choir.

Leading the long list of ex-George Washington graduates are those students who have taken an active part in the governmental affairs of this college. Combined, they form an important part of this college's 2200 registered students.

Lois Clawson, another Letters and Science major, is the secretary of Theta Tau sorority; Pat Brand, a merchandising major, is a sorority member of Kappa Phi, and was a candidate for the title of Sophomore Sweetheart last semester; and Amy Young, a business major, is the lone George Washington graduate member of the Chinese Students' Club.

To provide recognition for students achieving good scholarship records, and to aid in maintaining the scholastic standards of the college, Alpha Sigma, the college honor society, was formed.

This organization is one of the state-wide federations of junior college honor societies. Washingtonians on this semester's Alpha Gamma Sigma include Louise Horne, Donald Michaelian, Phillip Maas, Betty MacKillop, Virginia Allen, Julianna Bernhardt, Bertram Brauer Gloria Bulotti, Wilbur Holden, Myron Jacobs, Dan Koblick, and Don Sosick.

Former members of the Block GW who are now active in college athletics include Jack Terry, Norman Scheu and Jack Denning, (basketball); Ken Ludlam, (boxing); Malcolm Weinstein and Scheu, (tennis); Oleg Baloff, (golf); Myron Jacobs, (swimming); Arthur Scott and Fuad Zeibak, (soccer); while Louis DeMartini, Joseph Enos and Ed Lapuyade compete in college intramural sports this semester.

Three graduates from George Washington are on this semester's Guardsman staff. They are Claire Leeds, news editor and feature writer; Louise Horne, staff artist; and Catherine Parac, reporter.

Robert McCaffrey, an agriculture major and a college debater, represented Northern California in the Native Daughters of the Golden West oratorical finals; Walter Bien, a political science major, has been affiliated with radio station KSFO; while Alice Danner, a home economics major, is an Alpha Lambda Chi sorority member. Miss Danner is vice-president of the Women's Service Society.

Former Washingtonians associated with music at the college include Gordon Brewer, Betty MacKillop, Lois Levy, Leona Schaefer and John Van Nuys. Brewer, in particular, an accomplished pianist, has taken part in many of the college's assemblies and Associated Men Students' smokers.

Active workers in the Women's Athletic Association, one of the college's leading organizations, include Virginia Hanlon, Alvenise Shannon and Helen Wood, while WSS workers are Violet Butler, Alice Danner, Leona Schaefer and Miss Wood. The representative of the college Hotel and Restaurant Management Division is Lee Grayson.

Louise Horne, an art major, is a Pi Mu Gamma sorority member, belongs to the Art Club, and is out for bowling under the auspices of the college WAA; Robert Jennings, a forestry major, is a member of the Forestry Club; while Bill Walker, a police science major, is an active member of the Police Officers' Training Club.

Representing Beta Tau fraternity in the college's Club Advisory Board is Louis DeMartini, an economics major, while the former student body secretary of George Washington High School, Lorraine Trussell, is a member of Nu Epsilon Sigma sorority.

A recent survey of the many graduates from George Washington High School revealed that the popular majors are Civil Engineering, Chemistry, Letters and Science, College of Commerce, Business and Aviation. Comprising the rest of the leading subjects selected by 120 George Washington High School graduates is Merchandising, Art, Pre-Nursing, Pre-Dental, General College, Pre-Medical, Radio, Journalism and Physical Education.

The students are equally divided between the college parallel subjects and the terminal fields of study. Slightly more than 33 per cent of the students selected business and civil engineering as their major subjects.

College Librarian Reveals Acquisition of Coin Relics

A collection of historical coinings, dating back to the 8th Century B. C., modeled after the originals owned by the British Museum of London, was presented to the library last week, Marcus Skarstedt, college librarian, disclosed recently.

The collection was presented to the library by George W. Dibble, who has modeled more than 50 coins after the originals. This is a collection which is an example of the March of Money trays, albums and coinings.

John Allan, Keeper of the Coins of the British Museum, London, England, is the chairman of the general advisory committee, and through his efforts, he has opened up a hobby for people that has not cost a great deal of money.

During his stay at this college, North was president of the Rifle Club for two years, was a member of the Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college's honor society, and was the State Junior Collegiate rifle and pistol champion. If all of his medals, trophies and other "knick-knacks" were melted down, it would probably be more than enough to make a "two-ton baby tank."

At present, Cadet Colonel North and his hell diving 83rd Squadron are stationed at Camp Beauregard, Epler Field, in the state of Louisiana. Their training in the "land of the bayous and swamps" will consist of aerial dog-fighting and maneuvers, as well as the higher fundamentals of navigation.

North's life seems to be an adventuresome one, and some day, when the world settles down, he will be able to relate the inside story that made him a leader of "the best class to graduate from Kelly Field."

An invasion to the east is almost impossible. If it is tried, it means that Hitler has given up every hope of an eventual victory and is risking all in an attempt to wipe out his second greatest enemy, and attain a momentary victory and the respite which it will afford. If it would afford a respite.

Health Notes

The Gentle Art Of Resting

"IF WE COULD LEARN how to balance rest against effort, calmness against strain, quiet against turmoil," says Dr. Josephine Rathbone, "we would assure ourselves of joy in living and psychophysical health for life." The psychologists believe that people who live dynamically without being too tense have four main attributes: first, rhythm in their activities with great swings in output and accomplishments, alternating with periods of repose; second, a sense of values which makes it possible to minimize effort and minimize strain; third, ability to reduce muscular tension in any part of the body consciously whenever desired, and, fourth, a readiness to fall asleep at will.

While these attributes may develop spontaneously to some extent in some persons, it is also possible to cultivate them in a measure. In order to aid such cultivation, ten tricks are presented which are believed to be useful in realizing relaxation. They are:

1. Cut down on the intensity of your thinking half an hour before retiring. (Play Chinese checkers, plan an excursion for the week end, write a letter to a friend, fill with pleasant things you have been doing.)

2. Take plenty of time to get ready for bed (next morning's clothes, leisurely bath, and so on).

3. If you like to read in bed choose nonfiction or a "hard" book. Force your mind to grapple with cumbersome facts, bore it into unconditional surrender to sleep.

4. Transplant your mind from fears or hates to a field which has interest without excitement (a new wardrobe, possibly.)

5. Make your mind hop from one idea to another. Just as the mind loses consciousness and sleep comes, thoughts become disjointed and scattered. (Start with some happy episode in childhood, for example.)

6. To quiet the body, get rid of any pressure or pain. (Lighten weight of covers, clothes.)

7. Tepid bath without a rubdown. (Get into bed a little damp and chilly. As the body becomes warmed it becomes more and more comfortable. If during the night one becomes sleepless, throw back covers until body becomes uncomfortably chilly. Then when the covers are pulled up again, the body once more sinks into coziness.)

8. Imitate the slow, deep rythmical breathing of sleep. (Helps regulate the circulation and may ease the mind and emotions.)

9. Relax the muscles completely.

10. Get rested before trying to sleep. (Get into bed an hour or more before your regular time for retiring. Do so night after night to build up a reserve of rest and fall asleep without the old struggle.)

The balance between what can be accomplished by education and practice and what is innate in producing relaxation and longevity is a delicate one. Physicians have long known that people with a low blood pressure, a low basal metabolic rate, a low pulse rate and a low intake of food—if all of these are not too low—tend to live longer than those in whom these physical factors are at extremely high levels. Perhaps equally important is a low threshold for the sense of humor—a mental attitude which does not take life too seriously.

Barbara Stahmann Granted Alpha Gamma Sigma Award

Alpha Gamma Sigma, the junior college honor society, has awarded Barbara Stahmann a Pomona college scholarship. Miss Stahmann is secretary of the student body and president of AGS.

This scholarship was awarded upon a competitive basis. Miss Stahmann had to qualify on three points—scholarship, leadership, and athletic ability. She will enter Pomona this fall.

First College Players Group In Determined Production

Membership Drive Part of Plan To Establish Dramatic Club

Above, several members of the Campus Players group in poised action. No one was quite certain what the scene was depicting but everyone will know when the finished performance is presented sometime this month.

By Dorothy Hogan

Actors in Shakespeare's day may have had a hard time finding an audience and a theater on which to stage their events, but their determination was no stronger than members of the college dramatic group, the Campus Players.

The characters of the club cavorting about the campus with artistic expressions adorning their faces and scripts of plays clutched solidly in their hands are not refugees of an Orson Welles' double feature. They are just going through the final stages of a membership drive which has been held throughout this week.

The object of the drive was to obtain more talent to cast in some of the remaining roles for the semester presentation, which is planned for Thursday evening, May 21. The material for presentation will be three one-act plays: The Eve in Evelyn, Juliet and Romeo, and The Brink of Silence.

Upon investigation of the group, one of the founders of the club is discovered. She is Dolores Sullivan, at present, secretary. James "sad-eyes" McGill, casting director, play repertoire chairman and one man opera company, contents the group with renditions of plays and instructions in how to speak Burganetian.

Remembered for his characterization of an angry father, Tom Buckley acts as chairman of the review committee. Buckley is the author of the active group and occasionally submits his works for observation. Albert C. Lee, speech instructor, is adviser to the club and assists members to correct speech difficulties, if any.

Formed through the efforts of students possessing a flair for things dramatic, the Campus players group inaugurates the first club of it's kind at this college. Activities do not include drama to the exclusion of other pertinent interests, but tend toward the happy medium of making the organization more than a student theatre.

COLLEGE WAR RALLY TODAY

Biggest Rally In College History Set For El Rey Theatre; Associated Women Sponsor Picnic At Sigmund Stern Grove

Following the rally today, the first all-college picnic will be sponsored by the Associated Women Students of the college, according to Betty MacKillop, AWS president. The picnic will take place from 5 p. m. to 7:30 p. m. at Sigmund Stern Grove, she further revealed.

AWS vice president Eloise Winfeldt is in charge of the arrangements for today's affair. Miss Winfeldt was also in charge of the sign-ups for students intending to attend the picnic earlier this week.

Stags Admitted

Because early plans for the picnic stated that it would be held later in the day, it was announced that admittance to the picnic would be wholly by couples. Arrangements, however, have been reshuffled and all Associated Student card holders are invited to attend. Only one student will be admitted for each card.

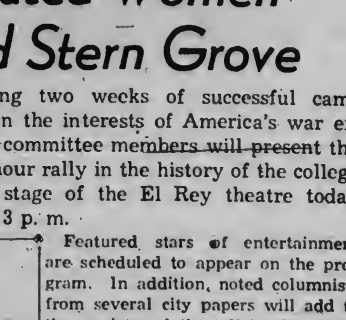
The sign-up for attendance has been quite heavy, Miss MacKillop said, and a large number of students are expected to attend. Purpose of the sign-up system was to determine the approximate number of students who would attend. The number was needed for ordering food, she added.

New Tradition

Early in the semester an effort to begin a new tradition in the college was begun. Instead of another dance or mixer the picnic theme was chosen. Women students of the college wanted to entertain the whole student body and they followed the lead of other local colleges which had sponsored picnics.

"We were quite fortunate in securing Sigmund Stern Grove for the picnic," Miss Winfeldt revealed. "The time also is ideal," she pointed out, "because it will be right after the rally, and everyone will be in a festive spirit."

All expenses for food and other essentials will be paid out of the AWS treasury. There will be enough food for everyone there, assured Miss Winfeldt, and there is no reason why the picnic will not be one of the best student body affairs of the semester.



Climaxing two weeks of successful campaigning in the interests of America's war effort, rally committee members will present the first two hour rally in the history of the college from the stage of the El Rey theatre today from 1 to 3 p. m.

Featured stars of entertainment are scheduled to appear on the program. In addition, noted columnists from several city papers will add to the variety of the affair, Jim Upp, campaign and rally committee member, has announced.

To Thursday noon the sales total had reached $4,000. This figure is much larger than anticipated.

Guests Listed

Those who will appear for the war rally are: Ira Blue, NBC commentator; Marsh Maslin, Call Bulletin columnist; Herb Caen, featured Chronicle and radio columnist; Ronnie Kemper and his orchestra; Sheila Peart, songstress; and Raphael, all from the current show of the Palace Hotel; Joaquin Garay, entertainer; the Merry-Macs, now appearing at the Golden Gate theatre; the Four Aces, a harmony quartet from the Vagabonds; Shirley Dinsdale, radio's Judy Splinters and popular fourteen year old radio ventriloquist.

All classes are excused for this one o'clock rally, according to registrar J. Paul Mohr. A picnic for the entire college, under the sponsorship of the Associated Women Students, when the rally has been completed.

Landresse Chosen Queen

Lucile Landresse, chosen by committee members as Liberty Queen, will reign at today's event. Miss Landresse had previously been entered in the sophomore sweetheart contest, but has withdrawn her name.

Contestants for the soph and frosh king and queen crowns will be introduced to students for the first time. These introductions are the preliminary to primary elections scheduled for the fourteenth of this month.

Today marks the end of the second week of "Buy a Ton of Freedom" campaign. And what a record those two weeks have set! The spirit shown by the students has really been outstanding.

I want to take this opportunity to congratulate the student body for its complete cooperation. To my personal thanks must be added the gratitude of all the officers on the Executive Council.

A large share of the credit and appreciation for the high "tonnage" sold must be given to Jack Robinson and Jim Upp and their committee. From the very day they were entrusted with the "Buy a Ton of Freedom" campaign, they have never stopped working. They put a lot of time and effort into the drive; and it's certainly shown results.

But the success of their efforts really depended upon the student body as a whole—and you certainly came through with the fine spirit that bears higher the proud name of San Francisco Junior College.

Thanks to each and every one who contributed in any way.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

AN interesting sidelight on war and the difficulties thereby encountered is currently found in the political troubles of the state of Missouri. Citizens of that worthy state, according to the most reliable reports, can't wait until November to throw the present public representatives out of office.

It seems that bribery and all of the well known, and seemingly popular, political tricks are being, were, and if possible will be, used to glut the public treasury.

CONVICTIONS—TWO

Convictions have amounted to practically nothing, there being some legal restriction in the line of proof that is not available to the grand jury, which did arrange for two convictions, however.

All of this is not unusual. It has happened in most cities—even the best! But for graft and company to come to life in these times is a phenomenon most unusual. The mood of the general public, taxed to the limit, and looking to further taxation subscribing to a thousand odd relief and assistance agencies, forced to cut down on the items which have heretofore been considered only necessity—the mood of the public is not one of tolerance toward a wanton waste of state and city money.

There are always the few, however. There were the isolationists, with whom this column agreed then, but not now; there were the members of the America First Committee; there are now parasites on the budget of John Doe, who would have found much better picking, and much easier the picking, had they waited until the war was over.

PROVES WHAT

All this proves nothing that is unknown to the reader—only calls it to his attention. This little incident in Missouri should also call to the attention of the reader a most pertinent fact. There are many chances of losing liberty for ourselves at home while we are winning it for everyone else all over the world.

As Royce Brier, the able Chronicle columnist, put it, speaking of the power which has been taken from the people for the war duration, "a page out of Mussolini's handbook, slipped in while nobody was looking."

This is one of the unfortunate conditions brought about by war. Those powers, which of necessity are taken from the public, may find that they are to be left out of the hands of the public.

Whether or not those powers removed in emergency are returned in normalcy depends upon the integrity and common sense of the politician involved. Certainly, the case, as brought forth in Missouri, seems to indicate that war time politics is at its worst right now. But practices of this sort will not be long allowed.

AND HISTORY—?

History bears up the present dilemma. Whenever nations go to war the power to make decisions naturally, and oftimes regretably, reverts to the political leader or military chief. In many cases history has shown that competent and conscientious leaders do not impose after their duties are concluded.

History also shows that political parasites are abundant when a nation is warring. In modern times the parasites are political and economic. The government is taking care of the economic hangers-on—but who is taking care of the government? Americans do not seem to feel that there is too much to worry about insofar as the government is concerned. They feel that the leadership is ample and conscientious. It would seem from all indications that they are right.

But in approving of their war-time government the citizens are too apt to thereby approve of the great majority of political goings-on. In doing this they too often pass over the serious offenders who are hiding behind a guise of war necessity and patriotic bologna.

Those citizens, and newspapers of Missouri, who are now awakening to the threat of petty war-time political rackets, should form the vanguard of American public opinion determined to wipe out the fungus growth of

Queen Election

Candidates In Sweetheart Contest To Be Introduced At Rally This Afternoon

Candidates for the sophomore sweetheart contest will be introduced to the college at the rally to be held in the El Rey Theatre, today at 1 o'clock, according to Jack Skinner, high sophomore class president.

The complete group and their candidates reads as follows:

Ginger Luke ....Phi Beta Rho
Barbara Treganower ....Theta Tau
Evelyn Lewis......Alpha Delta Epsilon
Irene Sotak ....Rifle Club
Pat Hamilton ....Lambda Chi
Betty MacKillop ....Kappa Phi
Janet Baceus ....Campus Players

Pictures of the contestants will be in the main showcase on the first floor next week. Preliminary elections will be held next Thursday and the finals will be run off May 19. Men students only will be allowed to vote for the contestant of his choice.

The contest winner will rule over the college during sophomore week and will also preside at the high Sophomore Formal to be held at the St. Francis Yacht Club on Saturday, May 23. Mathilda Mortigia, last semester's Sophomore Sweetheart, did not have this opportunity because of the cancellation of last semester's Soph Formal.

The winner will also receive gifts and prizes from various fraternities as well as the plaque which is annually presented to the victor.

"Because of the method of nominating the candidates this semester, the Sophomore Sweetheart committee expects a close race," Skinner said.

The introduction of the contestants this afternoon will be their first presentation to the students of the college, and will mark the beginning of the predicted closely contested competition.

The method of selecting candidates for Soph Sweetheart chosen last semester caused much controversy among the students. A secret group of several men students scouted for possible entries about the college. The group selected, which was comprised of approximately twenty students, made up the preliminary entries.

Another secret ballot among the primary judges was taken, from which the seven finalists were determined. Miss Mortigia emerged the victor, having received the most votes from the men students at large.

The new system provides for any recognized college organizations to sponsor a woman to be known as their candidate.

Freshman King

Seven Candidates Entered In Frosh "Umph Boy" Race

Several new "umph-boys" of the campus have been submitted to the Freshman King Contest, Win Golden, low freshman president, announced this week.

"Although as many as 7 candidates constitute the group," revealed Golden, "we hope to increase the number of candidates to 11." At present the following candidates are competing:

Charles McCarl—Theta Tau.
Jim McGowan—Beta Phi Beta.
Glen Meahl—Phi Beta Rho.
Mike Schanpp—Pi Mu Gamma.
Steve Mohorovich—Phi Lambda.
Henry Pierce—Alpha Gamma Sigma.
Ken Kleinenbroich—Kappa Phi.

Introduction at Rally

The first appearance of the candidates will be at the rally today at the El Rey Theatre. At this time the Sophomore Sweethearts will be introduced. To aid in the selection of the college women, photographs of candidates will be posted in the main hall exhibit case on Monday, May 11.

Awards for Winners

The winner of the contest will be presented to the college at the High Sophomore formal on May 24, to be held at the St. Francis Yacht Club. Here, the Freshman King will be presented with an award by the four sororities of the camps who are collaborating in the selection of a prize.

Women to Vote

All women of the college will be entitled to preliminary elections on Thursday, May 14. From this election, competitions for the final contest slated for May 19 will be chosen. This title will be given to the contestant with the majority votes of the women students.

Construction

Work On Parking Lot Here Begins After Long Wait

That construction on the long-awaited parking lot on the south side of the college has actually begun was made known this week by Louis G. Conlan, coordinator.

"Construction, which consists in leveling off the surface of the area and cementing it in," Conlan said, "really started two weeks ago, but proceedings were held up by the Office of Production Management of the city of San Francisco for unknown reasons. Now, however, the actual work has begun."

Idea Not New

He was reminded of the instance which occurred two semesters ago when someone suggested the idea of a respectable looking, cemented parking lot where students could park their cars without having to wade through banks of mud to get to their classes.

"That was really a good idea," Conlan remarked, "but fortune kept it from being carried out. Whenever it looked as though construction was about to start, something would always come up to postpone any ideas of immediate construction."

Meanwhile, according to Conlan, conditions kept getting worse all the time. The mud kept getting thicker and thicker in the rainy months and when the weather was dry, he said, the area was like a rock bed.

Tractors Begin Work

"Students didn't know whether to be pleased, surprised, or disgusted when they saw tractors starting the work of leveling off the surface of the 'quarry,' two weeks ago," Conlan said. "Then things really began to look bad again as proceedings stopped entirely. But now it looks as if the college is really going to have a parking lot that will not only improve the looks of the campus, but also do away with the student problem of wading through a lake on his way to class."

Conlan revealed that the OPM had finally released their priorities on construction materials. He made a guess that the lot would be finished by the beginning of next semester.

Here Are King, Queen Entrants

A photo of one of the candidates for the freshmon king crown does not appear with those above. The contestant was not available when the photographs were taken. His picture, with that of the entrant in the women's contest, will appear in the next issue of The Guardsman.

All candidates, including those whose photos do not appear here, will be presented to students at the two hour rally being conducted by the committee in charge of the Buy a Ton of Freedom drive. Dates for the preliminary and final elections appear in the stories above.

Jim Skinner, high sophomore president in charge of the sweetheart contest, and Win Golden, low frosh president conducting the king elections, have said that there is still time for additional entrants to be added to the list of contestants.

Entries must be made to either Skinner or Golden to be valid.

Graduation Practice Slated For June 5

Rehearsal for the 350 students currently signed up for graduation will take place at the War Memorial Opera House on Friday, June 5, at 9 a. m., according to J. Paul Mohr, college registrar.

Graduates will be measured for caps and gowns at the rehearsal. There will be no rental charge for the caps and gowns. It is suggested that women wear dark street length dresses and dark shoes. Men should wear dark suits and dark shoes.

Graduation Time Set

The graduation ceremonies will take place at 7:45 p. m. on the evening of rehearsal. Invitations may be secured at room 126 starting May 25.

Graduates will receive postcards from the college. One side of the card may be detached and must be sent back to Dean Margaret Dougherty.

The cards will state whether the student will graduate, rehearse for graduation, or will show up for neither graduation nor rehearsal.

Return of Card Necessary

"No diploma will be issued to students who do not return the postcard," Mohr emphasized. "The information contained on the card is essential. There would be no way to know whether the student would be there or not, whether to provide a cap and gown or diploma for the negligent student."

Bernice Strube and Borrie Hyman, former students at the college, will speak at the graduation.

Placement Bureau Offers Jobs to Oakland Students

Oakland students may now secure positions in the east bay area through the college placement bureau, according to Claude Silva, chairman of this department.

Registrar

Supply Of Summer Courses Available Until Class Opens

Registration for the summer session is still being carried on and will be done so until the date of the opening on June 22, and continuing to August 14, according to J. Paul Mohr, college registrar. No requests for any addition to the present curriculum will be accepted however.

All college students who wish to enroll in the summer session should register in the registrar's office as soon as possible. College students as well as all graduating high school students are eligible for enrollment, Mohr revealed. Poor grades during the previous semester will not prevent a college student from taking a course in the summer session.

Nine Unit Maximum

A maximum of nine units will be offered and students will be given the same credit as if they had taken the course in a regular college semester, Mohr said.

Students will be allowed to make up deficiencies or complete units necessary to their college curriculum. High school students who take the course will enter the college as advanced freshmen.

Hygiene, although offered for credit, will not be compulsory.

All three unit courses will be given five times a week with each class lasting for a full hour. Two unit courses will be held four times a week and three hour laboratory sessions will be held twice a week, Mohr

Citizenship Week Featured In Program

Public address systems throughout the college will bring a half hour program in conjunction with citizenship week to class rooms at 10:30 next Tuesday, May 12, according to President Archibald J. Cloud. The theme will be Americans All.

The staff in charge of the program will be Miss Marie Weller, instructors, Goss, Gerstung, and a speaker from the General Citizens Committee, David F. Selvin. Selvin was appointed "citizen representative at large" by Mayor Angelo Rossi.

Student speakers will be Curtis Floyd, Walter Bien, Dianne Hampton and Ernestine Cervelli. The text of the broadcast will concern the privileges of being an American Citizen in a democratic government.

"The program may be transcribed for broadcast over a public network," President Cloud surmised.

The script for the program was prepared by William Goss, economics instructor, and John Gerstung, history instructor, and will follow the forum pattern of presentation.

Selvin will open the program with a talk on present day methods of propaganda and their effect on a citizenry at war.

College Cafeteria Heads Secure Sugar Allotment

Last week, representatives of the cafeteria went to the city headquarters for sugar rationing of large institutions.

The amount we will receive is to be based on records of the amount of sugar that has been used in the past and the number of persons using the facilities of the cafeteria.

A Significant Change

U. S. Geopolitics

FOR the past year American literature has been over-run with books and articles telling of the preparations being made by the Nazis for the coming world conquest.

Readers accepted these writings as truth in a vague sort of way. At least they were properly shocked, and pursed their lips and elicked their tongues to show that they definitely did not approve. But readers let it go at that.

Much publicity was centered about the famed German Geopolitical Institute at Munich. Authors pointed out that this was the institution from which so much valuable information came to Hitler and the Nazi party. German geopolitics is based upon the idea of a space-conception applied to world politics. The theory (Karl Haushofer's) is that Europe, Asia and Africa constitute a "World-Island," rule of which insures command of the entire world. Haushofer, head of the Geopolitical Institute, has succeeded in building up an enormous following of young historians, economists, and students who have made geopolities their life work. They have supplied the German war machine with priceless information.

The United States has awakened to the fact that such an institute is needed in this country. The Maryland Institute of Foreign Affairs announces as its purpose the training of students for foreign administrative posts in the post-war world "in view of the major role this nation will undoubtedly play in the world affairs after the war."

It will correlate the study of languages, government, military history, social customs, etc., of the leading countries of Europe and the Orient. It will be the first department of its kind in an American university. In the Department of Military History, Science and Tactics, a background of world history from the military point of view will be given. The Language Department—enlarged to include Japanese, Chinese, Russian and Portugese—will be transferred to the Institute.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, Maryland's president, predicts that after the war America will be the greatest maritime power in the world and "will have to garrison place after place." He thinks now is the time to start working.

How strange that the greatest industrial, political, and social nation in the world should fall behind in instances where its own interests are concerned. But on second thought it is not too strange. Because Geopolitical institutes are creatures meant to suppress or to control, and America has never coveted her genius to that.

But the establishment of this unit, which, no doubt will work in close connection with the national government at the nation's capital, is an indication of the times. It clearly shows that for the time being, at least, the methods of control must take precedence over the manners of free movement. It is another milestone in changing history of the role that governments are playing in regulating and the lives of their citizens. It is considered now a vital part of the modern day and age. Who would have imagined this ten years ago; and yet, how few are the objections today!

Sometime in the not too distant future Americans will be getting notices pertaining to the adaptation of their lives to the present day, and they will be issued from the American Geo-political Institute rather than from Washington, D. C.

How many other agencies, of aid to a federal government in peace time and in war, will soon dot the scene of United States life? At the present time the horizon is unlimited. Bureaus and agencies are here for a good long stay. Perhaps they will disappear as did the NRA or the League of Nations, no one can say.

But cognizance should be taken of this new and more drastic trend. It will execute a decisive influence on the life of every individual, and may change the doneption and course of American government and American thinking.

is not supposed to be a college column. Our subjects are to be drawn from incidents, people, odd happenstances and other such tripe that occurs out in the big world. It has always been our opinion, however, that the Guardsman Office is about the strangest place in the city. There are odd people sitting in the shadows. There are odd things all over. It is in this atmosphere that one is supposed to write. The theory is that if you can turn out a piece in these surroundings your power of concentration is supreme and you can write any place.

The other day we were dreaming away a couple of hours, apathetically cogitating on the possibilities of cutting another B. B. class. We started to rummage through a desk in an idle manner, not really concentrating on what we were doing. The top drawer was empty except for a small, yellowed piece of paper with writing faded by time and dust scrawled across its wringled surface. It was that old joke that goes, "Who was that lady I saw you with . . ." written backwards, forwards, alternate words spelled backwards, once in French, and once in Sanskrit. Some poor columnist probably went mad figuring out how he could use it for a filler.

The right hand top drawer: An empty milk bottle; three transfers; a torn picture of Lydia Lane, past Campus Queen; a mouse trap, perhaps to keep mice away from Lydia; and an old tatooing needle. Down in the corner was a dusty manuscript entitled, "Epistle to the Galatians."

a quiet ten minutes reading this work, signed incidentally by a previous editor. It was all about a guy standing on a street who saw a big hole open up in the sky out of which ashes started to fall. The guy on the street corner was named Clay Modelling and his talent was to ride bicycles while carrying a seimitar with which he'd cut people's heads off. The story ended with the whole world covered with ashes and Clay Modelling laughing like hell while he peddled his bicycle after a new victim to eat.

Poor George Cowle. He always wrote stuff like that, and they say he drowned while trying to walk across Lake Merced. He couldn't be an ordinary lunatic and imagine he was Napoleon. That wasn't good enough for George. He had to try walking on water.

The bottom drawer: An old gold fish bowl with no water in it and three ripe fish, one of them with a hook in its mouth. This is a relic of Borrie Hyman, whose doctor told him he should get plenty of exercise in a new setting. Hyman couldn't get away, so he'd just sit on the desk with his shoes off and fish out of his goldfish bowl, imagining he was in the great outdoors.

Borrie fell in his bowl one day and we've never seen him again. We told him time and again not to fish out of that bowl without his water wings on.

NEXT TO THE FISH BOWL

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Instructors attitude called; ditto Guardsman; water scarcity in cafeteria

Editor's Note: Students or faculty members wishing to author letters should leave them in The Guardsman office, Room 132, before 11 a. m. on Tuesdays. They should be addressed to the editor. Any subject is acceptable, although letters dealing with the college are generally preferred. All contributions will be published in this column, but it may be necessary to edit those which are too lengthy.

● Attitude Questionable
Editor, The Guardsman:

Engaged as we are in a war that is no joke, the incident with which I recently came in contact does not speak well for the attitude of some Americans.

A Washington representative recently visited this college in search of prospective trainees for one of the government's laboratory workshops in the nation's capital. The instructor of the class with which he was concerned asked interested students to sign up for future reference.

Interested students signed up. The instructor then proceeded to cross off the names of all Chinese students!

I did not know exactly what should be done, in such a case as this, by an impartial observer—but perhaps this letter will call a gross injustice to somebody's attention. I certainly hope so.

Disgusted.

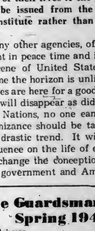
Editors note: No other word of this situation has come to our ears. It is possible that this affair was an example of voluntary decision on the part of the instructor.

● No More Sarcasm
Editor, The Guardsman:

About that remarkable piece of literature written by Anonymous in last Friday's edition concerning the fire prevention equipment at hand in the college. Some wiseguy, namely the editor, read (we assume) said letter and printed it with the editor's note—"So What?" This, we think, was the height of the Guardsman's sarcasm. It is simply too, too something. When 'Anonymous' went to so much trouble to interview the chief engineer, and found out such interesting facts, it seems that something more than "so what" should be put at the end of his letter.

The student might have a few good ideas if anybody would take time to analyze his letter. Please, dear editor, let's not have any more of that sarcasm.

Anon.



● Cafeteria Drought
Editor, The Guardsman:

War has caused curtailment in many of our school needs, but certainly not in the water we drink. So why don't we get our daily glass of H2O in the large cafeteria any more? The water is still there, but the glasses aren't. Isn't there anything that can be done? Or shall we all carry our own glasses?

Faculty Features . . . Benjamin Franklin's Protege

By Ivanna Hayworth

"HI, Doc, know any new jokes!" is the familiar greeting of students wherever they meet Dr. Franklin C. Sewell in or around the college premises.

Evidently, after hearing several former students' viewpoints on the subject, it becomes more apparent that Doc Sewell has been in the past days of the college's history as well as now, an outstanding pal to students who have known him.

Perhaps it is because Doc Sewell has been on the college faculty staff since the college was organized back in 1935 that he is so well-known by so many students; but then it may well be because of his attitude toward the college students here as a whole.

"I like the college life here very much," he said, "and consequently have a grand time. We have an extremely friendly student body here; that in itself is very important."

"Students here fortunately do not take life too seriously, but nevertheless, they are wise enough, for the most part, anyway, to learn the fine art of living."

When asked if he had any preferences as to sports, Dr. Sewell said, "Sports? No I haven't any preferences. I feel that everyone should feel free to participate in sports if they so desire, otherwise, he should do something else that is to his liking."

"To really enjoy life," he said, "people should concentrate their activities in the fields which they enjoy the most."

"I knew a professor once," he added, "who earned a hundred dollars an hour just by doing the things that he wanted to do. That's the life, isn't it?" he laughed.

Dr. Sewell attended grade and high schools in Los Angeles. He is a graduate of the University of Southern California, where he received his A.B., M.A., and LLD degrees. He received his PhD. from Georgetown University in Washington.

Being a native of Los Angeles, it seemed only quite natural to present-day time-old query, "How do you like San Francisco in comparison to Los Angeles?"

"Well," he replied, "I think it is regrettable that the two cities aren't a hundred miles apart. In my opinion, however, San Francisco is a more sophisticated, but," he added quickly, "it's nice in L. A., even though the weather up here is more consistent. (I'll probably get a check from the Chamber of Commerce for that," he laughed.)

Dr. Sewell is a member of the Bar Association of California. At one time, he said that he did work for the Carnegie Endowment.

Doc has been in practically all of the countries of Europe, that is the countries that once were. "The last time I saw Paris," he reminisced. "Ah, but—lovely place, had a wonderful time." That was practically all he would tell about his sojourn in Gay Paree.

Old Mexico and the West Indies were also listed among his travels, and it was in these regions south of the North American coast, that he spent many entertaining and diverting hours throughout the vacations in which he journeyed through these parts.

Doc Sewell is, just in case someone might not have been informed of the fact, an instructor in the Political Science department here at the college. Very interesting class, incidentally, according to the students enrolled in it.

Doc Sewell might have been a little shy about talking about himself, or it may have been that he was just feeling the effects of too many exams. He said, however, that he had spent the former evening spinning yarns with an old friend, and that "Today, I am tired," he almost yawned, "I feel that people need to know the true importance of 'real' relaxation."

The Doc really isn't so serious or so stern as his picture might indicate to some, because it is a rare occasion if it should happen at all, to see him around the college here without that big broad smile on his face.

Beaming, he comes down into the cafeteria and chances are, from some group of students sitting about will come the greeting:

"Hi, Doc, know any new jokes!"

Cataldo — Bob Hope Who Calls Madeleine Carroll My Favorite Blonde

Spectator . .

CHASED by Nazi spies from New York to Los Angeles—but loving every minute of it—Bob Hope romps through eight reels of rapid fire comedy with his and My Favorite Blonde, the always, and ever so beautiful Madeleine Carroll.

This time, Hope is a vaudeville entertainer, a straight man for Percy the Penguin, when he encounters Madeleine in his back stage dressing room. Not knowing that she is being pursued by the Nazi group headed by Gale Sondergaard and George Zucco, Bob is recruited into Mady's service (ah, the lucky stiff!) to accompany her to L. A., where she is to deliver secret plans to British "brainquarters."

AFTER YEARS OF TRYING, BOB GETS MADY

After praising the blonde loveliness of Madeleine Carroll on his Pepsodent radio program for years, Hope finally gets his one big chance to co-star with her in a picture. My Favorite Blonde, with an ordinary run-of-the-mill plot, races gaily along, and the beauteous Miss Carroll proves herself to be a delightful comedienne as she matches Bob gag for gag and kiss for kiss.

She abandons her usual sophistication and turns to some slapstick emoting as witnessed in an apartment room scene, where she and Bob stage a veritable Rex Beach furniture-bustin' riot. She is slapped, nearly strangled, hit by flying vases and pictures, and is kicked to the floor by her number one admirer, Bob Hope.

In one sequence, the spies carry Hope out of a mortuary in a coffin despite the violent attempts to get out. This is one time when a coffin (thanks to Hope) rhumbas to the Funeral March.

BING CROSBY MAKES APPEARANCE

Credit Don Hartman and Frank Butler with a cleverly written screen play that has Bob and Mady on the screen 90 per cent of the time. One of the more amusing incidents in the film is the appearance of Bing Crosby, an appearance that has Hope staring into space murmuring to himself, "No . . . it couldn't!" So far the only thing remains solitary—white, and trimming of green, red, and blue add what color contrast is to be had.

For several weeks we've raved about the simply scrumptious peasant skirts seen on the campus the minute the sun peeked out and brought on green grass, birds, flowers, etc., etc. But no individuals and their skirts have been mentioned and only one will be mentioned here unfortunately. Some day, perhaps, the paper will be given over to this one column, and we'll promise to get all the lovely gals and their gowns described, so no hard feelings!

DRAPE SHADE

Barbara Stahmann, of the Associated Students, has worn a large flowered print skirt several times. Each time our mouth dropped open, and we just gazed in admiration. Especially when Miss Stahmann wore the contrasting green corduroy jacket with the skirt, but only today did some worthy student mention the fact that the skirt material was similar to drapery material. And, true enough, it is.

All of which proves nothing except that clothes this year can be made of anything or everything you may have handy—and still be vedy, vedy effective.

Turbans, still being worn, incidentally have brought forth a new style, a bandana is wrapped cleverly around the head, and a large bow tied on either artificial or real flowers are pinned smack on the top of the head. Rather Carmen-Miranditish, but cute anyway.

ONE PIECE SUITS

Incidentally, have you seen the one piece dresses that look like suits? They are very new, and attractive for summertime wear. When the weather gets cooler, just add a coat, and there you are.

FEM ADS . . . by Nancy

APRIL showers being hosts of new Maytime gadgets. As April was not devoid of rain, consequently May is not devoid of new doodads. Number one on the parade comes in the form of a zipper compact. Similar to the small slide fastener on purses, it zips on three sides, contains a powder puff and mirror internally, and two large gold plated initials externally. It is so clever, even the escort won't mind if you powder your nose in his presence.

How about an air raid purse, in lieu of the last Sunday night blackout—it is small, yet large enough to hold change (small), a lipstick and a piece of pink kleenex. (White bleach is not on the "No Can Get" list so white kleenex is now tattle-gray.) But back to the Alert bag—it fits nicely into the pocket and comes in saddle leather, and morocco, in many colors.

CONVERTIBLE MODELS

One down town store carries a marvelous little convertible dickie. It has three collars that snapped onto one foundation. Two are Peter Pan and the other shirt waist.

First California Saddle leather bags were much in evidence (see last year's fashion magazines) but this year plain rawhide hits a new high, and has become the subject of many handbag and belt styles. So far the color remains solitary—white, and trimming of green, red, and blue add what color contrast is to be had.

Robinson
Cabbages & Kings

It happens almost every week. She runs into the office at the last minute screaming,

"I need two more lines, oh what will I do?" But she usually comes out okey. And then there are the times that half of your copy lands in the perpendicular file. Copy that you spent hours writing, copy dear to your heart, among all of the other junk.

And always leering about the office on Friday morning as you spot the mangled issue of your work there she stands with that famous grin.

The whole staff yells at her. The entire office makes cracks about her lack of men. We all give her needed cakes of Lifebuoy for the laffs. We all inquire about her last date and what Lincoln said that night at someone friendishly gives her a hotfoot.

She is the butt of all jokes and the subject of more "pomes" than anyone, even trees. We kid her about Dave and laff at the thought of her dancing, but to all of the staff she is someone very swell and something very essential.

So to her, to Nancy Nagle (that pulp to the upper left) we dedicate this junk. Not from us but from the whole staff. One of the swellest people that we have ever met and we still think that she may get a man.

SAN FRANCISCOANA

We were wondering and talking about the "Gay Nineties" the other night with Jim Upp. Now that is a real place. People pass there a hundred times a day without realizing that within those portals lie one of the most famous dens of iniquity of the old barbary coast.

First known as the Midway, the establishment was one of the more pretentious of the coast. Later the name was changed to the Hippodrome and finally to the US Cafe.

But what interested us most was the Lobby-entrance decorations of the place. They were done by Arthur Putnam, who later became one of America's greatest sculptures. Originally, they were a group of satyres happily pursuing a group of nymphs.

It is alleged that all Putnam received for the work is $175, but others claim that he merely had a few drops of liquid TNT. At any rate, if you will take that time to wander past the establishment, you can still see the statues 'cause they are still there and from all we could find out, they are the originals.

IDLE THOUGHTS

Someone could make a small fortune by selling those small fire extinguishers to Horohooy right now. They say that he wishes that he was a nephew of Sam instead of a son of Heaven.

Speaking of Tojo, we wonder just how he plans to commit Hari Kari. Seems that it would be rather difficult to stab one's self in the back.

Adolph was a house painter in the beginning. Looks as though he is wishing that he had some houses standing that he could go back to painting.

THE GUARDSMAN SPORTS

RAMblings

By Nick Barbarotto

Meet Goes On Tomorrow; Rams Have One Man Team

IT'S TOMORROW INSTEAD

Well, bad condition of the Santa Rosa track caused the postponement of the Northern Junior College Conference Track and Field Championships (phew, what a title!) last Saturday. So tomorrow, same place, same time, a week later, the boys will definitely go at it.

The only thing to change, in fact, was the date! Everything else remains intact. Sacramento Junior College still stands head and shoulders above the field as potential champions.

Number two, Dick Petch still will be unable to compete for the Rams in both sprints, and number three—Joe Batiste, the colored flash from Sacramento, still looms the most outstanding athlete of the field and probable star of the meet.

Batiste will ramble over his favorite hurdle events and it doesn't take a genius to figure that he will make his opposition look silly. He is truly one of the greatest hurdlers in the country, having that distinction even as a high school student in Arizona.

He has defeated the best in the nation, and any talk of him being beaten tomorrow is just out. There isn't a chance.

But just in case Sacramento goes haywire and things begin to go wrong in the other events, Batiste can do any of the following: throw the javelin and the discus, broad jump, high jump, and tear off the 100 yard dash. He also runs the anchor lap of the Sacramento relay team. And he can do all of them equally well!

So let's just put off all formalities and hail the NCJJCC (it's shorter that way)—Sacramento Junior College.

Eager eyes will also be on Irving Moore, former Piedmont High School pole vaulting ace. As a protege of Connie Warmerdam (ever hear of 'im?), Moore cleared 14 feet while competing for Santa Rosa Junior College in the Pacific Association meet last Saturday to break the National Junior College record.

If vaulting conditions are right, Moore should have no trouble in breaking the conference record now held by the former Ram, Keith Groswird, at 13 feet, 6¾ inches.

What points Coach Russ Sweet and the Rams can get, will have to come from a handful of athletes. Burt Goebel has a fairly good chance to annex the high jump, though third place seems more likely. A few points should be garnered by Bob Oyen in the pole vault, while Jim Duryea, with his best-ever throw of 160 feet in the javelin made recently, figures for a couple in that event.

See, same as last week.

OUR ERROR—NOW CLEARED

In the last issue of The Guardsman there appeared a swimming story marveling the feat of one Jim Byers. The article read that Byers set a new pool record for the 50 yard sprint while competing against Stockton Junior College.

It wasn't long before the wolves were at our door telling us of our crime! Being that we believe in the policy of giving credit where credit is due, it is only fair that we mention our error and send our apologies to Bill Hickey.

Byers, though a member of the Ram swimming team, didn't even make the Stockton trip! How, then, did he break the record? He just DIDN'T. The gentleman who failed to receive credit for his wonderful performance was the aforementioned BILL HICKEY.

The statement now reads: Bill Hickey set a new pool record for the 50 yard sprint while competing against Stockton Junior College.

Everything O. K. now?

MORE CHAMPIONSHIPS

Championship titles will be floating about throughout northern California this weekend. What with the track meet already taken care of, comes the Northern Junior College Golf Championships.

This is a two day affair, taking place today and tomorrow at the Stanford University golf course. It promises to be a humdinger, a killer-diller, and a slam-bang deal. That's how it will probably be described—but truer words would put it thusly: It won't be so much and those closer to the picture say it will be even less!

But Coach Lee Eisan is still in there pitching. Yesiree, he will take his squad to Palo Alto. All one of them!

The gent representing the San Francisco Junior College is Oleg Baloff, formerly of George Washington High School. We wish him all the luck in the world and extend to him the praise that he well deserves. Certainly he is doing his bit for the Red and White, which is more than plenty can say.

Why more interest in golf is not taken here at the college is really a mystery. Opportunities are plentiful and the competition is as good as anywhere in the amateur ranks.

Well, anyway, with only Eisan and Baloff making the trip, there will be a conserving of tires. Maybe the boys are being patriotic, huh?

YOU'VE A DATE!

In case you have nothing to do next Friday night, May 15, we suggest you drop down to the men's gymnasium about 7:45.

The reason is simple. That will be the scene of what promises to be the greatest Intramural-AMS fights that the college has ever presented. Past fights have been held in the Coliseum Bowl, and next week's brawls will christen the new ring that was recently purchased.

With the new bleachers surrounding the ring, the fights will be visible from all angles. That is, there's no need of standing up to see who hit who, as was the case at the Bowl.

We're especially anxious to see the outcome of the Ed Glinden-Seisuke Akamine beef for the 127 pound championship. The fight alone is worth a price of admission, and you can see it with only a Associated Student's card.

So again we suggest that you make it . . . it'll be a night well spent.

Track and Field

Squad Travels Northward For Postponed Conference Meet; 15 Rams To Compete

Because of the wetness of the track, the Northern California Junior College Track and Field Meet was not held at Santa Rosa's oval as scheduled last week, but tomorrow Russ Sweet's Ram tracksters will complete their trek to the Cub's home town for the meet.

Lacking a balance in the field events, the Rams are not favored to walk off with team honors, but several of the local clinderdusters are expected to gather points and assure the Sweetmen of a respectable position in the final standings.

Sweet Has Hopes

Coach Sweet has high hopes of getting enough men in the "money positions" and for that reason, 15 trackmen will make the trip.

Three men on the squad stand out as cinch point gatherers, those being Doug Pearson, Burt Goebel, and Bob Oyen.

Pearson has been coming along in fine fashion these past few meets, and should give the favored Joe Batiste, Sacramento "flash," a tough battle in both hurdle events. Batiste, it must be noted, has defeated top notch hurdlers from all parts of California, among these being Johnny Biewaner, outstanding timber topper from Southern California.

Bob Oyen can also be favored to gather points in the pole vault, but he will be in high class, with the presence of Irving Moore, sensational vaulter from Santa Rosa. Last Saturday at the PAA meet, Moore cleared 14 feet, defeating Guinn Smith, California star, and placing second behind Conny Warmerdam, who set a new world's outdoor record of 15 feet, 6 ¾ inches.

Goebel Has Chance

The other hopeful is Burt Goebel, college high jumper, and broad jumper. Goebel hit six feet three inches in the high jump, and although his broad jumping distance is not known, he should be pushing himself up among the leaders in this event.

A doubtful starter is sprinter Dick Petch. Petch is still suffering from a sore thigh muscle. He would have been a strong contender in both the century, and the 220, having run the hundred in 9.8, and stopping the clocks in 22.3 in the furlong.

The following is a list of the men going to Santa Rosa tomorrow: Sam Mendelson, Bob Howard, Charles Snook, Walter Thomsen, Doug Pearson, Jim King, Deryl Kesselring, Jim Skinner, Howard Wakefield, Irving Bowker, Jim Duryea, Boy Oyen, Burt Goebel, Bill Jennings, and Ed Sanford.

Baseball

Adams, Ram Hurler, Declared Ineligible

Andy Adams, ace Ram pitcher, has been declared ineligible from further junior college conference play, it was learned yesterday.

Murius McFadden, San Mateo coach, claimed Adams hurled for the San Mateo Blues, a semi-pro club, last Sunday, which is a violation of the Northern California Junior College Conference rules. There was no way of disputing the charges made by McFadden, since he was sitting in the stands witnessing the contest.

Macchia to Start

The blow came as a sudden shock to the college nine, for Adams was slated to hurl against San Mateo tomorrow on the peninsula diamond. Frank Macchia, who pitched against Marin, will be called back into service for the Ram-Bulldog affair.

This move will aid the McFadden squad no end. It has been proven that when Macchia is worked too often, he tires badly in the late innings. Proof was his hurling against Placer, when he came out on the short end of a 6 to 3 score.

Hurler Tires

He was untouchable for the first five innings, but he faded in the sixth, and the Panthers turned two hits and four walks into five runs. When he faced Menlo, it was a different story. After a week's rest, Macchia turned in the best pitching performance of the season, when he allowed but two hits, the Rams bunching eight hits and three walks into a 10 to 2 win.

Adams, who has been around baseball long enough to know that his performance Sunday violated the rules, should not have taken the chance, when he knew that a victory tomorrow over San Mateo would shove the locals into second place, and maybe a possibility for a tie in the league championship, Lee Eisan, stellar Ram mentor, said.

WAA

Golfers Attend Coed Tournament

Tomorrow, men and women golfers will attend San Mateo Junior College to participate in the sectional Coed Golf Tournament, after accepting an invitation sent by the Women's Athletic Association of that campus.

Bertha Keller, women's athletic instructor, states, "The WAA will equip couples with equipment and balls if those eager to participate have no clubs or balls. Transportation will also be paid by the WAA.

Weiner Bar-b-que

The next large event of the WAA will be held Tuesday, May 12, at Sigmund Stern Grove from 4 to 8 p. m. All women students are invited to attend and are urged to bring a high school senior who may be interested in enrolling in the college.

"Come and get in the groove at the Grove," states Annall Branch, chairman of the event. "Women students will discover good food and good entertainment if they attend," she ended. The meal will be prepared by the Hotel and Restaurant division of the college.

Alvenise Shannon, chairman of entertainment, promises many interesting events including a movie and a talk about hosteling by Elizabeth Baker, of the American Youth Hotels.

Idea New

"The idea of hosteling is something new to the college," Miss Keller informs. All those between 4 and 94 may go hosteling and enjoy the outdoors. Transportation from one place to another is done by bicycle, footskis, horseback, and canoe.

Miss Baker will state the hostels near San Francisco, rules and regulations of the groups, and answer any questions.

Tickets for this event may be purchased for 20 cents from the bank and from any member of the WAA council.

Intramural

Capacity Crowd Expected For Boxing Show In Men's Gymnasium Next Friday

Seven more days, and the men's gymnasium will probably be packed to the rafters as the college's semi-annual intramural-Associated Men Students' boxing carnival will get under way.

The first bout will commence at 8 p. m., according to Jim Jensen, college boxing instructor. Since its inception many semesters ago, the intramural boxing carnival has always been held outside the campus. However, this semester's "haymaker festival" will be a typical homecoming event, since it will mark the first time that it will be held in the men's gymnasium.

New Ring to Be Used

With the purchase of a brand new boxing ring by the college physical education department, and with the newly-constructed bleachers, a crowd of 1,000 students would not be unbelievable. Elimination bouts were held yesterday in the men's gymnasium with the winners of the bouts taking part in next Friday's show.

(Note: the winners of yesterday's elimination bouts will not be known until Friday, May 15, since the Guardsman had already gone to press!)

In the heavyweight division, Al "Duke" Drake will be defending his intramural title for the third time. Drake, a massive prototype of Hollywood's Wayne Morris, will probably be pitted against Bryant Finch, a barrel-chested 200 pounder who, if he fights, will be making his first real appearance.

Another rousing question mark is the 120 pound division, where Ed Glinden and Seisuke (call him Joe, now) Akamine are both stationed. IF Akamine and Glinden both decide to enter, they are capable of staging a "slam-bang-drag-'em-out scrap" that would make the Charge of the Light Brigade a slow motion affair. Both fighters are fast—very fast—and either one possesses enough lethal TNT to send the other to the can-

There is a very, very slight possibility that still others may compete—meaning those men who are stationed at Reno, Nevada, to fly for the U. S. Army Air Corps. These men are Ira Cartney, Emil Kayrallah, and Bob Portello.

Admission to the affair is by Associated Student card only, and according to Jim Duryea, next week's fights will top the bottle now going on over the southwest Pacific.

Touchtackle Started

Eleven six-man touch-tackle football teams have entered in the college's annual intramural tournament, according to Jack Brady, faculty Intramural advisor. The teams that are entered are as follows: Eskimo Club, Rabbits, Esquires, Tri Epsilon, East Bay Five, Phi Lambda Epsilon, RAMbling Wrecks, Warriors, Rifle Club, Deadeyes, and the Spartans.

The tourney will run on a "sudden death" basis, with one defeat sending that team to the sidelines for the rest of the tournament. Games will be 40 minutes in length, and tie games will be played off, until ONE team wins.

Today, on the Ram football field, the semi-finals of the tournament will be run off, according to Brady. Since only 11 teams have entered, the tournament will probably be completed before the end of next week.

Swim Meet Completed

Last Friday, the college staged its fourth annual intramural swimming tournament at the Jefferson High School pool. Here are the complete results:

50 yard breaststroke—Won by Wayne Smythe; second, Charles Price. Time, 38.0 seconds. (Breaks record held by Smythe at last semester of 38.9 seconds.)

50-yard backstroke—Won by Harmon Schragge; second, Walter Varakin. Time, 39.4 seconds. (Breaks old record held by Pierre Siead last semester of 36.1 seconds.)

50 yard freestyle—Won by Harmon Schragge; second, Dante Kingsley. Time, 33.3 seconds.

100 yard freestyle—Won by Harmon Schragge; second, Don Lindberg. Time, 1:07.5 seconds.

75 yard medley relay—Won by a team composed of Walter Varakin, John Greenberg, and Wayne Smythe. Time, 41.8 seconds.

200 yard relay—Won by a team composed of Robert Kerli, Don Linberg, Wayne Smythe, and Charles Price. Time, 2:07.3 seconds.

Softball Entries Due

Today is the last day to submit entries for the coming intramural softball tournament, Brady said. Entries are to be handed in to Brady, or managers Ted Green and Bill Gerecke.

With only the semi-finals to be run off, the intramural horseshoes tournament will finally be completed.

Here are the results of the fourth round of intramural competition: Ed Sanford def. Neal Baker; Richmond Sedley def. Bob Hoffman; Donte Kingsley def. Roy Houston; Mel Jessup def. Bob Irvin; and Bill Mahoric def. Hal Weeks.

Tennis

Racket Wielders Bow Before San Mateo For First Defeat of Current Season

By Bob Cataldo

In a struggle that would eclipse the wildest dreams of a Hollywood scenarioist, San Mateo Junior College's RAMpaging tennis team won a "4 and 3" decision from the locals last Tuesday afternoon on the suburbanite courts.

Jere Selover, the brilliant San Mateo shot maker, did everything that was expected of him as he handed Joe Greeley his first setback of the current campaign. After Greeley had overpowered Selover in the opening set, the ex-San Mateo High Schooler began placing his shots past the frantic Greeley, a factor that gave him a 1-6, 6-3, 6-1 win.

Ulrich Upsets Oakes

Jackie Ulrich of the defending champions outclassed the reticent Roy Oakes, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, but the peninsulans dropped their first match when the locals' Ronnie McArthur polished off Don Schmidt, 6-2, 6-3.

George Amemiya, the "popsicle" bombardier," sent SM's Bob Nourse to the showers with a hard-earned 6-4, 2-6, 7-5 triumph. Playing in his "sophomore" conference match, Al Clapp, the stationary red-headed stylist, lost to Bobby Drisko, 6-2, 6-2.

Greeley and Oakes, the inseparable twins, teamed up to eke out a 6-4, 6-4 win over the Bulldog doubles combination of Ulrich and Schmidt. And come the payoff—

Selover Again

With both teams having won three games each, the next doubles game would decide whether or not the San Mateans would be able to edge out the Rams for the circuit diadem.

And it happened!

It was Selover again who teamed up with Carl Henoch to easily turn back the futile challenge of McArthur and Amemiya, 6-3, 6-3. It was all over, and the "down-the-country" squad had again beaten the locals' attempt to dethrone the Bulldogs.

The Rams were without the presence of Fred Griffin, who, for some unknown reason, has been declared ineligible. Had Griffin (he's number three man on the Wilson team) been able to participate against the Mateans, perhaps the match MAY have been a different story.

Match play results: Singles—

Selover (SMJC) def. Greeley (SFJC), 1-6, 6-3, 6-1; Ulrich (SMJC) def. Oakes (SFJC), 6-4, 3-6, 6-3; McArthur (SFJC) def. Schmidt (SMJC), 6-2, 6-3; Amemiya (SFJC) def. Nourse (SFJC), 6-4, 2-6, 7-5; and Drisko (SMJCC) def. Clapp (SFJC), 6-1, 6-2.

Doubles — Greeley and Oakes (SFJC) def. Ulrich and Schmidt (SMJC), and Selover and Henoch (SMJC), def. McArthur and Amemiya (SFJC), 6-3, 6-3.

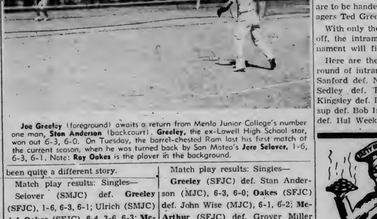
Match play results: Singles—



Greeley (SFJC) def. Stan Anderson (MJC), 6-3, 6-0; Oakes (SFJC) def. John Wise (MJC), 6-1, 6-2; McArthur (SFJC) def. Grover Miller (MJC), 6-0, 6-0; Amemiya (SFJC) def. Joe Jenks (MJC), 7-5, 6-3; and Clapp (SFJC) def. Bob Hill (MJC), 8-6, 6-3.

Doubles — Greeley and Oakes (SFJC) def. Wise and Miller (MJC), 6-4, 5-7, 6-2; and Hill and Anderson (MJC) def. McArthur and Amemiya (SFJC), 7-5, 6-3.

Today, the Rams travel to Stanford University, where they will compete in the Northern California Junior College Tennis Championship. If the men of Tom Wilson and company expect to revenge Tuesday's beating, this MAY be the day—otherwise never!

Joe Greeley—racket in hand, and smiling for the benefit of Guardsman photographer, Bennie Chin. Greeley will enter the Northern California Junior College Tennis Championships at Stanford University, Palo Alto, today. He will compete in Coach Tom Wilson.

Joe Greeley (foreground) awaits a return from Menlo Junior College's number one man, Stan Anderson (backcourt). Greeley, the ex-Lowell High School star, won out 6-3, 6-0. On Tuesday, the barrel-chested Ram lost his first match of the current season, when he was turned back by San Mateo's Jere Selover, 1-6, 6-3, 6-1. Note: Roy Oakes is the player in the background.

War Show

Fire Department Gives Display Next Friday On Fire-Bombs; Rescue Work Also Featured

A two pound magnesium incendiary bomb will be detonated in the rear court next Friday, May 15, by a team from the local fire house, who will demonstrate the best methods of controling the resulting fire, according to Dan Sullivan, assistant drill manager of San Francisco's fire department. The demonstration will start at 10 a. m.

The team will consist of approximately ten men, or less if that many can't be spared, according to Sullivan. Besides the controlling of incendiaries with water and with sand, the team will demonstrate practical lifts and carries for rescue work.

Purpose Stated

"Our duty is to save lives. We will show the best way in which that may be done," Sullivan said. This program, inaugurated by Fire Chief Brennan, is being carried on through all of the city's junior colleges, high schools and parochial schools, he explained.

Next Friday, the men will show 6 lifts and carries which may be performed by one man, five two-man lifts and one six-man lift. These will include the "babe in arms" carry, used for lifting an injured person off a bed, and the "lumber jack" carry, for assisting a fatigued person from a standing position, using the victim's wearing apparel to make a type of harness.

"Drags" Demonstrated

Several types of "drags" will be demonstrated. "A drag," Sullivan said, "is used when in cases of intense heat, the rescuer is unable to stand up. He must keep close to the floor to avoid smoke and being overcome by heat.

"One of these consists of the victim's wrists being strapped together. The fireman then places the victim's wrists around his neck and carries him on his hands and knees, leaving his hands free to open doors and clear wreckage in his path."

Another type is the trail carry in which two men carry the victim on an improvised stretcher. This is used in narrow passages.

Respiration Technics Shown

Artificial respiration will be demonstrated. The team will show a six-man carry. Each rescuer, without loss of rhythm, will do his appointed task, one watching the pulse, one watching respiration and the others relieving each other in the actual mechanics of resuscitation.

"It is our hope that the students of the college will invite their parents and their friends to witness this demonstration," Sullivan said. Do not get the idea that the men who will demonstrate are a polished team. They will be men from your local fire house and will show rescue work that every fireman knows. Much valuable information for civilians may be obtained from the demonstration. Many of the lifts and carries to be shown were developed by the San Francisco Fire Department.

College Honor Society Banquet Date Indefinite

Climaxing the semester's activities, the college honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma, will hold its annual banquet at the Paris Restaurant, 242 O'Farrell Street, Barbara Stahmann, president of the group, disclosed this week.

There has been no definite date established as yet for the staging of the banquet, Miss Stahmann said.

Members of the society who wish further information may contact George Baffico, Joan Wrenn, Henry Pierce, or Miss Stahmann.

"Many students don't realize the possibilities there are in the Alpha Gamma Sigma," Miss Stahmann added. "Members of the society are actively engaged in college work, and it might be well to point out the fact that the student body president, vice-president, and secretary are on this semester's honor society."

Associated Men's Boxing Matches in Gym May 15

Last AMS sponsored event of the semester will be the semi-annual intramural boxing matches, May 15, Jim Duryea, AMS president, disclosed this week. The matches will be followed by a dance, it was revealed.

"Both men and women are cordially invited to attend the event," Duryea said. "The matches will start at 7:30 p. m. and will last until about 9:30, after which the floor will be cleared and prepared for dancing to records. The dancing will continue until about 11."

Duryea extended his thanks for the support the AMS received during the past semester from the students. He particularly praised the students for their spirit at the barn dance which was held last Saturday night.

New Book By Alice Cooper Announced

"Twenty Modern Americans is the latest contribution of Alice C. Cooper, college instructor, to the reading public.

This book is intended to aid the high school student in gaining a perspective of America today—of the people who have toiled long and arduously to attain their success. It is meant to inspire young people to set their minds on a goal and to work for it through their lives.

Palmer Collaborates

Miss Cooper has been working on this book for three years in collaboration with Charles A. Palmer of Hollywood, who has done some writing for the Saturday Evening Post. The illustrations were done by Cameron Wright, who used original sketches of the subjects with something indicative of their work also represented.

To gather the needed information, Miss Cooper used biographies, current magazines, and personal interviews.

Celebrities Praise Book

Although just off the Harcourt, Brace and Company's press, Miss Cooper has received many commending remarks on her work from the many of those people whom she studied. Walt Disney, for one, declared, "This is the best biography of myself that I have read."

Mrs. Osa Johnson, "Delighted with the new approach to the material," Malvina Hoffman, sculptress, "So alive."

In the opening pages of Twenty Modern Americans are found the hopes behind this latest work of Miss Cooper. These biographies show a present cross-section of America today and the goals that the student the traits of character which have made possible the great success of the subjects from such a varied field.

CAB Sets May 22 For Baby Day At College

Friday, May 22, is the new date set for the Club Advisory Board Baby Day, Dorothy Hogan, chairman of the committee for the affair, announced. Because of difficulty in securing the women's gymnasium, it was necessary to postpone Baby Day a full week.

The plan for Baby Day was offered to the club board by a club representative and has since been approved by the college Executive Council and the Social Committee.

Student Support Needed

Baby Day has been a great favorite on many another college campus, Miss Hogan said, but so far enthusiasm for the plan here on the college campus has not been as great as expected. The only students who have shown any interest are the fraternities and sororities.

Mixer Dance Follows

On Baby Day all students will be urged to attend in baby clothes or as reasonable facsimile, Miss Hogan continued. "Any costume characteristic of your kid days is acceptable, providing you don't go too far back in your childhood for an inspiration."

A mixer dance in the women's gymnasium will bring the day to a close. Decorations will carry out the Baby theme.

A meeting of the CAB will be held this Friday at 3 p. m. for the purpose of assigning comittee heads for the affair. All clubs are urged to be represented.

Gaddy Completes Training For Navy Instructorship

By Marjorie Weiss

In all the splendor of his naval uniform, Lieutenant Jack Gaddy returned here April 29 for a quick visit before starting as an instructor at St. Mary's College in the Navy's physical education program.

Embarrassed by the taunts of his former associates who insisted upon calling him "Admiral," Gaddy kept repeating that there was nothing to say. However, from just keeping on the alert, we managed to pick up scraps of information from the banter about us.

About seven weeks ago the ex-coach entrained for Annapolis, where with other former college coaches, 194 in all, he was "put in shape" for instructing young men in the Navy's huge physical education training program.

Lectures, drills, physical education courses, and exercises constituted some of the rigorous training which Gaddy underwent from 6:15 a. m. to 10:40 p. m. The atmosphere at Annapolis was strictly naval, for the men were required to call the building "ship," the stairs "ladder" and other such nautical terms in order that they might, in the future, accustom their students to speaking in such a fashion.

Starting last Monday with approximately 249 other instructors, Gaddy started his students on the first lap of their one-year training program. At St, Mary's and other such centers, the men begin their training with a strenuous physical education program during which time they are not allowed to leave the campus.

Upon completion of the course, which consists of four three-month periods at specified locations, the men receive the rank of ensign in the Naval Air Corps.

No Change in Faculty

All courses given will be based on the questionnaires distributed to the college students and graduating high school students about a month ago. Noticeably absent are courses in history and English. No change in faculty personnel will be made for the summer session.

Most questionnaires expressed a desire on the part of the students for courses in languages, sciences, mathematics, and political sciences.

Music Department Begins New Appreciation Hour

A music listening hour will be held on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, at 1 p. m., in Room 200, Rosetta Badger, college music instructor, disclosed this week.

The first program will be held next Monday, May 11. Started after many requests, the music listening hour will be open to both students and faculty members.

"It is not in the nature of a class," Miss Badger said, "but is entirely informal and for musical enjoyment."

Commissions In Women's Auxiliary Corps Opened

Fort Des Moines, Iowa, is being considered by the War Department as a West Point for women. Some 5,000 of them would be trained there in various war occupations.

The Navy auxiliary unit would be open to any woman over 20. Duties would include decoding, airplane spotting and confidential secretarial work.

Dance May 16 By Sororities, Fraternities

First all-college sorority-fraternity affair to be sponsored by the students of the college will be held on Saturday evening, May 16, at the Bellevue Hotel, at 505 Geary Street, from 9 p. m. until 12 midnight, according to Jim Upp, Associated Student yell leader and chairman of the Sorority Fraternity Council.

This affair, Upp said, will be held in San Francisco, not in Oakland as was previously announced.

In an effort to instill new spirit and more coordinated activities among the several college organizations, the Sorority Fraternity Council collaborated to organize this sort of dance.

Last Social Affair

The dance is to be informal, announced Upp, and will be the last college affair to be held this spring.

Noel Thomas, prominent local musician, has been selected to play for the dance. Vocalist with Thomas is Bill Stoker. Stoker was formerly with Kay Kayser, of Musical College fame.

Organizations are representatives that have so far announced their participation in the affair are Bill Moore, Beta Phi Beta; Bill Stembert, Tri Epsilon; Jim Upp, Beta Tau; Eloise Winfield, Theta Tau; Marge Wagner, Phi Beta Rho; Jo Raioli, Lambda Chi; and Jane Johnson of Kappa Phi sorority.

Since the Sorority-Fraternity Spring Informal has the backing of Gloria Olivi, Associated Student vice president and Social Committee chairman, Upp promised that the dance will be an all-college affair.

Informal

As the name implies, the dance will be wholly informal. Sport suits, sweaters and slacks will be the general uniform for the men students, while pedal pushers and bobby socks will be the outfit for the women students.

Patriotic Song Contest Announced by Music Dept.

A patriotic song contest sponsored by the college music department has been announced by Flossita Badger, music instructor.

"Ever since December 7, and even before, there has been agitation for new and singable patriotic songs," Miss Badger said. It is hoped that something of this type will be forthcoming from the planned contest.

The songs should be original and words original or taken from some other source. Chief specifications are that the song be singable and in a patriotic vein.

All entries should be submitted to either Miss Badger or Madison Devlin not later than Monday, May 18. They will be judged by a combined committee of student and faculty judges.

New Business Courses For Next Semester

In an effort to meet the shortage of trained office workers, the college business department will offer in the fall semester an intensive 8 to 16 weeks course designed to give prospective office employees adequate skills to meet demands, Ward M. Nichols, Department Head , disclosed this week.

Those who wish to get into business in the shortest time possible may take a 16 week course in beginning shorthand and transcription. A brushup stenography course will be offered to those students who have had previous training in shorthand.

The demand for trained operators of various types of office machines has become acute in the past few months. To meet this demand, short period courses of training in the operation of certain machines has been set up. Training for expert ability will, of course, necessitate more than 40 hours of time.

Following is a list of machines that students may learn to operate: Burroughs Billing Machine, Ditto and Standard Direct Duplicator, Dictaphone and Ediphone, Electric Addressograph, Electric Mimeograph and Niagara Duplictor; Electromatic Typewriter; Multigraph Duplicator, Rotary Gelatine Duplicator, Type-Set Multigraph, and the Vari-typer.

190 Balboa Graduates Enrolled Here At College

By Bob Catudio

Among the leading high schools whose graduates are students at this college, is Balboa High School. Former Buccaneers participate in almost every college activity. This is most evident in the Associated Men Students, where two of the three officers are former Balboans.

Leading the group are those students who have enrolled in the police science course of study. More students from Balboa are registered in this course than in any other course offered in the college curriculum. Balboans enrolled in this semester's police science course include Ed Lopez, Bob Kenny, Ed Alvers, Alfred Barca, Russell Jacobson, and Jesse Henriques.

Students at this college are not only judged on their academic attainment, but rather on their ability and fitness to fulfill other duties. These duties may consist of active participation in student governmental affairs, athletics, social functions, and college clubs, fraternities, and sororities.

One of the outstanding students in the college from Balboa is Ed Lopez. Lopez, a police science major, is a member of the Guardsman staff, is president of the Club Advisory Board, belongs to Beta Tau fraternity, and is a charter member of the newly formed college Press Club. Lopez is also a member of the Alpha Gamma Sigma, is active in the Police Officers' Training Club, and the Campus Players.

Jim Skinner, an aviation major, is president of the low sophomore class, and is a member of Tri Epsilon fraternity. Skinner was elected last semester's Frosh King, and is the record holder of the college cross country run with a mark that was established last semester.

Mildred Ginzg, a pre-nursing major, is engaged in Women's Social Service work, and is a member of the Alpha Gamma Sigma; Margaret Abbett, a pre-legal major, is also interested in WSS work; while Richard Blanchi, an art major, is a member of the college Ice Skating Club.

In order to become a member of the college honor society, the Alpha Gamma Sigma, a student must attain a total of 30 grade points in one semester. Balboans on this semester's honor roll include Ed Lopez, Doris Tunheim, Leona Schaefer, Mildred Ginzg, John Beddow, Harold Hillman, Lorraine Nalpantian, and Gus Perscheid.

Janice Berch, a business major, is the president of the Women's Athletic Association, and participates in badminton and archery. Miriam Johnson, an art major, is a member of the Campus Players and Alpha Delta Epsilon sorority; and Don Seberba, a forestry major, belongs to Tri Epsilon fraternity, and is out for varsity track and field.

Ex-Balboa High School athletes performing for the various college varsities this semester, include, Harry Jacobs, Nick Barbarotto, (football): Joe Buckley, Frank Macchia, (baseball); Ed Lopez, Bill Durkett, Jesse Henriques, Alfred Barca, Bill Steenberg, (swimming); Jim Skinner, Don Scherba, (track and field): Arthur Chapin, (basketball); and Mervyn Welsheis, (boxing).

Those out for other sports, and competing in college intramural athletics are Barbarotto, Scherba, Jimmy Lee, Joe Pinnick, Frisco Sartor, and Leslie Marcus.

Marcus was selected on this semester's All-Intramural basketball team.

Marie Richardson, a recreation major, is the president of Phi Epsilon Rho sorority, is a member of Alpha Lambda Chi sorority, and is out for tennis under the supervision of the WAA; Jim McGill, a history major, belongs to Tri Epsilon, the Campus Players, and the CAB; while Lucille Landresse, a candidate for the title of last semester's Sophomore Sweetheart, is a member of Theta Tau sorority, and is actively engaged in WAA work. Miss Landresse will reign as "Liberty Queen" at today's spectacular war rally.

There are three members of Balboa graduating classes on the staff of the Guardsman this semester. They are Nick Barbarotto, co-sports editor and alternate author of RAMblings; Ed Lopez, news reporter and writer of the Campus Club Crier; and Jimmy Lee, sports reporter.

Bill Steenberg, police science major, is the vice-president of the AMS, is a member of Tri Epsilon and the Campus Players, and is out for swimming and boxing. Barbarotto, a journalism major, is the secretary of the AMS, belongs to Beta Phi Beta fraternity, is a charter member of the college Press Club, the Campus Players, and is out for varsity football spring practice.

The Ice Skating Club, one of the leading organizations in the college, boasts many Balboa graduates, including John Beddow, the group's treasurer, Richard Blanchi, Marion DuJardin, Warren Raymond, and Lorraine Nalpantian. Doris Tunheim, a member of the college honor society, was the valedictorian of the class of Balboa, Fall '40.

The A-Capella which competes annually in the Northern California Music Festival, has among its roster Miriam Johnson, Betty Lee Putnam, and Lila Williams. Carol Graves, a pre-nursing major, is a participant in basketball and badminton under the auspices of the WAA.

A survey of the courses now taken by Balboa graduates found the principal majors to be Business, Civil Engineering, Police Science, Pre-Legal, Pre-Medical, and Letters and Science. Comprising the rest of the chosen majors is Art, Journalism, Pharmacy, Pre-Medical, Chemistry, Floriculture, Physical Education, Forestry, and Mathematics. These were the majors selected by 86 of Balboa's total registration of 190 students at this college.

Slightly more than 19 per cent of the students have chosen business and civil engineering as their major subject, and the fields of study are equally divided among the academic, technical, and terminal courses.

Automobiles Considered Necessity in New List

AUSTIN, TEXAS—(ACP)—Modern America no longer considers "food, shelter, and clothing" the three basic necessities, but revises the list to read "food, shelter and automobile."

That, at least, is the conclusion to be drawn from statistics on family expenditures in nine Texas communities surveyed by the University of Texas bureau of business research. The average Texas family spends 25 per cent of its income for food, 14 per cent for rent, and 12 per cent for car expenses. Clothing comes in fourth with nine per cent. Average expenditure for education in Texas families is approximately $100 a year.

war.

Americans have usually coddled their political rackets. They have looked upon them as a necessary evil. The popular version has been that this form was better than a dictatorship. In that, opinion was right. But war necessitates the abolition of all extra weight. The burden that is now being carried is large enough; there is no reason why it should be uselessly increased for purely personal gain.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

In a column several issues ago we mentioned the approaching Hitler offensive, probably into the Russian oil fields to the south. At that time it was pointed out that this was the logical place for the Nazi machine to strike. Tuesday's headlines indicate that Hitler thought so, too.

Now that the long anticipated attack has come there are apt to be a few qualms rampant, a few fears that Hitler has started early and will be able to drive on through. Even though people are not prone to admit it the Austrian housepainter and his legions are held in strong respect.

It might be well at this time, before martial events have ruined any chances at prognostication, to recapitulate and predict a bit.

Let's remember, first of all, that Hitler has lost one of his accustomed advantages, surprise—sudden and furious all-out attack upon perhaps a suspecting but an unprepared victim. In the past this has proved a most potent advantage. It has netted Hitler the whole of the continent to the north, south, and west.

ODDS EVEN

Now, with Russia waiting and ready, the two million Nazis whose lives have been consecrated by their leader to death for the fatherland are driving into an equally strong and powerful force. The opposition through which the German generals must drive consists of experienced troops, established and strengthened positions, and the huge advantage of fighting on one's own ground. The German leader has never had to face such opposition, nor such determination. How can he possibly face it?

It should not be suggested for a moment that the Allied nations are the only ones who see the entire picture plainly. Certainly the peoples of the Allied nations do not—but their leaders do. And because the Axis leaders do realize and understand the complete picture they must be considered with respect.

What plans might the Nazis have for victory in Russia? Will they try to force their way through by sheer numerical superiority? That would be suicide. For the Germans have more men than the Germans.

MACHINE DRIVE

What is left is an all out, a gigantic and unparalleled drive, and this Hitler is within both the realm of reason and possibility. There are several reasons why.

The Germans have not been using much material during the winter past. Many people have not realized this fact. Every round is saved for the drive driving the invader back and have forgotten that the invader gave up the drive because of the snows. The invader attempted to hold all he could but he did not stage any great campaigns as he had a few months before.

German industry has been turning out masses of planes and tanks for the Army, but where are they? They are in storehouses or on the way to the eastern front. Certainly loss has not equaled production—although it would be nice if such was the case.

It must be realized that the Reich is now a greater armed fortress than ever before. It has lost men, but mechanized strength is increased. This is the answer to questions of how Hitler expects to beat Russia.

But what does Hitler face? If it is true that much of the Russian success was unavailable to German regimentation then why should Hitler's task be so difficult? The truth of the matter is that the Russian success must be credited mostly to the Russian army, and in a much smaller way to the German resignation. That the Germans were surprised is evident. That they were beaten on even terms is also known, too.

GROWING ARMY

Hitler must face an army growing each day, an army getting aid from not only its own expanding factories (Germany's factories have reached the maximum) but from the expanding factories of two great industrial nations.

He must face an army growing too in spirit and determination. Victory makes an army strong, confident—and the army of Russia is a

Sweetheart Elections

Final Elections In Queen Contest Slated For Tuesday; Victor Will Reign Over College On Soph Week

Final elections for the sophomore sweetheart will be held Tuesday, May 19, according to Jack Skinner, High Sophomore class president and Sophomore Sweetheart chairman.

The winner will receive numerous gifts and prizes from the fraternities throughout the college as well as the perpetual trophy which is given each semester to the sophomore sweetheart.

Only Men to Vote

All men students in the college will be allowed to cast one vote. The contest winner will rule over the college with the freshman king during Sophomore Week and will also rule over the Sophomore Formal.

The winner will not be revealed until the evening of the Sophomore Formal.

The sweetheart contest is one of the oldest traditions of the college and is held semi-annually at the end of each semester.

Candidates Club Sponsored

The candidates were nominated by various college organizations and pictures of them were posted in the show case and in the Guardsman.

The method of selecting the sweetheart was changed from last semester's because of the controversy which met the situation when the nomination and preliminary selection of candidates was left in the hands of a small group of chosen men.

Parker Chairman For Pan-American Contest

The Inter-American Forum and Pan-American Union has organized an essay contest entitled What Inter-American Relations Means to My Country, Robert Parker, chairman of the judging committees for California, said this week.

The contest, which was open only to high school students, is now closed and being judged, Parker revealed. It is a nation-wide contest, conducted through the co-operation of each state.

Prizes Offered

Prizes amounting to $10,000 are being offered to the winners of the contest. The first national prize-winner will be awarded a $6,000 scholarship in a Latin American college, Parker said.

Prizes will also be given for the best essays in each state. Fifty dollars will be the first award. Winners in each state contest will be considered for the national prizes, Parker explained.

Frosh King

Women Only Select Frosh Winner May 19

Final elections for the Freshman King contest will be held Tuesday, May 19, in which all women of the college will vote for the most handsome fellow on the campus, Win Golden, low freshman president and chairman of the contest, announced this week.

The "Umph-boy" of the campus will remain a secret to committee members, until the high sophomore formal on May 23, when it will be announced and the Freshman King will be presented with the Sophomore Sweetheart.

Women Votes

"Women of the college better decide which fellow they wish to elect to avoid disturbance at the election polls," Golden stated.

Contestants for the title are Charles McCarl, Jim McGowan, Glen Meahl, Mike Schampp, Steve Mohorovich, Henry Pierce, Ken Kleinenbroich, John Sweeney, Jim Upp, Bob Ibarrile, and Dick Daneri.

Awards for Winners

After collaborating to choose one large gift, the four sororities of the college announce that they will present the Freshman King with an award.

For the final election, the two fellows with the largest amount of votes will be in the running, stated Golden. Contestants for the finals were chosen from the preliminary elections, held Thursday of this week.

Forum Magazine Sale Scheduled For May 22

The Forum magazine has gone to press and will be on sale Friday, May 22. Selling price is 15c.

However, an advanced sale for the magazine will be conducted during the week of May 18-22, under the direction of Sam Henderson, business manager of the Forum. As there is a limited number of issues, Mendelson suggests that students purchase their tickets in advance.

This issue of the Forum contains a one act play with the setting in a little San Francisco home.

Ex-Council

Block Award System Gets War Change

Whereas the present war emergency makes it necessary to reduce expenses wherever possible, therefore be it "Resolved That Paragraph H, section 1, Article V of the By-laws of the Constitution of the Associated Students of the San Francisco Junior College be amended by substituting the proposition H, Championship Awards: White sweaters may be worn by the individual on teams winning recognized conference championships, except in sports where there are less than four conference games in competition."

Thus did the college Executive Council take steps to protect unnecessary expenditures in future semesters by changing that portion of the constitution by-laws which provides for the purchase of championship sweaters with Associated Students funds.

McNerm Outlines Expenses

Hugh McNerm, Finance Committee chairman, who brought the matter to the attention of the Executive Council some weeks ago, stressed the point that it would be unwise to plan on further expenditures other than those deemed necessary.

It was also pointed out that the reserve fund, held in readiness for any sudden necessity, was drastically reduced and that any further reduction was impossible.

Especially concerned with the action taken by the members of the council was the tennis team, who at present is on the verge of a championship.

Jensen Offers Opinion

Don Jensen, Associated Students president, explained that the action taken by the council would not affect the members of the tennis team should they win their championship. This new rule, whereby the individuals of championship teams must purchase their own sweaters, will be used in all future cases.

The revision to the by-laws also included provision for those individuals winning a championship awards shall be given a championship medal award."

McCaffery, Debale Winner, In Oratorical Finals

Robert McCaffery, after winning two previous debate meets, will compete in the finals of the Native Daughters debate contest June 16, according to Charles McKiernan, debate instructor here.

The finals will be held in Oakland, in connection with the annual Native Sons and Daughters Convention there.

Registrar

Summer Session Curriculum To Receive School Board Vote Next Tuesday; Final Examinations Scheduled By Registrar; Listed For Students

Approval of the summer session curriculum to be held from June 22 to August 14, by the Board of Education is pending before the courses to be given may be announced, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar. The Board will pass judgment on the proposed curriculum next Tuesday. The list of courses has been made up from the questionnaires which were distributed to the college students and local high school seniors.

The students expressed a desire to take courses in languages, mathematics, sciences, and political sciences. Courses in history in English probably will not be given.

Nine Unit Courses

A maximum of nine units will be allowed the students taking the summer session and hygiene and physical education, although not compulsory, will also be offered. Registration for the session is now being carried on and will continue until June 22, the opening date of the course. Registrants may apply at the registrar's office for an application to take a course during the session. College students and graduating high school students will be allowed to enroll, Miss Learnard said.

Students will be allowed to make up deficiencies or complete units necessary to their curriculum.

Open to All

Poor grades during the previous semester will not prevent a student from entering the courses offered.

Three unit courses will be given five times a week for an hour, and two unit courses will be given four times a week. Laboratories will also be held twice a week. No change in faculty personnel will be made for the summer session.

Completion and release of the final examination schedule has been accomplished by J. Paul Mohr and Mary Jane Learnard, registrar and assistant registrar respectively.

Examinations will begin on Thursday, May 28, and will continue through until Friday, June 5.

Students must take their final examinations at the time provided unless they receive permission from the registrar's office to take them at a different hour.

Failure to take a final examination in some course means withholding of the grade in that course, according to Miss Learnard. If a student misses a final examination because of illness he should report to the registrar's office as soon as possible after recovery and make arrangements to take the test at a later date.

Students may receive notice of their grades by leaving a self addressed stamped envelope with the registrar's office, or else wait until registration begins for the following semester.

(See page 4 for final examination schedule.)

Student Elections

Student Office Petition Must Be Filed Today

Candidates for student body offices must have their petitions in by 4 p. m. this afternoon, Don Jensen, student president, said today.

There will be an election rally next Monday, where the candidates will make their only campaign speeches. Final balloting will take place Friday, May 27.

Qualifications Named

Students who will be high sophs next term and who carry 12 units and a "C" average or better may run for student body president. Vice president, rally commissioner, and secretary must meet the same qualifications, but they may be low sophs while in office.

The only qualification for yell leader is that he be a member of the student body, and carry, 12 units and a "C" average.

Rules Set for Election

The following are the rules set down by the Executive Council which supervise the general student body election held each semester.

1. There shall be no each valley by candidates or by others in their behalf.

2. Campaigning shall be by word of mouth only.

3. There shall be no printed matter distributed.

4. There shall be no electioneering within 100 feet of the polls.

5. Each candidate shall be restricted to two posters on the campus. One can be put on the bulletin board adjacent to the check room. The other can be put on the cafeteria bulletin board.

6. There shall be no election cards of any type distributed.

7. There shall be no gratuities of any kind offered.

8. Each office shall have group pictures taken of the candidates which shall be on display in the trophy case with proper identification.

Band which has been chosen to play for the dance is Noel Thomas' prominent local outfit. Vocalist with Thomas is Bill Stoker. Stoker was formerly vocalist with Kay Kayser.

Organizations and representatives who have announced their participation in the affair are: Bill Moon, of Beta Phi Beta; Bill Steenberg, Tri Epsilon; Jim Upp, Beta Tau; Marge Wagner, Phi Beta Rho; Jo Raioli, Lambda Chi; Jane Johnson, Kappa Phi; Eloise Winfield, Theta Tau.

Purpose of the affair is to instill new spirit and more coordinated activities among the social organizations of the college.

Sorority-Frat Dance Slated For Tomorrow

All students are invited to attend the first sorority-fraternity event ever to be sponsored by the social organizations of the college, according to Jim Upp, Associated Student yell leader and chairman of the Sorority-Fraternity Council. The dance is to be held tomorrow evening at the Bellevue Hotel at 505 Geary Street from 9 p. m. until 12 midnight.

All proceeds derived from the dance will be donated to the Red Cross, Upp further revealed.

Band to Stress Sport-Wear

An error made in a previous announcement stated that the affair was implied to stress sport clothes for the affair. "That isn't right, Upp revealed, "Sorority officials have informed me that the women students will wear dressy street dresses and long hose." Men students are requested to wear suits.

"This is going to be a real all-college affair," Upp stressed. With the backing of Gloria Olivi, Associated Student vice president, and the Social Committee chairman, the success of the affair and enjoyment of all students attending is assured, he added.

Rally Boosts War Drive Here

(Editor's Note: It is not the policy of The Guardsman to publish stories of events that have already occurred, but in the instance of the war rally, we bow to tradition. The great importance of the rally, because it is the greatest in college history, and because it was a worthy event, permits us to publish this review.)

By Dorothy Hogan

History was made for the college last Friday when over $13,000 worth of freedom in the form of war bonds was purchased by students and faculty members of the college.

"If everyone in America could do the kind of a job that San Francisco Junior College students did, there would be no talk about saving money necessary to win the war," William V. Regan, Deputy Administrator of the United States Treasury Department, acknowledged. "What is the magic formula?" Regan questioned. "It should be spread to the rest of the world," he ended at last Friday's rally in the El Rey theatre.

Bob Murphy and Jim Upp, chairmen of the Freedom Week and the war rally, are to be congratulated for the successful two-hour, indoor rally. Highlighting the rally by his presence was Tommy Harris, who emceed and ad libbed throughout the show.

"Spell binding" is the only word descriptive of Kay Davies' lovely soprano voice when singing "It Ain't Necessarily So." Kay is a member of the College Quartet, which consists of Kay's brother, Pierce Davies, Doris Crane, and Lennox Cinnamond.

Jitterbugs and hep-cats in the college woke up and began to dig in the aisles when Four Aces and their mellow rythms and novelty tunes. At this point of the rally, contestants for Sophomore Sweetheart and Freshman King were introduced by Win Golden, low freshman president, and Jack Skinner, high sophomore president. Lucille Landresse, chosen by the committee members as Liberty Queen, was then introduced and reigned as queen of the day.

Bessie Couldn't Help It and Cecelia, the songs he made famous, were presented and cleverly rendered by Ronnie Kemper, orchestra leader at the Palace Hotel.

Sheila Pearl, songstress with the orchestra, also sang. With the troupe from South America was Carlos Ramerez who sang in Spanish with a rich, full baritone voice.

Undiscovered talent from the halls of the college was revealed when Anita Cardelas, recently of San Salvidor, sang "Perfidia."

After steady rehearsals another "first" took place at this rally. It was the first public performance of the college band, rendering Deep in the Heart of Texas.

Two newspaper men were introduced before the group. First, Marsh Maslin, Call Bulletin columnist, delivered a serious but interesting talk. Then, Herb Caen, featured Chronicle and radio columnist, spoke to the group in the casual, humorous form displayed in his column. Congrats, Herb, for getting a few jokes over college students' heads.

Also on the program were Shirley Dinsdale and Judy Splinters. A very clever ventriloquist among young people. Bob Scarlin, accordian, entertained the group. Margaret Abbett, as the college student who purchased a $5,000 War Bond, was presented.

Student leaders, committee members, faculty staff and all responsible deserve a barrel of sugar each for the successful rally and all it entailed.

Tommy Harris, local radio and stage comedian and master of ceremonies of the college war drive rally, is seen here receiving his bond for $1,000, bought by himself at the conclusion of the rally. Lucille Londress, queen of the event, is shown handing Harris the bond as she receives the check.

War Drive

Credit Due

ALL too often editorials are written in a spirit of condemnation or complaint. More than not fault is found where praise or constructive criticism would do just as well. In this case, however, plaudits are undeniably due. The case in question is that of the college Buy a Ton of Freedom campaign, now in its closing day.

The college as a whole owes a vote of thanks to Messrs. Robinson, Upp, and Murphy, and members of their committee in charge of staging the campaign. To Jack Robinson in particular special mention should be made. His was the original idea, and his the impetus behind the whole movement. It is interesting to note that some doubt was held in the beginning, some fear that perhaps there would be a lack of response to any such move.

This feeling was not prompted by any scepticism as to the relative strength of college patriotism, but rather by a feeling that those purchasing stamps and bonds elsewhere might be apathetic about doing their buying here. In the last several weeks that doubt has been completely and permanently abolished.

When the Buy a Ton of Freedom plan was first mentioned (in Jack Robinson's column in The Guardsman) there was absolutely no consideration given it. But the author of the idea believed he had something good and proceeded to do something about it. He contacted numerous student leaders and outlined his plan to them.

A short time before there had been agitation among the members of the college Executive Council directed toward the formation of some program to stimulate the purchase of stamps, and perhaps bonds, at the college bank. The Guardsman ran a story on a proposed Buy a Jeep day, a proposition postponed for various reasons from one day to the next.

At first the rather grand plans of Mr. Robinson seemed to be only so much conversation. He spoke of raising two, perhaps three, thousand dollars for the nation's war effort. He was eloquent when outlining planned rallies to help put the idea across to students. More than once the opinion was expressed that here was something a little too large, a little too difficult for even the effervescent individual who had proposed it.

The editor of The Guardsman refused to take any of these "plans" too seriously. He even refused to run a story of this prospective campaign until he himself had verified the various aspects of it. At the moment that editor does not feel too wise. And the editor was not the only one.

But Mr. Robinson raved on, to finally win over, more by dint of his persistence than his oratory, those who were hesitant. The coming drive was duly announced, a booth set up, a rally scheduled—and all was ready. Even then things didn't look promising. They looked less so after the first day. Of course, the two hundred odd dollars contributed that first Monday would have been ample to fill expectations. But there had been a secret hope that sales might be a bit better than anticipated.

With the drive on, its author began work on last Friday's rally. Glowing terms, persistence, amused scepticism—the same thing all over again.

But the rally was good. The sales of stamps and bonds passed the $12,000 mark, and probably by this time are much more. Certainly this was vindication.

There doesn't seem to be much left. A few congratulations, nice job, well done, big success. Small consolation for the work and effort. There is absolutely no tangible reward.

However, we are inclined to believe that the few thanks received are truly appreciated. And further, we are inclined to believe that there was a certain satisfaction, which comes to most people who attempt something of "doubtful success," that amply and rightfully repaid those few for the good work which they had done.

Shots At ...RAMdom

a few people have been singing the blues about the way the men of the service are shunned by the civilians of the country they've been called upon to defend. The complaint is only natural. There's nothing strange about men in uniform being bitter about it. Not a few of them had no desire to join the army, anyway. When they are called they immediately detect an aloofness in the attitude of many civilians. There is a reason for this.

Public opinion is a very powerful entity and a very volatile one. To the ordinary Joe Spelvin one man in khaki is representative of the entire army. When one soldier bums him for a smoke, stops him on a corner and asks him for the price of a drink, or whistles at his girl, Joe immediately gets a bad opinion of the army. He doesn't realize that like the civilian each soldier is an individual except when under orders, and that as in every large organization, the army has a certain percentage of A-1 men and a smaller percentage of 1-A bums. The percentage Joe Spelvin comes in contact with first usually forms his opinion about the army.

War isn't as yet close enough to the actual shores of America for the public to worship the soldier. It isn't far enough away for it to treat him with complete indifference. The army, because of its increasing size and publicity is constantly in the public eye. A misdemeanor committed by a man in khaki stands out glaringly, and by these, unfortunately, the army is too often judged.

OVER

in France during the last war, the average A.E.F. doughboy thought he could master the language in a few months. They tell a story about a newcomer to the A.E.F. who one day approached his sergeant with a perplexed look on his face.

"Do you speak French, sir?" he asked.

"Like a native, son, like a native," the sergeant replied. "What's the trouble?"

"I bought some post cards off of that frog across the street and I gave him a ten franc note. I know I've got some change coming but that Frenchy won't give it to me, and I can't speak French to argue with him."

The sergeant and the doughboy went over to the shop. The sergeant approached the shop keeper, and with his best French accent, asked,

"Parly voo Francay?"

"Oui, oui, Monsieur," the shop keeper answered.

"Then why the devil don't you give this boy his change?"

HIGH SCHOOL

R.O.T.C. boys are starting to use their uniforms to get into the theatre at half price. We saw one down at the Fox the other day. The girl in the box office only saw the khaki and gave him a twenty cent ticket. But the doorman saw the R.O.T.C. marking on his sleeve and he got riled. He sent the boy back to the box office with an acid, "Service men, not boy scouts, sonny."

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Soapless gymnasium; Students praised; Upp heckled

• Still No Soap
Editor, The Guardsman:

"What, no soap!" How often these two words are heard at the gymnasium. Sometimes they are uttered with an air of nonchalance, as though it has been expected, but other times they are shouted in a fanatical rage. Unless steps are taken to supply the gymnasum showers with soap, dear ol' SFJC will start having casualties—mental casualties.

It has been reported that a very large percentage of the gym users have athelete's foot. In this great war effort of ours we must do everything in our power to insure cleanliness and prevent disease. So for our sake, for our nation's sake, let's remember that water alone is not enough to cleanse perspiring bodies.

BUD G.

• Students Awake
Editor, The Guardsman:

For once the college sponsored a rally that really was a rally. Spirit didn't seem to be lacking, the theater seemed crowded, and all apparently had a good time—were fired full of patriotism, and went home feeling that America wasn't a bad place to live, and we'd better do something about it.

The Ton of Freedom drive at first seemed like a pipe dream. Other colleges had done similar things, but whether a drive would turn out good in this college remained a mystery. As Don Jenson said in his open letter printed in the Guardsman last Friday, the student body should be congratulated—for it is them (collectively and individually) that made such a drive possible, but the instigators of the drive, Jack Robinson and Jim Upp, should also be congratulated.

The red line climbing up the thermometer in the center hall shows their efforts were rewarded, and shows that San Francisco Junior College students are "on their toes."

N. H. B.

• Upp Up
Editor, The Guardsman:

All I want to know is, "Why did that guy, mainly Jim Upp, have to hop on and off the stage, during last Friday's rally." I realize that Upp did a fine job in promoting the rally, but he could have saved himself some CHEAP publicity by just leading yells, instead of trying to act the part of a big shot. Everyone knows that yell leaders are either crazy when they take the job, or crazy when they quit. Maybe Upp has reached the turning point.

Yours for better rallies.

FEM FADS . . .
by Nancy

SOCIAL climax for the college semester is the soph formal—and formal it is. "Strictly formal" is the term used in the best of collegiate circles. A newcomer to California has a terrific time mastering the "dress" and "undress" lingo used in all schools hereabouts. Sport means sweater or a suit with short sox, semi-sport means high heels, informal—a dressy short dress with hat, and high heels, while formal means floor length dress and generally long gloves. However, student opinion alone will decide whether gloves are necessary for the soph formal.

With graduation and all the spring formals and proms coming up within the next few weeks, formals are not in the least hard to find.

DREAMY FEMININE ORGANZA

True femininity is exemplified in a white organza dress with a tight gathered bodice, gathered sleeves, and a full skirt. Sole decoration on the dress is a string of daisies down the gathered portion of the sleeves, and two small daisy pockets on the skirt.

Cotton has arrived and several attractive models have been designed to make the best of the cotton at hand. Paper white cotton pique and cotton organdy combined with a little red embroidering at the square neck and sleeves give a tailored effect, but not too-o-o tailored.

For one who goes in for the decollete models we saw a simply beautiful pale pink or apricot organza dress with a rhinestone studded flounce around the shoulders. The billowy skirt gives a quilted effect and is also scattered with rhinestones.

SPRING HOUSECLEANING

All women have their own ideas on what kind of a formal she wants so we shall not dwell on the matter too long. Instead we shall spring houseclean our little box of ideas and fads, and tell all.

A novel idea for a graduation present or for a birthday present for yourself is a cosmetic bracelet. One twist transforms the bracelet into a compact — and powder, rouge, and lipstick are revealed.

MERCI, MONSIEUR

Finally a life-saver for all unfortunates who wear glasses has been discovered. Every wearer of glasses has debated pro and con as to whether it is better to look glamorous and not see a thing, or to be able to see and toss the glamour out the window. One solution is not to wear the glasses unless necessary, but to carry them along. But this solution presents another problem. One must carry a large hand bag—large enough to hold a glasses case. Some intelligent being understood this fact and made a faille bag which will fit glasses, comb, nail file, and perhaps a few cents.

Active or inactive sportswomen will appreciate the new gloves of white cotton suede reinforced with leather at points of wear on the fingers and palm. These are especially useful in golf, cycling, and should be handy for driving, too, as most washable gloves either give the feeling of insecurity, while white doeskin and kid gloves get horribly dirty.

Spectator . .
Bud Abbott & Lou Costello in RIO RITA

THEY reworded a top notch Broadway operetta, stocked the scenes full of shapely chorus girls, and obtained the services of Bud Abbott and Lou Costello to make Rio Rita, an MGM contribution to the public's funny bone.

Loaned out by Universal Studios, Bud and Lou are a pair of ex-pet shop employees who hide away in the back of John Carroll's auto because they think he is driving to Brooklyn. They land in Vista Del Rio, a town on the border, and are hired by Kathryn Grayson as a pair of house detectives. They unwittingly "blow up" a Nazi spy ring, and hinder Patricia Dane's plan to break up the Grayson-Carroll love affair.

SAMBA QUEEN MAKES SCREEN DEBUT

Eros Volusia, dark-haired, Brazilian samba queen, does a bit of torrid, torso tossing as she does a brilliant native dancing representative of South American. Kathryn Grayson, in the title role, does more singing than acting, but to the picture's advantage. She sings The Ranger Song, The Shadow Song, and Long Before You Came Along in a lilting coloratura voice.

The less said about John Carroll (remember Columbia's This Woman Is Mine?) and his phoney Mexican accent, the better. However, John does some fine singing, and he possesses enough SA to make Miss Grayson want to remember him. John plays a radio star who returns to the scenes of his childhood—fishing in the Rio Grande, and riding with the Texas Rangers.

JOHN GRANT NOT FORGOTTEN

Aided by some of John Grant's best material, Abbott and Costello show alternate flashes of comedy brilliance. Their scenes are well timed and are not overdrawn, an error that marred Ride 'Em Cowboy. Things really begin to happen when a police dog swallows a tiny radio in the form of an apple. Lou meets the pooch, bends down to ruffle its neck, and spontaneously, music (from the radio inside the dog's stomach) begins to play. With such zany ideas as this, the public will appreciate the efforts of Abbott-Costello and Grant all the more.

Supporting Lou and Bud are Kathryn Grayson, John Carroll, Tom Conway, Patricia Dane, Peter Whitney, Barry Nelson, Joan Valerie, and Eros (it should be Voluptusia) Valusia.

ON SPIES AND PATRICIA DANE

Believing that the roly poly Lou has a secret code manual in his possession, Patricia Dane, a svelte and sultry spy charmer, gives the baby talking Costello a going over. When Miss Dane mistakes Lou for the laundry man, perhaps the film's funniest dialogue is spoken. S. Sylvan Simon's directorial work could stand for better treatment in some instances, but who cares? Rio Rita has Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, and that's all the public wants. The background shots are glamorized H'wood movie lots, and the rancho is anything but Mexican. Aside from this, Rio Rita is a comedy "must see" for all the family.

Attraction number two at the Paramount Theater is a surprise entertainer, Nazi Agent, with Conrad Veidt playing a dual role; that of a peaceful American citizen, and a cruel Gestapo agent. Others in the cast include Ann Ayars, Frank Reicher, Maroni Olson, Ivan Simpson, and Dorothy Tree.

THIS IS THE COLLEGE

The awe draped faces that stop and stare in front of the radio broadcasting classes as Miss Weller strikes that famous and classic pose against the door sill of the control room.

The contented look on the faces of the stoogents as they lounge against the stone benches under Edison's nose and the expression on "Sweets" face as those same characters dig their heels into the precious lawns.

Mixed and garbled humanity in the center hall at the hour and the gayety shrouded in the gloom of the faculty member that tries to wade through this Maelstrom of bodies and distorted voices.

Mystery shrouded faces as the owners study and attempt to figure out the inner meaning of the murals at the main entrance; their thoughts as to how much all of the figures look alike and as to how they would have done it.

The quiet uproar as the mob at one of the tables in the library gets the draft of the latest soldier gag . . . and the sneaking haunted looks as the librarian quietly disturbs with "Quit that noise up there."

Dishevelled chairs and tables as the last of the cafe hangeroners leave the quiet portals and the division moves to restore all to order.

The unusually intelligent remarks that are heard in front of the display case as future Einstein's, Steinmetzs, and Skeltons view the cold and silent corpse of a frog.

Roaring laffter and screamed remarks that leave the entire college in envious wonder issuing from room 134 . . . The Guardsman!

All this and more is the College.

SAN FRANCISCOANA

Last week at the corner of Taylor and O'Farrell there was an event of great importance.

Radio City was christened. To those of you that watched it rise from the first piece of asphalt that the shovels of the staff raised it is the climax of something truly and typically San Franciscan.

Great comedians came and the air rang with the puns and gags. A great musician came and the air sang with his melodies.

It was the ending of many hard weeks of preparation and trial. It was the end of months of hard work. It was the end of years of wishing.

But now there it stands, a tribute to American ingenuity and building power, one of the finest buildings to come. There it stands, an answer to the challenge that San Francisco is a ghost town.

IDLE THOUGHTS

Why is it when you reply that you go to J. C., there the always a few who want to know if you know Quertlefront Janenherk, or someone else just as unpronounceable?

With the changing of Japan street to Colin Kelly Jr. street, we wonder if maybe the Pacific Ocean shouldn't also be changed.

With the shortage of tires and the coming rationing of gasoline, it is beginning to look as though all the motorist can do is to sit home and curl up with a good ration book.

Faculty Features . . . A San Franciscan, First, Last--

IT IS interesting to learn that the instructors of the college here really do prefer this level of teaching to any other.

Claire Cuneo, acting chairman of the home economics curriculum, has worked with students of all ages and yet insists that the junior college students are the most interesting and the most fun to work with.

Prior to 1935, when she came as one of the pioneer instructors of the college, Miss Cuneo was an instructor in kindergarten, elementary, and high schools, and she says, "I feel that the students here are matured enough to have a mind of their own. Intelligent students, nevertheless, who are working toward a definite goal but who are anxious and willing to accept the advice and the teaching of older and more experienced persons."

Miss Cuneo is one of the rare individuals found around here that is in being a native of our fair city.

She attended the Jean Parker Elementary School, Notre Dame High, and upon graduation attended the University of California in Berkeley.

Originally, she says, she planned to specialize in millinery trade, however, while at the university she had two majors, Home Economics, house art, as it was called in "them" days, and Economics. The latter she became quite interested in while she was at Berkeley.

Besides being a member of the Home Economics Association at the university, Miss Cuneo was a member of their Italian club, The Chircolo Italiano.

She has traveled through all of North America from the icebound coasts of Alaska throughout Canada, both eastward and westward. Most of the states within the continent at least passed through during her travels, from Seattle to New York, to Florida and back again to California, and thus on throughout.

One of her hobbies, call it that if you may, is the collection of different kinds and types of textiles.

While in the Orient, and this trip was made in 1937 as a member of a party from the University of Washington. Since the whole party was primarily interested in textiles, they were allowed to visit the silk mills with more freedom.

Anyhow, to get back to the original subject of her collection; while in the Orient, she obtained some of the tribal cloth which the mandarins annually present to the Emperor. "Some day," she said, "when, I have the time I want to catalogue my whole collection. It would be quite an interesting thing to do as well as make the collection more valuable."

In case you've wondered whether men students are allowed to enroll in the Home Economics curriculum, Miss Cuneo tells of two fellows who were enrolled in the classes here at the college. One of them, a major in architecture, was enrolled in interior decorating class; and the other, an art major, was enrolled in the costume designing. Both were rather dubious and shy at first since they were the only fellows in a large class of feminine students.

After the first shyness wore off, however, they proved to be among the most apt of all the students.

But all this is rather getting away from the subject.

Miss Cuneo, together with Francis Mount, is the sponsor for the Home Economics club, here at the college.

"I feel that the club is just the organization in which we can get to know the girls, not only their activities as students of the college, but to know the girls for themselves. One nice thing about the members of the club, they are all together for the entire length of time that they are enrolled in the junior college. It is not the same as it would be if they were only enrolled for one semester's work."

Closing the interview, Miss Cuneo said, "Some day, I would like to visit South America. I don't know when that time will be, certainly not in the very near future."

"There is no place like San Francisco," she added. "Of all the places that I've been, it's always nice to get back home once again.

"Seattle and New York are the closest to any cities that I've seen, that is in comparing them with San Francisco. All in all though, I like to travel from place to place, but always with the idea in mind that my preference shall we say, of a place to live is San Francisco."

INTRAMURAL-AMS FIGHTS TONIGHT

RAMblings
By Nick Barbarotto

Rams Fail to Score Point; Fights Tonight in Gym

CLOSE—BUT NO POINT

The Ram track team, under the tutorship of Coach Russ Sweet, traveled to Santa Rosa Junior College's Bailey Field last Saturday to compete in the Northern California Junior College Conference Track and Field Championships (there's that title again!) and had they used just a little more oomph, might have scored a point.

But as it was, the Rams ran, jumped, and threw themselves into a grand total of 5/6 of a point. The feat, the greatest of its kind ever accomplished by the college, placed the cindermen (though nary a fraction of a point was scored on the cinders) in the outstanding position of dead last. Eighth place in a field of eight teams!

We shouldn't feel too badly toward the boys, however. They just missed by pure hard luck in doing what was expected of them. The San Francisco Chronicle predicted the Rams to score one whole point!

So, you see, they failed to live up to their expectations by just 1/6 of a point. Not bad at all. In most cases when a team fails to live up to their expectations they do so by much more than 1/6 of a point. Sometimes they miss by one point, and, as in the case of football, they might miss by even six or seven points.

With that in mind and if the situation is deeply looked into, the college track and field team must be dealt with leniently. After all, if Bob Oyen wanted to be real mean—the Rams could have emerged without even the fraction of a point.

It was Oyen's fourth place ties in the high jump and pole vault that accounted for the Ram total. There's a lack of explanation for what happened to Jim Duryea, Burt Goebel, and some of the others.

But—the Rams nearly surpassed their expectations! Had not Doug Pearson sprawled all over the cinders only one yard away from the finish line of the 220 yard low hurdles, more than one point would have been scored. He was in third or fourth place at the time of his descend, so the Rams might have compiled 1 5/6 points and possibly 2 5/6 points.

Had that been the case, the tracksters would have been looked upon as heroes. Men who came through! It's plain to see that fate plays a large part in sports.

All in all, Sacramento won the championship—just as we and a million others had predicted. It was the ninth consecutive time that the Panthers won that distinction. It must get to be a boring thing up the capital city way.

The students can't possibly get the thrill out of it as they did the first few times. It just gets monotonous! It takes all the kick out of the sport, and for that reason we advise Sacramento to lose for the next couple of years so that its students can regain that forgotten thrill. It's really for the good of the college.

Certainly the students have already adopted the attitude of, "Ho-hum, we did it again."

Biggest laugh concerning the pre-meet predictions goes to Harry M. Hayward of the Examiner. Hayward marvelously picked Sacramento to win the title, and added that trouble should come from Santa Rosa and San Francisco.

We don't get the point—but then, neither did the Rams!

GALA SHOW TONIGHT

The college stages its semi-annual Intramural-AMS Boxing matches tonight in the men's gymnasium, and from the looks of things, fists will fly aplenty. It will be one of the best boxing shows ever put on by the college and we urge all the bloodthirsty students to attend.

Duke Drake will again make his bid for the championship, which in all probability will be his with ease. Drake has looked better than ever before while training, and should emerge with the title.

Jim McGowan is a newcomer to the matches but he also figures for the championship. McGowan is scheduled to fight in the heavyweight division while Drake tries his hand in the light heavy class. Like Drake, McGowan has looked consistently good in training and it's hard to figure him for a loss.

The fight of the evening, however, will be for the featherweight championship where Seisuke Akamine and Ed Glinden square off. We don't even hazard to make a prediction on this one because it can go either way—and in any way.

CLINKY DEFENDS TITLE

Tonight also marks the defense of Helen Crlenkovich's National Indoor Three-meter Springboard Diving Championship at the Terrace Plunge of the Fairmont Hotel.

Miss Crlenkovich, however, will lack competition because most of the eastern stars will be unable to appear. But, competition or no competition, it should be easy for the greatest woman diver in the country.

Intramural

Sports Night Next Week; Spartans-Rambling Wrecks Enter Finals In Football

Next week, the college athletic department will stage its first All-Intramural Night of Sports, from 7:30 to 11 p. m., according to college intramural director, Jack Brady.

With intensified rough play and fourth down prayer passes dominating every minute of actual competition, the college's semi-annual intramural football league hit the "thirty" standard with the Spartans and the RAMbling Wrecks coming out on top for the intramural diadem.

Spartans In Finals

The Spartans, captained by Ted Samuel, entered the final round of competition by virtue of their "uncalled for" triumphs. They walloped the Deadeyes in their opening game, 24 to 0, and later, they edged out the Rabbits, 12 to 0.

With such cleatless hombres as Carter Corey, Burt Goebel, and Ralph D'Clivo runnin' wild, the Wreck sextet virtually roughed their way into the final round. In the semi-final contest, the Wrecks disposed of the Esquires, 8 to 0. The Esquires were top heavy favorites, but everything went amiss, and they were sent to the sidelines.

Results Released

Football results up to date:
Warriors 12, Tri Epsilon 6.
Deadeyes 18, Phi Lambda Epsilon 6.
Esquires 24, Warriors 6.
Quarter Finals:
Rabbits 8, Rifle Club 0.
Spartans 24, Deadeyes 0.
Warriors lost by default from the RAMbling Wrecks.
Semi-Finals:
Spartans 12, Rabbits 0.
RAMbling Wrecks 8, Esquires 0.

Late Sports Bulletin:
The RAMbling Wrecks defeated the Spartans on Wednesday, 6 to 0, to win the intramural six-man touch tackle football championship. The Wrecks scored on Al Morris' 10 yard pass in the end zone to Carter Corey.

If and when the Spartans and the Wreckers get together, odds should favor the Wreckers, a team that relies on power, speed, and weight. (Note: The Guardsman had already gone to press, and the complete details of the championship intramural football game will be included in next Friday's issue.)

With all but the final rounds being completed, the college intramural tournament should be drawing to a close before the end of this week, according to Jack Brady, faculty intramural director.

Latest results: Singles—

Dick Cress def. Bill Sohriakoff, 15-7, 15-6; Dave Billings def. Al Jaeger, 15-9, 15-10; Dick Cress def. Al Soo, 15-0, 15-9; and Ted Dykman-Dabster def. Walter Lucas, 15-7, 15-9.

Doubles results:

Warner Croll and Kenneth Shaw def. Dave Cowell and Walter Lucas, 12-15, 15-6, 15-11; Bill Sohriakoff and Al Jaeger def. Dick Anderson and Ted Dykman-Dabster, 15-9, 15-10; and Dave Billings and Hugh Meyer def. Paris Kazee and Bill Mahoric, 15-5, 15-6.

Softball Next Week

The annual softball tournament will commence some time next week, according to Brady. Already, six teams have entered the tournament, and indications are that perhaps 10 or 12 teams will submit entries. The teams that have entered are as follows: Newman Club, Spartans, RAMbling Wrecks, Tri Epsilon, Forestry Club, and the Deadeyes.

Next Friday evening, the intramural department will stage its gigantic ALL-INTRAMURAL SPORTS NIGHT in the men's gymnasium. The finals of the table tennis, badminton, volleyball, and basketball tournaments will be played, first event slated to get under way at 7:30 p. m.

Medals Awarded

During the proceedings, the intramural department will award medals to individuals, and to teams who have either won or placed in intramural competition for this semester.

First place medals are small gold medallions, while second place medals are of silver. Only the awards for tonight's Intramural-AMS fights will not be handed to competitors, Brady said.

Track and Field

Sacramentans Retain Conference Title

Cindermen of Sacramento Junior College extended little more than frigid friendliness at Santa Rosa last Saturday afternoon, romping home with 68 1/3 points and the 1942 Northern California Junior College Conference track and field title.

Consolation honors went to Santa Rosa with 23½, Stockton gathering 14, Modesto with 13 5/6 digits, Marin 13½, and San Mateo with 13. In seventh position was Salinas with five, Menlo in eighth with two, and San Francisco Junior College in ninth place with 5/6.

Batiste Stars

Outstanding performer for the meet was, as many can guess, Joe Batiste, iron man for the Sacramento contingent. Joe won both hurdle races, the javelin throw and ran the anchor lap for the second place Sacramento relay team.

The Sacs won nine of the 14 events, with Littlefield and Kaiser, both of Sacramento, the only double winner of the day. Littlefield won the mile, and 880; Kaiser triumphed in the 220 yard dash and the quarter mile.

The valley squad also took the 100 yard dash, won by Bingham, and the shotput captured by Schopp.

One of the big disappointments of the meet was Irving Moore. Many fans expected Irving to break the junior college record, held by the Ram vaulter, Keith Groswird, at 13 feet 6¾ inches, but the best Moore could do was 13 feet 6 inches to gain a tie with Johnson of Modesto.

Other winners were Don Barksdale, high jumper for Marin, who scaled 6 feet 2 inches, broadjumper Freemann of Salinas who leaped out a distance of 23 feet 8¼ inches, discus thrower Ker of Stockton who threw the plater 139 feet 8 inches, and the San Mateo relay team composed of Sandivotti, Cortez, Ribera, and Hallen in the time of 24.2.

Oyen Scores Only Points

If this college had some of the stars that didn't show up, due to working conditions, the score for the college would have been different. But the squad gave the old college try and were beaten under, simply by powerful competition.

The lone point-getter for the Rams was Bob Oyen, who tied with two other competitors to gain a fourth place tie in the high jump, and also tied with Herrick from Santa Rosa to get another tie for fourth position in the pole vault at 11 feet, 6 inches.

Bob Epley Gains Place As Menlo Captures Golf Title

Shooting a round in 78, six over par, Bob Epley of the college took third place in the individual match play last Friday at the Stanford University golf course as Menlo Junior College captured the Northern California Junior College Golf Championship.

Epley shot a morning round of 80, which qualified him for the semi-finals, but later lost out to Smith of Salinas one down at the 18th. Smith, however, met defeat in the finals to Botrel of Menlo.

Oleg Baloff, who was publicized as the only Ram making the trip to the peninsula, was declared ineligible just before the matches and was unable to compete.

Coach Lee Eisan had a two man team when Epley entered, but with the ineligibility of Baloff, came the return to a single golfer.

Crlenkovich Defends National Diving Title Tonight At Fairmont Hotel Terrace Plunge

Making her first home town appearance, Helen Crlenkovich will compete in the National Amateur Athletic Union swimming championships to be held tonight at the Fairmont Hotel Terrace Plunge.

Miss Crlenkovich, who is a student at the college, will defend her championship, a championship that has been successfully defended for the last two years.

Coached by Patterson

Under the careful coaching of Phil Patterson, Fairmont Hotel swimming instructor, Miss Crlenkovich should be in A-1 shape, and according to all advance information, the defending champion should easily ward off all possible opposition.

The strength of Miss Crlenkovich's challengers is not known, but according to NAAU officials, swimmers from the Atlantic seaboard may not come to the Pacific Coast in such great numbers, what with shortages, gasoline rationing, and priorities running the gamut throughout the nation.

Hawaii Trip Canceled

Because of the sudden outbreak of hostilities in the Far East, (and the world, in general) the comely diving queen's scheduled trip to the Hawaiian Islands was canceled.

She was to have given several diving exhibitions on the Islands, as well as reigning as Pineapple Queen, January 1, a part of the festivities marking the annual Pineapple Bowl football game.

WAA

Tourney Week Under Way

One of the largest organizations of the college, the Women's Athletic Association, is participating in the largest event of their calendar, Tourney week.

During this week the final events are scheduled and guests from the high schools of the city are entertained. The clubs playing off tournaments this week are badminton, bowling, tennis, basketball, archery, and softball.

Softball Tomorrow

Tomorrow at the "Hail America" program the softball and basketball tournaments will be played, with Aline Watt in charge, on eight clubs on four diamonds on Balboa Park.

This program is part of the Civilian Defense that is being done by the San Francisco Recreation Commission and the WAA has been chosen to act as hostess of the affair.

Attending this event will be representatives from high schools, and will to some students be their first visit to the campus. With Lorraine Johnson in charge of the event, the program will consist of mixer folk dances, games in the gymnasium, archery demonstrations, and lunch. Then the tournaments will be held, and later a tour will be taken of the Junior Museum of the Recreation Commission to investigate nature projects. Climaxing Tourney Week, this semester will be a tea in which all women of the college are urged to attend and invite their mothers, or a faculty member to accompany them.

Events Held Tuesday

At this event, slated for Tuesday, May 19, from 4:30 to 7:30, will introduce women running for office, present awards and state the rules and regulations of the organization.

Dorothy Ann Kraul, chairman, announces that the theme of the day will carry out the "Mother's Day" theme. Dorothy Fairbanks, leader of the all-girl orchestra that was organized this semester, will play at the affair. In the committee are Virginia Hanlon, Marge Wagner, and Stephanie Porter.

Miss Kraul announced that members of the newly organized five-piece orchestra will receive awards as well as the members of the skating club.

Diamondmen
By Bob Catudio

The saddest coach in baseball this week is Lee Eisan, whose college baseball team has just finished its conference season leading the league—but from the bottom upward! This week, his charges lost a golden opportunity to reclaim some shadowed sorrow, but they lost out to the Marin Junior College at Ocean View Playground, 5 to 3.

Tonight's Program

Fighter	Weight	Fighter
Ed Glinden	128	Seisuke Akamine
Pete Ceti	135	Bill Steenberg
Tom Llewelyn	140	Ken Ludlam
Manug Terzian	148	Henry Lowe
Mitsua Yamamoto	167	Don Sherba
Al Morris	167	Bob Cavanaugh
Al "Duke" Drake	177	Jack Cedarlund
Jim McGowan	heavy	Bryant Finch

Some sort of record might have been in the making when they ended their seasonal campaign with nine men. Sure, nine men constitute a baseball team, but reserves play a major part in almost every type of sport. After Andy Adams was espied "dilly-dallying" around for a semi-pro club, the Rams had only eight men—but only a miracle prevented them from ending up with no players, at all!

A baseball pitcher wandered into our office this week demanding to know who was the best junior college hurler in the circuit. We tried to conceal our intelligence, and told him that it might be some country engineer from down San Mateo way. He thought differently, and told us that he, Andy Adams, was the best!

We fell from our chair, climbed out from under our two-ton typewriter, and took a hurried vote among the sports staff. The result: Yes, Adams was the A-1 throttler in the league.

College Locale of Bouts; Glinden-Akamine Contest Feature Fistic Attraction

It's here at last!

The time, 8 o'clock; the place, men's gymnasium; the event, the semi-annual intramural-Associated Men Students' boxing carnival.

The gymnasum side walls may be bulging with the effects of mass humanity tonight, but they'll probably have a good reason for it, too! It will mark the first time that the fistiana carnival will be held on the campus, and it will mean the "haymaker" christening of a brand new boxing ring which was purchased by the college physical education department.

Boxing instructor, Jim Jensen, who starts his second consecutive semester as one of the men behind tonight's Intramural-Associated Men Students' boxing carnival to be held in the men's gymnasium starting at 8 p. m.

Glinden-Akamine in Feature

Feature match of the evening will be the one involving Eddie Glinden and Seisuke "Joe" Akamine. Rail bird prognosticators have been waiting for the night when these two battlers would take to the ring aiming for a possible KO. Both Akamine and Glinden are cagey, wiley scrappers, and both possess enough "sleeping powder" in their rights to lay the other to the canvas.

Another crowd pleaser will be the heavyweight encounter between Al "Duke" Drake and the burly, 200 pounder, Bryant Finch. Drake has defended his intramural crown for two semesters running, and will be facing an opponent who will compete in his "first ever" intramural fight carnival.

Louie Makes Appearance

Tonight's fights will mark the first local appearance of one, Donald Louie, speedy 118½ pounder who capured the Northern California Junior College Bantamweight Boxing Title last month at Modesto. Louie's probable opponent may not even make an appearance! The only other fisticuffer who is classified in the bantamweight division is Tak Momii, and he, at the present, is not in school.

Although it has not been verified by either Jack Brady, or boxing instructor Jim Jensen, there is a minus possibility that boxers Ira Cartney, Emil Kayrallah, and Bob Portello may compete. However, ring-siders should not count too heavily on this, since they are now flying for Uncle Sam at Reno, Nevada.

In the 139 pound division, Tom Llewelyn was to face Bob Hemsted, but as things stand now, Hemsted will not compete in tonight's boxing carnival. Hemsted was operated on last week, the result of an ear infection, according to Jensen.

Terzian Makes Debut

Armen "Turk" Terzian, football coach Lee Eisan's first string quarterback, will oppose Henry Lowe, in the 145 pound classification. This will be Terzian's first appearance in intramural competition, and though he has not been seen in action, Terzian may provide the ringsiders with plenty of rapid-fire action.

Hubert Athayde and Bill Moon are scheduled to fight it out in the 155 pound division. Athayde, East Bay pugilist, will have to be favored in tonight's brawl. Athayde, a slow, and cumbersome Queensbury puncher, has had some bad luck during this semester's canvas season.

Suacci Defends Title

Kenny Ludlam, ex-George Washington star, and Gene Suacci, 132 pounder, will mix it up in the lightweight division. Suacci, always an aggressive "jabster," pulled one of the few upsets last semester when he cornered a three round decision from Manuel Isaacs.

The semi-windup Embarcadero brawl will find Bob Cavanaugh and Dave Hunicke in the opposite corners. Hunicke, by all general consensus, should come home a winner. This department, though not slighting the able boxer, Cavanaugh, finds the stocky, bull-shouldered Hunicke to be just a trifle too much!

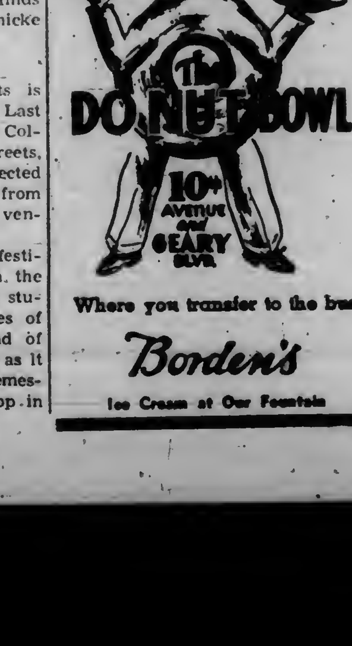
Admission by Student Card

Admission to tonight's fights is by Associated Student Card. Last semester's carnival was held at Coliseum Bowl, 11th and Market streets, and because of an unexpected "blackout," the show was kept from being a top notch, successful venture.

Following tonight's fistiana festival, there will be a dance in the men's gymnasium, according to student and faculty representatives of the intramural department, and of the AMS. If the weather stays as it should, it is hoped that this semester's fights will go over the top in dwarfing all other carnivals.

Tennis

Marin Defaults; Rams Win Net Championship



Because Marin Junior College failed to put in an appearance in a scheduled conference tennis match, the Rams were given a 7 to 0 win, thereby capturing the Northern California Junior College Team Tennis Championship.

The Mariners, who were rained out of a San Francisco match two weeks ago, did a disappearance act this week which practically handed the locals the tennis title sans any struggle. Last Saturday, down at Stanford University's tennis courts, the Rams, participating in the conference singles and doubles championships, did not come out of it as they had planned.

Joe Greeley, the locals' number one net man, lost his singles match in the quarter finals to Gene Franco, of Salinas Junior College. This was looked upon as a "clean cut upset" since the barrel-chested Ram had turned the tables on Franco previously this season.

Ronnie McArthur and the reticent Roy Oakes captured a third place at Palo Alto, ousting the top doubles combination of Salinas' Bill Gruber and Bobby Scravani. McArthur, who normally teams up with George Amemiya, paired with Oakes, since Greeley had entered the singles events.

Throughout the season, the Rams have played consistently superior tennis, a factor that saw them dispose of Yuba, Modesto, Sacramento, Stockton, Marin, and Salinas Junior Colleges. The San Mateo racqueteers, thanks to Jere Selover and Carl Henoch, was the lone team to setback the men of Coach Tom Wilson. In a match played two weeks ago, the Mateans won out, "4 and 3."

Counseling

Two Day Informal Meet By College Guidance Bureau Seeks To Aid Student Search For Summer Job

Another informal meeting destined to aid college students in their application for summer vacation jobs will be held next Thursday and Friday, May 21 and 22, from 2 to 3:30 p. m., Edward H. Redford, chairman of the college counseling and guidance bureau, disclosed this week.

The first meeting on Thursday will be held in Room 100, and Friday, in Room 136. Those students who will graduate this semester, and students seeking part time summer vacation jobs are invited to attend both meetings, Redford said.

Outside Speakers Invited

In order that students may hear first hand information on the local labor situation, the counseling and guidance bureau has solicited the services of many speakers. Thursday, a chief representative of one of San Francisco's Labor Unions will talk to students on the experiences gained from summer jobs, and what local labor expects of college students.

The personnel manager of the White House, a San Francisco department store, will talk on the miscellaneous details involved in obtaining a job. Such hints as how to meet people, how to dress properly, methods of applying for the right position, and information on the problem of keeping a job once it has been obtained, will be given.

Opportunities for Students

"It would be well to point out that these meetings are for the college student," Redford said. "There are many numerable opportunities for college students. Defense industries, in particular, are in need of labor, since the war has put a definite curtailment on manpower."

Friday, a representative of the United States Civil Service department will explain how to apply for positions in the field of government work, and what advantages may be had from securing these positions. Explanation will be offered by a representative of the Federal Employment Office. This office, located at 1690 Mission Street, San Francisco, is used exclusively for the registration of applicants for positions in defense industries.

Claude Silva, college placement director, will conclude Friday's informal meeting by explaining what the college placement bureau has to offer for job applicants, and what positions will be available during the summer vacation. How to Get a Job and How to Hold It is Thursday's meeting theme, while the theme of Friday's meeting will be, What Jobs Are Available and Where to Apply for Them.

Full And Part Time Jobs Available For Students

Summer employment, both part time and full time, will be available in the Bay Area, according to Claude Silva, chairman of the placement bureau here in the college.

Full time jobs will be available also, mainly in defense industries and in the business field. There will probably be quite a few part time jobs for students attending summer session, Silva said.

Oakland students seeking employment in the east bay, may now secure jobs through the college placement bureau, Silva pointed out.

LIBERTY LIMERICKS

A smiling young butcher named Jake,
Said—"All of us folks have a stake
In this wonderful Nation—
So for self-preservation,
Let's buy all the Bonds we can take!"

Your dollars are the meat and sinews of America's fighting forces for Victory. Buy U S Defense Bonds and Stamps regularly!

Radio

College Class In Show Tonight Station KSFO

College radio students will tion with American Citizenship present a program in conjunc-Week tonight from 7:30 to 8 p. m. over station KSFO.

This will be the last in the series Americans All. Text of the script for the broadcast depicts the occupation of America by the Nazis and the effects which the occupation would have.

One portion of the broadcast concerns Nazi stooges who have taken over the college and proceed to carry out the Nazi doctrine of education.

Marie Weller, instructor for the radio class at the college, declared that the program should be excellent and urged those able to listen in.

Students who will participate in the broadcast are: Robert Roche, Len Cinnamond, Andy Adams, Lew Cline, Dianne Hampton, Robert Kreuzburger, Len Unsditsky, Roger Hiller, Allan Abeel, Curtis Floyd, Robert Murphy, Helen Dougherty, Lucile Valentine, John Filer.

Health Notes

Fundamental among all the hygienic precepts is the encouragement to cleanliness. Precepts for fundamental hygienic procedures, including rest, cleanliness and moderation, go back to ancient times. "Cleanliness of body was ever deemed to proceed from a due reverence to God," says the "Advancement of Learning." "Cleanliness is, indeed, next to Godliness," affirmed John Wesley. Yet modern science has taught us facts about cleanliness which were never known to the people of Biblical days. There is a great difference between the removal of visible dirt and the removal of contagion. Disease is transferred from one person to another by the passage of germs or infectious agents.

Cleanliness is largely a matter of habit. It demands untiring vigilance—the kind of vigilance that must become habitual. These habits include:

1. Frequent use of soap and water baths.

2. The washing of the hands in soap and water after attending to any psysiologic need; and also before eating.

3. The keeping of hands and of unclean articles, particularly toilet accessories that may have been used by other persons, away from the mouth, nose, eyes, ears, or other body openings.

4. The avoidance of the common drinking cup or toilet articles, hair brushes or pipes.

5. The avoidance of close contact with persons who are coughing or sneezing and thereby spraying infectious materials from the nose and mouth.

In the development of personal hygiene emphasis on soap and water is essential. Water is the greatest cleansing agent known to man. The advantage of soap is its ability to dissolve a material that has to be dissolved in order to be removed. Soap also may contain enough alkaline materials to destroy germs.

Cleanliness involves not only personal cleanliness of the human body but also cleanliness of the environment. When dishes are washed by the use of machines which require boiling water and the use of thick soap solutions, the control of this source of contamination is definite.

The towel is another accessory to modern life. Nowadays we know the danger of the roller towel or the towel that is used by all the members of the household. Experiments actually made with towels indicate that a hot towel will remove vast numbers of germs from the skin and that a Turkish towel will remove three times as many as a huck towel. Repeated use of the same towel for days brings about an accumulation of germs on the towel and indicates that it can be a source of germs as well as a means of removing them.

mitted to become a fetish. It is

Cleanliness should not be perquite possible to become so conscious of germs and of uncleanliness that concentration on that phase of life and living becomes in itself a source of mental ill health. However, good habits of hygiene taught in youth, including regular washing of the hands and face, complete bathing of the body at frequent intervals and sanitation of the environment are the basis of health, comfort and satisfaction throughout life.

War Show

SFFD Bomb Exhibition Today At 1

A demonstration will be held in the rear court of the college today at 1 p. m., showing the best methods of preventing the spread of an exploding two-pound magnesium incendiary bomb, according to Dan Sullivan, assistant drill manager of the San Francisco fire department.

The squad selected by the department to demonstrate the methods of prohibiting incendiary fires will number an approximate ten men, Sullivan said. Besides the controling of incendiaries with sand and water, the squad will demonstrate practical lifts for rescue work.

Inaugurate New Program

"Today's demonstration will feature our method of saving lives," Sullivan said. "We will show the best way in which that may be accomplished."

The program, inaugurated by San Francisco Fire Chief Charles J. Brennan, is being carried on throughout all of the city's junior high schools and parochial schools, he explained. Today, the squad will show lifts and carries which may be performed by one man, five two-man lifts and one six-man lift.

"Drag" Demonstration

Numerous types of "drags" will be demonstrated. A "drag," Sullivan said, "is used when cases of intense heat, the rescuer is unable to stand up. He must keep close to the floor to avoid smoke and being overcome by heat.

"One of these consists of the victim's wrists being strapped together, the fireman then places the victim's wrists around his neck and carries him on his hands and knees, leaving his hands free to open doors, and clear wreckage in his path."

Artificial respiration will be demonstrated, according to Sullivan. The team will show a six-man carry. Each rescuer, without loss of rhythm, will do his appointed task, one watching respiration, with relief being supplied by onlookers in the actual mechanics of resuscitation.

Music Fest In Men's Gym Wed., May 27

All student and faculty members will be guests of the music department, Wednesday, May 27, at the Music Fest in the Men's gym. "A climax of all of the semester's musical activity is anticipated through this occasion," Flossita Badger, A-Cappella Choir director, explained, "with the spot light on all branches of college musical achievements."

The first appearance of the newly organized band and orchestra will be a feature of the event. "Student interest and cooperation has facilitated such early appearance of the band," Madison Delvin, director, pointed out, "and my thanks to them is warranted by their efforts."

"Songs by the college A-Cappella Choir is guaranteed as part of the program," Miss Badger pointed out. The choir has a reputation respected throughout the State.

At this time, also, the patriotic song selected winner through the current contest, closing May 18, will be played. Judges at this time will include Miss Badger, Mr. Devlin, and a student committee to be chosen later.

A complete representation of college music will be displayed Wednesday, May 27, men's gym.

Red Cross Student Work To Be Turned in Wednesday

All Red Cross must be turned in to room 158 by Wednesday, May 20, according to Claire Cuneo, faculty adviser to the Red Cross work. All students holding knitting needles must also turn them in by this date.

Commerce, Polytechnic Graduates Active Here

The High School of Commerce has a total of 70 graduates now attending this college. As have other graduates from other high schools, former Commerce students have taken an active part in many college activities. These activities range from athletics to the most important, student government.

One of the leading college organizations is the Chinese Students' Club, whose present membership consists of 125 students. Former Commerce students on this semester's organization include Lois Yee, Charles Chan, Victoria Chin, Fred Chinn, Guy Lee, Robert Fung, and Kenneth Lee.

Warren Davis, an engineering major, is a Phi Alpha Omega fraternity member; Valpha Fields, an aviation major, is a member of the Rifle Club; and Bruno Hahn, a business major, belongs to the Rifle Club, and is a member of Omnicron Phi Pi fraternity.

The college honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma, was established to provide recognition for those students who obtained the necessary requirements for entrance into the organization. Commerce graduates on this semester's society are Ninah Lou Norris, Kimuyo Miyata, Marion Porsch, and Vivian Potschild, and Toshiko Takikawa.

Angelica Foletta, a pre-nursing major, is a member of Nu Epsilon Sigma sorority; Doris Gustafsson, another pre-nursing major, belongs to the college Pre-Nursing Society, and Nu Epsilon Sigma sorority; and Mary Lobig, a pre-legal major, is a member of the college A-Cappella Choir, and participates in women's athletics.

Ex-Commerce High School graduates who are now active in spring athletics include Alfred Drake, Jim McGowan, (boxing); Tom Callahan, Maurice Richardson, (swimming); Drake, McGowan, Julius De Barros, (spring football); George Dorsey, (baseball); and Richardson, (wrestling). Donald Louie won the bantamweight boxing championship at the NCJCC fight finals at Modesto this spring. Those active in college intramural athletics are John Quaccia and Bob Catudio.

Alfred Drake, a police science major, belongs to Beta Phi Beta fraternity, Police Officers' Training Club, and the Criminology Club. Jim McGowan, another police science major, is a member of Beta Phi Beta fraternity, Police Officers' Training Club, Criminology Club, and the Block SF Society.

Three Commerce students are (or have been) on this semester's Guardsman staff. They are Tom Callahan, news reporter; Ninah Lou Norris, former ad manager; and Bob Catudio, news and sports reporter, feature writer, and columnist author of the Spectator. Catudio was once associate editor, and sports editor, of the Commerce Spirit.

A recent poll of 70 former Commerce students found their popular major subjects to be Business, Civil Engineering, Pre-Nursing, Pre Legal, PreMedical, Accounting, and Chemistry. The other leading major subjects are Aviation, Police Science, Journalism, Music, Home Economics, Political Science, Public Health, and Biology.

Twenty-two per cent of the students selected Business as their major subject, and 13 per cent chose Foreign Languages. The academic and terminal fields of study were equally divided, and there were no majors listed for two students.

Like the High School of Commerce, Polytechnic graduates have participated in governmental affairs, athletics, social events, and inter-school organizations.

Polytechnic graduates active in this semester's honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma, include Robert Tomaselli, Maybelle Marr, Helen Clark, Eline Llewelyn, Robert Olson, William McLaughlin, and Alfred Suen. In order to become a member of the organization, a student must have a total of 30 grade points.

Don Taylor, a pre-legal major, was formerly college head yell leader, belongs to the Campus Players, and Tri Epsilon; Dianne Hampton, speech major, is a member of the Forum Club; and Homer Pack Jr. is treasurer of the Rifle Club, is a member of the Ice-Skating Club, and the Club Advisory Board.

Polytechnic graduates are exceedingly active in spring athletics. Former Parrot athletes now competing on various college varsities include Bob Oyen, Burt Goebel, Rafael Bertucelli, George Woerner, Bill Jennings, (track); Arthur Consta, Mervin Kovich, James Reed (advanced tennis); Carter Corey, Ralph D'Clivo, Woerner, (football); and Leo Mark, (basketball). Competitors in college intramural sports include Bertucelli, Larry Fanning, Goebel, Carl Heidenreich, Paris Kazee, and Charles Price.

Harry Chan, a pharmacy major, is this semester's president of the Chinese Students' Club; William Gerecke, a College of Commerce major, is assistant intramural manager, and is president of Phi Lambda Phi fraternity; and Norman La Mar, a journalism major, is a member of the Newman Club, and the Rifle Club.

Norman Applebaum, a mechanical engineering major, was last semester's assistant yell leader, and is a member of Sigma Delta Phi fraternity; William Beltran, an aviation major, is active in the Rifle Club; and Virginia Carrozzi, a home economics major, belongs to the Home Economics Association.

Polytechnics selected, as their major subjects, the following: Civil Engineering, Business, Chemistry, Aviation, College of Commerce, Pre-Dental, and Home Economics. Comprising the rest of the popular majors are Journalism, Letters and Science, Merchandising, Pre-Nursing, Mathematics, and Pre-Legal.

Participating in this semester's inter-school relations poll were 99 Polytechnic High School graduates. Thirty-one per cent of the students selected Civil Engineering as their major subject, while 12 per cent of the students selected business as their major subject.

There were no majors listed for five of the students, but the poll indicated an equal preference toward academic and terminal fields of study.

(Next Week—Galileo High School, Abraham Lincoln High School, and Girls' High School.)

CAPITAL to CAMPUS

ACP's Jay Richter Reports from Washington

WASHINGTON, (ACP)—College students—because their "income" is relatively "fixed"—should benefit more than the average person from the Office of Price Administration's over-all ceiling order on prices.

The inflationary spiral has sent retail prices up 19 per cent the last year. Were the spiral to continue, students would find it tougher to compete for goods and services in a market glutted with eager buyers.

The ceiling on retail goods goes into effect May 18, while that on services becomes effective July 1. Retailers then must charge no more than their highest March price. Here is what will happen to some important items in the student budget:

Room and board—If you live in a war-rental area room and board will be controlled. Some two-thirds of the nation's population is included in these areas.

Restaurant meals—No price control.

Clothing—Both men's and women's controlled.

Movies and entertainment—No ceiling.

Carfare—No ceiling.

Cigarettes, cosmetics, toothpaste, aspirin—Just a few of the thousands of "processed commodities" on the controlled list.

Laundry, dry cleaning, shoe repairing, etc.—Controlled.

Beauty and barber shop services—No control. The government does not recognize beauty as a "commodity," and only services involving commodities are controlled.

You might remember, when the ceilings go into effect, that the order does not wipe out price differences between stores. If a merchant under-sold his competitors last March, he may still do so. On about 100 important cost-of-living items retailers must post signs informing purchasers of the maximum legal price. Also, merchants must give you a sales slip if you request one.

WAR

Quisling's order sending 500 Norwegian teachers off to Finnish labor camps in the cramped hold of the S. S. Skjerstad has aroused storms of protest throughout Norway. The 500 were among thousands who refused to join Norway's Nazi Teachers Union, Norges Laerersamband.

When the "Nazi slave ship" docked in Trondheim, it was reported that all the teachers were sick and two of them had gone mad. Even Quisling satellites protested against resumption of the trip. Provincial Governor Frytz wired Quisling:

"Hygienic conditions on board are extraordinarily bad. . . . Many will not be able to lie down at night. . . . Many of the teachers are ill. . . . The water supply is insufficient. . . . Suggest medical examination for all teachers."

The ship was sent on its way after a Quisling physician treated some 100 of the sick.

Student Secretary Solves Mystery--Loses Spoils

By Ed Lopez

Members of the college Executive Council have been faced with a grave problem! Especially concerned was Barbara Stahmann, Associated Students secretary. It seems that some time ago the favorite chair of all the members of the council (and especially Miss Stahmann) disappeared from the student body office.

Miss Stahmann was practically in tears over the loss of the much missed chair. "It was such a beautiful chair," quotes she. "It had a cushion and everything." Other members of the council decided that something should be done at once to recover their property and so the secretary was appointed as a committee of one to investigate the matter.

But as fate would have the matter, it was not to be solved so easily, for Dean Edwin C. Brown complicated the matter by adding a bit of information concerning the missing property.

It seemed that Joseph Amori, who has since left the college for Annapolis, was the first person to set eye on the favorite chair of the student officials. Before anyone was aware of what went on, Mr. Amori was the possessor of a new chair for his placement office.

Upon Mr. Amori's departure, the chair soon disappeared and was found much later in the office of Hilda Watson of the Hotel and Restaurant division. Mrs. Watson asserts that the chair, which had been the chair in the student body office, and then the chair in the placement office, was the chair she now had in her possession and intended to keep, for it was the chair originally purchased by the student body for her office.

Members of the council were bewildered (especially Miss Stahmann). All wanted their chair back or at least one similar.

At Dean Brown's suggestion, an investigation was made into the college records to determine if there was an answer to the question. After all, say the council members, "Do we or don't we have a chair? Is that chair our chair or Mrs. Watson's?"

The answer was found when Miss Stahmann (who was especially concerned) scanned through the volumes of college records concerning purchases of college property to solve the confusion. No record was found to give the student officials the power to remove Mrs. Watson's chair and so life will go on in the student body without their favorite chair and its cushion, and Miss Stahmann is still especially concerned.

So much for the two contestants. One other fact must be noted. England is bombing the starch out of the Nazi stiffness. Hitler, fighting for existence in Russia, must fear invasion to the west. Few people have had greater headaches than the self-styled German prophet.

The odds are all in favor of defeat—perhaps he knows it. There is nothing to be done, Hitler must fight. He will, to the last German.

College Honor Society Sponsors Banquet May 20

Ending what has been termed the most successful semester yet, the college honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma, will climax its activities with a banquet to be held next Wednesday, May 20, at the Paris Restaurant, 242 O'Farrell Street, beginning at 6:30 p. m., Barbara Stahmann, president of the group, disclosed

Tickets to the banquet cost one dollar, (tax included) and are already on sale at the college finance office, Room 188, Miss Stahmann said. The committee in charge of the affair includes George Baffico, Barbara Jacobs, Henry Pierce, Joan Wrenn, and Miss Stahmann.

Admirable Acts Calls For Dubious Congratulations

Last Friday, May 8, a United States sailor made a phone call from a booth in the front hall. He did not mean to pay 40 dollars and five cents for the call. Whoever found the wallet with identification card and the money in it or knows who found it should see Dean Browne at the earliest possible date. Keep the nickel, but return the billfold.

Parker Chairman

Dr. Parker is chairman for both the general and executive committees for California. President Archibald Cloud and Father Peter Dunne of the University of San Francisco comprise the executive committee.

In addition to Parker, the general committee consists of William Goss, Lloyd Luckmann, and John Seitz, all of this college, Dr. Harold Frasier, Dr. Paul Pitman, Dr. Hubert Phillips, Dr. Theodore Treutlein, and Dr. Harold Bradley, Parker announced.

The results of the contest for the California section will be available, probably next week.

Students and Faculty Members Invited to Listening Hour of Music Department Three Times a Week

All students and faculty members are invited to the Music Listening Hour Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, Room 200, at 1 p. m., and attendance is urged.

Flossita Badger, college music instructor, is in charge of this hour, and explained that attendance has up to this time been more than gratifying. Monday's meeting included songs by Marion Anderson, and the fifth symphony by Shostakovich, contemporary Russian composer.

This hour is not in the nature of a class, rather it has been designed to provide listening pleasure to all who attend. Villa Lobes, composer, is represented also through compositions played at this time.

Guardsman Gains Third All-American Rating

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

THIS is the last column we will be writing for The Guardsman—which doesn't recommend it in any way. But the mere fact of a last column brings to mind a great deal of things that have been set down here. They include all sorts of prognostication, charges, complaints, ridicule, support, and what have you.

It is most interesting to look back and try to imagine how anyone could have written some of the things that appeared in column one. There was, for instance, a rabid support of the America First Committee. There was also an equally rabid support of Mr. Lindbergh. There were a few attempts at the allegorical, which now seem rather silly. And there were, once in a while, columns which successfully predicted where or why or how something was going to happen.

Labor took a beating here—but then, so did capital. Entrance into the war was perhaps the most flagrant error that this writer committed. But solace may be taken in the realization that there were more in that category.

WAR, WAR

This column has seen war rage in Europe and Africa. It has seen the approach of America to the brink—and over into the greatest conflict of all time. One can only marvel at the thousand happenings of a year and a half.

Yesterday Slants was written in a time of comparative peace. Today it is written in war. Yesterday's words dealt with whether or not to become involved, today's deal with how and why to win. Certainly a wondrous change. None could be more complete!

A little farewell prediction, perhaps, would be in order. Predictions in these times could only deal with one subject.

That victory is certain is undeniable. No one, keeping in touch with world happenings, could ever doubt that the strength and resources and determination of America would come to any end but victory.

WORK DOES IT

Another fact, too, is evident. That even for a people as great, as resourceful and as powerful as America may boast, victory will not be an easy task. It is all too noticeable that work, and work only, will bring to an end the bloody and unwelcome task of killing.

To be mentioned with winning and how, is the spirit of the nation.

It is most enlightening to note how it slowly began to show itself. From a mere trickle of the well informed, this spirit, so necessary to a strong and successful country, ran faster and faster through the opposition of defeatism and compromise that had been so strongly entrenched. Noninterventionism was swept aside in a veritable flood of patriotism that threatened to engulf the enemy by sheer numerical weight. And by weight of its intense sincerity.

These things, though one of them ran contrary to opinions formerly held, have been most welcomely observed. It is impossible not to feel the pervasion of a spirit that knows itself invincible; more so is it pleasant when that spirit is such as it is—a complete and uncensored revelation of America feeling. A revelation brought on, not by the whim or rule of any dictatorial combine, not by the created lust for power or belief in superhuman ability, but by the honest belief in a mode of living that is distinctly American.

AMERICA IS MORE

These things have made one fact recognizable in a more lucid light. That America is much more than talking, and thinking, and conjecturing. America is a nation of many millions who talk, act, and live ideals. It is a place, one of the few, in which men and women realize of their own volition that the things they have are worth fighting for—and they have responded accordingly.

Because this nation has long been considered a soft touch for a more dictatorial ridden people, its present enemies are now sharing in the unfortunate realization of an untruth. Not for them, but for their peoples, it is a fortunate thing, this American generosity and good will.

With the conclusion of hostilities,

Music Festival

Student Musical Groups In Song Recital Tuesday

The Music Fest, climax of this semester's choir, band, and orchestra achievements will be held Tuesday, May 26, at 10 a.m. in the Men's Gym.

Song Contest Winners

"A feature of the program," Flossita Badger, A-Cappella Choir director emphasized, "will be the playing of the patriotic song, winner of the much talked of college contest." The deadline of this contest was May 18, and entries have come in in gratifying numbers.

All student and faculty members are urged to attend, but the best seats are guaranteed those of earliest arrival. Classes will be excused at this time. The public is invited, and all are asked to bring guests.

The A-Cappella Choir, well known through out this area, will sing a group of songs, including My Bonnie Lass, by Morely; Beautiful Saviour, by Christiansen, and Chant Out of Doors, a modern and very difficult number by Russell Bodely, Choir Director at the College of The Pacific.

Varied Program

The College Quartet, composed of Doris Crane, Katherine Davies, Pearce Davies, and Lennox Cinnamond will take part, featuring an arrangement by Arthur Guenther, local pianist. "The quartet," according to Miss Badger, their director, "has made many appearances in the city, and has received compliments on the quality of their singing." Miss Davies, will, in addition, give a group of solo numbers including a composition by Gorden Brewer well known around the college.

Patriotic Song Contest winners will be announced at the music recital of the college orchestral groups Tuesday morning. Three out of fifteen entries in the contest will win, and the winning numbers will be played and sung by the different musical groups. Judges on the song contest included Flossita Badger, Madison Devlin, Edna Devhard, Betty McKillop, and members of the band group.

The "new" college orchestra and band, under the direction of Madison Devlin, will play at this time. Their first appearance at the large student rally received much student response. Among the numbers scheduled for the Music Fest, are selections from Hit the Deck, by Younares.

Noted Violinist Slated

"Doris Crane," Miss Badger declared, "is widely acclaimed as an up and coming young violinist will play at the music Fest." Response to her former playing verifies Miss Badger's statement.

Space does not permit an entire program of this event, but May 26 is the date, 10 a.m. the hour (with classes suspended), and the men's gym the place.

Soph Formal

St. Francis Yacht Club Dance Locale

Culminating a two-year period of activities at the college, the high sophomore class and their guests will celebrate at the high sophomore formal tomorrow night at the St. Francis Yacht Club, according to Jack Skinner, high sophomore president.

The orchestra that has been selected to play is that of Bert Whiting. Whiting's orchestra has played for several local college affairs, including those of the University of California and the University of San Francisco.

Bert Whiting, popular local orchestra leader, will provide the music for the semi-annual formal, to be held tomorrow evening at the St. Francis Yacht Club. Under the direction of Jack Skinner, class president, the dance will begin at nine o'clock.

Sweetheart Presented

As a featured attraction, the winner of the semi-annual sophomore sweetheart contest will be presented, as well as the victor of the freshman king contest. The dance is to be strictly formal, Skinner further announced. As is customary the no-corsage rule for all regular college dances will be waived for the soph formal.

No Stag Ruling

Admittance to the formal will be strictly by couples. Bids are on sale at the Finance Office, room 188. Cost of the bids is $1.50 per couple.

Reason for holding the dance in the city is attributed to the transportation crisis caused by the war. "For example," Skinner said, "last semester's dance was to be held out of the city at a country club, but that would be unsatisfactory for a locale this semester because of the tire difficulties."

Breakfast After Dance

The traditional breakfast to be held after the formal will be at 2:30 at 288 San Jose Avenue, the late Governor Rolph's old estate.

Whiting's band was also chosen after consideration by the social committee for the soph formal which includes: Bernice Dunn, Jean Arnold, Lucille Landress, Link Johnson, Bill Quandt, John Scheartg, Dave Hunicke, and soph president Skinner.

Steve Mohorivich, Charles McCarl Named Finalists In King Race; Winner Will Appear At Soph Formal

Steve Mohorivich and Charles McCarl were named finalists in the Campus King Contest after results of the primary elections were made known this week. Choice of the winner will be made today by women voters, and the winner will be announced at the Sophomore Formal tomorrow evening.

Mohorivich and McCarl, competing with a group of six college men, vied for the honor of Frosh King in an election campaign lasting for several weeks.

Final Vote Today

The primary voting was held Thursday by women of the college, and the finalists in the race will compete for the title today.

The winner in the contest will be presented, among other gifts, with a bid to the Sophomore Formal, and he will be presented to the assemblage with the Sophomore Sweetheart.

Begun Last Semester

Inaugurated last semester by the freshman class, the contest for a Campus King was begun. Winner in last semester's race was Jim Skinner, and the victor in the current race will be the second man of the college to have been in the campaign.

Cosely resembling the sophomore choice for the sweetheart, the king race was begun in the hopes of giving college women the chance of electing a man to reign with the queen.

Guardsman

Guardsman A Three Time Winnner In National Juding Of Campus Papers By Collegiate Press

For the third consecutive semester The Guardsman has been awarded an All-American rating by the Associated Collegiate Press. This places the college paper among the top publications of its kind in the country. Under the editorship of Borrie Hyman, who is also scheduled to be student speaker at the coming graduation, ACP, through a competitive judging, added to the list of honors given The Guardsman during the past two years by the collegiate press service.

For Last Semester

The award was made for last semester's paper, then published twice weekly. From the time the college paper changed from once to twice weekly publications an award has been given each semester. Of the awards during that time only one was a First Class rating, the remainder being All-American.

Members of last semester's editorial staff included: Hyman, editor; Francis Chrisman, managing editor; Bob Cuthbertson, news editor, and Iwanna Hayworth, feature editor. Sports editor for a portion of the semester was Bill Cothran, now on the Chicago Sun; Bob Marcus and Nick Barborotto finished out the semester as co-sports editors when Cothran left for Chicago. George Cowie, who edited the paper to a similar award the previous semester, was executive editor.

Muscio Adviser

Mrs. Joan Nourse Muscio, who had been faculty adviser for several years, occupied that place last year, a post now assumed by Lloyd Luckmann.

In the past keys have been voted by the Executive Council to members of the editorial staff winning such an award.

Told of the award, Hyman gave credit to the staff for the work they had done. He also declared that assistance from the faculty adviser undoubtedly had a great deal to do with the judging of ACP.

CAB

Club Board Meets Today For Choice Of New Officers

All clubs should make certain that they are represented at today's Club Advisory Board meeting at 2 p.m. in room 113, urged Ed Lopez, president of the board. Purpose of the meeting is to nominate and elect next semester's CAB officers.

Baby Day, which was originally scheduled for today, has been postponed because of complications of the Associated Student elections. Perhaps the plan will be carried out by next semester's officers, Lopez said.

Candidates Hoped For

Present officers of the group, Dorothy Hogan, Margaret McMahan and Lopez, hope to have a large turnout of candidates for the three CAB offices.

President of the CAB is a high position, Lopez explained, because it entitles the holder to a seat in the college Executive Council. Other offices to be elected will be secretary, which includes duties of the membership committee and charter renewal committee, and vice-president, who has charge of all social matters.

Club Has Busy Year

This semester the CAB set a new high in charter renewals with all organizations but one receiving charters.

At today's meeting new organizations that have passed through their probational period will receive their engraved charters of recognition from the Associated Students. These organizations include Peace Officers, Campus Players, Kappa Phi, Sigma Delta Pi, Bible Study Club, and Phi Lambda Epsilon.

Students and faculty members who have purchased United States War Bonds are requested to obtain them immediately at the college finance office, Room 188, Michael Zarchin, finance adviser, disclosed this week.

Forum Magazine Sale Slated For Today

Students who have purchased Forum magazine tickets may redeem them today at the front lobby of the science building, where members of the Forum Club will sell a limited number of Forum magazines, Dorothy Mercer, faculty adviser, disclosed this week.

The award for the best Forum magazine contribution went to Louise Horne, but only after much consideration was given to Doug Johnson, whose A Ship of Small Burthem was one of the finest sea stories written by a college student.

Tickets are 15 cents and may be purchased from any member of the college Forum Club, Miss Mercer said.

Elections

Twenty Nine Candidates In Race For Student Offices; Cafeteria Scene Of Voting

Members of the Associated Students will go to the polls today to choose from 29 nominees a handful of students to serve as next semester's officers. Voting machines will be in operation in the annex of the college cafeteria from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., announced Marshall Hyde, election committee chairman. All students desiring to cast their vote must present Associated Student cards at the polls. No primary election will be held, according to Hyde, and winners will be determined by plurality vote. Photographs of all candidates are being displayed in the lobby show case.

Six candidates have presented themselves for the office of Associated Students president. The number is somewhat larger than in previous semesters, and Don Jensen, Associated Students president, expressed his appreciation of the feeling of competition among the students of the college. Candidates for the various offices and their qualifications are as follows:

Presentation rally for the newly-elected Associated Students officers of the college will be held Monday, Bob Murphy, rally commissioner, announced today. All 1 o'clock classes will be excused for the rally.

"The rally will be held on the front steps as in the past," Murphy said, "and everyone should attend so that they can see their next semester's leaders in action."

He added that no entertainment had been obtained for the rally as yet, but that there would probably be some student talent there.

Sweetheart

Winner Of Queen Race Makes Debut Tomorrow Evening

Introduction of the newly-elected Sophomore Sweetheart and Freshman King will be tomorrow at the High Sophomore Formal to be held at the St. Francis Yacht Club, according to Jack Skinner, Sophomore Sweetheart chairman.

Barbara Treganowen and Evelyn Lewis emerged victorious from the preliminaries and the men students of the college made their final selection last Tuesday.

The winner will be presented with many gifts and prizes from the various fraternities and sororities as well as the annual trophy which is presented to the queen and king. They will reign over the Sophomore Formal as well as the college during Sophomore Week.

The Sweetheart contest is one of the oldest traditions of the college and is held at the end of each semester. The winner has her name engraved on the trophy which is kept in the trophy case during the semester. An attempt is being made to make it traditional to reveal the name of the sweetheart and king at the formal.

Dorothy Ann Kraul and Francis Chrisman Named Winners of President Placque Award

By Doug Johnson

Outstanding students in leadership, character and service were named when the selection committee met last Thursday to choose the winners of the annual President's Plaque award. Dorothy Anne Kraul, vice-president of the college Women's Athletic Association, won the women student's award.

Miss Kraul was president of the W. A. A. last semester. She is now vice-president of the graduating class, an active member of the Women's Service Society, prominent in the Rifle Club and in the Alpha Lambda Chi sorority.

Miss Kraul has done extensive traveling throughout the United States, has been to the Philippines and lived in Honolulu. She came to the college two years ago from the Anna Head School in Berkeley.

Chrisman Awarded

The men's award went to Francis Chrisman, Editor of the Guardsman and president of the college Press Club Chrisman had been a staff member for three semesters, during which the Guardsman received the All-American Associated Collegiate Press award three consecutive times. His column, Slants on the Headlines, has been column one, page one, for a year and a half, a space that Brisbane could only grab when Hearst went on a vacation.

The entire staff agrees that his efforts to hold the Guardsman up to its usual standard under the sudden change in sponsorship, always a handicap no matter how experienced the new advisor, have been entirely successful.

Navy Enlistee

Chrisman is now classified in the V-7 group of the United States Navy. He will start naval training after his graduation this semester and will enter the Navy as an Ensign as soon as possible.

The college constitution states that the award committee for the selection of President Plaque Award winners shall be made up of the Dean of Men, the Dean of Women and three faculty members. The award is presented annually. Character, Leadership, and Service, instead of scholarship, are the basis for selection. Each year the winners' names are engraved on the plaque that is enclosed in the glass display case to the right of the college entrance.

Text On Business Mathematics Written by Stough And Snyder Ready For Spring '43 Semester

Word was received from the McGraw-Hill publishing company this week that the manuscript for a business mathematics text written by Carl F. Stough and Llewllyn R. Snyder of the college business department.

The book will be published this summer and ready for use in the spring term of 1943. It is being used now in business mathematics courses throughout the college, but the bound edition will probably be condensed somewhat, Snyder said. "The new edition will be classified in the Harvard series of texts," Snyder said.

"There has been a demand for years for a text of this type," Stough said, "covering the field of business mathematics thoroughly from Social Security to income tax returns." That the demand was recognized was indicated by the ready acceptance of our manuscript for publication."

Graduation

To War Duty

IT IS SIGNIFICANT that at the graduation ceremonies this year a former instructor, now in the service of the Navy, will be a featured speaker. At every graduation ceremony in every college and university in America the responsibility and association of institutions of higher learning with the war effort will be made evident.

To a young college, such as this, whose few graduating classes have been surrounded with a warring world, the importance of its place in such a conflict is very evident to all. But this will be the college's first war-time graduation. That means that those students leaving will find not the society of competition that is usually expected but a society completely lacking competion in so far as internal matters are concerned.

War-time graduation presents to students a problem different in every respect. The search for employment is almost non-existent. The armed forces stand ready to claim male students; as do the great war-created industries. Students must look first to serving their country in most essential fields. Many plans for further education must be shoved aside. Many plans for a business career must be postponed. Graduates today must have only one goal.

Does this mean that all hopes for entrance into fields which would have been chosen in peace time must now be completely forgotten? Definitely not! Wars are considered only temporary disasters. The post war work will depend more than ever upon the ability of the more highly trained college and university student. There will be, probably, a great job of reconstruction and rearrangement facing the nation after victory.

This job of reconstruction and rearrangement is the second responsibility which the graduating student must consider. It is because of this self-evident post-war task that the government now asks students to remain at their studies until called up by the service. Just as the war is being fought to bring certain liberties to oppressed peoples, and to protect those liberties for ourselves—so the building after victory must be to insure and cement the achievements of victory.

Though the future may look different to the graduate, still it is a future unlike any other—both in possibilities and necessity. The future faced today is one of service to country and man. It compares more than favorably with the peace time future of semi-selfish anticipation. It offers opportunities for service which might, in a different period, never have existed. It is a future which calls for all the ability that the student can muster. And the rewards for that extended ability are the most satisfying that anyone has ever been privileged to anticipate.

All American

FOR the third time in as many semesters, The Guardsman staff has won an award in competition that is the highest of its kind. Under the editorship of Borrie Hyman, last semester's publication was given an All-American rating by the Associated Collegiate Press organization This award was based upon a judging of all of the requisites of journalism, makeup and newspaper "must."

To Mr. Hyman and the members of that staff must go sincere congratulations for the fine work done. Much praise also goes to the faculty adviser of the paper, Mrs. Joan Nourse Muscio.

Education's leaders have realized the importance of a publication, such as The Guardsman, to the successful college program. For purposes of cementing plans, of distributing information, of emphasizing the important—for these are a college newspaper needed.

That last semester's publication did these things well enough to win recognition from a large organization like ACP is ample reason for congratulations from members of the present staff, and from the college at large.

Shots At ...RAMdom

THE SIGN SAID

"Chuck Martin's Literary Boot Hill." We walked through the rickety gate post trying to figure out what a "literary boot hill" was. Hollywood was only 90 miles away. Perhaps this was where all the "B" pictures were buried. That happy thought whiffed away from the little grey cells, however, when we caught sight of the first grave stone, a wooden one with crude lettering burnt into its weather beaten surface. There were a pair of cracked leather boots tied to the top with an old saddle girth.

The inscription read:

"Bart Dake,
said he'd whip Bronc
Romaine or go to hell
without boots.
He Went."

And another:

"One Shot Brady.
He shot first
and missed."

There was a skeleton of a horse on top of this one. The empty sockets looked up at us and the jaws grinned emptily. And then from behind us came a slow drawl, quiet and menacing, just like in cowboy pulps,

"What's doin', son?"

We whirled and raised our hands instinctively. A middle aged man with an engaging grin topped by a sun-burned nose and a ten gallon hat stood looking at us quizically.

"Oh, uh, hullo, quite an interesting place, isn't it?" We were going to add "podnuh," but thought it would be a bit thick right at first.

that the western looking gent we were talking to was Chuck Martin, who writes cowboy stories for the pulps, slicks and Hollywood. In each story he writes a villian dies. The villain is "buried" in the little cemetery on his ranch about three miles from Oceanside, California. Martin thinks up all his stories while riding his horse over the rugged terrain of his ranch. The hardest part for him is to write them down and smooth them over for publication. He was a cow punch himself twenty years ago, so he's actually seen some of the quick death and adventure that he writes about.

He has a gun that belonged to the leader of the Dalton gang. There are 13 notches on the inside of the handiegrip. Bret Harte offered him 1,000 dollars for it, but Martin wouldn't sell.

We left Chuck Martin to drive on that day feeling that we'd met the hero of a regular western adventure story. He had the same drawl, the big guns hanging on his hips, and he wore dusty riding boots.

All this happened two years ago. By now, Chuck Martin's Literary Boot Hill will have literally covered his ranch with "buried" villains.

Defendant pleas for Upp; Publicity lacking for WAA

● J. C. R. Blasted
Editor, The Guardsman:

Into this office came a little note last week regarding Jim Upp, yell leader.

And so this is dedicated to J. C. R.

Dear J. C. R.

In reply to yours of the May 15, just how much did it hurt when you discovered you were dropped?

The editor says that I musn't call you a jerk and so I won't. But as to your claim that Mr. Upp received some cheap publicity, I was with Mr. Upp on the night before the rally and if you ever work that hard on your finals you will probably shock hell out of your parents.

It is persons such as you who lay on the sidelines of the semester and belittle the efforts of the student administration. It is your kind that refuses to even come out to the rallies that have been prepared for you, choosing instead the benches in the rear.

You claim also that yell leaders must be crazy. Well! They might easily become so running a college for characters like you.

You neglected to say whether you were a male or female but in either case your type seldom takes on the responsibility of student offices.

I think that your letter is just about the cheapest means of obtaining publicity. You did however make one mistake . . . why didn't you sign your name. Afraid of the criticism? Perhaps the rally commissioner will put you on his committee next semester, hoping not, for better rallies I remain,

JACK ROBINSON,
Member of the Rally Commission

● Better Late . . .
Editor, The Guardsman:

Undoubtedly this is your last issue but I shall register my complaint so it will sink in over the summer holidays.

The Women's Athletic Association has a grand program outlined at the first of every semester. But just what part of it do the students here hear. Practically none! The number of times top stories have been written and, printed on the sport page concerning the WAA could be counted on the fingers of one hand.

For heaven's sake a little publicity scattered throughout the paper won't ruin your chances for "All-American"—it would more than likely help you out.

LAST week a bill was passed in in Congress providing for a women's army. The organization will be run similar to the regular army. There will be officers in charge, army posts, and so forth. One of the main differences pointed out by the one appointed officer is that uniforms will not be required off the post. In other words—women although in the army may follow the latest fashions, still wear the most ultra suit, decorated with the newest gadget.

Designers were undoubtedly having a few bad moments before the statement by the directoress was made public regarding "off post" clothing. Truly their incomes would be diminished, their hopes dampened, and all their acclaim to fame ruined if such a provision were not made.

WAR STAMP DECORATIONS

Patriotism, Americanism and so forth are brought out in a war stamp corsage. A little ribbon (red, white, and blue) several defense stamps, and a few toothpicks or pins are combined to make a very attractive corsage. For a conservative practical soph formal corsage, you might suggest to the date to bring you one of these. They are certainly more practical, and longer lasting, and one needn't worry about getting his money's worth.

GLAMOUROUS RUBBER

Swimmers who want to look glamorous might take advantage of the rubberized turbans that have been recently introduced. They are designed in varied colors and have a large bow on the top. Waterproof, too.

Recently we saw the prize winners of all yarn coat gadgets. It was a couple, boy and girl, made of yarn, dressed in Kelly green garb. The detail on the figures was especially clever. The girl wore a tiny white apron tied in the back, while the boy had suspenders equally as tiny. Both had red hair—typical of the Irish lad and lassie they represented.

FINIS

Today marks the last time this column will be written this semester. After today we shall close the typewriter, throw away all the fashion magazines, cards from downtown store buyers, and vow never to enter a department store again (well for a few days anyway).

Throughout the semester we have tried to show what new fashions have "taken" in other colleges around the country, those that designers have just burst a blood vein over, and just what collegiennes are going raving mad trying to buy.

When some member of the student body appeared of a morn with striking new garb; we did our best to tell others about it. Of course we couldn't mention every one in the college as the enrollment is a trifle high and our publication dates far too few to undertake such a job.

Collectively the women of the college are a very well dressed group (just ask anybody).

Catudio Spectator . . .

MY Rita
GAL
Hayworth
SAL

THOSE grand old days of the tantalizing Gay Nineties, when everybody from the Floradora Sextette to the tavern bar-keep were singing the melodies of Paul Dresser whose life was as flambuoyant as the period he set to music, are all a part of the Twentieth Century Fox Technicolor production of Theodore Dreiser's My Gal Sal.

My Gal Sal finds ravishing, red-headed Rita Hayworth in the role of Sally Elliot, beauteous "gas light" stage star, while Victor Mature, in his first biographical role, is seen as song writer, Paul Dresser. Not wanting to abide by his father's wish to see him become a minister, Dresser runs away from home. He is tarred and feathered by a small crowd of rabid country folks, and wakes up to find himself in the arms of Carole Landis and a job with Walter Catlett's medicine show as an entertainer.

BEST MUSICAL OF SEASON TO DATE

After being unintentionally ridiculed by Sally, Dresser goes to New York, writes song hit after song hit, becomes a B'way fixture, and falls in love with Sal who seems always to fall back upon ever hopeful John Sutton. Only after Dresser composes some corny music do they get together.

My Gal Sal is undoubtedly the best musical of the current season, for it is entertainment deluxe—nostalgiv memories of the good days, memorable scenes of the old San Francisco Opera House, New York, when barber shop quartets were a dime a dozen, and the soft, moonlit nights upon the banks of the Wabash. This department is a "sucker" for light, sentimental dramas involving the Gay Nineties, and My Gal Sal lives up to all advance notices.

FINE PERFORMANCES IN FILM, TOO

Songs that Paul Dresser composed—On the Banks of the Wabash, Come Tell Me, Oh, The Fly of It All, and My Gal Sal—are sung by Mature and Miss Hayworth. (Pardon us! We Mean Nan Wynn who dubbed her voice instead of Rita's.) Miss Hayworth, who has always looked lovely, does her finest acting job of her young acting career to date, topping her role in Strawberry Blonde. Although he seems to lack the qualities that made Paul Dresser a song writing genius, Victor Mature gives a fine, sincere performance. Thanks to Director Irving Cummings, Mature has picked up a few tricks of the trade in keeping attention focused his way with such an "eyeful" as Rita around to swipe each scene.

Supporting Miss Hayworth and Mature are John Sutton, Carole Landis, James Gleason, Phil Silvers, Walter Catlett, Mona Maris, and Frank Orth. Gleason and Orth deserve special merit, as they portray two Tin Pan Alley music publishers. Gleason, however, will never top his Here Comes Mr. Jordan performance, and Orth, a newcomer, outshines his recent role in Rings on Her Fingers. Remember? Director Cummings keeps the story—what there is of it—from folding in several spots, and wastes the talents of Carole Landis with a "veddy small" role.

MICHAEL SHAYNE AGAIN

The Spectator goes forth in all honest sincerity in tabbing My Gal Sal as one of the top musicals to hit the screen in some time. Far from the tense, melodrama that gripped Alexander's Ragtime Band, the Hayworth-Mature co-starrer is a film that would make grandpappy kick his heels in the air and holler "Whoopie!"

Number two offering is The Man Who Wouldn't Die, a comedy thriller with Lloyd Nolan portraying the role of our favorite sleuthie, Michael Shayne, a character created by Brett Halliday. Others in the cast are Marjorie Weaver, Helene Reynolds, Henry Wilcoxon, Richard Derr, and Olin Howland. Why producers fail to give Nolan a break is beyond this department! His nonchalance and "at ease" performances lend the Mike Shayne series much added screen magic.

Faculty Features . . . Dean Of Men And Graduate Student!

By Iwanna Hayworth

"IS the Dean in, do you know when he will be in" and similar such queries are presented in the office of the dean of men every day over and over from the first hour of classes until the last student has left the college for the day.

At any and all hours of the day, students file in and out of the dean's office with their troubles, whether big or small, knowing full well that if there is a solution to their problems, the dean will find it.

Dean Edwin C. Browne was born in Seattle, Washington, but at the age of seven, his family moved to Berkeley. Two years later they moved to San Francisco, where his father was a teacher in public schools.

The first job which he held was handing out programs at the old Columbia Theatre way back in the horse and buggy days. He was delivery boy for Shreve's Jewelry and other jewelry stores here in the city. Following this, about the time of the great earthquake which disturbed his family materially, he was working for Western Union delivering telegrams. While the city was being rebuilt, transportation was of course very difficult. He reminisced over the fact and said that it was impossible to secure transportation to the proper destination of his telegrams. He said that there were times when he walked from Third and Townsend out to the old city jail, which was, incidentally, located on the present college site.

The best means of getting anywhere, that is in his case at that time, was to hop on behind buggies and horse drawn vehicles.

And now to the schools that have been included in his intellectual enlightment he attended the James Lick Grammar School.

When college days arrived, Dean Browne attended the University of Washington for two years, at the same time, incidentally as Bertha Keller, physical education instructor. While there, the dean was a member of the freshman basketball squad, and was also active in the Y. M. C. A. student work.

Upon completion of his freshman and sophomore years, he was transferred to the University of California.

The first World War broke into his scholastic training about this time, whereupon he enlisted and spent a year in army life. He was enlisted, he laughed, as a truck driver, but instead, they gave him a typewriter. He was made a drill sergeant while working with fellows from the Southern Mountain areas, whose abilities in the way of target practice far excelled other notable abilities. Following this he was transferred to Louisville, Kentucky, where he was commissioned a second lieutenant.

Even then, he was not sent overseas, he remarked, so it turned out that the war ended without his ever going "over there".

After he was discharged from the army, he returned to the University of California and attended there until he received his degree in the spring of 1919, but continued on in the summer session doing post graduate work.

He went to Puerto Rico as a tutor for a family with two little boys, and remained there for six months. When he was ready to return again to the states, he found that he couldn't obtain regular passage back, so he got a position on a freighter and worked his way back.

He served as an introducer of text books in Colorado schools for about a month, before coming back to California.

About this time, the "dean" married a school teacher from Southern Oregon, "Because," he said, "She had an excellent position," then laughed as only he can when kidding someone, and that person is not quite sure whether they are the victim of a subtle joke or not.

Among the teaching positions which he has held may be numbered the principalship in Yreka, California, high school. At Placerville, he was principal there for ten years.

"I love San Francisco," he said, "and rightly so, I suppose for I've lived here for off and on 40 years."

Together with his deanship here at the college, he is also attending Stanford at the present time, and is now in his third quarter there.

His first ambition was in following the ministry as a career, however, during the last war, he added that the many things that he learned and the people that he met decided him in following his present calling.

With regards to the present world situation, he said, "I only regret that I am not young enough again to join in with these young fellows who are enlisting and doing their part. I'd certainly like to be "right in there" with them.

Perhaps it is his attitude toward world affairs and how they will affect the students here, that makes the whole student body all for him, for he knows or has talked to every student in the college at some time or other.

Cabbages & Kings

EVERY week with the huge but recently decreasing number of errors in ye olde Guardsman a man of bleary eyes runs about screaming

"You can't say that!"

Thus, Francis Chrisman (Chris), earns the hate and detest of all on the staff.

Even worse than Nancy, he throws copy to the winds and leers when reporters come in to say that their subject has gone to China or to Oakland or some other unheard of place.

Weird mutters follow him when he wanders down dark halls and knives flash in the moonlight after him.

But all in all, he is the one that has kept the staff plugging and turning in stories.

He has lent encouragement in every phase of the work and has more than once written filler.

And so to him, in spite of all the heckling that we have given him, in spite of all of the bad times that have followed, this column is dedicated.

It is rather difficult to dedicate anything to Chris, he just blushes and smiles (with teeth)—

"Aw gosh, you shouldn't say that."

LOOKING AROUND

Why is it that students stand with mouth agape as members of the radio classes spout their emoting? Could be the interest on Miss Weller's face in that classic pose?

The long angular frame of Andy Adams as he hulks down the halls in search of a piece of binder paper and the joy expressed when it is found.

The cold horror imbedded on the faces of those stoogents who wander out into the paths when the sprinkling system is showering all who approach.

The varied glances as one of the college's more modern women blossom out with a new hair creation, this time it's combed.

AND IN CLOSING

We wonder just how long it will be until public indignation forces our co-sports editor to shave off that protruding bit of limp shredded wheat on his upper lip.

Graduation

To War Duty

IT IS SIGNIFICANT that at the graduation ceremonies this year a former instructor, now in the service of the Navy, will be a featured speaker. At every graduation ceremony in every college and university in America the responsibility and association of institutions of higher learning with the war effort will be made evident.

To a young college, such as this, whose few graduating classes have been surrounded with a warring world, the importance of its place in such a conflict is very evident to all. But this will be the college's first war-time graduation. That means that those students leaving will find not the society of competition that is usually expected but a society completely lacking competion in so far as internal matters are concerned.

War-time graduation presents to students a problem different in every respect. The search for employment is almost non-existent. The armed forces stand ready to claim male students; as do the great war-created industries. Students must look first to serving their country in most essential fields. Many plans for further education must be shoved aside. Many plans for a business career must be postponed. Graduates today must have only one goal.

Does this mean that all hopes for entrance into fields which would have been chosen in peace time must now be completely forgotten? Definitely not! Wars are considered only temporary disasters. The post war work will depend more than ever upon the ability of the more highly trained college and university student. There will be, probably, a great job of reconstruction and rearrangement facing the nation after victory.

This job of reconstruction and rearrangement is the second responsibility which the graduating student must consider. It is because of this self-evident post-war task that the government now asks students to remain at their studies until called up by the service. Just as the war is being fought to bring certain liberties to oppressed peoples, and to protect those liberties for ourselves—so the building after victory must be to insure and cement the achievements of victory.

Though the future may look different to the graduate, still it is a future unlike any other—both in possibilities and necessity. The future faced today is one of service to country and man. It compares more than favorably with the peace time future of semi-selfish anticipation. It offers opportunities for service which might, in a different period, never have existed. It is a future which calls for all the ability that the student can muster. And the rewards for that extended ability are the most satisfying that anyone has ever been privileged to anticipate.

All American

FOR the third time in as many semesters, The Guardsman staff has won an award in competition that is the highest of its kind. Under the editorship of Borrie Hyman, last semester's publication was given an All-American rating by the Associated Collegiate Press organization This award was based upon a judging of all of the requisites of journalism, makeup and newspaper "must."

To Mr. Hyman and the members of that staff must go sincere congratulations for the fine work done. Much praise also goes to the faculty adviser of the paper, Mrs. Joan Nourse Muscio.

Education's leaders have realized the importance of a publication, such as The Guardsman, to the successful college program. For purposes of cementing plans, of distributing information, of emphasizing the important—for these are a college newspaper needed.

That last semester's publication did these things well enough to win recognition from a large organization like ACP is ample reason for congratulations from members of the present staff, and from the college at large.

THE SIGN SAID

"Chuck Martin's Literary Boot Hill." We walked through the rickety gate post trying to figure out what a "literary boot hill" was. Hollywood was only 90 miles away. Perhaps this was where all the "B" pictures were buried. That happy thought whiffed away from the little grey cells, however, when we caught sight of the first grave stone, a wooden one with crude lettering burnt into its weather beaten surface. There were a pair of cracked leather boots tied to the top with an old saddle girth.

The inscription read:

"Bart Dake
said he'd whip Bronc
Romaine or go to hell
without boots.
He Went."

And another:

"One Shot Brady.
He shot first
and missed."

There was a skeleton of a horse on top of this one. The empty sockets looked up at us and the jaws grinned emptily. And then from behind us came a slow drawl, quiet and menacing, just like in cowboy pulps.

"What's doin', son?"

We whirled and raised our hands instinctively. A middle aged man with an engaging grin topped by a sun-burned nose and a ten gallon hat stood looking at us quizically.

"Oh, uh, hullo, quite an interesting place, isn't it?" We were going to add "podnuh," but thought it would be a bit thick right at first.

We left Chuck Martin to drive on that day feeling that we'd met the hero of a regular western adventure story. He had the same drawl, the big guns hanging on his hips, and he wore dusty riding boots.

All this happened two years ago. By now, Chuck Martin's Literary Boot Hill will have literally covered his ranch with "buried" villains.

Today marks the last time this column will be written this semester. After today we shall close the typewriter, throw away all the fashion magazines, cards from downtown store buyers, and vow never to enter a department store again (well for a few days anyway).

Throughout the semester we have tried to show what new fashions have "taken" in other colleges around the country, those that designers have just burst a blood vein over, and just what collegienne are going raving mad trying to buy.

When some member of the student body appeared of a morn with striking new garb, we did our best to tell others about it. Of course we couldn't mention every one in the college as the enrollment is a trifle high and our publication dates far too few to undertake such a job.

Collectively the women of the college are a very well dressed group (just ask anybody).

Spectator . .

THOSE grand old days of the tantalizing Gay Nineties, when everybody from the Floradora Sextette to the tavern bar-keep were singing the melodies of Paul Dresser whose life was as flambuoyant as the period he set to music, are all a part of the Twentieth Century Fox Technicolor production of Theodore Dreiser's My Gal Sal.

My Gal Sal finds ravishing, red-headed Rita Hayworth in the role of Sally Elliot, beautiful "gas light" stage star, while Victor Mature, in his first biographical role, is seen as song writer, Paul Dresser. Not wanting to abide by his father's wish to see him become a minister, Dresser runs away from home. He is tarred and feathered by a small crowd of rabid country folks, and wakes up to find himself in the arms of Carole Landis and a job with Walter Catlett's medicine show as an entertainer.

BEST MUSICAL OF SEASON TO DATE

After being unintentionally ridiculed by Sally, Dresser goes to New York, writes song hit after song hit, becomes a B'way fixtuge, and falls in love with Sal who seems always to fall back upon ever hopeful John Sutton. Only after Dresser composes some corny music do they get together.

My Gal Sal is undoubtedly the best musical of the current season, for it is entertainment deluxe—nostalgiv memories of the good days, memorable scenes of the old San Francisco Opera House, New York, when barbber shop quartets were a dime a dozen, and the soft, moonlit nights upon the banks of the Wabash. This department is a "sucker" for light, sentimental dramas involving the Gay Nineties, and My Gal Sal lives up to all advance notices.

FINE PERFORMANCES IN FILM, TOO

Songs that Paul Dresser composed—On the Banks of the Wabash, Come Tell Me, Oh, The Pity of It All, and My Gal Sal—are sung by Mature and Miss Hayworth. (Pardon us! We Mean Nan Wynn who dubbed her voice instead of Rita's.) Miss Hayworth, who has always looked lovely, does her finest acting job of her young acting career to date, topping her role in Strawberry Blonde. Although he seems to lack the qualities that made Paul Dresser a song writing genius, Victor Mature gives a fine, sincere performance. Thanks to Director Irving Cummings, Mature has picked up a few tricks of the trade in keeping attention focused his way with such an "eyeful" as Rita around to swipe each scene.

Supposting Miss Hayworth and Mature are John Sutton, Carole Landis, James Gleason, Phil Silvers, Walter Catlett, Mona Maris, and Frank Orth. Gleason and Orth deserve special merit, as they portray two Tin Pan Alley music publishers. Gleason, however, will never top his Here Comes Mr. Jordan performance, and Orth, a newcomer, outshines his recent role in Rings on Her Fingers. Remember? Director Cummings keeps the story—what there is of it—from fold-ing in several spots, and wastes the talents of Carole Landis with a "eddy small" role.

MICHAEL SHAYNE AGAIN

The Spectator goes forth in all honest sincerity in tabbing My Gal Sal as one of the top musicals to hit the screen in some time. Far from the tense, melodrama that gripped Alexander's Ragtime Band, the Hayworth-Mature co-starrer is a film that would make grandpappy kick his heels in the air and holler "Whoopie!"

Number two offering is The Man Who Wouldn't Die, a comedy thriller with Lloyd Nolan portraying the role of our favorite sleuthie, Michael Shayne, a character created by Brett Halliday. Others in the cast are Marjorie Weaver, Helene Reynolds, Henry Wilcoxon, Richard Derr, and Olin Howland. Why producers fail to give Nolan a break is beyond this department! His nonchalance and "at ease" performances lend the Mike Shayne series much added screen magic.

Cabbages & Kings

EVERY week with the huge but recently decreasing number of errors in ye olde Guardsman a man of bleary eyes runs about screaming

"You can't say that!"

Thus, Francis Chrisman (Chris), earns the hate and detest of all on the staff.

Even worse than Nancy, he throws copy to the winds and leers when reporters come in to say that their subject has gone to China or to Oakland or some other unheard of place.

Weird mutters follow him when he wanders down dark halls and knives flash in the moonlight after him.

But all in all, he is the one that has kept the staff plugging and turning in stories.

He has lent encouragement in every phase of the work and has more than once written filler.

And so to him, in spite of all the heckling that we have given him, in spite of all of the bad times that have followed, this column is dedicated.

It is rather difficult to dedicate anything to Chris, he just blushes and smiles (with teeth)—

"Aw gosh, you shouldn't say that."

LOOKING AROUND

Why is it that students stand with mouth agape as members of the radio classes spout their emoting? Could be the interest on Miss Weller's face in that classic pose?

The long angular frame of Andy Adams as he hulks down the halls in search of a piece of binder paper and the joy expressed when it is found.

The cold horror imbedded on the faces of those stoogents who wander out into the paths when the sprinkling system is showering all who approach.

The varied glances as one of the college's more modern women blossom out with a new hair creation, this time it's combed.

AND IN CLOSING

We wonder just how long it will be until public indignation forces our co-sports editor to shave off that protruding bit of limp shredded wheat on his upper lip.

Faculty Features . . . Dean Of Men And Graduate Student!

By Iwanna Hayworth

"IS the Dean in, do you know when he will be in" and similar such queries are presented in the office of the dean of men every day over and over from the first hour of classes until the last student has left the college for the day.

At any and all hours of the day, students file in and out of the dean's office with their troubles, whether big or small, knowing full well that if there is a solution to their problems, the dean will find it.

Dean Edwin C. Browne was born in Seattle, Washington, but at the age of seven, his family moved to Berkeley. Two years later they moved to San Francisco, where his father was a teacher in public schools.

The first job which he held was handing out programs at the old Columbia Theatre way back in the horse and buggy days. He was delivery boy for Shreve's Jewelry and other jewelry stores here in the city. Following this, about the time of the great earthquake which disturbed his family materially, he was working for Western Union delivering telegrams. While the city was being rebuilt, transportation was of course very difficult. He reminisced over the fact and said that it was impossible to secure transportation to the proper destination of his telegrams. He said that there were times when he walked from Third and Townsend out to the old city jail, which was, incidentally, located on the present college site.

The best means of getting anywhere, that is in his case at that time, was to hop on behind buggies and horse drawn vehicles.

And now to the schools that have been included in his intellectual enlightment he attended the James Lick Grammar School.

When college days arrived, Dean Browne attended the University of Washington for two years, at the same time, incidentally as Bertha Keller, physical education instructor. While there, the dean was a member of the freshman basketball squad, and was also active in the Y. M. C. A. student work.

Upon completion of his freshman and sophomore years, he was transferred to the University of California.

The first World War broke into his scholastic training about this time, whereupon he enlisted and spent a year in army life. He was enlisted, he laughed, as a truck driver, but instead, they gave him a typewriter. He was made a drill sergeant while working with fellows from the Southern Mountain areas, whose abilities in the way of target practice far excelled other notable abilities. Following this he was transferred to Louisville, Kentucky, where he was commissioned a second lieutenant.

Even then, he was not sent overseas, he remarked, so it turned out that the war ended without his ever going "over there".

After he was discharged from the army, he returned to the University of California and attended there until he received his degree in the spring of 1919, but continued on in the summer session doing post graduate work.

He went to Puerto Rico as a tutor for a family with two little boys, and remained there for six months. When he was ready to return again to the states, he found that he couldn't obtain regular passage back, so he got a position on a freighter and worked his way back.

He served as an introducer of text books in Colorado schools for about a month, before coming back to California.

About this time, the "dean" married a school teacher from Southern Oregon, "Because," he said, "She had an excellent position," then laughed as only he can when kidding someone, and that person is not quite sure whether they are the victim of a subtle joke or not.

Among the teaching positions which he has held may be numbered the principalship in Yreka, California, high school. At Placerville, he was principal there for ten years.

"I love San Francisco," he said, "and rightly so, I suppose for I've lived here for off and on 40 years."

Together with his deanship here at the college, he is also attending Stanford at the present time, and is now in his third quarter there.

His first ambition was in following the ministry as a career, however, during the last war, he added, that the many things that he learned and the people that he met decided him in following his present calling.

With regards to the present world situation, he said, "I only regret that I am not young enough again to join in with these young fellows who are enlisting and doing their part. I'd certainly like to be "right in there" with them.

Perhaps it is his attitude toward world affairs and how they will affect the students here, that makes the whole student body all for him, for he knows or has talked to every student in the college at some time or other.

The College AND THE WAR

Even before Pearl Harbor, when the nation was in the throes of a huge defense drive, classes which contributed materially to what was to be a war effort were being conducted at the college.

In many technical and skilled trainings students were learning the trades that would help make victory more certain and more swift.

That was before Pearl Harbor. After December 7 the shift from training for defense to training for war was done with a minimum of effort and a maximum of efficiency.

Looking to expansion and greater training, new courses were planned into the curriculum. A proposed summer session materialized, a summer session to include those courses which students felt were most important to them, those coujses which would speed their graduation, and so their preparedness to meet whatever enemy might appear—whatever enemy, and wherever.

On this page and the one following are pictures showing what students have done with the opportubilities presented them in the interests of an American victory.

This page shows how students in classrooms and shops are taking up the challenge of the Axis—the challenge of production and training. This is a war of machines and knowledge. When the final victory is accomplished no small part of it will be judicially credited to the Colleges and Universities of America, from whose classrooms and laboratories came the impetus for victory.

The students appearing here are contributing as essential requisite as are men in the field. Some of them will eventually be called to that active duty. Others will perform the behind-the-lines duties so necessary. In almost every branch of fighting the college will have contributed to the winning of the war.

Education For Victory--The College's Contribution

By Claire Leeds

Designing dozens of special courses for adult and student groups, offering its facilities to naval trainees and civilian defense workers and contributing the services of many of its instructors to defense interests, the college has cooperated this semester to the fullest extent in the national war effort.

Twice a week, more than 180 firemen meet at the college for instruction in chemistry. Daily, a bus from Treasure Island brings 20 naval engineers to the college for classes in physics and mechanics. Six days a week, adult civil service students use the college radio workshop in training as radio repairmen for the army signal corps.

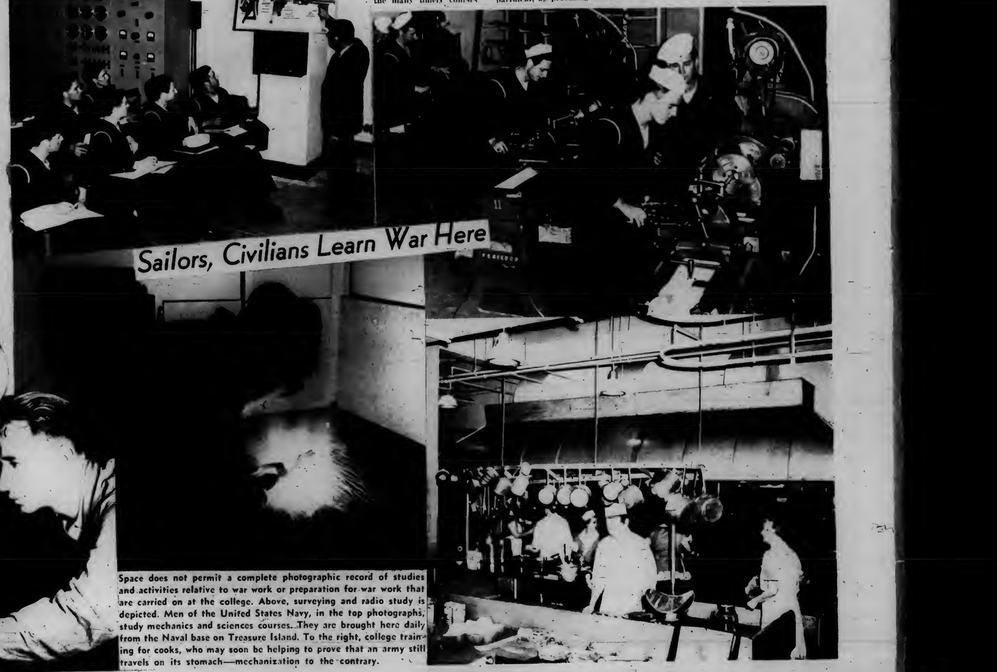
OFFICER TRAINING

Equally significant are the many timely courses offered to regular students at the college. A pre-army and navy officer training program includes courses in meteorology, navigation, Morse code, radio telegraphy, spherical trigonometry, and photography.

Nearly every department of the college has extended its curricula in some way to aid in the war effort. The hotel and restaurant division for example, has inaugurated new courses in canteen or communal feeding and nutrition. The floriculture division extends practical experience in home gardening, and instruction in landscape gardening.

REQUIRED FIRST AID

The physical education department has introduced elementary and advanced training in first aid. The elementary course is compulsory for all entering freshmen. The business department, by providing intensive, accelerated courses, is helping to meet the immediate demand for efficient office workers.



Other subjects included in this extensive war program are those in marine electricity, elite, recreation crafts, and civilian defense. The civilian defense course, valuable to all students, deals with air raid precautions. Extra-curricula activities such as voluntary knitting and sewing for the Red Cross are similarly important.

DISASTER RELIEF STATION

In addition to the special educational opportunities, the college building serves as the official Red Cross disaster-relief station for the entire West of Twin Peaks district. Store room on the ground floor of the college are filled with hundreds of blankets, cots, bandages, sutlets, and

Space does not permit a complete photographic record of studies and activities relative to war work or preparation for war work that are carried on at the college. Above, surveying and radio study is depicted. Men of the United States Navy, in the top photograph, study mechanics and sciences courses. "Buy A Ton"--Campaign Netted Seventy Five Tons

$15,000 Far Beyond Goal

Slow starts are not an indication of how successful a conclusion will be reached. Proof of this was given by the Freedom drive. First day's totals amounted to a little over $200, second day's totals were about the same. Certainly not an indication of great success.

But as students and faculty members became more and more conscious of what the drive entailed sales began to mount. Stamp sales began to climb. Then some one purchased an $100 war bond. Smaller bond purchases were also made.

Each day the barometer rose with greater leaps. Finally, one week ago, a student purchased a $5000 share in the war effort. That same afternoon Tommy Harris, who served as master of ceremonies and ad lib artist at the war rally, purchased an $1000 bond from Lucile Landresse, who had been chosen Liberty Queen for the day. Then total sales amounted to a little better than $12,000. Last week, final seven days of the three week campaign, another $3,000 dollars was gathered in. The Treasury Department of the United States has received in the neighborhood of $15,000 from the students and faculty of the college and their friends.

This total amounts to an average of several dollars per student. A similar expenditure on the part of the nation would probably give Mr. Morganthau complete and final satisfaction.

Student leaders following the lead of Jack Robinson, who fist mentioned such a drive in his Guardsman column, had not expected one quarter of the amount finally received. All concerned, including the Treasury Department, were pleasantly surprised.

War Rally Has Guest Stars

As an aid to the war drive, or perhaps as a reward for the co-operation shown, members of the campaign committee arranged a two hour rally for students at the El Rey theatre. Probably attended by more students than has been the case for any other similar function ever held at the college, the program included many of the city's well known and talented persons.

The rally was the longest ever held; planned for two hours, it ran well past that time. In many respects it was also the best. It presented more guest stars than ever before, more talent variety, first appearance of the college band—all to a largest audience.

To the right are photos of some of the people who donated their services. At the top Carlos Ramirez, baritone, who brought an exceptional voice and Spanish songs for approval; Shirly Dinsdale, ventriloquist, and her impudent companion Judy Splinters. Barbara Abbott is being led to the stage by two members of the rally committee. It was she who purchased a $5,000 war bond. Herb Caen, Chronicle columnist and radio wit; Ronnie Kemper, popular young orchestra leader now appearing at the Palace Hotel; Tommy Harris, co-operative master of ceremonies at the rally, singer, and now owner of a $1,000 war bond purchased in the college Freedom drive. Other photographs of performers who appeared are shown elsewhere on this page.

For the longest, largest, best attended rally, student opinion held that it was by far the most entertaining.

That's a familiar barometer! It's been on the wall opposite the first floor entrance for almost three weeks. This picture shows how things were going after about two days. Today that barometer is indicative of just what college cooperation can do. Last reports held that the red paint had overflowed the top at the $14,000 mark.

It was necessary for the war campaign committee to add length to the barometer once before because the support of the drive proved to be far beyond what had been expected.

The college's Buy a Ton of Freedom idea has been lauded by Treasury Department officials, one of whom, at the rally said, "I had intended to come and show you students how you could make a success out of this campaign, but from all the evidence I'm being shown instead."

other materials for disaster relief work. In the event of an air raid, the building may be quickly converted into an emergency hospital.

INSTRUCTORS IN DEFENSE

Aiding directly in the war effort are many present and former instructors at the college. Milton Pollssar, has organized the entire program of training for San Francisco's air wardens; Joseph A. Amori, is now instructing at Annapolis; Francis Colligan, is serving in the Department of State in Ecuador; Phebe Ward is training women for aircraft industries at San Diego.

Enlisted in the armed forces are former instructors Major Donald Atherton, in the United States Coast Artillery; Lieutenant Paul V. Wendell in the Commissary division at Ft. Lewis, Washington, Lieutenant John Hurley and Lieutenant Commander F. Grant Marsh serving in the cadet training program at the University of California; Captain Chester Clark in the Ordnance division at Los Angeles; Captain Winthrop Williams, with the Signal Corps at Ft. Benning, Georgia; Ensign Alden Smith in the Navy Intelligence Department at San Francisco; Ensign Wesley Musrio at Seattle, Washington; and Lieutenant Jack Gaddy, instructing in the Navy's physical education program at St. Mary's College.

The extension of all phases of the college program to meet the present emergency has in no way interfered with the regular schedule of courses. Education will be accelerated by the introduction of an eight week summer session for the first time in the history of the college. For the duration, the college has pledged itself to give to the war effort every available faculty.

Miss Peart, a singer who has newly launched her career, attended the rally along with Kemper. Her contribution was several popular songs.

INTRAMURAL FINALS TONIGHT

Intramural Finale In Gym; Coliseum Relays Tomorrow

FINALE OF SEMESTER'S SPORTS

Tonight's intramural sports program marks the first of its kind since the inception of the intramurals within the college, and in the meantime, will conclude the athletic activities for the spring.

The preliminary features, ping pong and volleyball, will start promptly at 7:30, with the finalists of the volleyball and basketball tournaments scheduled to take the floor immediately following.

Undoubtedly the main attraction and possibly the outstanding event of the evening will be the casaba contest between the Deadeyes and Spartans, who, at present, are tied for the conference championship.

Here the Deadeye speed, ball handling, and floormanship will match the slow, methodical attack of the Spartans. With diminutive Les Marcus at his very best, the Deadeye five should win the tussle by a comfortable margin.

With rugged Julio Gahn patroling the backboard, the Spartans, nevertheless, possess a highly impregnable defense, and when once aroused, can prove miserable opposition. Either squad is conceded a chance for victory by intramural followers.

So as to make the contest comparatively clean, Jack Brady has acquired Lloyd Leith and Ernie Bailey, by far the most competent officials of the Pacific Coast, to referee the game.

CLINKY STILL CHAMP

As was predicted throughout the United States, Helen Crlenkovich successfully defended her National AAU three meter springboard diving title at the Fairmont Plunge last week. Little competition was offered Helen, as she won easily from Victoria Taylor and Vivian Needham, who were the only contestants who ventured to dethrone the indoor champion.

AAU RELAYS TOMORROW

Tomorrow afternoon in the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, the Southern California AAU will stage its first annual relay championships. Some of the nation's leading spike artists are scheduled to make an appearance.

Most noteworthy are Cornelius Warmerdam, Hal Davis, Bill Smith, Leroy Weed, Ed Hertel, and Cliff Bourland, as well as lesser prominents.

Joe Batiste, colored Sacramento star, will uphold the northern part of the state, where he is one of the favorites to win both the high and low hurdles.

The relay teams will be headed by the 880 and mile quartets from the University of Southern California. The Trojan mile team of Kerns, Bourland, Thomas, and Wachtler comprise the strongest relay squad in America, and should approach the record made by the Maroon and Gold last year.

GOOD TO BAD, OR BAD TO GOOD

Strange how tracksters compete from Saturday to Saturday. Some may better their existing records and others may lower them. Take the case of Irving Moore, Santa Rosa pole vaulter, and Bib Likens, Glendale javelin thrower.

On successive Saturdays, Moore vaulted 14 feet, 13 feet six inches, and 13 feet, respectively. Every time he attempted to scale the crossbar, his height was lowered.

Now take Likens. On successive weekends, he threw the spear 200 feet, 211 feet, and finally 212 feet 11 7-8 inches. His last toss set a new national junior college record. This is one of the longest tosses made by a collegian on the Pacific Coast this year, and is only surpassed by the marks established by Bob Biles, California javelin artist. The northern coaches better watch the advances of Dean Cromwell, or else, he's a cinch Trojan.

WILSON WINS?

Finally after weeks of heated verbal attacks, Tom Wilson won his bet from Jack Brady. The argument at hand concerned basketball, as was mentioned in this column before.

The argument: Resolved: That if a player throws the ball in from under his own basket and unintentionally hits the backboard and is recovered by a teammate, should the ball be kept in play or should the ball be awarded to an opponent.

To prove his point, Wilson brought every rule book imaginable to the gym. As yet, Brady has not paid off the dollar wagered.

There has been a rumor floating around the gymnasium that Wilson, while catching for the College of Pacific baseball squad, wore his glasses outside of his mask. (Could this have been possible of our cage head?)

To top this off, while in a championship game, a high foul ball was hit between first base and home plate, with both Wilson and the first baseman charging towards each other frantically after the pellet. Instead of one signaling for the catch, they both crashed head on, and hence, there rested Wilson and his teammate comfortably alongside the foul line.

Boxing

Glinden Wins Close Bout; Ludlam KO'd

They threw in a million dollars worth of simon pure America last Friday night, and a lean, blond, 128 pounds of rapid-fire dynamite stole the show, and emerged with an unexpected three-round decision over Seisuke Akamine in the "feature" attraction of the college's semi-annual intramural - Associated Men Students' fistic carnival.

The kid's name was Eddie Glinden!

In what was built up to be a battle to finish all battles, Glinden, with the acclaim of the crowd behind him, staged a veritable whirlwind finish—holding off Akamine with a horizontal left, and coming inside to keep up an incessant barrage of right hooks to Akamine's chin.

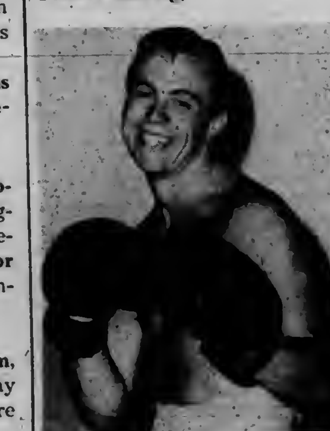
Fight Results:

Bill Steenberg dec. Peter Ceti; Bob Cavanaugh dec. Al Morris; Glinden dec. Akamine; Henry Lowe dec. Armand "Turk" Terzian; Don Sherba def. Joe Yamamoto; Tom Llewelyn TKO'd Ken Ludlam in the second round; Al "Duke" Drake dec. Jack Cedarlund; and Jim McGowan dec. Bryant Finch.

There was only one technical knockout recorded last week, and the victim of that one was Ken Ludlam, who caught one of Tom Llewelyn's short shots to the jaw. Although Ludlam had successfully weathered a furious first round barrage of Llewelyn right crosses, he folded in the second canto.

Steenberg In Easy Win

In the opening bout, Billy Steenberg, a stumpy southpaw slugger, outpunched Pete Ceti to win an easy three-round decision. Steenberg sent Ceti to the canvas in the third frame for a nine count.



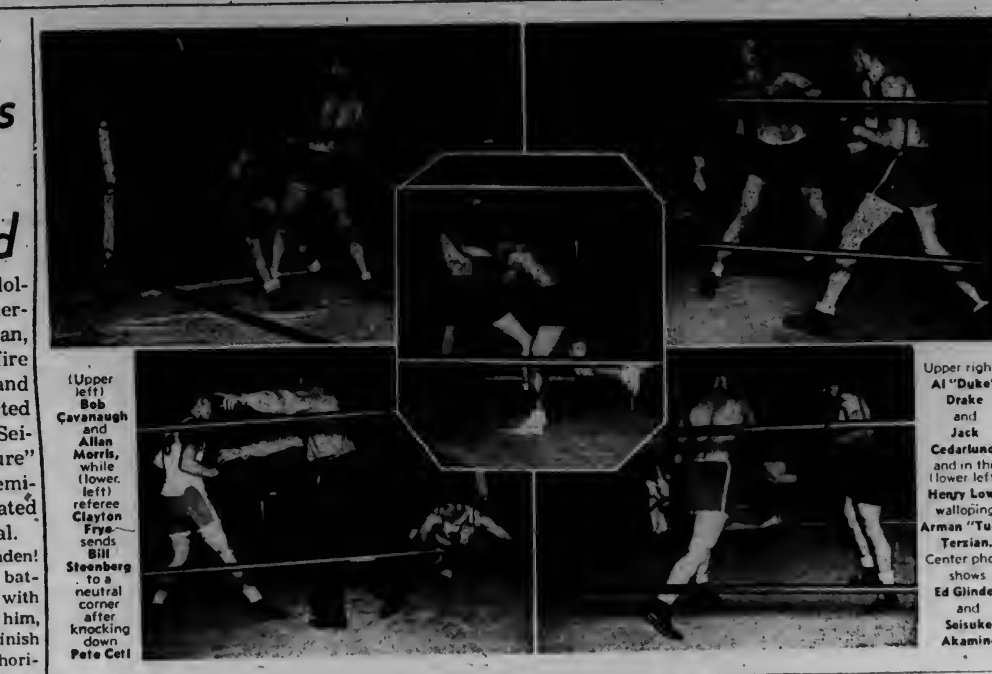
Despite being flailed to the canvas in the first and second rounds, Bob Cavanaugh won a questionable decision over Al Morris.

McGowan Wins Title

Al "Duke" Drake won his third straight intramural boxing crown when he handed Jack Cedarlund a three-round boxing lesson. Cedarlund, a fine boxer, lacked the telling force necessary to topple the hefty Drake to the canvas.

McGowan, the handsome, suntanned heavyweight, waltzed to an easy win over Bryant Finch. Finch gave a good account of himself, and at no time was he in any trouble from the repeated blows of the cagey McGowan.

New King



JIM McGOWAN, who defeated burly Bryant Finch for the intramural-AMS heavyweight title last Friday evening before a packed house at the men's gymnasium.

Crlenkovich Again Retains NAAU Indoor Diving Title

Amassing a grand total of 136.6 points, Helen Crlenkovich successfully retained her national women's senior three-meter indoor springboard diving championship last Friday evening at the Fairmont Hotel Terrace Plunge.

Although she had fully recovered from a recent siege of illness, the shapely champion completed her series of dives "under wraps." Victoria Taylor, 17-year-old diver competing under the colors of the Fairmont Plunge, captured second place with 104.9 points, while Vivian Needham, another teammate, placed third with 85.6 points.

WAA

Guests Entertained As Tourney Week Ends

By Dorothy Hogan

Climaxing a successful semester of activities, the individual clubs of the Women's Athletic Association have been participating in Tourney Week, during which final events were held and guests from high schools of the bay area were successfully entertained under the leadership of Janice Berch, president of the association.

Managers of the individual clubs and members of the council are to be congratulated for their good work in planning these affairs through this trying spring. This is the first year that Tourney Week has been so successful. Several more activities in addition to Tourney Week are being held this and next week, thus keeping interest in the club even at the end of the semester.

Bar-b-que Largest Event

Commencing the largest event of the semester was the Bar-b-que held at Sigmund Stern Grove, headed by Annell Branch. At this event food was served and entertainment in the form of movies of the American Youth Hostells was shown. Officials of the WAA are so impressed of the idea of hostelling after seeing the film that they are arranging to have a group membership card so that all members of the club may be entitled to go hostelling together.

The next event of the week was held Wednesday, May 13, with Washington High School representatives at a badminton tournament under the direction of Alvenise Shannon, club manager.

Representatives of Lowell High School were losers in the tennis match on Thursday, May 14, when the college was hostess under the able leadership of Stephane Porter.

Lead In Basketball

With our college in the lead, the basketball games were finished Monday, May 18, with girls of San Mateo participating. Lorraine Johnson, manager of the club, officiated, with Aileen Llorente, faculty member, assisting. At this event the WAA accepted the invitation of San Mateo to participate in a basketball and badminton playday, Monday, May 25.

To increase the amount of women bowlers, Dan Dorsey, sports editor of The News, is sponsoring a tournament for the junior colleges. Representatives of San Mateo and Marin will participate.

Tea Held

Congrats to members of the WAA in charge of the Hale America program held at the campus. It was a huge success and it achieved its purpose.

At last Tuesday' Mothers' Day Tea, with Dorothy Ann Kraul in charge, the new officers of the WAA were announced. They are Berta Reid, president; Audrey Turner, vice-president; Lorraine Johnson, secretary, and Francis Weesner, treasurer. At this event managers reviewed past events and presented awards.

Season Review

Athletic Season Fair; Tennis Title Won By Ram Racqueteers; Louie Cops NCJC Championship

By Bob Catudio

Tennis:

The failure of Marin Junior College to make a scheduled conference appearance, handed the college tennis team a "7 to 0" default win, enabling them to capture the coveted Northern California Junior College Team Tennis Championship. Members of this season's team who aided in bringing home the trophy included Joe Greeley, Roy Oakes, Ronald McArthur, Fred Griffin, George Amemiya, Al Clapp, Gene Barrados, and Tom Kellog.

Number one man for the Rams was Greeley, and he paired with Oakes, forming Coach Tom Wilson's top doubles duo. Save for the unexpected ineligibility of Griffin, the locals did exceptionally well.

Baseball:

Not a bad year, but it could have been better! When regular coach Jack Gaddy departed for Norfolk, Va., the locals were left in the middle of nowhere—and Lee Eisan, football coach, was appointed head coach. Because of an infraction of NCJCC rules, top hurler Andy Adams was declared ineligible. Frank Isola, Glen Claude, Ted Poage, Rinke Darrell, Lawrence Olteig, and Joe Buckley made up the Ram team.

Track and Field:

In the NCJC track 'n' field finale

JOE GREELEY

at Santa Rosa, the men of Coach Russ Sweet did their best and tallied 5/6 of a point, thanks to BOB Oyen's fourth place ties in the high jump and pole vault. Top performances this year included Dick Petch's 9.8 century; Jim Duryea's 160 foot javelin toss, and Burt Goebel's 6 foot 2½ inch high jump.

Swimming:

Under the able guidance of Coach Jim Jensen, the Rams were fortunate in even securing aquatorial opposition, meeting the College of Pacific-Stockton Junior College combined aggregation. Phil Delano, Maurice Richardson, Bill Hickey, Jim Byers and Tom Callahan comprised this season's small, but talented, squad.

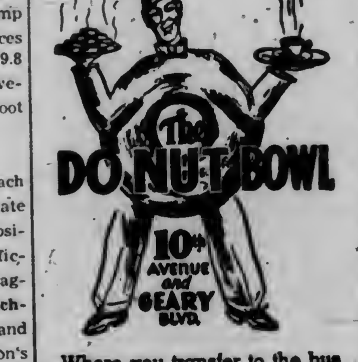
Basketball:

It just wasn't the locals' year, and the Rams wound up in the sixth place (or lower?) league slot. Top scorers for Tom Wilson's well-drilled varsity were Captain Mel Dropo and Jack Terry. The remainder of the squad included Bob Roberts, Ray Sulprizio, Alex Adorador, Norm Scheu and Ray Winter.

Golf:

Although they could not enter a four-man team at the divot final, Bob Epley turned back Ross Smith of Salinas 4 and 3 to place third in the individual match play. Oleg Baloff failed to compete, being declared ineligible one week before the finals.

Boxing:



At the NCJC boxing championships at Modesto this season, only Don Louie, 118-pound Chinese bantamweight, returned home with a title belt. Tom Llewelyn might have won save for an ironical act of one of the judges! Boxers on this season's squad included Ed Glinden, Seisuke Akamine, Jim McGowan, Henry Lowe, Al Drake, Bob Hemsted, Ken Ludlam, Hubert Athayde, Joe Yamamoto, Louie and Llewellyn.

Rifle:

Banging away for a grand total of 1,423, the college Rifle and Pistol team finished "in the middle" in the annual William Randolph Hearst Citizens' Marksmanship Championship for bay area weapon wielders.

Women's Athletics:

Helen Crlenkovich AGAIN defended her national indoor three-meter springboard diving championship, turning back Victoria Taylor and Vivian Needham—all three competing under the banner of the Hotel Fairmont Terrace Plunge.

Spartan Five Favorites In Cage Contest

Making its long awaited debut, the college presents its absolutely first ALL INTRAMURAL SPORTS NIGHT, to be staged tonight in the men's gymnasium commencing at 7:30 p.m., according to Jack Brady, faculty intramural director.

Feature attraction of tonight's Sports Night will be the cage contest 'twixt the Deadeyes and the Spartans.

RAM O'SCOPE

Left Forward:

Ray Shea of the Spartans is normally a guard. He stands an even six feet tall, and weighs an approximate 158 pounds. Shea is an excellent guard, plays a very consistent floor game and tanks his share of points. Able reserve is Captain Ted Samuel, who will start if Ray fails to show up tonight.

Leslie Marcus is a little fellow, but he plays a lot of basketball for his size. Ex-Balboa High School All-City 130-pound cager, Marcus is an amazing deadeye, an excellent dribbler, and one of the finest rebound men imaginable. How he ever gets up there among the taller giants is beyond this department. SLIGHT EDGE TO DEADEYES.

Right Forward:

Frisco Sartor, of the Deadeyes, is one of the more dangerous threats in tonight's contest. Sartor plays a rough style of ball, but he seems to obtain results. He is a cinch to tank anything inside the ten-foot mark, but he is a bit shy on guarding his opponent.

Johnny Quaccia, of the Spartans, is undoubtedly the roughest, toughest hombre in the league. Not a very graceful floor performer, Quaccia, by sheer force of power, tanks his share of digits. His main trouble, however, is not being able to keep his feet on the floor. EDGE TO SPARTANS.

Tonight's Program

Presentation of Intramural Awards.

Cage Referees: Lloyd Leith and Ernie Bailey.

Center:

Deadeye center, Frank Lavezzo, is one of those team players that comes by once in a lifetime—backboard artist, "hard" plugger, and spirit plus. This former Sacred Heart star is the backbone of the Deadeye defense.

Quite a contrast is Clyde Ramsey, who is almost the opposite of Lavezzo. Ramsey has the ability to cash in on a long one when his team is one or two points behind and he is a master at working the ball from the pivot post. EDGE EVEN.

Left Guard:

Julio Gahn, of the Spartans, is built along the lines of a midget Mack truck, but look out—the guy is clever, and speedy! Gahn is a scat dribbler, careful floor cavorter, and contains the ability to fake a man out of position, dribbling in the hole for a set-up. Gahn's replacement is Tom Kellog.

Deadeye guard, Aldo Bindi, is one of those fellows who'll gamble on the slightest chance. Bindi is weak on backcourt play, and tires easily. Bindi, once his team is behind, gets careless, but on occasions, has really gotten "hot." Bindi's replacement is a quiet, willing worker, Ralph Brown. EDGE TO SPARTANS.

Right Guard:

Ed Lapuyade, of the Spartans, doesn't look like a basketball player, but don't let that fool you. He's one of the speediest cagers in the circuit, and sticks to his man like a well-worn mustard plaster. Ed has the ability to diagnose oppositional offense, and is in the right place at the exact moment.

Bill DeMartini is a good little ball player, but lack of height and weight is a handicap. However, Bill is a scrapper, and occasionally, his aerial loopers score. EDGE TO SPARTANS.

Visitors

High School Seniors Introduced To College; Tour Building Prior To Registration Here

In an effort to interest more high school seniors in attending the college, and to afford them an opportunity to become better acquainted with it and the courses it has to offer, the college has been conducting a program of visitation for high school seniors, this week and last, according to Edward Redford, director of counseling and guidance.

Before the students were invited to inspect the campus and its facilities, Louis G. Conlan, college coordinator, Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, Lloyd Luckmann, faculty member, and Redford made a tour of all of the high schools in the city, inviting each of the senior classes to come to the college during Visitation Week.

Faculty Aids

Besides the delegated four, many faculty members visited the high schools individually. "George Washington, for example," declared Redford, "has had thirty-five members of our faculty to speak to the students about what the college has to offer its graduates."

In addition to counseling and visiting students, this affair has given the faculty an opportunity to know just what courses the probable new students would be interested in, and in this way will provide a means for supplementing some departments with new courses, if needed, he said. "One surprising turn," Redford said, "came when we discovered just how many of the Galileo high school group was interested in dramatics. Previously we had not given this field very much thought."

Seniors' Choice

The seniors were given a choice as to whether they wanted to visit at length the department in which they were most interested, or to arrange to visit different department with various offerings.

Associated Women Student guides were supplied to usher the guests about the building after the counseling program.

Tuesday's papers featured the heroic story of Jack Roger Himes, former San Francisco Junior College engineering student. Midst Jap anti-aircraft fire, Jap fighter planes and the fury of the attack on the Gilbert and Marshall Islands, Himes, 21 year old aviation machinist's mate, took over the controls of a navy bomber after the enemy had shot the pilot and five of the eleven man crew. With Himes at the stick the bomber returned to safety—we salute you Jack Roger Himes, KEEP 'EM FLYING!

College Judges

Pan-American Essay Contest Decision Made

In the judging of a national essay contest sponsored by the Inter-American Forum, and Pan-American Union, the three judges agreed unanimously on each of the three winners for the California division, Robert Parker, chairman of the judging committee for California, has announced.

The winners are Wayne Untereiner, McKinley Junior High School, Pasadena; Terry L. Baum, Beverly Hills High School, Beverly Hills, and Jean K. Neilson, Sutter Union High School, Sutter.

The contest, entitled "What Inter-American Relations Mean to My Country," offer prizes amounting to $10,000. Untereiner, the winner in California, will receive $50, and the three winning entries will be eligible for the national judging. The first national prize is a $6,000 scholarship in a South American school, Parker stated.

The judges for California are Parker, Archibald Cloud, president of the college, and Father Peter Dunne of the University of San Francisco.

This contest was open only to high school students, Parker pointed out.

The general committee consists of Parker, chairman, John Selig, William Goss, Lloyd Luckmann, all of this college, Drs. Paul Pitman, Harold Fraiser, Hubert Phillips, Theodore Treutlein, and Harold Braley, Parker listed.

Handy Alibis For Students

WHAT TO SAY:

When you are given an objective test: "It doesn't let you express yourself."

When you are given an essay test: "It's so vague. You don't know what's expected.

When you are given many minor tests: "Why not have a few big ones? This keeps you on edge all the time."

When you are given a few major tests: "Too much depends on each one."

When you are given no tests: "It's not fair. How can he possibly judge what we know?"

When every part of the subject is taken up in class: "O, he just follows the book."

When you are asked to study a part of the subject by yourself: "Why, we never even discuss it!"

When the course is in lecture form: "We never get a chance to say anything!"

When the course consists of informal lecture and discussion: "We never cover any ground."

When students present reports: "He just sits there. Who wants to hear the students? They don't know how to teach."

When detailed material is presented: "What's the use? You forget it all after the exam anyway."

When general principles are presented: "What did we learn? We knew all that before we took the course."

Graduation

Ceremonies For 350 Friday June 5

Graduation ceremonies for 350 students of the college will be held at the War Memorial Opera House, Friday evening, June 5 at 7:45 p.m.

Invitations may be secured at room 126. Speaking at the graduation will be F. Grant Marsh, former head of the business department now serving in the navy's cadet training program at the University of California; Borrie Hyman, last semester's Guardsman Editor; and Bernice Strube, former student of the college.

Graduates have been notified of the rehearsal, Friday, June 5 at 9 a.m. Graduates will be measured for caps and gowns at the rehearsal. There will be no rental charge for the caps and gowns. It is suggested that women wear dark street length dresses and dark shoes. Men should wear dark suits and dark shoes.

Graduates are urged to return postcards indicating whether they plan to attend rehearsal, the ceremonies, either or both. No diploma will be issued to students who do not return the postcards being mailed to them this week, J. Paul Mohr, registrar emphasized.

The information contained in the card is essential. There would be no way to know whether the student would be there or not, Mohr said, or whether to provide a cap and gown and diploma.

College Cafeteria Unable To Renew Its Supplies

Because of priorities, the college cafeteria will be unable to purchase any more silver or china-ware for at least five years.

This fact makes clear the reason for the pleas of the cafeteria management that the students refrain from taking any implements from the cafeteria.

Attention Students!
LIMITED CAFETERIA SERVICE
DURING FINALS
(May 28 - June 1, Inc.)
Hours: 11 A.M. to 1 P.M.

Subject to change by announcement.

Students are asked to faithfully observe the following rules set down by the management with regard to cafeteria conduct:

1. Use no more silver than is absolutely neeessary.
2. Piek up any silver that has been dropped.
3. Do not take any china or silver from the cafeteria.
4. Do not cover the trays with luneh remnants, but place them in a convenient trash reeeptacle.

College Women Contribute To City Red Cross Service

A sum total of 129 pieces of work have been contributed by women of the college, to the San Francisco chapter of the American Red Cross. Under the direction of Claire Cuneo, the women have made 58 sweaters, 15 scarves, 25 dresses, 15 beanies, and 16 squares for the afghan.

In order to receive a service pin, one must complete 120 hours of work. Iki Yamamoto finished six sweaters and would have received her award had she not left school. For sweaters, women are allowed 20 hours of work; for scarves, 10 hours; for dresses, 9 hours of work; for beanies, 6 hours; and for squares, 2 hours.

Full Time Defense Jobs Open To College Students

Full time jobs in defense industries and in the business field are readily available for students having any ability in those fields, Claude Silva, chairman for the college placement bureau, predicted this week.

For students attending summer session, some part-time jobs will be available both here, and in the Eastbay for Oakland students, Silva said.

The placement bureau has successfully placed many students in part-time employment this semester and during the last month, adopted the new practice of securing jobs in the Eastbay for the benefit of students living there.

Registration For Summer School Still Being Taken

The first college summer session will be held from June 22 to August 14, and registration will continue until the opening date, according to Mary Jane Learnard, college registrar.

Information about the courses offered may be obtained any time the student registers.

Galileo, Girls' High, Lincoln Graduates Noted

By Bob Catudio

Galileo High School graduates, attending this college, are just as active, if not more, than students from any other high school in the city. This means participation in social affairs, sports, student government, and clubs and organizations.

One of the leading organizations at this college is the Chinese Students' Club, whose membership boasts of 125 members this semester. Former Galileans on this semester's group include Sam Chew, Sam Chinn, George Chinn, Ida Dear, Margie Dong, James Hoo, Annie Lee, and Elsie Young.

Matilda Mortigia, a librarianship major, was selected last semester's Sophomore Sweetheart, and is a member of the Ice-Skating Club; Inge Lubahm, a physical education major, is active in both ice-skating and the Rifle Club; while Margaret Egan, a College of Commerce major, is also active in the Ice-Skating Club.

More than 650 of our students trek to Balboa Park from the east bay. The largest representation is from Berkeley High, Oakland, Roosevelt, McClymonds, Technical, Castlemont, Fremont, University, Alameda, Albany, Piedmont, Richmond Union, San Leandro and Hayward Union all have alumni at this college.

An organization which offers many opportunities for its members is the college honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma. Graduating high school students entering this college are welcome to join the Alpha Gamma Sigma, provided they attain the necessary prerequisites. Galileans on this semester's honor society include Robert Arnold, Mary Batey, Edward Montani, Andree Teel, a pre-medical major, is a member of Pi Mu Gamma Edna Price, and Emeline Short, sorority, and is active in the Women's Athletic Association; Robert Arnold, a business major, is a member of the college band, and is out for tennis and ice-skating; Mary Batey, a Letters and Science major, is active in WAA affairs, mainly, basketball.

Former Galilean athletes competing for the college include Joe Costa, Bob Rebholtz, Dave Williams, (baseball); Tom Kellog, (tennis); and George Yamaguchi, (track and field). Intramural competitors include Kellog, Aldo Bindi, Utaka Koizuma, Bob Piva, John Massara, Ted Samuel, Ray Shea, Charles Rolf, Jack Skinner, Pete Bagoto, and Julio Gahn, who was selected on this semester's ALL-INTRAMURAL basketball team.

Jack Skinner, a member of Beta Phi Beta fraternity, is this semester's high sophomore president. Two members of the Rifle Club include Owen Filer and Jack Argens, while Marion Helbing participates in archery under the WAA.

Guardsman staff members from Galileo High School include Barbara Bucher, news reporter; Bennie Chin, photographer; and Bill Quandt, who formerly was a member of the staff, being a photographer several semesters ago.

Galileans selected their popular major subjects to be English, Chemistry, Electrical Technical, Pre-Medical, General College, and Aviation. Other leading majors include Art, Journalism, Pharmacy, Home Economies, and Pre-Nursing.

Of the total number of 218 Galileo graduates now attending this college, 90 students participated in a recent inter-school poll, which revealed the fact that Galileans selected 27 different major subjects—from Agriculture to Speech.

* * * *

More than 30 per cent of the graduates of the Abraham Lincoln High School last graduation are now attending this college. Fifty per cent of those students have selected business as their major subject.

Students with business majors include Betty Freed, Paula Hart, Dorothy Rock, and Peter Holmes; Robert Pocorny, a drafting major, is a member of Phi Lambda Phi fraternity; while Alex Vucetich, an aviation major, is a member of the Rifle Club.

Ex-Mustang athletes competing in college sports include Enzo Belli, Louis Fortro, and Pocorny, all of whom are out for basketball. The popular major subjects are Aviation, Business, Merchandising, and English.

Winifred Graber, an English major, is this semester's editor of the college Forum magazine, and is a member of the Forum Club; Joy Tuck, a bacteriology major, is the lone Girls' High School graduate member of the Chinese Students' Club; and Adele Vidal, a floricultural major, belong to the Floriculture Club.

Doris Smith, a pre-nursing major, is a member of the college A-Capella choir, and is an active WAA basketball player, and the lone member of the college honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma, is Florence Nunijiri. Students selecting business as their major subject are Jane Mangal, Mary Milinovich, and Rachael Phillips.

Doris Chester, a pre-medical major, is out for swimming and tennis, and Lucile Valentine, a radio-speech major, is active in WAA activities, mainly, badminton. There were no favorite majors denoted among Girls' High School graduates, save Business.

Counseling

Guidance Bureau Final Meet Today At 2 p.m.

As a climax to yesterday's college guidance and counseling bureau meeting, this same organization will hold its final meeting of the semester today, in Room 136, starting at 2 p.m., Edward H. Redford, chairman of the group, disclosed this week.

Those students who are graduating this semester, and those students who are seeking summer employment, are urged to attend today's meeting, Redford said. So that students might hear first-hand information, the college guidance bureau has solicited the services of many chief labor representatives.

Meeting Yesterday

Yesterday's meeting featured talks by May P. Carmody, representing the United States Employment Service; Margaret Flournoy, faculty representative; Don Jensen, student representative; Katherine Koford, United States Civil Service Commission, and Claude Silva, college placement director.

All lockers in the science building must be vacated on or before Friday, May 29. Students who have locker keys, are urged to turn them in Edward H. Redford's office, Room 148. The college will not be responsible for articles left in lockers after May 29.

What Jobs Are Available, and Where to Apply for Them, is today's theme, and much of today's meeting will consist of various methods of applying for a position.

Students May Attend

The registrar's office has authorized instructors of 2 o'clock classes to permit individual students or entire classes to attend the conference. These students will report to their regular classes, and then will be excused when roll is taken. At the conference they will be given a ticket which they are to bring back to class with them at the next session.

College Men

Enlistment In Marines Now Possible

College freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors between the ages of 17 and 26, inclusive, are now eligible to apply for the United States Marine Corps, according to word just received from Marine Headquarters by President Archibald J. Cloud.

Accepted applicants will be enlisted at the San Francisco offices of the service, assigned to inactive service pending graduation in due course of time, and exempted from induction into the Army by Selective Service. The present plan provides that these enrollees will, upon graduation, be assigned to active service, transferred to Quantico, Virginia, and trained for a period of time in the Candidates Class. Those who pass the course will receive their commissions and will be assigned to an Officer's School for further training before being transferred to the troops.

Applicants are required to appear at Marine offices in the city for physical examinations, interview and enlistment. They should bring with them the following: passport photograph, dated and signed on the back; a letter from the registrar or dean showing that the individual concerned is duly and regularly enrolled as a student; specific college in which enrolled as a student; the course in which applicant is majoring; the degree sought, if any; a letter of recommendation from responsible men of the applicant's home community, his birth certificate, or certified copy of the individuals scholastic record in college.

Married men must have the consent of the wife for enlistment, and men under 21 years of age must have the consent of their parents.

Lowell High alumni outnumbered all others in this secester's low freshmen class; total number 102. George Washington High School sent 78, Polytechnie 66, Galileo 60, Commerce 52, Balboa 47, Mission 41

Letter To The Editor-- Democracy Threatened

—why can't we use a system of selection with a democratic foundation?—we voted for a girl, who without the benefit of advanced fanfare and publicity, qualified by a great majority as a candidate for the final elections. Yet she was not allowed to run.—But our plans were thwarted by the contest officials, who fumed and fussed to find a ruling (they didn't) and finally decided to ignore the voice of the majority.

Please don't interpret this letter as an insult or in any way an insinuation that the other candidates weren't beautiful and well qualified.

(Added editor's note: So that the unsuspecting and perhaps sympathetic reader may not be led astray, a few pertinent facts should be revealed. The letter bears the signature 101 common men, and offers, with the 40 odd initials, the names of all those concerned.

The author, who by the way, wished very much that the woman in question should win, went out of his way to put his wishes over.

The author speaks of demoeratic methods being thwarted—well, the true reason why the thwarted miss received so many votes was because men were button-holed at the polls and asked, for the sake of friendship, or who knows what, to write in a candidate.

The whole affair is rather silly. If the candidate wanted to run her name should have been entered. That would have been simple. But the method used was illegal in the light of previously established rules—and appealing here for fair play is putting a comical situation in the limelight.)

Class Elections

Present Class Election Practices Rendered Obsolete By Addition Of New Set Of Voting Rulings

Under the guidance of class counselors and directed by Warner Kroll, a new system of class elections is to be introduced this semester, it was announced at yesterday's introductory rally.

Upon the suggestion of Bill Steenberg, Associated Student president, the members of the college Executive Council took steps to eliminate the old system of selecting class leaders.

In the past, pointed out Steenberg, our class elections have been very poor and inefficient. We hope to correct that this semester by inaugurating a new method by which the students of the campus may select their student class leaders.

Steenberg also noted that in the past almost any student could vote in any class election he wished, and that on several occasions students of one standing have been elected officers in a class above or below them.

Bill Steenberg heads the student body succeeding Dick Shacht who has since left the college

New Election System

The system to be used this semester is as follows:

1. All students desiring to compete for a class office must register for that office in the student body room.
2. All candidates must prove their class standing and show an Associated Student card at the time of registration.
3. All candidates for the office of president will give two minute speeches at the forthcoming elections.

Registration for class offices started yesterday and will continue until next Wednesday at 12 noon.

The new system will establish a greater feeling of competition, and

Registrar

Study List Must Be Filed Before Attending Class

Students who have not completed their study list filing will not be allowed to remain in classes today, the registration office announced.

Study list filing has been proceeding in the library. Warning is given students by Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, that they are not eligible to enter classes without proof of study list filing.

Hotel Dance

Honor Low Freshman Class At St. Francis Dance, October 2

Concluding a week's activities of orientation, an Associated Student dance, honoring the low freshman men and women, will be held next Friday evening, October 2, from 9 to 12 o'clock, at the Hotel St. Francis Colonial Room, Lucille Landresse, social chairman, disclosed this week.

Music for the affair will be furnished by Eddie Murphy. Murphy has played for several college dances before, and is quite well known to the students. The dance is to be semi-formal. This means street dresses for the women and suits for the men.

Student Card Admits

Admission will be by student body card only, and it was indicated that the "no corsage" rule will be in affect. Lately there seem to have been a few students who attend these stag. Hotel dances are meant strictly for couples, and "stags" will not.

"The dance will be held before first period midterms," reminded Miss Landresse, "and so every student should have an opportunity to attend. This will be the first hotel dance of the semester and we hope it will be the "best ever"."

Militia

State Guard Plans ROTC For Students

A request has been made by Major James Lang of the California State Guard that men of the college be afforded an opportunity to take military drill, according to an announcement made by President Archibald J. Cloud.

The State Guard can furnish training personnel and possibly some equipment, Major Lang declared. The National Guard armory would serve as a drill hall if a sufficient number of enrollees appeared.

Need College R.O.T.C.

Although the federal government has never recognized a Junior College R.O.T.C., the college at one time had such an organization, but the band was dismissed when the National Guard took over the local armory.

A sign-up for those interested will be held in Room 121 from September 24 to September 30, inclusive. If a sufficient number of students are interested a general meeting will follow, in order to explain the program and take actual enlistments.

This group, if formed, will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 11 o'clock and one-half unit of credit will be allowed for participation.

Adult Evening Class Opened By Floraculture Department

Gardening classes for adults interested in improving their homegrounds is being offered by the college floriculture department in a series of evening classes.

Landscape Design is scheduled for Thursday evening from 7 until 9 o'clock. Vegetable Gardening is a new information course on Monday evenings, or Tuesday mornings, or Wednesday afternoons. No tuition or textbook is required.

Interested parties should contact the Registrar's office by telephone or in person. Instructor Harry Nelson is in charge.

Pilots Live Air-Minded Life

Flying majestically in the clouds, these army air-ships designate the finest in flying equipment available to young men who enlist in the air corps of the United States. Representatives of the Marine Corps, Navy, Army and Coast Guard will outline all of the points of interest to young men who soon face service in any of the military services Monday morning when the joint procurement board addressed all men students.

Military Chiefs In Joint Meeting With College Men 9:30 This Morning

This morning the Joint Procurement Board will begin its two-day visit to the campus for the purpose of counseling the students of this college on the problem of enlistment in the various Reserve Officers Training Corps.

Representatives of the Army, the Navy, the Marines, the Coast Guard, the Navy Air Force and the Army Air Corps will be on hand to address an assembly of all the men.

Assembly In Gym

The assembly will be held in the Men's Gymnasium at 9:40 a.m. All nine o'clock classes will meet as scheduled to be dismissed during the period for the purposes of this meeting.

Attendance at the conference is required of all the men of the college as it will be the only assembly of this nature to be held during the present semester.

Interviews Slated

According to Edward H. Redford, Head of the Department of Guidance and Counseling, the representatives of the various branches of the armed services will be available for individual interviews Monday afternoon, September 29 and all day Wednesday, September 30. Students who make appointments for interviews will be excused from any classes that conflict with this procedure. Mr. Redford urges those students who plan to avail themselves of the opportunity to make arrangements to have their parents meet the procurement officers at the same time.

Medical examinations will not be administered during this visitation by the board. Later in the semester possibly during the month of October, medical officers representing the various services will be stationed at the college to make the necessary physical check-ups. When this procedure is completed the students who have been accepted by the doctors will be eligible for enlistment in the various Reserve Corps.

College Staff

Lieut. G. Conlon, Coordinator of Educational Management, has been appointed by President Cloud to act as liaison officer between the college and the Reserve Corp of the War and Navy Departments. Assisting Conlan will be Louis Berman (Aviation) and George Green, members of Dr. Redford's counseling staff. Enlistees will look to these men for the solution of problems that might arise in connection with their military service while at college.

Every college man is urged to avail himself of the unusual convenience that is afforded by the Joint Procurement Board's visit. "It would take many days and hours for the individual student to make the contacts and obtain the information that is made so available by this procedure," Cloud and Conlan gave further emphasis to Redford's counsel, saying students should make every effort to have their parents discuss the college reserve programs with the recruiting officers in order to avoid any regrettable decisions that might be made in haste."

College Approved

The college has been approved by the Air Forces, the Army, Navy, Marines and Coast Guard, as a Reserve Officer Training Center. Students who avail themselves of the opportunities offered by the departments of mathematics, physics, geography, radio, astronomy and engineering will be particularly well equipped for military training, according to Conlan. "Those students who fail to meet the physical requirements of Officer Training still have the obligation to seek the advantages found in these departments," said Conlan, "in the event that they are called by Selective Service." The Army is running far behind its needs for trained men in radio, communications, automotive mechanics, and general engineering abilities, according to reports.

Students who attended the lecture presented by Superintendent John Brady on last Tuesday are fully aware of the responsibility born by the college man in wartime and it is anticipated that the meeting set for Monday and Tuesday next will be a

War Duty

Thirty One Leave College Faculty To Serve Nation

Thirty-one members of the college faculty are on leave from their regular duties this semester, the large majority of whom are in military and government service.

Since the close of last semester, three men have entered the armed forces, Ward Nichols, comptroller and business division head was appointed Lieutenant in the Navy; Harold Leuenberger, head of the department of tests and measurements, is with the Army, a lieutenant on the adjutant generals staff; and Don Perham enlisted with the Army quartermasters.

Women Aid War Effort

Phyllis Haley, psychology instructor, is on part-time leave with the San Francisco Civilian Defense Office, assisting in their training program. Phebe Ward has taken an extended leave to organize a new personnel classification for the Ryan Aeronautical Laboratories.

Assisting the government in special research work are Glen Camp, Henry Ralston, and Manfred Mueller. Camp is working on physical research for the Navy; Ralston is devoting himself to physiological research at the University of California Hospital, in San Francisco; and Mueller is with California's Nobel Prize winner, Dr. Ernest Lawrence, at Berkeley. (Mueller is on two-thirds leave from the college, and will carry on the rest of his time in the Chemistry department.)

16 Men On Military Leave

Sixteen men are now on military leave and seven are in the employ of the federal government as civilians. Army officers include Lieut. Cols. McFarland and Atherton, Captains Hughes, Hurley, Clark, Gabbert, and Williams, and Lieut. Leuenberger and Officer Candidate Perham. With the Navy are Commander F. Grant Marsh, Lieuts. Smith, Amori, Gaddy, Muscio, Nichols and Jensen. Stationed with various agencies of the federal government are Francis Colligan, Cultural Attache to the American Embassy in Quito, Ecuador; John Ross with the OEM at Washington, D. C.; Benjamin Pavone, with the Provost Marshall, West Coast Region; Lowell Hollingsworth, stationed at Massachusetts Institute of Technology at Boston, Camp, and Venter.

Welfare Committee

Various Salvage Drive Plans Made By College Welfare Group

Announcing that plans are underway for an all-out participation in organized war efforts, Bob Ervin, chairman of the welfare committee, urges all fraternities and clubs to modify their social programs in the interest of general cooperation.

Ervin expects that the college will be better prepared this semester than ever before to take the leadership in the various drives and campaigns sponsored by such federal agencies as the Treasury Department, the Office of Price Administration, and various welfare agencies such as the Community Chest, Red Cross, and war relief societies.

War Spirit Cited

Evidence of the "war spirit" which pervades the college is found in the Bond Drive of last semester which netted over $18,000, the establishment of Army, Navy, Air Corps, Coast Guard and Marine Reserve Programs, curtailment of Associated Student activities such as football, publications, social activities and forensics.

At present, Ervin proposes to direct all efforts to a Salvage Drive for the collection of old garments (which incidentally must be cleaned) furs, hosiery, scrap paper, and metals.

"Books for Service Men will probably key-note the initial efforts of the welfare committee," said Ervin, "with work getting under way next week."

Dean Supports Program

In support of Ervin's program, Dean Edwin C. Browne said that he expected "all students would continue to demonstrate the spirit which the responsibility for winning this war demands." "Formal parties, orchids, and other peace-time frills will be set aside," said the Dean, "and the women, as well as the men, will make thrift and conservation the keynote of the times."

The Dean expressed the hope that students will solve the transportation problems attendant upon their social functions by making greater use of public carriers and relying less upon the family car.

Parking Warning Issued

Issuing a general warning to all students, Dean Edwin C. Browne calls attention to the regulation that parking anywhere but on Phelan Avenue is illegal. Until the present construction is completed students are asked not to park their cars off the pavement near the building.

Those drivers who do not cooperate with the administration in this matter will be tagged by the San Francisco Police and the result will be an appointment with the Traffic Fines Bureau at the City Hall.

College Honor Group Cites Member Record

Students who have maintained a standard of 30 grade point units are encouraged to enroll in the Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college honor society, Alice Cooper, group adviser, disclosed this week.

For the past few semesters, the Alpha Gamma Sigma has been extremely active in aiding students of the college in their studies. Coaches have been volunteers from both the faculty and the honor students.

Membership is gained into the society by the acquisition of 30 grade points, or the approximate of a B average in a single semester while at the college. Students enrolling in the college from high schools, and bearing red seals, are invited into membership, but must maintain their scholastic standards in the college.

A student belonging to the society for three semesters at the college is given permission to become a permanent member. During last semester, there were a total of 126 students enrolled in the society, according to Miss Cooper.

College Draws Plans To Make Student Jobs

College students may soon realize the opportunity to finance their college education in a plan which is now being drawn up by several members of the college administration.

Under the proposed plan, a student may finance his education for the entire time while in school. Approval of the plan is now being solicited from San Francisco financial institutions, industrial organizations, and the local civil service department for half-day employment of junior college men and women.

Students who wish work will be tested on his or her aptitude toward the position, his likes and dislikes, and program arrangement for part-time work in the position he has chosen will be selected.

Students may learn more of this plan by calling, in person, at the college employment bureau, Room 155, between the hours of 9 and 12 o'clock, Monday to Friday.

Free Schools Depend On Peace . . . Cloud

By A. J. Cloud, President

TODAY, free schools are open in America, but in far too few other areas of the globe. San Francisco Junior College has begun its new semester, offering very real advantages to a relatively large enrollment. Yes—true enough—understood by all!—(you may think or say). Grasp, then, this other idea, startling, and almost incredible: the continued existence of these free schools depends wholly upon the achievement of one high, unalterable, and dominant purpose —Our Winning of the War and Our Winning of the Peace.

COLLEGE AIMS RE-DIRECTED

Education as usual no longer exists for us. The war situation demands that colleges maintain training programs for employment in the war industries and the armed forces; that they promote health and physical efficiency; protect lives and property; sustain morale; and, especially, that they explain the issues of the war and the aims and ideals of cooperative living in a representative democracy, both during the war and after peace has been concluded. This college has dedicated itself to that program. Its policies are being progressively re-directed to achieve those ends.

Dr. A. J. Cloud

STRIVE FOR COMMON GOAL

With regard to activities of the student association, clubs, and similar societies, it is recommended that they, too, engage in war-services and that they respond to war-duties. To illustrate, they may well aid in raising funds toward the financing of the war, and in the collection and conservation of salvage materials; and may well cooperate with the varied civilian defense agencies in carrying out war-time community obligations. In general, groups and individuals constituting the student body, as loyal Americans, will resolve to make any type of sacrifice demanded in reaching the common goal.

GAIN NEW BALANCE

The college authorities realize that students in these days are faced with many complex and baffling problems. An organization has been effected in the college whereby students may readily meet and counsel with experienced members of the faculty who will be found competent to give them the benefit of their judgment and friendly advice.

This message is serious in tone, I know, just as the present crisis is the gravest to occur in our history as a nation. I can and do, however, in closing, most heartily welcome all students registered at the college.

As President Roosevelt says, "Work—work with all the moral and spiritual values that go with work." Your work lies definitely before you.

For Victory

What You Can Do

UNITED STATES War Bonds and Stamps are today's best bet to share in the war effort of America—along with the front line troops, the men in the defense plants, and the generation that will be tomorrow's citizens.

Last semester the college finance office sold more than $18,000 worth of the greatest financial security offered in U.S. history. The money that comes out of the average citizen's pocket does more than assure him of a profit at the end of ten years.

It sends equipment to the men in the front line trenches scattered throughout the world; it is a rampart against disunity and defeatism; and it is ample proof that the war has become a home effort as well as a battle on some distant Pacific island.

The Hitlers and Hirohitos may sneer at the mild assuredness of the American people, but in the end, this good-natured attitude of the once hard-hearted Yankee will outlast every blast and ridiculing statement the Axis Powers may make.

There is no guarantee that the war will terminate earlier because of the purchase of Bonds and Stamps, but in these times of stress, there is no guarantee of a tomorrow, either! The Secretary of the Treasury has appealed to the people. He has offered no promise the like of which he cannot fulfill. The war will be long and costly and it will take dollars and more dollars to protect the life of some democratic fighting soldier.

Whether he is the kid next door, or the man across the street, he is protecting you with his life, not yours. It is the life of the Southerner, the New Englander, the Mid-Westerner, and the Far Westerner.

This is America's life you will be protecting. No one should be asked to contribute; he should do so voluntarily, and of once. The slightest delay may mean the difference between all-out-victory or crushing defeat. You can help ease that thought by deciding now.

Security or uncertainty are insignificant words to expose to the American people, but they are the only words which may prognosticate the road we will take to after the war. Let's hope it is not the latter road.

Charles Cotesworth Pinckney had an idea. He expressed it in "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute." He is correct on every count, save for the lack of stress and importance others placed in his words.

The main defense of America today is War Bonds and Stamps . . . which may some day be the offense of America tomorrow. Defense is expressed in a united people eager for the opportunity to strengthen the qualities which has made them a leader among nations.

FROM WHERE I SIT . . .

SOMETHING NEW . . .

This first issue of The Guardsman inaugurates the start of many a new feature. Readers will no doubt recall the many choice experiences of one Doug Johnson, who formerly held this spot with his SHOTS AT RAMdom.

Any persons with high hopes of finding mention of the Black Cat, the Iron Pot, schooners and wharves, and etc., will be sadly disappointed, for no one person could establish themselves in that "local color" as did Doug, not even such a character as yours truly.

SOMETHING OLD . . .

Nothing older than Man's criticism of the weaker sex. Womankind is such a strange, strange thing!

For years now, the lassies of this campus have been seeking the answer to "Where can I find glamour, toujours, glamour?" At first the fad was "A-La-Lake" with hair, preferably blonde, hanging or drooping over one or both eyes.

It could have been an accident, or perhaps someone went wild with a pair of shears, for the "Victory Cut" has come into its own! Not that the new style isn't becoming (to some), but these women who attempt such a operation themselves—nothing more should or could be said!

SOMETHING BORROWED . . .

From Herb Caen come "In One Ear' . . . Boy, she weighs a hundred and plenty . . . Yeah, you're a cute kid, but what's in it for you? — likes kids! . . . Are you sure he isn't standing in a hole? . . . I'm telling you it's conditions, they're bad all over . . . A Stanfordman's brother is an accurate fascimile—too accurate! . . . September is the month in which picnics planned for August become clambakes planned for October . . . You mean she talks, too? . . . No, he isn't wearing a snood, it's his 'local cut.'

SOMETHING TRUE . . .

It seems that the administration of the college is feeling very gay over the recent enrollment of freshmen. With sad eyes they watched the new students trek up the hill to sign registration cards. Imagine their surprise when the number of expected students doubled itself!

Amazing as it may seem, the men students predominated, and for a short time, it looked as though there might be a stampede. For the first time in many months the women of the college saw new hope for the future!

Of course these new male populants are a little young, but then the girls will probably realize that they are much better than a man with only three toes and no hair!

Even the fraternities have taken on new hope, and things look bright for a fast-moving, go-getting college season, providing, of course, that the women students don't get the bright idea of installing these men for their own "purposes."

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Helpful Suggestion Given; Freshman

Editor, The Guardsman:

I am one of the new students registered at the college here, and I was told that perhaps The Guardsman could help me.

My problem is simple, but nevertheless sincere. Who, incidentally, are the student officers who make up the government of the college student affairs? How is it possible for myself, and the many others in my same predicament to find out who they are, and what position they hold?

Is it permissible for new students in the college to be nominated for office, and how do they go about it?

Thank you for your consideration in this matter.

Harry M.

Editor's Note: As for being introduced to the student officers, The Guardsman will run a story about this little item; and for the other angle, the prerequisite remains, as always before, membership in the Associated Students; a certain scholastic standing; and the desire of other students for you to hold the position which you want.

Editor, The Guardsman:

I have just heard that we are going to have only one issue of the paper every two weeks. I think that this will meet with very many antagonistic results.

I can remember when we had two papers a week. I realize that there is a war going on and that there is a shortage on everything.

I also realize that our budget is very low. A paper every two weeks is going to be just like no paper at all.

With so many activities at the college as we have, you couldn't possibly save it all for two weeks and put it in The Guardsman.

I have thought of a plan that may solve this question. Why not put out a smaller paper once a week? In this way, the students can follow, what is going on in the college without waiting for two weeks and then see that something happened and then will say, "Gosh, I didn't know about that!"

I know that I speak for the majority of the students, so will you please read this letter over and give it some serious thought.

Joe S.

Editor's Note: We also learned, Joe, that we were to have but one paper every two weeks with quite some misgiving. However, if it does work out that we will have only this, the news which we will print will not be past history, but a forecast of events and activities to follow. The idea which you present is perhaps a solution, but, we shall see.

The Editor, Sir:

The great demands that are being made upon the transportation facilities which serve the college make it impossible for classes an exhausting and tiring trek.

As the Muny bus rambles along Phelan Avenues, and we catch a glimpse of the long string of parked cars, some of us have wondered if each car carries its full load of passengers each day.

Why doesn't someone start a bureau, or something, to SHARE THE RIDE? —Many downtown offices have made simple surveys of their forces and have begun such projects. No one would want a "free hitch" at these times, and most of us are anxious to go more than half-way to support a "swap-ride" plan.

We Knew Them When . . .

by Hayworth

LOOKING back through old Guardsman issues, it comes to our minds that perhaps it would be an interesting venture to find out what has happened to the students who have more or less made the headlines in our publication through some act or worthwhile enterprise. To these fellow students with whom we have shared numerous or few college hours, this column will for this semester be dedicated.

We shall endeavor to include as many of these students as possible throughout the semester, and if any reader is interested in hearing the whereabouts of a former classmate, now in service, please notify us. (suggestions left at Room 134) and if it is at all possible, we shall try to help him. (Please remember, however, this space will be reserved especially for those fellows who have during recent months become a part of the armed forces of our country.)

REMEMBER . . .

Doug Johnson, who for the past two semesters has done such an excellent job of writing Shots at Ramdom. To us who have known him, Doug was and is quite a character. On the days when his column, Shots at R—, was due to be handed in to the copy desk at or before eleven o'clock, a familiar sight would be for Doug to come strolling into Room 134, (The Guardsman office) any time after 10:15 a.m.

He would sit, or lounge probably would be a better way of expressing it, before a typewriter, sort out copy paper from the untidy heap at his side, and after inserting same in his typewriter, would sit there, staring vacantly out of the window, and with a smug complacent little smile on his face would remain there until the feature editor started correcting the copy for the page.

"Now, don't get excited," he would say, starting up, "I'll get my column in by 11:30 (if I can think of something to put in the blasted thing) this last was in an undertone, (sometimes, that is, if he didn't forget.)

Doug's column was good stuff so far as we are concerned. Usually more than one member of the staff would be waiting anxiously around to read the next page of his copy, to find out what really happened to the bald, blind, banker who wandered absentedly into the five and ten cent store. (If we only had in our possession the copy paper that has been thrown out with stories which we could not publish in his column—g'wan you figure that one out for yourself—we could alleviate the paper shortage somewhat.)

Last spring as the semester was drawing to a close, and the balmy spring air encouraged the compelled students to absent themselves from classrooms, a group of staff members were sitting on the lawn in back of the building here talking, idly daydreaming, and remarking that they would be doing in the very near future.

Of those remarks thus casually dropped, was one which Doug made, "In two or three years," he said, "I'll be a Third Mate in the Merchant Marines,"—and incidentally, he wasn't altogether kidding, even though at that time, he wasn't aware of reading his own stars, or words to that effect.

Doug is stationed at the present time at Port Hueneme, California, in the United States Maritime Training School. He has successfully passed his final examinations, so his mother tells us, and he will be finished with his training period in just about a month, after which time, he will sail forth on the high seas, as a member of the Marine force.

Mrs. Johnson also tells us that his letters keep the family in hysterics as he relates some of the interesting situations which only a character such as Doug could find himself in.

He is a graduate of Lowell High School here in the city, and has spent, (and this is probably very close to what he has done) about three semesters at the college, his major being in journalism.

His first semesters as a member of the staff here, Doug served in the capacity of a reporter. His colorful descriptions of interviews with visiting dignitaries, tea parties, (this last he attended through no fault or desire of his own), feature stories on the much-publicized parking lot, spring, college activities, and his everlastingly present 'epistles', make of him an unforgettable part of the newspaper staff here at the college.

It is very easy to miss some one member of the staff who has been so much fun to work with, but since Doug is having a lot of fun, and is in the thing he likes, even WE couldn't wish that he were back again with us.

That's all for the first issue, now; and the next time, persons such as Gene Powell, former student body president, James Peck, ex-college track star, and others will be honored.

GAL a vanting with Hoagy

NOW that the haunting strains of "My Devotion" play the exit music to the trying period known as vacation, it becomes time again to brush the cobwebs and scrape the bubble gum from the typewriter used by last semester's fashion editor, the Purple Gnome.

AT THE BOOK STORE

Amid empty coke glasses, discarded bridge hands, and old frat pins, Jackie Lincoln is creating a sensation with her exciting amount of lost weight and clever brass initials clipped on her stockings. Jackie's sure-fire remedy for an excess of weight "Well, just don't eat!" Sitting on the counter was Gloria Savage donned in her dress which falls into the casual college category.

This dress is a light nude wool with a low waist featuring a flattering pleated full skirt. Bringing the cotton dress into the college highlight, Connie Kimmel reminded us of the little girl next door that we used to know.

POT-POURRI

Making its debut at Jim McGill's surprise party last Saturday eve, Helen Custer's royal blue wide-ribbed corduroy sport coat was the center of attraction. Another attraction was Don Hewitt looking very dapper in Dorman Potter's green flowered jersey tie.

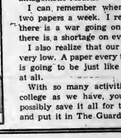
There's nothing like——thinking up new excuses for physical fitness; Lucille Landresee's stunning earring and pin ensemble, light green pottery shaped into classic horses' profiles; the sudden engagement of Marge McMahon to last semester's yell leader, Jim Upp; the new student who decides to open a hot dog and coke stand on Suicide Pass, half way between the Science building and the gymnasium; the clever round collar blouses worn by Felice D'Alfonso; the informal moniker "Stinky" dubbed on the student body president and Nick's cookie duster.

HOAGY'S SHOULDER

Dear Aunt Hoagy:



I'm just a paddler in the social swim, but my friends keep me posted about my knotty ankles and how to remedy their appearance. Before the rubber drive, I wore galoshes—but now, I have no means to cover them. Please, please advise.

Aeotin Sherdlu.

Dear Aeotin:

If you dress sensibly, people will think that it's your long-handled underwear making the knots.

The Gay Sisters Stanwyck, Fitzgerald, and Coleman . . .

THREE gal sisters—Fiona, Evelyn, and Susanna Gaylord—represent another in the Warner Bros. "sisterly hate" series, the last in this line being, In This Our Life. This one, however, is the celluloid adaptation of the Stephen Longstreet novel, The Gay Sisters.

Barbara Stanwyck

Supposedly poor-little-rich girls after the World War, the three Gaylord sisters, bound together by family pride and tradition, battle for an estate which has been in litigation for 20 years. Twenty years is a long time, and their inheritance money slowly dwindles into nothingness. And, sometimes, we wondered about the picture!

Barbara Stanwyck, as the desirable Fiona, the type of woman that shouts "hallelujah" in a court room, comes up with a role which might have been specially written for her. In order to gain an inheritance, she marries George Brent, fights him tooth and nail . . . until she (like all darn women, mind you) finds out she really loves him. Brent, who is filmdom's perennial, sympathetic reel husband, does his sincere best—that's all, though!

You'll probably want to break Geraldine Fitzgerald's beautiful neck. As the reckless Evelyn, she desperately tries to break up younger sister, Susanna's romance with screen newcomer, Gig Young, who portrays Gig Young, aspiring artist. Confusing, eh!

Bewitching Nancy Coleman, ex-Emporium employee, is excellent as the radiant Susanna, youngest of the Gaylords. Miss Coleman, of the youthful, big, brown eyes and catchy, sobbing voice, is an exceptionally gifted actress. She proved it in Kings Row recently, and maybe the Davises, DeHavilands, Fontaines, and Hepburns had better keep an eye glued on this girl.

The Gay Sisters is drama beyond all reproach. It's stars are geared to portray their roles along the lines of high tension. The script, which was scenarioed by Lenore Coffee, is almost filled by an over abundance of grim, dramatic determination, and only the individual performances of the Miss Stanwyck, Fitzgerald, and Coleman save it from complete collapse.

Mood, atmosphere, and subtle transition are the chief factors that keep the film moving along. Chalk up an assist for Irving Rapper, the director. All in all, the picture is somewhat entertaining (if you know what we mean) with the three sisters characterized to contrast each other. Supporting roles are ably acted out by Donald Crisp, Gene Lockhart, Gig Young, and Larry Simms.

The number two photoplay on the Fox Theater screen is Pierre of the Plains, (ugh!), a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer effort, with John Carroll, Ruth Hussey, Reginald Owen, and Bruce Cabot. In Miss Hussey's behalf, we're wondering if that's what MGM does to its feminine stars after they score so heavily in H. M. Pulham, Esq., and The Philadelphia Story.

Robinson

Cabbages & Kings

AGAIN we stagger into the noise and bedlam of The Guardsman office and we are faced with the demand for our usual column of drivel—so here it is.

On numerous occasions, this department has stuck its neck out, so why stop here? There are certain brilliant individuals of our fair city that have made the startling statement that SOME of the PEOPLE that high schools turn out are (actually incapable of performing the simple task of making "X's"). Well! Wadyaway!

There have been idiotic statements, but this is the capping of all idiotic statements. (Am I kidding?)

Have the learned men around ever wandered into one of John Selig's classes of "The Art of Being Able to Sleep With Your Eyes Open." We are confident that they have not.

Perhaps the students are not able to read Sanskrit, but they are abit to tell the difference between right and wrong. We can tell how to carry a gun, and how to discern a Commie from a Democrat. We have the knowledge that we can worship God as we wish; and that if we don't like the city administration, we have the right and privilege to do something about it. Yep, we don't do so badly.

Some say that we (those of our generation) don't know how to apply for a job. That IS a laff. Maybe we don't know the proper etiquette for getting a job, but we do know how to put a rivet into a Victory ship. We do know how to wire the firing mechanism for a gun which will be used in a Jap sub.

No, maybe we don't know as much as our honorable critics, but we are of the opinion that we can learn something of what it will take to help get this manmade hell straightened out, and believe us brother, we're certainly willing to try to do just that.

We are somewhat of the opinion that perhaps we will be able to do a pretty fair job with the means and methods which we have had and will have to work with. (Nice maneuvering, eh wot!)

AND IN PASSING—

Wot is this new publication that is being seen on the campus? If it turns out as it has formerly been planned, it should be pretty good.

There is still that mass of surging humanity and heaving bodies in the center hall in the interval between classes. Hmmmh, ought to have a tunnel through the wall for those who wish to go to class. (Oh, well, just a suggestion.)

LACC Pays Ram Expenses; Drake, McGowan Enlist

HOSPITALITY A-1

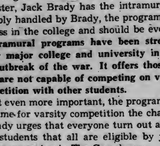
Of all the invitations extended the college to date, that of Los Angeles City College astounds us the most. It seems that the Crimson Tide from the southland take pride in taking our Rams into camp, and just couldn't bear to see the game fizzle out.

That's exactly what would have happened, but for the last minute rescue by the Cubs. The allotment given the football team for the new season couldn't possibly pay the expenses for a trip to Los Angeles. So the only thing to do was to call the whole affair off.

Informing Los Angeles of the unusual predicament with which the Rams were faced and of the unavoidable circumstances arising from the loss of a great number of students—the contest was on the verge of being dropped.

But the Cubs were quick to answer and offered to pay all expenses required to make the trip south, a very short stay, and the trip back home again. Just as quick were the Rams to accept and the kickoff is now set for October 3.

It's good to hear that at least one college in California wasn't so effected by the war conditions to be forced to cancel all extra activities!



Our advice to Coach Lee Eisan is that his Rams handle the Cubs gently, making sure not to score too many points. After all, that seems to be the only way in which we can express our gratitude.

TWO MORE FOR NAVY

The last of the college athletes to join the great forces of Uncle Sam are the names of Alfred Drake and James McGowan. But to the returning students—it was just "Duke" Drake and Jim McGowan.

Certainly there are but few who are now asking themselves, "Who are those guys, I've never heard of them!"

So it is for those students, as well as the new, who just come and go and know nothing of what's going on around the campus that we recall the events of Drake and McGowan. To the others, it is a mere waste of space because all can easily remember the prominent parts they played in the college activities.

Jim McGowan (left), and Al "Duke" Drake. Both have enlisted in the United States Navy and are now in "boot camp."

Both gave worthy accounts of themselves as gridders on Eisan's varsity squad, but even more successful were their feats in the ring. As footballers, McGowan held down the first string end position while Drake toted the pigskin at fullback.

McGowan's biggest thrill on the gridiron came in the contest against Salinas. Taking an end around from Turk Terzian, he eluded two tacklers and went 20 yards for a touchdown. And it was Drake's lateral to Terzian that sent the latter some 50 yards into pay dirt against Stockton, only to have the play nullified.

Drake held the college heavyweight championship for two semesters and then captured the light heavyweight crown in his last fight. During Drake's bid for that title, McGowan easily won in the heavyweight division.

Both took active part in the college's intramural program, competing for their Beta Phi Beta Fraternity in basketball and track. It was through their efforts that the Beta Phi Beta captured the track and field championships.

They left for the United States Naval Training Base in San Diego Tuesday morning and are probably by this time well under way with their training.

And so it is that we extend the best of luck to a couple of swell fellows—Drake and McGowan.

INTRAMURALS BEGIN EARLY

Getting off to what probably is the fastest start of any previous semester, Jack Brady has the intramural program all set to go. Capably handled by Brady, the program has always been a great success in the college and should be even better this semester.

Intramural programs have been stressed and emphasized in every major college and university in the United States since the outbreak of the war. It offers those students who feel that they are not capable of competing on varsity teams a chance for competition with other students.

But even more important, the program gives those who haven't the time for varsity competition the chance to compete.

Brady urges that everyone turn out and wants it known to the new students that all are eligible by just filling out the entry blanks appearing in The Guardsman.

Signups for basketball begin today with the deadline set for next Friday. Tom Wilson's basketeers will have full use of the men's gym in a couple of months and it is for that reason that Brady must get his program and events underway early.

EKDALL, DURYEA WORKOUT

Getting full benefit out of Lee Eisan's coaching ability are a couple of ex-Rams, namely Art Ekdall and Jim Duryea.

Ekdall is an aviation machinists mate at the Alameda Naval Air Base and from what we understand will continue his football success there. Duryea is at present attending the University of California in Berkeley where he received a letter from Stub Allison to report for football.

The sport is new to Duryea, playing only as a freshman at St. Ignatius High School. Far better is his handling of a javelin.

Intramural

Basketball First Sport On Calendar

Any student in the college, regardless of whether or not he belongs to a college organization, is eligible to participate in intramural sports this semester, according to Jack Brady, intramural adviser and director.

Basketball will be the first sport on the college intramural calendar this semester. Entry blanks, properly filled out, may be submitted to Brady in the men's gymnasium on or before noontime, Friday, October 2. The first tournament game will be played the following Monday, October 5.

Round Robin Used

Because of the two-a-month publication of The Guardsman, participants in intramural sports are urged to watch the bulletin bgards in the men's gymnasium for complete details, schedules, and rules.

All basketball games will be scheduled according to the round robin system with each team playing each other, Brady said.

Physical fitness, this year, will be a prime necessity in hardening the future soldiers, sailors, and marines of the U.S. services. Since all participants in regular college sports may not be included on the squad, it was pointed out that those students, regardless of this situation, are still eligible for intramural competition.

Any student, it was emphasized, may contact several of his friends, sign their names on the entry blank, and submit it to Brady as soon as possible. There are no other restrictions, other than the student be registered in the college.

Medals Awarded

Medals will be given to the teams, or men, that win their respective tournaments or race, Brady said. Gold medals will be given to first place winners, while second placers will be given silver medallions. All intramural contests are scheduled so that the various tournaments will not conflict with regular college classes.

The sports which will be included on the intramural calendar this semester include basketball, horseshoes, table tennis, boxing, touchtackle football, swimming, and possibly track and field. These tournaments will follow, in rapid-pie-order, when the basketball entries are all submitted.

Sport Night Set Again

The second annual Intramural Sports Night will be staged later in the fall semester when the results in all tournaments are determined. Between halves of the championship game, the presentation of awards will be made to the winners and second place men and teams.

The winners in last semester's tournaments included, Volleyball, Harbin Club; Table Tennis, Dave Billings; Basketball, The Deadeyes, and Badminton, Irving Bowker. There were winners in other tournaments, but the names of the participants are too numerous to mention.

Intramural Entries Due October 2

Those interested in the opening intramural round robin must have their entries in by next Friday, October 2, according to Jack Brady. The following Tuesday, schedule for basketball competition and play will begin. Entries will be accepted every day by Brady in the office of the men's gymnasium.

Managers of club or independent teams should fill out the application printed below, Brady said.

Name of college organization represented.....

If independent team, name of team.....

Manager of team: Name..... Phone.....
Address.....

Captain of team: Name.....
Address..... Phone.....

Name of Players 1..... 2..... 3.....
4..... 5..... 6.....
7..... 8..... 9.....
10..... 11..... 12.....

In entering this team I understand that none but members of this college, or college organizations are eligible to compete.

If a student is a member of your organization, he is not eligible to compete unless his name appears in the above list.

I realize that because of studies it may be impossible to have the same players on the field each time our team plays, but I shall make every effort to have a team present.

Signed.....
(Team Manager)

Good Luck Ramy!

Women's Athletics

Plans For Fall Program Depend Upon Response From College Students

In cooperation with the war effort, the WAA will plan the fall program in alignment to the response of the women o fthe college. "All coeds of the campus are urged to join a WAA activity and to help plan the events of the coming semester," invites Miss Keller, women's athletic instructor.

This fall semester it was announced that Berta Reid and Audrey Turner, who were elected as president and vice-president of the organization will be unable to fulfill their duties. Miss Reid is engrossed in the war effort by working nights, and Miss Turner transferred to the University of California.

Johnson New Prexy

Moving up into the office of president is Loraine Johnson and Fran Wiesner, who will act as vice-president. At the first meeting of the term the secretary and treasurer will be nominated and elected.

Also at this meeting, plans for the activities for this semester will be discussed and voted upon. In past semesters such successful events as bar-b-ques, Kid Days, and others were presented.

Men May Compete

Officers of the organization announce that if enough sign-ups are received, there will be as many clubs as bowling, riding, badminton and tennis. If men are interested, perhaps a co-educational bowling club will be formulated.

Playground Jobs Open To Women Interested

Any college women interested in Reactional Leadership on San Francisco playgrounds after school and on Saturdays are urged to see Bertha Keller, women's athletic instructor.

These positions will pay 75 cents an hour and can be obtained by signing up with Miss Keller.

Because of the transportation system, it was decided that one general play day will be held for all the junior colleges in this region, instead of a series of smaller ones, as previously. This play day will be held at San Francisco State College in November.

Lorraine Johnson, new president, states, "Women interested in a bar-b-que or some other term activity should see some officer of the WAA or Miss Keller. The activities of the WAA will depend upon the response of the college students."

Volunteers Asked For

Since the physical education faculty is crowded with required courses in gymnasium, it will be necessary to ask for volunteers to sponsor one or more practices a week. Some of the courses will be tennis, bowling, badminton, and riding.

Miss Keller sends out an "SOS" for volunteer assistants to distribute towels and equipment. Miss Keller concluded, "We are all hoping at this time that the students will assume more leadership in furthering the recreation activities of the junior college."

Fall Track

Coach Sweet Employs New Commando Tactics

That fall track this semester will be organized in the form of Commando tactics, which will include laying out the track and participating in the events, was made known this week by Russ Sweet, college track and field coach.

"All of the gym classes will participate as groups in the beginning," Sweet explained, "and when the participants get into shape there will be individual workouts for those interested."

Asks For Transfers

Sweet urged all men students who are taking gym at either 11 or 12 o'clock on Monday and Wednesday to transfer to track immediately. Special arrangements can be made, however, for those who find it impossible to change their programs, according to the mentor.

"The college is blessed with some fine sprinters from many local high schools this semester," Sweet remarked. "Returning this semester, among others, is Dick Petch, sterling dash man from the Eastbay. We also have with us, one Jack Bresler, who placed in the last city meet, as well as Sam Papageorge, quarter-miler, Al Cunningham, pole-vaulter, and Bud Robinson, miler."

The annual intramural track activity known as the Cross-Country Run will positively be held this year, Sweet promised.

Football

Rams Open New Season Against LACC Saturday, October 3; 24 Gridders, Eisan Make Trip

The Ram football varsity will open its football season October 3, when they travel to Snyder Field, in Los Angeles, to battle the highly-touted Los Angeles City College eleven.

A squad of 24 men, headed by head football coach, Lee Eisan, will leave the Third and Townsend depot early next week.

Although the LACC'ans have lost many of their best players, Jackie Fellows and Rex Schoeder included, the Crimson Tide still has enough material remaining from last year's squad to give the Red 'n' White a run for their money.

Eisan Dubious

In regards to his team this year, Eisan said: "We should have a very good team, but loss of practice hurts."

It was pointed out that some of the football games MAY be rescheduled so that all of the students may have a chance to see the team in action. All games will be played in the afternoon.

On the first day of practice, a squad of 80 players greeted head man Eisan. With the departure of such able footballers including Augie Kafkes, Temple Davies, Jim McGowan, Alfred Drake, Armand Terzian, Bob Hoffman, Jack Medrano, and Art Ekdall, Eisan hardly expected anyone to return. The only holdovers from last year's squad are Glenn Smith, Ed Glovia, and Bob Jones.

Squad Trimmed Down

There were only 60 football suits available, so the squad was cut down to a svelte, five-dozen. The line will be lighter than that of last year, and the backfield will be as fast as the Ram quartet that performed last season.

Because of the curtailment of unnecessary transportation this year, and for the duration, there will be no conference schedule, nor will the percentage standings be tabulated. San Mateo and Stockton Junior Colleges will be the only A.J.C. division grid teams disbanding for the duration.

A tentative lineup given by Eisan is as follows:

Left End	Herb Jensen
Left Guard	Glenn Smith
Center	Ed Glovia
Right Guard	Johnny Pronzo
Right Tackle	Bob Bishop
Right End	Bob Jones
Quarterback	Carter Corey
Left Halfback	Bob Cavender of Charley Cook
Right Halfback	George Taylor or Chris Pallas
Fullback	Al Norris

Tom Conlan New Addition To Staff

By Bob Catudio

Cast a glimmer at the lineup of physical education instructors out at the men's gymnasium . . . and the fellow with the reddest hair will probably be Tom Conlan.

He reminds us of Hugh Walpole's fictional character, The Man With Red Hair. At the mere mention of the word "baseball," he relaxes back in his desk seat and plants a pair of HAs on top of the desk, while his memory trots back many years ago.

Several years after Conlan was graduated from the High School of Commerce, he was signed up as a pitcher for the Oakland Acorns in the Double A Pacific Coast League. That was in 1934. If you can recall that year, you may have seen a baseball boxscore with a "Conlan, p." linotyped in agate type.

"I can remember once, when the Oaks were out front by 13 games," he mused, "but then . . . we finished seventh. The Seals won that year. That's all I can remember!"

He pitched for the rebel Oaklanders for three years—1934, 35, and 36—before he free-agented himself in the employ of the Mission Reds, before they transferred their league, franchise down to Hollywood. Someone asked him about the number of home runs hit over the distant 385 foot rightfield fence at Seals Stadium.

"Not many," he retorted, "but I saw Jim Tobin (now with the Boston Braves) blast one so far over the centerfield scoreboard that it wasn't a bit funny. Cleo Carlyle hit one, too, when he played with Los Angeles, Dolph Camilli used to blast 'em over the right centerfield fence during batting practice; so did Chick Outen."

Conlan regards Billy Meyer, now manager of the Kansas City Blue, in the American Association, as one of the best managerial brains in organized baseball. The "Kansas City Dutchman" had a way with men that gained for him the respect of all his subsidaries.

"I've only been at this college a week now," he remarked, "and I still can't get used to all of the fellows out here. They're swell!"

After the '37 season with the faltering Reds, Conlan hurried back to the University of California to get his BA degree. Since he's been here, he's figured out some statistical scheme, whereby the Cardinals and the Bums from Gawxmup should finish in a dead heat for the senior circuit pennant . . . but Morton Cooper and Johnny Beazley have other ideas!

Baseball players are nice guys though. They play all summer, talk all winter, and practice all spring. Some are talking Spaulding Guides. Why the ex-Oakland pitchin' man, and younger brother of Louis "Dutch" Conlan, by the way, remarked: "The last time the St. Louis Browns finished in third place was in 1908. Had a good team that year, too!"

So you see, fellows, whether it's fuhnbliss about on a ouija board, or throwing rocks at a telephone pole, it's all in fun. The red-headed instructor will gain a parcel of friends in the college . . . so let's start now.

Don't forget to bring along a Spaulding Guide, just in case!

Fall Basketball Signup Approved By Tom Wilson

Fair, indeed, was the sign of approval given by Tom Wilson, the cagin's man, at last Tuesday's roll call meeting.

Head man Wilson, who spent his undergraduate days at the College of Pacific, at Stockton (Calif.), came up with the first conglomeration of verbs and adjectives at the thought of "basketball next season."

Veterans Expected

"Our team will probably be small, the same as last year," Wilson prophesized. "We'll have a few veterans back—Terry, Winter, Isola, Adordor, Scheu, and the others—but it's too early in the season to be sure. Practice will get under way—oh, 'bout late in November!"

Last year the men in Red 'n' White triumphed in six conference games . . . and lost (not) seven others. If the draft becomes more active, Wilson may see a great number of his players clad in khaki.

Terry, Adordor Return

Jack Terry, the sophomore pointtabulator from George Washington High School, and Alex Adordor, who prepped at Commerce, are forwards, and both have signified their intentions to return. Then there's Frank Isola, Ed Lapayaude, Homer Winter, Norman Scheu, all vets, as well as newcomers Louie Forte, Jack Behr, Ronnie MacArthur, and George Vogiotsis.

Because of the governmental curtailment on unnecessary transportation, the Northern California Junior College Basketball Conference has been disbanded for the duration. Games this season will be played against clubs, university frosh, and bay area junior college cage teams.

Coast Guard Wallops Rams

The U.S. Coast Guard Reserves scored a 20 to 6 triumph over the college football team last Thursday.

Counseling Services

Career-Guidance Program Here Designed To Aid Student Problems In Study And Future Undertaking

The new Career-Guidance Conference course offered at the college during the present semester is designed especially to benefit the student in terms of the immediate situation, according to Edward H. Redford, head of the department of counseling and guidance.

Lecures and conferences in the new course are based upon the results of the entrance examinations and aptitude tests required by the college. "Many students learn only too late that their vocational objectives are out of line with their abilities; these are the difficulties we attempt to anticipate," Redford said.

Instructor Also Adviser

An outstanding advantage of this new course, listed as Psychology 10 in the college catalogue, is that each class instructor becomes that particular group's adviser. "On the basis of a great number of ability tests, which the student will have the opportunity to take throughout the course," said Redford, "the student will be able to find himself." Instructors include Phylis Haley, George Green, Elizabeth Stetson, and Claude Silva.

The class schedule is made up of one lecture and one individual conference weekly. It is a two unit course with students graded according to how they follow advice of their respective adviser. Redford recommends the course for men and women in any of the following groups:

1. Those with no vocational objective.
2. Objective out of line with ability.
3. Those with academic ability who do not plan to continue their education.
4. Those who have not been achieving scholastic standards up to their ability.
5. Those whose records show they are going to have difficulties with their college subjects.
6. Those who plan to attend a university but whose records show they will encounter difficulties.

Aptitude Tests Advantageous

"Since the classes will be open for enrollment, with credit adjustment, throughout the semester students will have the opportunity to avail themselves of the advantages of taking the aptitude tests," Redford said.

Emphasis on the war effort and vocational choice in terms of the immediate situation stress the importance of the newly-prepared, popular course. Approximately 150 students are enrolled at present and more are expected.

Second Front In Europe To Be Discussed At Forum

A Second Front in Europe will be the topic under the discussion at the first fall meeting of the Forum Club, at the home of Conrad March, club president.

Members are urged to attend the meet at the March home, 1735 Golden Gate Avenue at 7:30 p.m., October 2. Dorothy Mercer is the faculty sponsor of the group.

Cafeteria Service Depends Upon Spirit Of Cooperation

An urgent plea to all students was issued by Hilda Watson, acting chairman of the Hotel and Restaurant Division, for volunteer bussing in the cafeteria. "Unless the students are willing to share our troubles under the present shortage of labor," said Mrs. Watson, "we will be forced to make even greater curtailments on service."

Students are expected to appreciate the fact that war materials, priorities and shortages, make it impossible to replace trays, utensils, china, in fact every article used in service in the cafeteria. Loss incident to the practise of thoughtless students who take equipment from the cafeteria is serious, and if continued will work a hardship on those who are willing to cooperate in the more efficient management of the Hotel and Restaurant Division.

Keep Costs Down

"When students remember that costs are related to overhead" said Mrs. Watson, "they will be more anxious to assist in our conservation program by preventing needless abuses and waste."

Bus stands are provided in each dining room and every person on leaving should see to it that his dishes, paper bags, trays and glasses are removed from the table to one of these stands.

Students who desire employment in the cafeteria, should immediately see Mrs. Sobernheim, assistant to Mrs. Watson.

Music

Badger, Devlin Inaugurate New Listening Hour

A general invitation to all members of the student body and faculty is issued by Miss Flossita Badger, music department head, to participate in a "Listening Hour" on Wednesdays at one or two o'clock.

Miss Badger and Madison Devlin will hold open house in Room 200 each Wednesday, sharing the direction of a recorded program of classical music. Programs will be announced in advance through The Guardsman.

Students to Participate

Participants are invited to present their requests to either Miss Badger or Mr. Devlin. The first "Listening Hour" will be presented next Wednesday, September 30.

Devlin, orchestra and band instructor, reports that students interested in these activities should enroll in Music 16a meeting at noon, Tuesday and Thursday, in Room 200. Most urgent needs, according to Devlin, are for a pianist and drummer. Another trumpeter is also sought.

Isola Named Secretary

Members of A Capella choir have elected Frank Isola to the position of secretary, according to Lennox Cinnamond, choir manager. Cinnamond predicts a most promising season for his group, fall registration having balanced the talent lost at graduation in June.

Interested students who have had experience in choral work should contact Miss Badger, director, or Joseph Lewis, assistant manager.

the class offices will take on a new importance, Kroll said. I'm sure it will be a great improvement over the past methods of selection of student leaders.

Ex-Council Acts

The executive Council has already taken steps to make the offices of the various classes seem more important to students who might have a desire to partake in the college government. It has been suggested and approved that the class presidents be allowed to take an active part in the Executiv Council.

This semester all class officers will be invited to take their place, if they wish to do so, on the Executive Council.

This is only a trial and not an official act of the council, but if it is successful and the student leaders take an active part in our college government, a move may be made to allow permanent seats to class presidents in the council in the future, Steenberg pointed out.

Election Rooms Given

Class elections will be held in the following rooms next Thursday at 11 o'clock:

Low freshmen will vote in Room 136, with Bill Steenberg in charge of the meeting.

Winn Golden will be in charge of the high freshman meeting, scheduled for Room 100.

Low sophomore class will vote in Room 204. Joe Louis will be in charge of all business.

The high sophomore class election is slated to be held in Room 211, with Kay Krifels in charge of the meeting.

Banking Hours Set

Hours of the college bank will remain the same this semester as in previous semesters, opening at 10 a.m. and closing at 1 p.m., Michael Zarchin, college bank director, disclosed today.

Municipal and Market Street Railway car tickets will be on sale each day at the bank office, room 180, as day at the bank office, Room 180, as will United States War Bonds and Stamps.

Texas Fields Train Former College Men

SAN ANTONIO AVIATION CADET CENTER, Tex., Sept.—Campus days, with college proms, cramming, frat houses and lectures on Shakespeare and classes in Greek, are definitely over for many cadets now taking the pre-flight courses at the San Antonio Aviation Cadet Center.

For them, however, there is a new "campus life," consisting of everything from athletics and cadet dances and dinners to extended order drill and classroom studies that will equip them for a larger and more thrilling life.

Fighting Men

They are learning to become pilot members of Uncle Sam's aircrews and as such will begin careers designed to put an end to those of A. Hitler, B. Mussolini and E. (For Emperor) Hirrhito.

Nearly every ranking college and university in the United States is represented among the cadets in the current pre-flight class at the San Antonio Aviation Cadet Center.

Former Rams

Included are the following 'exes naming San Francisco Junior College as their alma mater:

Aviation Cadet William E. Anderson, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Anderson, 345 Jones, San Francisco, Calif., 1940.

Aviation Cadet Ernest C. Cody, 24, 1306 Cordilleras Avenue, San Carlos, Calif., 1939-40.

Aviation Cadet Chester R. Mead, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Mead, 2578 31st Avenue, San Francisco, Calif., 1940.

Aviation Cadet Edward Turner, Jr., 25, son of Edward Turner, Sr., 106 Jules Avenue, San Francisco, Calif.

Aviation Cadet Howard D. Cant, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Owen Cant, 1617 Concordia Street, Alameda, Calif., 1941-42.

Aviation Cadet Harold M. Simon, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard M. Simon, 374 22nd Avenue, San Francisco, Calif., 1939-41.

Education In Wartime

Brady Opens First Social Science Class Lecture With Description Of National Educators' Convention

Social Science 1, a new addition to the college curriculum, was opened to students last Tuesday and featured an address by John F. Brady, chief deputy superintendent of San Francisco schools.

Speaking on the problems facing education in the United States during war time, Brady outlined various points made by government spokesmen in Washington, D.C. The chief deputy was a member of the west coast delegation that attended the meet.

Brady Quotes Officials

Quoting such notable government officials as Paul McNutt, General Hershey, Dean Landis, Claude Wickard, Elmer Davis, Leon Henderson, and various army and navy officers, Brady made known that these men place the schools as the training center for the military services.

The new social science class will feature at least six outside speakers during the current semester, and the emphasis of the speakers will center on current events, notable the winning of the present world war. Such men as Chester Rowell, columnist for the San Francisco Chronicle, Dr. Phillips of Fresno State College, and a former attache of the United States embassy in China will be included in the guest speaker list.

Committee Will Head Class

No permanent instructor has been named to head the class, but a committee of various college, faculty members, including Lloyd Luckmann, chairman of the group, Robert Parker, Franklin Sewell and Claude Shull will preside over the class meetings, which are scheduled each Tuesday at 11 a.m. A conference section for the course has been scheduled for the course on Thursday of each week in Room 136. Attendance at this meeting is on a voluntary basis. This class will be conducted to the question and answer procedure used on radio's Town Hall.

An invitation has been extended to all students to attend the class meetings whether they are enrolled in the course or not.

Club Advisory Board Plans Monday Meeting

The first meeting of the fall semester for the Club Advisory Board will be held Monday, September 28, at 3 o'clock, in Room 140, under newly elected president, Dorothy Hogan.

At the last meeting of the spring semester, Miss Hogan won the election over Clinton Peck and Jim McGill and is the first woman of the college to hold this office. At that time, Jim Madsen was elected vice president and Janet Baccus, secretary.

Apply for Charters

Charter renewals will be distributed, plans for the fall semester will be discussed, and a new secretary will be chosen at this first meeting. Because Miss Baccus left school it is necessary to elect a new secretary-treasurer.

"Each club president or adviser should see that a representative from their club will be present at Monday's meeting," urges Miss Hogan. After this time the meetings will be held on the first Thursday of each month at 11 o'clock at the appointed assembly time.

Deadline for Renewals.

Clubs are asked to submit their charter renewal on or before Friday, October 9, at 3 o'clock, state officers of the Board. This is the main purpose of the CAB, to recommend to the Executive Council the chartering of new clubs as well as the withdrawal of charters of any club that fails to meet the qualifications of chartering.

Composed of one representative of each club in the college, the CAB was originally designed to serve as a coordinating unit between the clubs in the college and the Associated Student organization.

"Visitors wishing to address the Board may be recognized by the chair after a written request for recognition has been submitted to the secretary", announces Miss Hogan.

Vice-president of the Board, and president of the Campus Players last semester, Miss Hogan urges all new students to join a club.

Women's Service Society Selling Second Hand Textbooks In Room 103; Sales Progress Rapidly

Textbooks for student use are still being sold in Room 103, at the northern end of the science building, Margaret Abbett, president of the Women's Service Society, disclosed recently.

The room will remain open for business from 9 to 2 o'clock daily, but books will only be sold during the period from 10:30 to 12:45 o'clock, Miss Abbett said. During the latter part of last week, the WSS sold more than $140 worth of textbooks. This compares favorably with the sales mark that was established by the WSS the previous semester.

Demand Great

"The demand for second-hand textbooks has been so great," Miss Abbett voiced, "that the WSS may not be able to satisfy every student's textbook needs."

A group of women from the WSS will be ready, however, to assist students in their selection of new and old books. This group includes Marie McMillan, Margie Pierce, Marilyn Bush, Claire Connor, Ruth Nell, Alice Violenti, and Miss Abbett.

Volumes In Library Hit New Record Mark

Acquisition of 3,500 books since July, 1941, has now placed the grand total volumes in the college library at more than 17,000 books, Marcus Skarstedt, college librarian, disclosed recently.

Despite the noticeable decrease in enrollment, 51,000 books have been circulated during this 1941-42 period. The record is even more remarkable, since it is an increase in circulation of 5,000 books from the previous year, Skarstedt emphasized. This means, therefore, that there is an average circulation of 300 books each school day of the semester.

Needless Loss

Carelessness has been blamed as the chief weapon responsible for the loss and damage of approximately 350 books. It was pointed out that this was bound to happen in any college library, and it has not influenced library officials to close the "open shelves."

"Our losses in the library are decreasing," Skarstedt remarked, "but we want them to decrease even more.

Aviation Courses Popular

Indications taken from the large enrollments in the aviation program at the college, as well as in mathematics and physics, point to a large interest on the part of the men of the college in military training and the reserve officers training program. Whatever confusion has resulted from recent press releases concerning the policy of the War Department concerning the call of men over twenty will be clarified for the men of this college at these meetings.

Students generally, are aware of the educational standards imposed by these college reserve programs. The quality, as well as the kind and quantity of collegiate work pursued, is of greatest importance. Testing programs will be administered to the student as he progresses and from the results of these examinations will be determined those eligible for further training.

CAPITAL to CAMPUS
ACP's Jay Richter Reports from Washington

WASHINGTON, (ACP)—School teachers in Nazi-occupied Europe are showing marked inability to learn and teach the "philosophy" of Hitler's New Order. This fact is made evident by articles which recently appeared in the daily press of these countries and which have just reached Washington from private sources.

On the basis of these reports teachers appear to be the most widely persecuted professional group in the occupied countries. At the same time the teachers seem to be the most persistent in their refusal to cooperate with occupation authorities and their own Quislings.

Official decrees and news stories appearing in local newspapers from Greece to Norway, and from eastern Poland to France reflect the teachers' determined resistance to Nazi educational principles and school politics.

"Mass arrests of college professors have been made, and some of Europe's leading universities have been closed in an effort to stamp out this intellectual opposition to Nazism.

After continual strife between faculty leaders of the University of Brussels and Nazi occupation authorities in Belgium, the university is reported to have been closed. The Brussels newspaper Le Soir said that "incidents" at the university could have avoided if its officials had "better understood the intention of the military administration."

Several Norwegian newspapers recently carried accounts of the imprisonment of Rector Seip and several well-known professors of the University of Oslo. They were held under a new decree calling for the arrest, without trial, of Norwegians jeopardizing their country's "peaceful development."

The press of the occupied countries also reported recently the purge of many professors in France and Luxembourg. These include Professor Langevin and other world-famous members of the Paris Academy of Sciences.

A Hungarian newspaper recently credited Miklos Kozma, the Hungarian commissioner for Ruthenia, with the statement that education was one of the principal problems he had to deal with. He called upon the young people in this former section of Czecho-Slovakia to forget everything they had learned in the last 20 years. "It was all false," he added. Commissioner Kozma expressed gratification that some teachers had "given up their useless political activities and returned to their honorable education of teaching and educating the people."

A newspaper in Kongsberg, Norway, attributed public insults against the German army to the fact that teachers weren't using their influence properly.

The latest action in Norway is a decree repealing former regulations about employment of teachers. This action by the education department is interpreted in Stockholm's "Svenska Dagbkadet" as creating the basis for a comprehensive purge of teachers who refuse to accept the New Order. Under the new laws, school directors must submit all new appointments for the department's consideration.

A Copenhagen paper recently accused school teachers of inciting Danish children against "foreign tendencies seeking to secure a footing in Denmark." The teachers were held responsible for the fact that children were ostracizing the children of Nazi-minded parents. One of these youngsters was particularly insulted, according to this report, when he returned to school after touring Germany with a youth group.

Nearly all Norwegian schools have now been closed as a result of the revolt of clerical, educational and other professional groups. More than 2,000 schoolmasters are under arrest.

The controlled Dutch press also complains that the attitude of primary school teachers is most unsatisfactory. "Volk on Vanderland" reports that teachers with the "proper" attitude were so ridiculed by others that the discussion of politics in school had to be forbidden.

The press of Bohemia-Moravia reveals the existence of far more serious trouble in the protectorate. Marie Jindichova, a Prague teacher, was executed for spreading illegal leaflets in her school. She was also accused of encouraging her pupils to write "anti-Nazi" letters to Czech children in the Sudetenland. A school in Klatovy was closed, and teachers and parents in that town were warned to pro tect the children against disruptive elements:

The Stockholm newspaper "Ny Dag" has reported the dramatic trial of a Paris school teacher named Giraux. The St. Denis court sentenced him to death for "encouraging children in anti-German activity." When sentence was passed, Giraux is reported to have have become a rallying cry for Parisians.

Even inside Germany, teachers are showing resistance to Hitler's New Order. In Tilsit, a 38-year-old school teacher named Margarete Reichenbach was sentenced to eight years' penal servitude for listening to enemy broadcasts. During the trial, according to the "Konigsburger Allegemeine Zeitung" she was forced to admit that she had "contracted a mental conflict through listening to foreign atrocity propaganda, and that she had to speak her mind."

"Let 'er roar!"

AMS SCHEDULES SMOKER TONIGHT

Ernie Smith, USF Coaches Will Headline Men's Show; Program At California Club

The annual Associated Men Students Smoker will be held tonight at the California Women's Club, 1750 Clay Street, starting at 7:45 p.m., according to Frank Isola, AMS president.

This is the second AMS student event staged this semester, and from all indications, it would appear that the men in the college are really enthusiastic about the whole affair, Isola emphasized.

The low freshmen of the college, in whose honor this event is being staged, and the other men of the college are to be listeners to the following speakers: Ernie Smith, Jimmy Needles, Andy Adams, Al Tassi, and two members of the armed services, Sgt. Stremmel, of the Marine Corps, and Lt. Quigley, of the Army Air Corps.

Coaches To Speak

Instructors at the college have also consented to speak tonight in an effort to emphasize the importance of college athletics in a world at war. College coaches who have consented to appear include Jack Brady, intramural director; Russ Sweet, track and field mentor, and Tom Wilson, varsity basketball coach.

"This AMS Smoker tonight is for everyone," Isola said, "but, especially, the low freshmen men. We want them to feel right at home, and at tonight's smoker, everyone will get a chance to meet everyone else."

Smith, veteran KYA radio sportscaster who appeared at last semester's smoker, will again highlight the most important periods in his career in a completely informal chat. This same pattern applies to both Tassi and Needles, who will speak on the football prospects for the University of San Francisco Dons.

Service Men Guests

Stremmel and Quigley, however, will speak on a completely different subject, while Adams, a graduate of the college, will deliver another one of his amusing monologues. There will be other entertainment tonight plus free refreshments, Isola stated.

Admission to the smoker will be by Associated Student card only. The AMS officers for this semester include Isola, president; Win Golden, vice-president; and Bob Catudio, secretary, while Joe Lewis and Claude Glenon are those who have been working on the AMS committee.

Student Body

Low Frosh Outshine Upper Classmen In Group Voting; Second Election For Sophs

Low freshmen and women of the college outvoted all other classes in last week's class elections, as was indicated in a bulletin released by Warner Croll, election committee head, this week.

The new officers for the fall semester are as follows:

LOW FRESHMEN

President	Bill Childers
Vice President	Shirlee Hart
Secretary	Milt Keenan

HIGH FRESHMEN

President	Tom Kenny
Vice President	Violet Johns
Secretary	Barbara Treganowen

LOW SOPHOMORE

President	Bob Haines
Vice President	Betty Dahlberg
Secretary	Barbara Barnett

By order of the College Executive Council, at last Tuesday's meeting, there will be a high sophomore class election next Thursday, October 15, from 11:40 to 12 o'clock, in Room 136.

Candidates for all three offices must re-run for election, and outside candidates will be prohibited from announcing intentions to run for office.

It was apparent, in all classes save the low freshman class, that a representative number of voters was not in attendance. Members of the election committee expressed doubt as to whether or not the students "knew there was an election going on in the college."

Many Student Workers Needed To Fill Jobs

Because of the present shortage of workers, there is an opportunity for each student in the college to obtain part time work, it was disclosed by Claude Silva, placement director, recently.

"Students should welcome this chance to finance their education," he added. "They should also realize that it is their patriotic duty to their government to assist in every way possible."

All positions can be obtained through the College Placement Bureau, Room 155. The office is open from 9 to 5 o'clock daily.

With Christmas rapidly approaching, work in department stores and post offices will be greatly increased. Post offices are now serving a double duty. Besides delivering the usual Christmas mail to city residents, all mail sent to men in the service must pass through the San Francisco post offices.

The pay has been increased from 40 cents to 50 cents an hour. All students now employed by the NYA should note that the present pay period ends October 13 and that the new period starts October 14. All time sheets must be turned in to Room 155 before October 14.

Fall Enrollment Figures Released

Mary Jane Learnard, Assistant Registrar, has released the total enrollment figures for the fall semester. There are 1612 students enrolled at present as compared with 2730 of a year ago. The ratio of men to women remains about as last year however, with approximately twice as many men as women enrolled.

"Although the armed forces and defense projects have attracted the men," said Miss Learnard, "apparently women have entered upon their respective vocational careers in proportionate numbers."

Special Classes Added

Mathematics and science courses have proved popular with men this semester, while the women favor business subjects. Special day and evening classes, meeting the demands of the community, have an enrollment of 556 students. "These classes are new this semester," said Miss Learnard, "but they have met with wide-spread aproval."

By way of a reminder Miss Learnard said, "October 12 is the last day for removal of incompletes from the previous semester with grades higher than D. The last day for filing of petitions for graduation is also October 12."

Women's Army-Navy Lieuts. Speak Here October 22nd

Miss Ernestine Cervelli, AWS president, announces a meeting of special interest to all women students to be held on Thursday, October 22, at 11 a.m. in Room 136. Guests of the Associated Women will be Lieut. Mary McGlynn of the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps and Lieut. Tova Peterson of the Women's Auxiliary Volunteer Service (U.S.N.), Mrs. Edwin R. Sheldon, Commissioner of Education and Mrs. Lloyd W. Dinkelspiel, Commissioner of Education.

All Portugese, Italian and Latin language courses have been dropped from the fall semester program, the Registrar's office announced this week.

Welfare

College Salvage Campaign Opens With Key Drive

A key drive will mark the first installment in an all-out college salvage campaign which is scheduled to begin officially on October 12, according to Bob Ervin, drive chairman.

Ervin will conduct the key campaign on a competitive basis between the four classes at the college. Containers will be placed throughout the college for the key donations, and the members of the various classes will be asked to donate what keys they are able to in order to race against the other class groups.

Keys Suggested

The collection of keys as a part of the scrap metal drive was first suggested in San Francisco by Mrs. S. W. Ehrman, a local club woman. It was at her suggestion that containers were placed at random points about the city for the collection of the keys. The collections to date number more than a million keys donated.

The remaining three parts of the drive are broken down into one week of October 19, silk stockings, yarn and rayon on the week of October 26, and leather scraps and furs on the week of November 2, the last collection drive.

Aids War Effort

Ervin explained that all of the scheduled drives play on important part in the national defense effort. The books collected will go to the various army camps throughout the country; the silk stockings, yarn and rayon will be used to weave blankets for stretchers; and the leather scraps and furs will be used to line service men's jackets for use in cold climates.

Headquarters for the college drive will be located in the check room at the north end of the main building. Charts and records of class competition will be kept there on display, as will other items pertaining to the promotion of the drive.

Rally Tentative

Ervin has cited the possibility of a college rally to further the drive at the college, which is designed to aid national and local salvage movements. Unofficial sources indicated that the El Rey Theater may be used for the proposed rally, and that local professional talent may be asked to participate in the rally.

College Bank Begins Book Sales Distributions Now

All students who have sold books through the WSS must present the slip which they received when they left their books in Room 103. No student will receive money for books without this slip. The money will be distributed from 10:30 until 1:00 o'clock every day.

Guardsman Out Twice Monthly

From this date, barring all foreseen happenings, The Guardsman will hereafter be published every other Friday. We ask that the student body arrange all social activities to coincide with the publication dates, if they wish ample publicity of the affairs.

Ex-Student Meets Death

Second Lieutenant Ogden Gharing Wheeler, 21, met death this week when the single-seated training plane in which he was making a routine flight crashed 15 miles off Olema, California.

Wheeler was a former student of this college, the son of the F. M. Wheelers of Stinson Beach, California.

Counseling

Student-Adviser Meeting Program To Be Changed

A new system of distributing "cinch" notices will be inaugurated this semester, Edward H. Redford, head of the Department of Counseling and Guidance, announced this week. Redford points to the new plan as a method of improving upon the present counseling service.

"This semester," Redford said, "all students will be required to meet with their advisers on October 15 regardless of individual scholastic standings. No 'cinch' notices will be distributed at these meetings," Redford continued. "Students will make appointments with their advisers to receive or discuss notices individually on October 29 and 30." All new students will be informed on the matter of who their adviser is and where the meetings are to be held.

Meetings scheduled on the college calendar for October 29 for the purpose of distributing "cinch" notices have been discontinued.

Problems Presented Advisers

"In connection with the plus or minus Psychology 10 course," Redford said, "students present their problems to the adviser. The counselor then points out the possibilities, with the final decision left to the student. This procedure has proven satisfactory in the past so we have every reason to believe it will meet with success in the future," Redford concluded.

The new system of distributing "cinch" notices is designed to facilitate more extensive counseling and guidance service. If the new plan meets with success it will become a permanent feature of the department of counseling and guidance.

Social Science Class To Hear Julean Arnold

Julean Arnold, former attache of the American Embassy in China, is scheduled to speak to the Social Science 1 class next Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. His topic will be China.

Having served for more than 40 years in China, Arnold is prepared to speak of the Chinese people, their relations with foreign countries, and their reaction to the present war with Japan.

Arnold's first job was that of a student interpreter for the United States, at the American Legation. Later, he was decorated by the Chinese government for his work there.

An appeal to students to print their names and addresses in their college textbooks was made by Dean Edwin C. Browne, dean of college men, today.

Curriculum

College Offers Adult Courses

Extension classes and adult evening classes have assumed new proportions under the war time program of the college. More than 500 adults are now enrolled in special day and evening courses being offered by the college.

Prior to February of this year the college had but a few instances of the extension of its services beyond the campus. With wartime conditions have come numerous requests for special courses as a service to the community and in cooperation with city and federal agencies. At present, the San Francisco Fire Department, the Office of Price Administration and kindred war agencies, the Office of Civilian Defense, and several San Francisco hospitals are enlisting the cooperation of the college in their in-service training program.

Business Attracts

With the new short-term courses in the business division the United States Civil Service Commission has directed its applicants to the campus for preparation in the various office skills. Business education at the college has all of the features demanded by placement and personnel officers for accelerated training, and it is expected that enrollment of adults in this department will continue to grow.

Candidates for positions with the Federal agencies will be tested here on the campus by representatives of the twelfth district office of the Civil Service Commission. The first of these tests will be administered Monday, October 30.

Firemen Study

Since last spring the San Francisco Fire Department has established training courses in chemistry and physics for its personnel. Manfred Mueller, in chemistry, and Alfred Agostl, of the physics department, have conducted the classes for firemen.

Gardening, landscape architecture, flower arrangement, flower shop practice and victory gardens have proven to be popular courses with adults. Instructors Harry Nelson, Henry Schrumpl and John Herman offer ten courses in the afternoons and evenings to meet the demand made upon them for this work.

Geographer Joseph Williams Publishes New Polar Projection Maps

Julean Arnold, venerable ex-foreign service officer who has spent quite a bit of his life in the Orient, paid an unexpected visit to the college last May. Being interested in geography, Arnold visited instructor Joseph Williams' laboratory.

"Why hasn't there been a good map of the Pacific area made?" challenged Arnold. This surprised Williams who always thought that the Pacific area was too large for an accurate map. But now the question was put to him by a man who President Theodore Roosevelt ordered to Peiking, China, in 1902.

Inspired by Arnold's remark, Williams got busy, did some research work in cartographical textbooks, and in three months had finished a global map drawn with an "azimuthal equidistant projection as applied to the intersection of the equator." Maps of this variety are unique, according to Williams.

"The need today is for maps different from those of pre-World War II vintage," Williams said. "Before this war maps were centered on equatorial areas, but today, they are centered on Polar areas. This is important, since it stresses short distances from one air base to another in the same hemisphere."

Instructor Williams is no stranger to this game of drawing 'em where they should be drawn. He majored in economics during his under-graduate days at the University of California, but ended up as a rabid student of geography.

Williams studied cartography for two years at the University of Vienna, and when he returned to the United States was appointed as an instructor in geography at Los Angeles City College.

If you'll take a glance at the global maps on this page, you'll notice the vast expanse of water and the distortion of land. Right now you can comprehend that present day war strategy is decided on immense emptiness rather than good, solid land on which armies may launch gigantic infantry maneuvers.

Democracy

Election A Farce

COLLEGE students pride themselves upon the fact that they are a student democracy, engaging in student government to run their college affairs, but all too often is that privilege taken for granted. San Francisco Junior College had its example of this when college classes held semi-annual elections.

Student voters attending this election numbered five per cent. Five per cent of a student body of 1600 students turned out to engage in that political freedom for which our country is noted.

It was hardly the fault of the student leaders that the vote was so pitifully small. Ample advertising of the fact was made over the public address system and the late college rally, and the candidates for office knew of the forthcoming election by filing their intentions to run for class offices. Where does the fault lie?

Students of this institution, as well as those of others, have been taking a great deal for granted. They expect great things of their student leaders, expect social programs from their class organizations, but they apparently think that an organization depends upon active members if it is to run smoothly. 'Let Joe do it,' cries out the mob. And poor, ordinary Joe College tries to do what a large majority fail to do.

The student election is only one of many things that does not get ample support from the student body. But the elections can be termed as the most important function of our student organizations. Participation in governmental study not only helps the student enjoy his college life with an added zest, but also educates youth in the job that is expected of him in later life, the activities of the American way of government.

Because of the inactivity of our students in the late election, it was possible for one fraternal organization to capture most of the class executive posts, forming a political monopoly and placing that particular group in a place of domination in campus affairs. This political monopoly at the hands of one group can only be blamed upon the student body, for if they had participated wholeheartedly in the election no one organization would be in such an enviable position. We have only ourselves to blame. No amount of talk will remedy the current situation, but by placing all of our support in the forthcoming campaigns, we can have our student government as we wish it to be.

Laxity in our duties cannot be tolerated in days such as these. We, as students, must act as seriously and thoughtfully as we possibly can in moulding the path we wish our government to follow, whether it be a student, state or national body. The United States is depending upon us, the younger generation, for the spirit of leadership that will lead this nation in the peaceful years to come, and we can accomplish this by acting wisely in our forming years which is NOW!

We Quote

Education In War

YOU inhabit an oasis of the good life in the midst of whirling sandstorms of the desert. You are suspended in time for a few moments of peace and beauty before you graduate to take your place in the world of marching armies. No serious sacrifice has yet been asked of you.

Your brothers who graduated last June and the Junes before that are many of them already in the armed forces. Boys whom I admitted to college just the other day are writing me that they are commissioned in Navy or Marine Corps—some on the Atlantic patrol, some in the Caribbean, some awaiting orders . . .

What then are you here for? Why do you come to Amherst when the world is at war? What is a college for in such a world? And what is your responsibility this afternoon?

Obviously you have a responsibility. Society, in offering you the opportunities of a college education instead of war material, does not do so for your personal pleasure and enjoyment. It does not single out a few young men for a pleasant holiday while it is enlisting your brothers for war work. Colleges must take their full share of responsibility in the emergency and you as college men must each do your part. You are here to train and develop your minds, to acquire so much of the common heritage of our Western civilization as you can assimilate, to keep your bodies fit, and to develop those traits of character and in intellectual integrity on which can be built a better social organism. This is a serious and a difficult program. It is a program which will enlist the best you have.

—President Stanley King, Amherst College.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

News Bureau Fan; Parking Lot; Pavement Please

• Tonic For Students
Editor, The Guardsman:

Now that The Guardsman is coming out but twice a month, instead of once a week, why doesn't The Guardsman establish that Guardsman Radio News Bureau again. It would at least give the students a chance to find out what's going on in the college.

This is no "slam" on The Guardsman, and I don't blame them one bit, since they are working on a limited budget. A news broadcast each Monday and Wednesday of each week would be just the tonic to install student cooperation around the campus.

Elizabeth M.

Editor's Note: A good idea, but, would it?

• What Again!
Editor, The Guardsman:

As a student who has trudged through three inches of dust twice a day in order to get to college, I'd like to know just what is being done about the parking lot.

After working all summer moving dirt from one section to another and back again, the apparent result only promises to create one massive mudhole surrounding the college on three sides at the first sign of rain.

I'm no engineer, and may have the wrong slant on the whole thing. If there really has been something accomplished that's not visible to the untrained eye how about running a story in the next issue of The Guardsman and setting me straight?

Any enlightment The Guardsman can furnish on the subject will do much to reassure myself as well as others who anticipate trying to park their cars in a large mudhole.

Hopefully,

B. B.

• Stormy Weather—
Editor, The Guardsman:

I'm not complaining about walking down to the men's gymnasium, but shouldn't there be a suitable path leading to the place? Part of the path, as it now stands, is fine, but that stretch of earth connecting the first stairways—halfway down toward the gymnasiums—is really a detriment to society.

I suggest that it be paved before the rainy season commences, or maybe someone will institute a "towing service" to pull unfortunate victims out of the mud. How about looking into the matter?

I. C. Mudd

Editor, The Guardsman:

Why doesn't the college have a service flag? Already a large number of former students and staff members have left to join the armed forces. Many of these men are now engaged in actual battle; yet the college has no method of commemorating their service.

It has been said that the cost of a star for each man would be too much. However, if one star is used to represent 10 men wouldn't the cost be cut sufficiently to enable us to have a flag?

Let's start a campaign for a service flag. After all, if organizations that haven't contributed as many men to the war effort as the college can afford a flag, why can't we?

A Student

GAL a vanting with Hoagy

Now that the college has exhausted its supply of the knowledge known as "the first two weeks of school," the scholars again revert back to school-daze. The small clusters of stoogents are again forming about the silver pole, bevies are again buzzing between book rows in the library, and the prominent registrar office crowd has become extinct.

AT THE BOOK STORE

Any afternoon after 2:00 ask Sallie Nelson about her wide silver bracelet adorned with raised carved silver, ask Marlyn Bush about her white, sloppy joe length sweater, ask Jim McGill about the "wing ding" in front of the store t'other day, ask Tubby why she doesn't want to go back to the salt mines.

Miggs Abbett looking very "twitter-pated" was leaning on the book-case in her pink, boxy, casual coat. The center of attraction was Pat Farell's green and white ski sweater. Centering female attention was "Hank" in a white sport sweater.

It happened in a lecture during roll-call. "Doc" was rapidly listing names when on the group a silence fell, there was no reply. A little Chinese boy sang out "Here," and the little Audreyental just laughed and laughed because he knew he wasn't June Walsh.

After consulting the weather bureau, a clairvoyant and Robert Gardner we are safe to assume warmer days will govern the styles. Dorothy Ranizotti's creation, falls into this category. It's a large flowered chintz, colored in pasteis. It flatters a thin waist and has a full gathered skirt. The young in heart will praise Peggie Shannon's nautical navy blue sailor. Alike any other sailor dress except that it features a low waist and has a full all-around pleated skirt.

There's nothing like . . . Joan Cecil's red rimmed harlicon "specks," the feeble representation at the class elections, Helen Platier's resemblance to Hedy Lamarr, finding out about Roosevelt's visit, that strange feeling that goes with night downtown shopping, Jim Skinner in glasses, and Ernestine Cervelli's red and blue blazer suit.

HOAGY'S SHOULDER

Dear Aunt Hoagy:

After jiving to juke box music I finally came to the conclusion that I don't know what swing is. Please give me a definition.

Eye Cutarug

Dear Eye:

Swing is what most musicians should do—from the end of a rope.

Hoagy

Dear Aunt Hoagy:

The philosophers around the campus have their ideas about the advantages of a college education. Some say it is to get a good position after graduation. Others say it is to learn to play bridge and at the same time carry on a conversation with 20 people. I disagree with these. What da ya say college bred is made of?

Jim Madsen

Dear Jimmie:

College bred is made from the flower of youth and the dough of old age.

Somewhere I'll Find You . . . it's Gable's last!

BRING along your asbestos overcoat when you see Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sizzling celluloid adaptation of the Charles Hoffman tale, Somewhere, I'll Find You, for it co-stars those terrific twins of torrid sex appeal, Clark Gable and Lana Turner.

If you can imagine Miss Turner as a woman foreign correspondent rescuing Chinese refugees in Indo-China, or Gable dictating stories to a secretary, while Jap Zeros roar over the foxholes of Bataan, then you must have quite an imagination. When Paula Lane (Turner) was cub reporter for the New York Chronicle, she had a "crush" on Johnny Davis (Gable), but Johnny, being strictly a "love 'em and leave 'em" guy is assigned to Berlin.

Paula, being lonely, turns her affections to Kirk Davis, Johnny's younger brother correspondent, who is a very nice fellow who signs all his live letters with a "sincerely yours." Johnny returns to the States, afterward, learns that Paula and Kirk are almost engaged, and attempts to prove to Kirk that Paula is a tramp and no-good. One lasting look at Paula, however, renews his Lothario nature and he falls completely in love with the baby-faced correspondent all over again, while Kirk (Robert Sterling) dies a patriotic death battling the Japs in the Philippines.

This is Gable's last picture for the duration and it will be probably be his final film for a long time to come. His cinematic treatment of Johnny Davis, wisecrackin' journalist, is done in true Gable fashion, and you begin to wonder if Gable weren't portraying Gable the actor.

Miss Turner, of the naive expression and body beautiful, has yet to prove that she can act, but in her case, she doesn't have to emote. Both Gable and Miss Turner have that uncanny ability to extract the "ohs and ahs" from the gallerytes everytime they go into their clinch routines.

This department has been wondering if that genial gentleman, Will Hays, was dozing at the time this picture started burning the nation's screens. Thanks to a racy sereen play by Marguerite Roberts, the dialogue is ambiguously spicy and overloaded with snappy inuendos by all the persons involved.

Reginald Owen and Lee Patrick, who portray a happily married Greenwich Village couple, offer splendid comic relief. Their apartment, you might say, is a Grand Central Station for war-weary correspondents. Others in the photoplay include Charles Dingle, a narrow-minded newspaper editor; Patricia Dane, just another dame stranded in Manila; Rags Ragland, a Brooklyn masseur with fighting instinct; and Sarah Hadden, a matronly-appearing receptionist.

The man behind the megaphone on this Metro box-office success was Wesley Ruggles, a man who once directed 'em for Columbia and Paramount. The battle scene used for an anti-climax thriller is well done and justifiable since this is a tale of the men who write about the war. Even of Somewhere, I'll Find You has an ending paralleling that of Alfred Hitchcock's Foreign Correspondent, they still pay off at the box-office.

Attraction number two on the same bill is Escape From Crime, a dull B fillum, co-featuring Richard Travis and Julie Bishop, with a cast of unimportant Warner Bros. stock players.

Parade Of Opinion

"OUR schools, public and private, have always been molds in which we cast the kind of life we wanted. Today, what we all want is victory, and beyond victory a world in which free men may fulfill their aspirations. So we again turn to our educators and ask them to help us mold men and women who can fight through to victory. We ask that every schoolhouse become a service center for the home front. And we pray that our young people will learn in the schools and in the colleges the wisdom and forbearance and patience needed by men and women of good will who seek to bring to this earth a lasting peace." Franklin D. Roosevelt, in a letter to educators released in "Education for Victory."

"Thoughtful Americans see grave consequences in excluding religious education from our public schools. It was never intended that the separation of church and state in education should deprive children of the resources of religion," Einar W. Jacobsen, dean of the school of education, University of Pittsburgh, views religion as a necessity in the schools.

"If the present struggle between force and reason has any lesson for educators, it is that the development of personal freedom must be accompanied by the development of a sense of responsibility to and for those democratic ideals—and institutions which alone can give meaning to freedom." Dr. I. L. Kandel of Columbia Teachers College urges greater emphasis on moral values.

"Only by the painful drudgery of learning words and their uses, only by mastering spelling and grammar and syntax, only by writing and writing and writing and then rewriting, can the student learn to write. There is no short-cut." Fred L. Kildow, assistant professor of journalism, University of Minnesota, underscores the point that writers are made, not born.

We Knew Them When . . . . . by Hayworth

A SALUTE TO THE NAVY!

Remember the dark medium-sized fellow, with black hair and eyes, a happy grin, a favorite with both sexes, especially the fairer ones, who attended the college here until the fall of '41 when he left to go into the United States Navy.

That dear fellow students, in case your memory needs refreshing, was Gene Powell, dashing young Lothario who while holding down the presidency of the Associated Men Students, displayed a rare talent of managing things in general.

Along the first of this eventful semester, Gene publicly announced (via The Guardsman) that with his able assistants and committees, he planned to revise the old AMS constitution, since it was, in their (his) opinion, rather outmoded.

Evidently, he did somewhat revise something, for things moved fast and furiously throughout the semester.

Aside from this, at every college dance, if one were speculating on such, Gene could be seen smiling at the fair students from left and right, over his partner's head. That's using excellent strategy isn't it, (political, that is.)

Any how, the following semester, (fall of '41) Gene was elected president of the Associated Students. With all his fraternity and sister sorority behind him besides other ardent fans, he was a cinch, n'est-ce pas?

Unforunately, however, the political career of this mighty he-man at the college was cut short early in the semester when he was called into the Navy.

From San Francisco, Gene went to Pensacola Florida to Naval Training School, where he graduated with the commission of First Lieutenant. Just in case some aren't aware of it, this is a rank comparable to captaincy in the Army.

Nice going Gene! We're proud to have known you.

When Gene left the college, he turned the presidential reins of the Associated Students go-cart over to Harry Haesloop, a nice quiet fellow, with plenty of spunk and enthusiasm to carry the job off to a beautiful finis.

Harry had been active in AMS activities and other student activities in preceding semesters. He graduated from the college in the spring of '42 (last semester, wasn't it), and also, like hi[illegible] became a member of the U. S. Navy shortly after.

It is likely that graduating students of this semester will also recall the next mentioned fellows in this group.

Remember the fellow who was everyone's friend, tall blonde fellow with the ever-ready winning smile—Bill Loshen.

Bill graduated from the college in the spring of '41, leaving behind him friends galore as well as quite a record of participation in student affairs.

That semester, f'instance, he was chairman of the Welfare Committee, chairman of the Traditions Committee of the High Sophomore Class, and vice-president of the Associated Students for a short time.

The summer following his graduation, Bill joined the U. S. Naval Air Force, and is at the present time stationed at the U. S. Naval Air Base at Fort Worth, Texas, with the commission of Second Lieutenant.

Jim Upp, last semester's well known yell leader, enlisted as a cadet in the Naval Air Force in July this summer, and is now waiting on call to go to St. Mary's [illegible]ke his primary or basic flying instructions.

Curtis Lee Floyd, last semester reporter on The Guardsman staff, also enlisted in the Naval Air Corps as a cadet this past August.

Curt came out from Oklahoma before the beginning of last semester, and was only enrolled here for the one semester.

Bob Lindemann, graduate of Alameda High, another ex-student whom many of you will remember, joined the Navy sometime this last spring.

Bob was quite active in student affairs, being Welfare Chairman during the fall semester of '41, listed as a member of the Judicial Committee (wasn't he connected in some way with the alleviation of the parking problems of the students here—at the college, I mean), and was a member of Phi Lambda Epsilon.

Theodore Condo, another of our ambitious ex-students who was active in student affairs, enlisted in the U. S. Naval Air Corps on New Year's Day of this year. Ted received his early training at Corpis Christi, Texas.

Well that's all kidlets, but next issue will bring more passing remarks of students whom you all have known "in," "out," and "around" the classrooms.

RAM-CUB GAME ACID TEST FOR EISAN AND CO.

RAMS OPPOSE CUBS TOMORROW

RAMblings By Nick Barbarotto

L.A. Trip Has Highlights; Basketball Begins Monday

IT WAS EDUCATIONAL

The trip to Los Angeles (thanks again to LACC) proved to have more interesting highlights for the boys on Lee Eisan's squad than the game itself. Of course the fellows mentioned the contest on their return, and of how the score should have been a scoreless tie, but their talk is mostly concerned with what happened before and after the game.

Each one relates a different story on his experiences while in the southland and for a moment we were so confused that we couldn't remember a one. Herb Jensen, who played a lot of end during the afternoon, tells the one about the boys hitting a famed Hollywood "soda fountain" and coming across actresses Claire Trevor and Sally Ellers nibbling on a banana split.

Then there's the little incident concerning Ed Giovia and Larry Martin. It seems that they were so uneasy about the game that they decided to get a good night's sleep before the kickoff. So they ordered six coca colas, locked themselves in their bedrooms, and refused to allow any other member of the squad to disturb them.

The hotel which the Los Angeles City College graciously paid the expenses for a two night stay was situated on 5th and Main Streets and entitled the Rosslyn Hotel. How well we remember 5th and Main from one of our vacation journeys.

It makes the Embarcadero look like a Park Avenue parade! And it has 3rd and Howard beaten to a pulp!

But then, who is anyone to moan? . . . It was all for free, was it not?

But the old saying has it . . . "You can't have everything." That proved true when the Cubs were given a touchdown after the referee had called that the Los Angeles ball carrier stepped out of bounds on the 12 yard line. No one knows what happened, but a second later the same ref was waving his arms above his head—signifying a touchdown! That incident gave Los Angeles a 7 to 0 victory.

But they paid for it . . .

At any rate, everyone claims to have had a good time plus meeting many LA beauties. And to listen to the fellows, they really are something. Everything went along in tip-top shape . . . beautiful girls, hotel accommodations, plenty of time to wonder about, good food, and even Harry the Bellboy was obliging.

FROM CUBS TO CUBS

Tomorrow the squad ventures to Santa Rosa in search of its first victory of the season. Little is known about the Cubs and a peerless pick would be purely guess work.

Even Coach Eisan is in the dark concerning Santa Rosa's strength. However, the Ram coach expects his squad to come through on the long end of the score.

The Rams did show a decided improvement against LACC as against the Coast Guard Reserves. In that contest, the team looked very much unoraganized and they left in the minds of some of the spectators a doubt as to whether they knew what a football was actually used for.

But things were different last Saturday! The Rams showed that they were coming right along and will prove dangerous from here on in. If the rate of improvement continues in tomorrow's game, we are willing to wager that Eisan and Co. will come through.

However, victory depends mostly on the line. In the past the Rams have been completely outcharged in that department by the opponents, a factor which greatly decides the outcome of a game. But Eisan has been working strenuously all week, emphasizing that point, and endeavoring to overcome the weakness.

His results will be seen tomorrow as the Rams topple Santa Rosa!

INTRAMURALS UNDERWAY

Jack Brady is in his usual fury about this time getting ready to start the intramural tournament. Basketball begins Monday and Brady is busy arranging a schedule that will follow a round robin procedure.

Eight teams have entered the tournament, but as yet who plays who and when has not been figured out. But for the competitors, Brady says that the schedule will be posted in the gym tomorrow.

We were looking over the names of the teams entered and were amazed at some of the titles chosen by the squads. Terry and the Pirates, for instance. That's the best we've heard yet. And it may prove to be the best of the lot, with Jack Terry, ace basketeer for Coach Tom Wilson, on the loose.

Even the Navy is entered! S'funny nobody called themselves the Marines, the Army, or the Coast Guard. Then we could move the games to Kezar Pavilion, charge admission, and raise the college budget.

Four fraternities have entered, one more than last year. The Beta Phi Beta tops the list, followed by the Tri Epsilon, Beta Tau, and the Psi Lambda Phi. Should it be a fraternity tournament only, the Beta Phi Beta would undoubtedly walk away with the championship. But with such clubs as the Rifle Club and the Newman Club also entered, the final outcome should be a toss up.

The Salmons make the eighth team and may prove more dangerous than they sound. And from secret sources comes word that the Tri Epsilon aggregation will field a team that will figure much higher than last semester.

DRAKE, McGOWAN SPLIT

We received a couple of letters from Duke Drake and Jim McGowan a few days ago, and much to their dismay . . . they were put in different companies. They like the Navy life, however, but they likewise miss the old college.

Good news comes from McGowan's side only one week after his arrival in San Diego. Because of the military science and police training courses he took while attending this college, he was appointed Chief Petty Officer of his company.

Not bad at all!

So far, most of their time has been spent getting inoculated against various diseases, marching, washing, and doing guard duty.

CONGRATULATIONS, GREEN

We'd like to congratulate Robin Green for his fine act of sportsmanship prior to the LACC game. Its old news that only 22 players were allowed to make the trip south, and Green was one of the unfortunate players who was supposed to stay home.

But Green couldn't see it that way at all. Not even if he had to go down on his own . . . and that's exactly what he did! Taking his automobile and inviting five other subs to make the trip, Green left nine o'clock Friday morning and arrived in Los Angeles at 7:30 that night.

The six saw action, making their trip an effort worth while.

Lack Of Finances And Coach Cause Red And White To Abandon Soccer; More Coaches Expected To Leave

Lack of finances and coach coverage were given as reasons why the college soccer team has been temporarily abandoned, Russ Sweet, college mentor, said today.

"The college has been partially handcuffed this semester as far as finances are concerned," Sweet explained. "The administration, because of the small enrollment caused by the war, has been forced to curtail many of the activities which were formerly institutions and customs.

"Soccer," Sweet remarked, "is not the only popular activity to be thrown aside because of lack of funds." According to Sweet there are countless more which were not considered important in the war effort.

"Coaches are in demand also," Sweet said. "We have lost two coaches to the services of the navy and are expecting to lose even more. So you see, we can consider ourselves lucky that we even have a football team to yell for."

Women's Athletics

Health Examination Only Repuirement For Students To Compete In Activities

The Women's Athletic Association, which contains many individual clubs, is open to all women students. The only requirement is a health examination by Alice Porter during her office hours, and participation in the sports and activities of the association.

Beginners in WAA sports should receive instruction in regular physical education credit sections before competing in WAA this year, because the department is limited to its staff and club sponsors.

Women Commandettes

Future WAACS and WAVES will have all the fundamental training required by regular participation in the Women's Physical Fitness Program on Monday and Wednesday. Tests, combative, and body conditioning are being offered to our forthcoming WAACS and WAVES.

The interest in WAA increases as the various clubs get "in the swing" of organization and activity.

Badminton, which was the first sport to get under way Thursday, October 1, will hold regular meetings Tuesday and Thursday at 1 p.m. in the women's gym. Andrea Noble has volunteered to sponsor the club. An all-college doubles tournament will be organized and matches will be played during club or class time Fridays from 1 to 3 o'clock. Sports days with local high schools and state colleges are being planned. Dorothy Fairbanks, new WAA secretary, has organized the Badminton Club. Any women interested in this sport should partake in it, Miss Farbanks stated.

Weiss Organizes Bowling

Bowling is being organized by Marjorie Weiss, the high point bowler of the college last year and manager of the club. The bowling trophy won last spring in the college tournament at the Downtown Bowl is on display in the new WAA office in the women's gym. Miss Weiss announced that the Bowling Club will meet at the Lincoln Bowl Wednesday at 3:30 p.m., but this is still tentative. "We will arrange matches with local high school and college teams in the near future," Miss Keller stated.

Riding will be organized on Thursday at 4 p.m. at the San Francisco Riding Academy, Miss Keller reported. This sport is co-educational, open to men.

No Skating Club

The Skating Club which was coeducational will not be organized this fall as no sponsor can be found. If someone would volunteer to sponsor this club, it would certainly be appreciated by the students to whom the Ice Skating Carnival—our own "J. C. Follies" held a special date on the college calendar. Several skating champions have taken part in former years, Bill Hart, Peggy Egan and others.

Miss Weber, sponsor of the Archery Club stated, "After a few weeks of practice, archers will have an opportunity to participate in several shoots—The Junior Columbia and Columbia Rounds which the archers have participated in former years."

Big Fall Playday

The playday in which all the Junior Colleges and State Colleges of this area take part, has been scheduled for November 7. Any women who would like to partake in the Archery, Badminton, Tennis, Ping Pong and Basketball contests are urged to sign up at the gym.

First aid cards for spring, 1942, the class of James Jensen are in the gym offices. Call for your card.

Playleaders Still Needed For Playground Positions

Playleaders, preferable 20 or more, are needed on school playgrounds 3 to 6 daily, Saturday 9 to 6, at 75 cents per hour. Workers for playgorunds report to Placement Bureau and see Mr. Sliva. This is open to San Francisco students!

Side Lines

Disputed Score Wins For LACC

By Bob Catudio

Los Angeles City College 7, the Rams 0:

The Rams lost their second game of the season on the flukiest of touchdowns. In the second quarter, Tackle Jim Duncan slashed through the LA line, deflected the ball from an LA halfback's fingertips, and before the ball hit the turf, an LA end gathered in the ball and raced along the sidelines for a touchdown.

Fullback Al Morris stood near the 12-yard line along with the referee. The ref had his foot placed on the sidelines.

"Did he step out there, ref?" queried Morris.

The ref grunted, "Yeah!"

The payoff: A changed decision, six points for LA, and Coach Lee Eisan did a sideline act that would have made Orin "Babe" Hollingberry look like a piker.

Saturday night, Eisan planed out of LA arriving in San Francisco just in time to referee the USF-Nevada game out at Kezar Stadium. He was a mighty dejected-looking man, but he smiled when a bystander remarked: "That all of the officials (for the LA game) were selected with the consent of both coaches.

LACC was once the home of the University of California at Los Angeles before the Bruins moved lock, stock and barrel to the other side of town at Westwood. There were 1,758 spectators out at Snyder Field and they made the Rams feel right at home.

Milo Abercrombie, the team's manager, now has a haircut that would make Edgar Kennedy look like Prince Charming. He was going to an "after the game" party that night . . . before he bumped into the gang.

Sub lineman, Robin Green, did a Frank Merriwell act, when he arrived in Los Angeles Friday night, his car loaded to the gills with substitute Ram players. Coach Eisan sent 'em all into the fray, too!

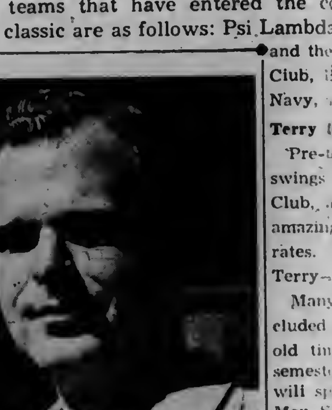
The fellows had turns calling the plays. First Eddie Giovia, then Harland Ferrando, and occasionally Bob Jones. Bob Cavender, the regular left halfback, did not make the trip south. Naval duty kept him stationed at his post (he's in the Navy) here in the bay area.

Most of the fellas went to Hollywood after the game. Second string tackle, Jack DeGraee and others, stopped in at the Palladium, where Jimmy Dorsey and his orchestra were jivin'. They were mingling with the movie stars all right, but they were singing the praises of Helen O'Connell, Dorsey's throaty vocalist.

Sweet Builds Temporary Track For Commando Work

The fact that a temporary track consisting of commando obstacles is in the progress of being built was made known this week by Russ Sweet, track mentor at the college.

"The commando track," Sweet remarked, "consists of many obstacles which benefit the legs and wind of the participant so as to benefit him and better prepare him for the various branches of Uncle Sam's armed forces to which he will undoubtedly be called sooner or later."



Sweet explained further that the students will participate in events which will strengthen their arms. He gave as an example the rope-climb which is used to strengthen the forearms, and finger and hand grips.

Intramural

Cage Tournament Begins Next Monday, October 12; Eight Teams Enter Fight For Title

Signed, sealed, and submitted are the monickers of eight basketball teams who will get into intramural action starting next Monday, October 12, according to Jack Brady, faculty intramural director.

The teams that have entered the college's umpteenth intramural classic are as follows: Psi Lambda Phi, The Salmons, Terry and the Pirates, Rifle Club, Newman Club, Beta Phi Beta, Beta Tau, the Navy, and Tri Epsilon.

Handsome Jack Brady, faculty intramural director, shown with a far-away look in his eyes, as though he foresees another successful intramural semester.

Terry Has Pirates

Pre-tourney favoritism probably swings toward the Beta Tau, Rifle Club, and the quintet with a most amazing name, Terry and the Pirates. The team manager is Jack Terry—so!

Many of the team members included on this year's clubs are all old timers, having participated last semester. Intramural director Brady will speak tonight at the Associated Men Students' Smoker, and according to advance information, will speak to the freshmen of the college on the merits of intramural sports.

Only one player from last semester's first string All-Intramural basketball team will participate this season. He is Julio Gahn, manager of the Beta Tau five. Two other players who cavorted with Gahn and the runner-up Spartans last semester are Richmond Sedley and Johnny Quaccia.

Rifle Club Intact

Under any circumstances, the Rifle Club must be considered a threat to cop the intramural cage title. Save for the loss of Jim Juri by graduation, the Rifle Club is completely intact. They retain Bob Ibarolle, Bill Mahoric, Paris Kazee, Les Kranes and Roger Heller.

Tri Epsilon, one of the tail end clubs last semester, is composed of Don Scherba, Bob Stahmer, Jimmy Lee, Jim Skinner, and Billy Steenberg. The Triple-E boys may not come close to the top in this tournament, but, at least, they'll try.

Newmans Lose Stars

Not much can be said for the Newman Club. For the last six semesters they have had teams bracketed in the upper division, and they have cornered the market on team championships.

This semester, however, their chances to come out on top are slim. They are missing Bob Marcus, Walt Luthi, Perry Thornton, Hal Woods, and high scoring Jack Koster. Koster and Marcus, incidentally, were selected on last semester's All-Intramural quintet.

Newmans May Enter Two

This war-time version of what was once a powerful club will have Ted Dyken, Dan-Dabster, Dudley Sullivan, and Ted Boffinger comprising the Newman nucleus. There is a possibility that the Newmans will enter two teams in the tournament, but no one knows where the material will be coming from.

Terry and the Pirates, a team comprised of men who are out for varsity basketball, includes Mickey McCabe, Ed Lapaynade, and George Vogiotsis. This may be the team to watch, but you can never tell in an intramural cage tourney.

Beta Phi Beta Strong

Beta Phi Beta, which finished "in the middle," has solicited the services of Johnny Scharetg, Nick Barbarotto, Dick Pfaff, Keith Tomley, and Tom Kellogg. The Beta Phi Betas may, by determination, surprise some of the tourney favorites.

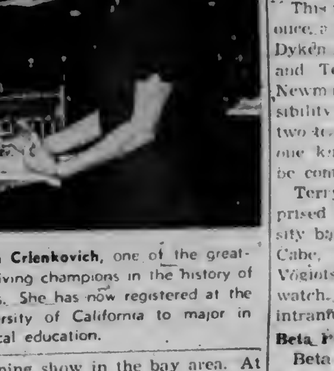
Information on the other entrants is lacking, but commencing next Monday, all pre-tourney dope and inside information will be thrown to the winds as the clubs roll into action. (The intramural schedule will be posted in the men's gymnasium tomorrow.)

Other Contests

Following basketball, the intramural program will begin separate tournaments in horseshoes, table tennis, volleyball, touch-tackle football, badminton, boxing, and possibly tennis.

All basketball games will be played in the men's gymnasium. The schedule, when drawn up, will be set so that games will not conflict with other regular classes in the science building, Brady said.

Swimming



Crlenkovich Enrolls At Berkeley Campus

Helen Crlenkovich, 21-year-old national diving champion, registered at the University of California this week, transferring from this college.

The versatile, "voluntarily retired" diving queen will continue the work she started here, that is, majoring in physical education. Upon graduation from the Berkeley institution, Miss Crlenkovich intends to become a physical education instructor with hopes of instructing others in the work that has made her a national champion in high diving.

Willing Performer

Miss Crlenkovich is no stranger to bay area aquatic fans, since the gracious springboard champion has participated in almost every amateur swimming show in the bay area. At the present, she is manager of the Fairmont Hotel Terrace Plunge succeeding former instructor, Phil Patterson.

Helen Crlenkovich, one of the greatest diving champions in the history of sports. She has now registered at the University of California to major in physical education.

She is a graduate of Mission High School and the most conscientious amateur champion the city has ever seen, according to members of the Aamateur Athletic Union. Last December, the "Golden Bear Junior" was invited to appear in a series of swimming exhibitions in the Hawaiian Islands.

War Interrupts Trip

This invitation, however, was rudely interrupted by the outbreak of martial activities in the Pacific. Had not the war been on in Europe, Miss Crlenkovich would undoubtedly have been a contestant in the Olympic Games—that year in Helsinki, Finland.

Vicki Taylor, the junior national champion, is the sole remnant of the Fairmont trio of Vivian Needham, and the Misses Taylor and Crlenkovich registered at this college.

Expect First Victory Over Valley Squad

Striding into the third game of their schedule after two previous losses, the college Rams face a fighting Santa Rosa Bear Cub at the junior college field at Santa Rosa tomorrow afternoon. Kickoff is at 2 o'clock sharp.

Little is known of the Cubs this year, outside of the fact they use a short punt formation, a single wing and an unbalanced line. Santa Rosa has a new coach this year, name unknown however, but, because he is from the University of Washington, it is more than likely that the Cubs will use the Notre Dame style of play. That is the same type employed by Washington.

Rams Lose 7 to 0

Playing under the hospitality of the Los Angeles City College squad, the Ram varsity lost a tough one last Saturday afternoon, when the Crimson Tide scored a 'fluke' touchdown in the beginning of the second quarter, converted, and then held off repeated Ram drives to win 7 to 0.

The touchdown was of questionable types. On third down, after two repeated line plays which gained them exactly nothing, the LACC halfback faded back and threw a pass which was knocked up into the air by Jim Duncan, varsity tackle, as he came charging through the line. He deflected it into the arms of the Cub end, who raced down the sidelines, stepping all over the chalk markers, dodging repeated attempts by the Ram players to knock him out of bounds, and crossed the goal line standing up, completing a 50 yard play.

Eisan Likes Ends

Coach Lee Eisan said, "we looked pretty good in the first quarter, but from then on, only in spots. The ends played very good, but the tackles and guards didn't live up to expetations, and the tackling and blocking was sloppy."

Of all the players who performed in the game, Allyn Morris was most outstanding. He was a tower of strength on defense; backing up the line and plugging up holes as the LACC backfield attempted to charge through. On offense he was tearing through the line for large gains, and blocking on running plays. By the end of the game, he had a wrenched shoulder and a banged up leg, but with all of that, Morris will be in the Santa Rosa tilt, playing his usual game at fullback.

Smith Lost For Season

The varsity has lost the services of one Glen Smith, 235 pound guard who threw his shoulder out of place in the Coast Guard game. It is doubtful whether he will be able to play for the remainder of the season. The squad also felt the loss of Bob Cavender, varsity quarterback and No. 1 signal caller, in the LACC game. Bob had to be on duty Friday night and couldn't get down to Los Angeles in time for the game.

Assistant Coach Tom Conlan wishes it to be known that the squad was given the very best of service while in Los Angeles. "The LACC band met the team at the station as they came in on the Streamliner and escorted them to the Hotel Rosslyn, where the Rams stayed Friday and Saturday nights," said Conlan.

Conlan's final words were, "we will improve 100 per cent for the Santa Rosa game tomorrow."

No Serious Injuries

There were no serious injuries sustained by the Ram players in the LACC contest, save for the unexpected "out of wind" bump received by halfback Charley Cook. Gerry Pearce, ex-Sacred Heart High School performer, was almost the victim of heat prostration, and only sheer determination kept him from leaving the field on a stretcher.

The Rams will line up as follows: Jones and Mangini, ends; Duncan and Martin, tackles; Valdemi and Prongos, guards; Giovia, center; Ferranda, quarterback; Cavender and Corcy, halfbacks, and Morris, fullback.

Locals Meet Sacramento Panthers On October 17

On Saturday, October 17, the college varsity will meet Sacramento Junior College, at Sacramento. Kickoff is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Details will be announced over The Guardsman Radio News Bureau broadcasts.

College Reserves

Board Returns To Campus Next Week; 500 Students Interviewed By Officers

Physically and mentally mature . . . well informed . . . excellent officer material.

These statements represent a consensus of the many compliments given President Cloud for our college men by the recruiting officers of the Army, Navy and Marines after their visit to the campus last week. Major Felton Watson, who interviewed the men for the Army Enlisted Reserve Corps, stated that "the conscientious work of the counselors was most apparent; my compliments to the administration and faculty for their interest and discrimination."

More than 500 applicants interviewed the Joint Procurement Board September 28 and 29. Louis G. Conlan, liaison procurement officer for the college, assisted by counselors George Green and Louis Berman, will advise prospective enlistees on the detailed procedures preliminary to actual enlistment.

Enlistments Here

Enlistments for the Army ERC, the Navy V1, V5, and V7 programs, the Marines and the Army Air Corps, will be taken on this campus October 19, 20 and 21. Enlistment will be conducted for those students who have completed the following procedure: two photographs, one full view and one profile; birth certificate or other evidence of citizenship (birth certificate and proof of citizenship for those not born in the United States); statement from Registrar J. Paul Mohr, three letters of recommendation from responsible citizens; parent's consent; and application blanks.

Host to the Joint Army-Navy-Marine Procurement Board, President Cloud is pictured on a tour of the campus with Major Felton Watson, Lieut. Commdr. Dwight C. Baker, Lieut. Robert Forte and Captain Carles Hammil.

Medical examinations complete the enlistment requirements. It is not anticipated that these examinations will be administered on the campus. Lieutenant Robert Forte cautioned all students "to have their parents consent on all Navy forms before appearing for their physical examination."

Delay Discouraged

All four procurement officers, Major Watson, Lieutenant Commander Baker, Captain Hammil and Lieutenant Forte, urge prospective candidates "not to delay enlistment," indicating that the opportunity to qualify for inactive status will not be open much longer.

A student's inactive status depends primarily upon his candidacy for the Bachelor's Degree, and this point was emphasized by the board. Student's who do not plan to qualify for a "line commission" have the opportunity to enlist in the air arms of the three branches of the services, or qualify for special ratings through enlistment.

"Students in the Hotel and Restaurant Division and the business division are particularly well qualified for technical ratings," said Lt. Commander Baker. Petty Officers, Warrant Officers and Technical Sergeants are in great demand in a variety of semi-professional fields. Enlistment in these classifications must be completed at the central recruiting offices in San Francisco.

Inactive Status

When questioned on the point of the probable extent of an enlistee's inactive status the procurement officers indicated that the candidates should be prepared for call at the point when they are of greatest potential need to their branch. In the instance of the Marines, Captain Hammill emphasized that the Leathernecks wanted college graduates only for their Officer Corps. In dire emergency it is possible that the formal collegiate education of these men might be shortened and the candidate advanced to officer candidate school before he receives his degree.

The Navy, according to Lt. Commander Baker, anticipates that the V7 enlistees will complete the bachelors degree. "Of course, it is understood," said Dr. Baker, "that the student's scholastic performance will be under strict scrutiny and the student is expected to accelerate his college program."

Foreign Languages Urged For Officer Candidates

"College men preparing for the Naval Reserve Corps must not overlook the importance of modern languages, not only for service in the war—but for successful living after the war," according to Lieut. Commander Dwight C. Baker, naval procurement officer, in a special interview on officer training programs.

"We regard German, Russian, Japanese, Spanish, French, Italian and Portuguese to be of equal importance with the requirements in physical science and mathematics," said Baker. "Students should prepare themselves for advanced language courses in reading and conversation if we are to hope for the kind of world citizenship on which permanent peace will be built."

Honor Society

A-G-S Opens Member Drive

Students who have maintained a standard of 30 grade points are encouraged to enroll in the Alpha Gamma Sigma, Alice Cooper, group adviser, stated this week.

Those desiring membership may obtain enrollment cards from either Miss Cooper, in Room 185, or from the Registrar's office.

Following is a list of those who have enrolled in the Alpha Gamma Sigma for the fall semester:

Permanent Members

Enzo Belli, Charles El Brain, Roger Camp, Hon W. Ding, Ada A. Garfunkel, Bruno Hahn, Barbara Jacobs, Dick Jeu, Viola Joe, Norman N. Kerr, Edward Lopez, Marbelle Marr, Louise Marsewic, William D. McLaughlin, Edith Nickelsburg, Jeanne O'Donnell, Harriet Ralston, Berta Reid, Ann N. Rossman, Roger Sousa, Robert Tomaselli, Frank Van Lieu, Lloyd Wellingham, Joan Wynne.

Associate Members

Dolores Anthony, Audrey Armstrong, Virginia Black, Barbara Caswell, Berry Clemenc, Beverly Clay, Thomas Cowan, William Dale James M. Membership is granted to students who have acquired 30 grade points, or a B average in one semester at the college. Those students with red seals enrolling from high schools are invited to join the society, but they must maintain their scholastic average in the college.

After a student has been a member of the society for three semesters, he is given permission to become a permanent member.

Juveniles has moved representatives of the Parent-Teachers Association to request a special course in Parent-Child Relationships. Phyllis Haley, instructor in psychology, is training a group of leaders in this study every Friday, from 11 to 12:30 o'clock here on the campus. Miss Haley has also been loaned to the Office of Civilian Defense to assist in their educational program, and to the college's extension training program for nurses.

The great demands of the war on our local hospitals has greatly curtailed the work of the various nurses training schools. Under the direction of Nelson Wells, life science, home economics and the psychology departments are carrying on essential courses in nursing at the hospitals and on the campus. Jane Scribner assists Wells in the courses in anatomy, physiology and biology, while Frances Mount, instructor in home economics, conducts the classes in nutrition.

Many Opportunities

Oportunities for study in the field of paint technology are open on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at the college. Walter C. Forbes, chemistry instructor, directs the work and is assisted by Rex Harlan.

Instructors from the business division devote four evenings each week as the faculty of the OPA War Agencies Institute. Ruth Gavin, Mildred Williams, Jernet Henderson, Margaret Flournoy, Ruth Nelson and Lloyd Luckmann are cooperating with William Blackler, education director for the regional office of OPA. Subjects offered at the Furniture Mart include typing, shorthand, speech, English and personality. One hundred and sixty-five employees are enrolled for the first eight-weeks session of the institute.

Club Advisory Board

Charter Renewals Required Of All Organizations; Deadline Set For Tomorrow Afternoon

Deadline for all charter renewals with no extensions is today at 3 p.m. All organizations failing to file their renewals during or up to the end of the meeting will face suspension, warned Dorothy Hogan, CAB president.

Suspension means loss of all recognition by the Associated Students and of all publicity for the organization in question. Miss Hogan states that all clubs must apply, including recognized, suspended, and newly organized organizations.

New organizations must go through a period of six months before the charter becomes final. Suspended groups wishing to be reinstated must pass through a probation period of two semesters.

Suspension Decision Final

Jim Madsen, vice president of the CAB will head the membership committee, in which the decision regarding the suspension of certain organizations will lie. The decision will be final and the Associated Students, The Guardsman, and Publicity Committee will be informed so that recognized privileges will be deprived the defunct clubs.

A complete roster of all the clubs will be made by the membership committee which will be presented to the Executive Council for approval.

"All clubs are urged to be present at Friday's meeting to submit their charters and to discuss plans for Join a Club Week. Monday will open the drive for new members in the college organizations. Throughout the week different clubs will campaign by poster, public address system, and word advertising. Ideas will be submitted by representatives regarding the drive for larger enrollments.

Sponsor Club Dance

Climaxing this week will be a Club Dance, under the supervision of Jim Madsen with the cooperation of both non-restricted and restricted organizations.

In cooperation with the Associated Students plans for a salvage drive, the CAB plans to conduct a record or coat hanger collection.

"At present," issued Miss Hogan, "the primary problem of the board is to stimulate active membership of students in college clubs and organizations." Thirty-eight clubs were given charter renewals granted from last semester, and surely there must be one to meet the interests of each and every student."

Campus Club Crier

● Associated Women Students

All women students are invited to attend a meeting on Thursday, October 22, at 11 o'clock in Room 136. Lieut. Mary McGlynn of the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps and Lieut. Tova Peterson of the Women's Auxiliary Volunteer Service will address the students.

● Omicron Phi Pi

Students who have maintained an A or B average in psychology, social science, economics, history, or accounting are eligible for admission in Omicro Phi Pi. Those eligible are requested to call at Room 188 between 10 and 1 o'clock next week. Michael Zarchin, group adviser, asked that former members consult him about reviving activities.

● Ice Skating Club

Officers will be introduced and plans for this semester's activities discussed at the special meeting on Friday evening, October 9 in Room 132. Regular meetings are held at Winterland every Friday afternoon. Girls are especially invited to join this club. Dr. Nelson Wells and Miss Jane Scribner are the faculty sponsors.

● Bible Club

Regular meetings will be held every Thursday in Room 200 at 11 o'clock. Dr. Marcus Sharsteidt, librarian, is the faculty sponsor.

Music

Musical Program Next Wednesday

Every Monday morning the program for the following Wednesday's Listening Hour will be posted on the bulletin board on the first floor. The schedule will include selections to be played at both the one and two o'clock programs.

Selections for future Listening Hours will be based largely on the requests of students who wish to review the coming opera season. These programs will include a brief discussion on the composer's life, a summary of the opera, and selected arias from the opera. On Wednesday, October 14, at two o'clock, selections from Coq D'or and Der Fledermaus will be featured.

Invitations To Choir

Although the A Cappella Choir has received several invitations, they have not, as yet, set any dates for performances. Flossita Badger, head of the music department, revealed last week. Later in the semester, however, the choir may repeat their program of last spring in the men's gymnasium.

New students in the choir include Beverly Bagley, Bebe Bell, Margaret Brady, Chloe Carrillo, Bert Church, Trumarr Davis, Dorothy Dean, Douglas Frame, Anne Guthrie, Pat Hamilton, Lillian Hubbard, Katherine Hough, Curtis Jones, La Vonne Jones, Rosalie Konigsberg, John Lavender, Donaldina Lew, Lawrence Lew, Rosemarie Melny, Robert Pflager, Berta Reid, Douglas Shull, Betty Schwabacher, Maeriv Williams, Wanda Williams, Lillian Yong.

College Called Upon To Aid Red Cross Knitting

Claire Cuneo, of the home economics department, last week issued a request that all students interested in knitting for the Red Cross call at Room 158 for directions.

Beginners will make squares for blankets or children's caps.

Short Courses

Emergency War Work Demands Adequate Skill

The College Business Training Division is offering an intensive program of short term courses designed to give prospective war workers adequate skills to meet emergency demands, Edward W. Larson, acting head of the department, disclosed this week.

Those who wish to prepare for employment in the shortest possible time are provided a sixteen week course in beginning shorthand and transcription. A brush-up stenography course will be offered to those students who have had previous training in shorthand, Larson said.

New Shorthand System

In addition to the regularly programmed Gregg Shorthand Courses, the Thomas system is now being introduced. The new system is designed to accelerate the progress of secretarial and stenographic students who wish to be equipped to enter business after a semester of intensive speed-up drill.

The demand for trained operators of various types of office machines has become acute in the past few months. To meet this need, short period courses of training in the operation of certain machines have been set up. Training for expertness will, of course, necessitate more than forty hours of instruction.

Business Machines Listed

Following is a list of machines that students may learn to operate: Burroughs and Underwood-Elliot-Fisher Billing Machines, Ditto and Standard Direct Duplicator, Dictaphone and Ediphone, Electric Addressograph, Electric Mimeograph and Niagra Duplicator, Electromatic Typewriter, Multigraph Duplicator, Rotary Gelatine Duplicator, Type-set Multigraph and Varityper. In addition there are the calculators, the key driven Burroughs and Comptometer, the crank drive Marchant and Monroe.

According to Larson, the classes on machines and the skill courses mentioned are given at various hours in the day so that students may get them on their programs. An emergency factor in attendance is the ever swelling ranks of adults, which indicates very plainly the increasing war-time role of the college.

Varied Registration

Larson pointed out that there are not only a number of cases of wives and mothers of service men who have enrolled, but also there are mother-daughter combinations in evidence as well.

Enrollment in certain courses is permitted at any time. As the Business Division is in the main, operating on an eight weeks basis, the next regularly set registration period is scheduled for November 12 and 13.

CAPITAL to CAMPUS

ACP's Ivy Richter Reports from Washington

WASHINGTON — (ACP) — Interesting because of his recent official connection with the government is C. A. Dykstra's recent analysis of the official government viewpoint toward colleges. Dykstra, president of the University of Wisconsin, headed the national draft machinery until appointment of General Hershey. "The government," he said in an address before the American Library Association, "considers America's institutions of higher learning as key centers in the war effort."

"At no time in human history have universities seemed so important in a national effort as they are right now in the United States," Dykstra maintained.

"Universities and colleges are reservoirs for the recruiting of fighting men, of specialists for national services, and teachers of men in training," he declared. "Their laboratories are being used 24 hours a day and their plants in general are being made available for national service. Their facilities are being used instead of providing new facilities in many areas.

"The government without question considers them a wartime necessity and it is using them as they never have been used before. Moreover, it is indicating in no uncertain terms that it wants these institutions to carry on their regular training and educational programs so that we may have a supply of men who can meet the challenges of next year, and the year following and so on into the days when we may have peace again. I does not want to face the fact of a lost generation of educated leadership."

America's national policy at this time contemplates the maintenance of vigorous and comprehensive educational programs, not in spite of the fact that we are at war, but because the war effort and the peace effort to follow require such services as universities have to offer, Dykstra explained.

"Such a policy requires from universities adaptability, resourcefulness, a keen awareness of national needs, selflessness and devotion to the national effort, and willingness to put first things first during a period of world conflict," he asserted.

"To do this does not require the sacrifice of standards or the relinquishment of long time objectives. It means only a temporary redirection of certain activities and changing emphasis where it becomes necessary. Our task in general remains the same, the education of the new generation, the making of citizens, the pushing outward of the bundaries of knowledge, and the serving of our country and our generation in practical ways, which will make our national life more decent and wholesome."

CONSTITUTION

The Constitution of the United States is able to meet the problems of modern life because the Supreme Court is using modern methods in making its decisions. This is "judicial statesmanship of the highest order," declares Robert E. Cushman, professor of government at Cornell University, in a new pamphlet titled What's Happening to Our Constitution? and published by the Public Affairs Committee.

The changed outlook of the court is not the result of the whims of new and younger judges, writes Professor Cushman. We must remember that the National Labor Relations Act and the Social Security Act were upheld before any Roosevelt appointee sat on the Court. "This revolution in the Court's method of work has come as a result of the application of a philosophy which runs back over 40 years and is most closely associated with the names of Holmes and Brandeis."

With sound legal knowledge to support his views, Cushman traces the development of the important theories practiced by these jurists.

At one time the judicial process was governed by a mechanical "slot-machine" theory. It was generally held that the courts' task was to apply never-changing rules to each case, as though all they had to do was to put the facts of a case in a slot on top and draw out the correct decision below. This view has gradually given way to the new idea that social conditions may be an important factor in determining a law's constitutionality. This new idea was first presented in the famous "Brandeis brief" of 1908, in support of Oregon's ten-hour law for women, which contained only two pages of legal argument and 100 pages of expert opinion on the bad effects of overwork on women.

This type of argument made the methods of the Supreme Court more flexible. The Court still finds it "desirable to follow precedent when the situation in which a rule is to be applied is like the old one in which the rule developed," but there is no longer a slavish bowing to earlier decisions.

It was Justice Holmes who first applied, especially to social legislation, the theory that "the legislature should enjoy a large freedom to make mistakes of policy and judgment" and that "courts should step in only when unconstitutionality is abundantly clear." The Supreme Court has been won over to this view by degrees.

Professor Cushman reviews in detail how states' rights gave way to a strong central government—how the federal power over interstate commerce has been extended to include practically all of the nation's business—how there has been a growth of federal police power to protect the nation's social welfare.

Publications

War Conditions Hit Guardsman; New Size Okayed

A reduced Guardsman, published weekly, goes into effect today, after an Executive Council order voted the college newspaper an additional $125 this week to carry out a weekly publication program.

Cut in Paper Funds

Because of a lack of funds, the Guardsman staff planned a twice-monthly paper, but student demands made it possible for the change in size and publication dates. Dependent upon student body funds for support, the Guardsman was forced to cut down its publication dates if the regular size paper was to be produced.

Student body leaders and Guardsman editorial staff members, confronted by the cut in publication dates, decided that if proper publicity were to be given to student body activities the college newspaper would have to have frequent issues.

Tabloid Size Beneficial

The reduction of the Guardsman to tabloid size will not injure the reporting of campus activities, but it will serve to give all the late collegiate news in a brief and concise form.

War conditions forced the Guardsman to suspend publication twice weekly in favor of an issue once a week, and this semester a lack of funds forced an issuance of the paper on a twice-monthly basis.

OFFICE of NAVAL OFFICER PROCUREMENT
Central Tower Building
703 Market St.
San Francisco : California
October 20, 1942

President A. J. Cloud,
San Francisco Junior College,
San Francisco, California

Dear Sir:

It has come to the attention of this office that unfounded rumors regarding the Naval Reserve Accredited College Program have been spreading with increasing momentum. The first is that the V-1 and V-7 programs are to be discontinued in the near future. The second is that all Junior Colleges are to be dropped from the accredited list. There is no foundation for either of these rumors. Their effect in conjunction with the lowering of the draft age, has been to cause much concern among the young men of college age. It is very important that these reports be stopped.

We are taking steps to put an end to these rumors and it is our desire to enlist your cooperation in this matter likewise.

Very truly yours,
C. L. ARNOLD,
Director

Attendance

Student Cuts Not Allowed By Advisers

A warning has been sounded to students who persist in cutting college classes by the Attendance Committee, and they again repeated the rules governing attendance at the college.

Emphasis was placed by committee members on the ruling which requires regular attendance in all subjects, and they further pointed out that any student absent for a period of one week in any subject is automatically on probation.

Students Dropped

When a student is absent for the equivalent of two weeks of class work, the student is automatically dropped from the course, and a grade of "F" will be given as a final grade.

Committee members pointed out, however, that if a student believes his absences are legitimate, he may appeal to the attendance committee for permission to re-enter class. A hearing is held by the committee, and the student's case is reviewed.

Committee Listed

Members of the attendance committee include the following faculty members: Elizabeth Stetson, Edward Redford, Dorothy Mercer, and Henry Soule. This group will carry on the work of the committee for the current semester.

A listing of business hours of the attendance committee is posted on page four of today's Guardsman.

Civil Service Tests For College Typists

Civil Services examinations for stenographers and typists will be held by the United State's Civil Service Commission at the college October 30 at 11 a.m.

The examinations, which will be held in Rooms 300, 302, and 303, will consist of a ten minute dictation at 80 words per minute. Examinees will transcribe their notes. Speed required for passing the examination will be an average of 35 words per minute.

Candidates successful in the tests will be given a certificate by the Civil Service Commission and will be eligible for positions in the various federal offices.

Any student enrolled in courses which include the subjects which will be tested is urged to attend the examination.

Men For Red Cross Rescue Work To Be Enlisted Here

The recruiting of college men to perform heavy rescue work in the Red Cross is now being conducted by Edwin C. Browne, dean of men.

Men students are urged to register with the dean, giving the time and length of service to which they are best suited.

Welfare

El Rey Rally Opens College Salvage Drive

Beginning with an all-college rally, which included noted stars of stage, screen and radio, the college Welfare Committee began their all-out salvage drive on the local campus.

Feaurring talent from San Francisco entertainment centers, the Welfare group, under Bob Ervin, presented Tommy Harris, radio entertainer and master of ceremonies, who emphasized the need for co-operation in the salvage drive currently under way at the college.

Program Outlined

Ervin outlined the salvage program earlier in the week, indicating that the local drive center around silk and rayon, leather and fur scraps, and old keys. The drive officially began with the rally at the El Rey theater and will end on November 2.

Books for service men will also be collected in the salvage campaign, and students were urged by Ervin to bring their used books and magazines to the collection depot at the north end of the first floor.

Scrap Important

All of the scrap material turned in at the college will have a place in the war effort, Ervin emphasized. The silk, rayon and yarn scraps will be used to weave blankets for stretchers, and the fur scraps will be used to line service men's jackets for use in cold climates.

The place of the keys in the college drive has been cited as most important by Ervin. Key collections in the city have been under way for some time, and the metal derived from them is being put to use in armament centers in the country.

Depot Open All Day

Any of the materials listed as eligible in the campus drive may be turned into the collection depot at any time during the drive. At the conclusion of the campaign the materials will be turned over to official agencies, and they in turn will turn the material over to work centers, where the scrap will be assembled into war products.

After he had successfully planned and staged a mammoth college rally to promote the campus scrap drive, Bob Ervin, Welfare Committee head, resigned his post as chairman of the group.

Ervin had piloted the Welfare organization to its beginning of the salvage drive, and to its presentation of the late college rally. Duties as high sophomore president and governing member of the Rifle Club made is impossible for him to continue in his present capacity.

State College Game Slated For New Ingleside Stadium; Coach Eisen Prays For Win

By Bob Catudio

Tinged with the crisp polish of war, the Rams and San Francisco State College will throw their gridiron fortunes to the winds this afternoon, when both schools tangle in their annual football tussle on the turf of Ingleside Stadium.

Thus far, both teams have yet to taste victory, and from advance pre-game information this week the State Stadium will be in for a drenching of colossal doings.

Game time for today is 3:30 p.m.

Caravan to Ingleside

Despite a threat of innumerable rationing acts, Nick Barbarotto, rally commissioner, intimated that a caravan of automobiles might zig-zag their way out to the Stadium.

Last year's titantic contest was played at Seals Stadium under the arc lights, and for those who are interested, the Rams managed to out-

Ingleside Sadium may be reached by ransferring from the No. 12 streetcar to southbound Junipero Serra Boulevard bus. The Stadium is located near Junipero Serra Boulevard and Holloway Street.

Students who own automobiles are urged to join the caravan which will leave from the college front steps at 3 o'clock today.

score the Gaters, 7 to 6. This year, under pressure of wartime difficulties, both teams have gone through their season so far in a "blaze of glory."

Both Coaches Reticent

Ray Kaufman, State's coach, remains silent on the question of the Gaters coming out on top in today's neighborly combat, and such is the case of dynamic Lee Eisan, the local Aristotle of Pigskin. Of the two teams, the Rams have had the least number of points scored against them . . . but State has just as spotty a record!

This will also mark the homecoming battle for the locals, their last home appearance being made here last month against the Coast Guard Reserves, but the less said about that the better. Neither State nor the Rams will be favored to triumph today, and this in itself is worth wondering about if you like ever-Stephen football.

After The Game

College Grid Fans To Dance At State

The women's gymnasium at San Francisco State College will be the scene of tonight's trisponsored dance, Lucille Landresse, social committee chairman, disclosed today. Dancing will be from 9 to 12:30 a.m., and an eight-piece orchestra has been hired for this affair.

Tickets Sold Here

Dance tickets, priced at 35 cents, will be on sale at The Guardsman office, Room 134, and Room 169, today. After the purchase of a ticket, the student must present his student body card for identification at the box office at State's women's gymnasium, according to Miss Landresse.

The co-sponsors of this dance are the Associated Women Students, the Associated Men Students, and the Women's Athletic Association.

First Such Dance

"This is the first dance this semester which will be staged by two local institutions," Miss Landresse said, "and everyone should attend, if it is humanly possible. After all, there is nothing else in the word that makes for better spirit and co-operation than to have a dance staged by rival institutions."

Kenny Young, student body president of State, Ed Robinson, and Miss Landresse have been working on the committee in charge of this dance, and it hinted that "everything depends upon whether or not enough tickets are sold for tonight's dance."

Semi-Formal Dress Required

Semi-formal dress will be required for the dance, and positively "no stags" will be permitted to enter the gymnasium doors, Miss Landresse said. This is one defect that has marred previous dances, and it was intimated that tonight's affair would be a far greater success if this "stagging were cut out entirely."

The State gymnasium is accessible by taking any street car in the direction of Market Street and the Ferry Building, since the gymnasium is located on Buchanan and Market Streets.

As usual, the "no-corsage" rule will be in effect. It was hoped that students of today's losing institution would hold back their emotions, and "get into the swing of things."

Bob Ervin Elected High Soph Prexy Last Week

Winner of last week's high sophomore class re-election was Bob Ervin, as was indicated in a bulletin released by Warner Croll, election committee chairman, this week.

The other newly-elected class officers are Eloise Windfelt, vice president, and Kay Krifels, secretary-treasurer. Upon an order issued by the college Executive Council, the election was reheld when a file of protest was made two weeks ago, according to Croll.

Edward Sandys, college English instructor, presided at the re-election last week. Oppositional candidates included Arlie Charter, Marjorie Weiss and Loule Paponis.

Your War Work

Improve Bond Purchases

San Francisco Junior College prides itself upon the purchase of almost $16,000 worth of United States War Bonds and Stamps during the previous semester. The pride of last semester is evidently unfounded if it is compared with the bond sales of this current semester.

A recent listing of public school War Bond sales for the city of San Francisco yielded enlightening results of student activity in the war effort.

San Francisco Junior College was listed for its part in the War Bond sales, but its appearance on the listing was far from commendable. For its effort in the promotion of War Bond and Stamp sales the college was outdone by many grammar, junior and senior high schools.

Lowell High School was given credit for selling more than $14,000 worth of War Bonds, our high mark of last semester, while the junior college placed last . . . selling the unbelievable sum of $192 worth of War Bonds.

It is time someone questioned the reason for such a lack of spirit in our student body. Last semester a college rally was staged to promote campus bond sales, but this semester so far, we have not had any such activity.

There is no reason to believe, however, that we must have a rally every time bond and stamp sales lag. We should have enough spirit and faith in our country to purchase all the bonds we possibly can.. Rallies have their place as morale builders, but our morale is so low that rallies must be staged every week.

College students should have the initiative to buy all the "pieces of America" they are able to purchase, for they will readily understand the plight of the United States if the necessary funds are not received by the government to continue and win this war.

College students of today will greatly benefit from the bond sales. The students that are called into the Army will receive their benefits in equipment and protection of every kind, while those who do not enter the armed forces will benefit in later years by a lasting peace.

The appalling failure of bond sales thus far can be remedied, and it should be accomplished at once. The semester has not yet reached the midway point, and students who were able to raise almost $16,000 in War Bonds and Stamps one semester ago can certainly repeat that creditable performance again . . . NOW.

Meat Rationing Affects Cafeteria; Jobs Open

In response to a government request for voluntary curtailment of meat the cafeteria will now serve hot dogs on Monday, Wednesday and Friday only, and hamburgers on Tuesday and Thursday. Hilda Watson, acting chairman of the Hotel and Restaurant Division, revealed last week.

Voluntary reduction in the service of coffee has also been made. Students desiring refills will now be charged for them. No further curtailments will be made, however, until necessary.

Students who eat at 11 o'clock have responded to the plea to take their dishes to the bus stands, Mrs. Watson said. However, those who eat at 12 o'clock have been very lax in the matter of busing dishes.

Students desiring employment in the cafeteria should see Mrs. Watson, in room 107.

PANAMA HATTIE

If you prefer your social dramas, the Capra way, seasoned with gags, beautiful girls, and Cole Porter melodies, the Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer way, then you'll probably enjoy the eight reel adaptation of Panama Hattie, co-starring Red Skelton and Ann Sothern, currently anchored at the Fox Theater.

Miss Sothern is Hattie, of course, and she's the type of a girl that would lend a down 'n' out guy her last five bucks. She's a Canal Zone chanteuse; brassy, but with a heart of Fort Knox gold. She's protected by three dumb sailors—Red Skelton, Rags Ragland, and Ben Blue—all three being "wolves in ship's clothing!"

Socially, Hattie wants to marry a soldier (Dan Dailey, Jr.), who aside from looking like a sergeant, is an unhappy millionaire. This, of course, brings up that proverbial question: Should a seemingly no-good dame marry a well-to-do young man who has a nine-year-old daughter (Jackie Horner) by a previous marriage. The audience knows the answer, but before a mediocre anti-climax, there are some song and dance routines, corny pre-Neanderthalian quips, and comic situations which the three gobs undertake in order to guard Panama Hattie.

You'll like Miss Sothern as hip-swinging Hattie. She warbles nicely—both sweet and hot—but as a terpsichorean artist, "she just ain't." Scene stealers in every reel are Skelton, Ragland, and Blue, a trio of rationed brains and solid bone. Being veterans of vaudeville and what-not, they clown, make faces at the cash customers, and their experience in a supposedly-haunted house is a riot of nonsense.

Everyone (well, almost everyone) sings, but Lena Horne, dark-skinned, shapely newcomer, makes an auspicious debut into the big show by grinding out several of Cole Porter's best numbers in the best Panamanian manner. Virginia O'Brien, deadpan comedienne vocalist of Meet the People, taps the audience's funny bone by deadpanning several tunes as only O'Brien can.

Celluloid adaptations of successful Broadway stage hits have often bounced about in red ink, but Panama Hattie, doing its best to ignore noble pretentiousness, shows up pretty well at the box office, despite the fact that Hollywood fixed up a few scenes here 'n' there. Norman Z. MacLeod, better known for more serious corn, megaphoned this mighty epic of sailors on shore leave, a pictorial idea of what Uncle Sam's Navy IS NOT like.

Panama Hattie, as a picture, is a redeeming light thrust in the paths of Miss Sothern and "Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's rising young comedian—Re-red Sskelton." In their last outing, they dished up a serving of plain corn in Maisie Gets Her Man. Their present opus, though not brilliant, is a fine, cleverly dictated musical, one that will probably entertain audiences instead of tossing a sleeping tablet at 'em.

The cast stands up well amidst tropic palms, waxed dance floors, and torso quivering senoritas. Supporting Miss Sothern and Skelton are Rags Ragland, Ben Blue, Marsha Hunt, Alan Mowbray, Virginia O'Brien, Jackie Horner, Lena Horne, Dan Dailey, Jr., and the Berry Brothers.

Teen Age Enlistments Urged By Army Heads

To maintain the proper balance in Army age groups, the United States Army has already begun its campaign for the enlistment of 18 and 19-year-old youths into the service, Kenyon A. Joyce, major general of the ninth service command, disclosed this week.

College men who enlist in the Army will be permitted to select the branch of the service to which he wishes to be assigned. This is a privilege which cannot be granted the ordinary inductee or draftee, according to Joyce. In order to speed up entry facilities, the present enlistment procedure has been simplified.

In addition to the infantry, cavalry, coast and field artillery, engineers, signal corps, air force and armored force, these young men may be enlisted directly for quartermaster, ordnance, chemical warfare, medical corps and military police corps.

Men who wish to enlist in the Army before the forthcoming draft may contact Louis C. Conlan, college co-ordinator of educational management, for further and complete details.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Fraternity Cites Lack Of Spirit; Halls Blocked

● PAY ATTENTION

Editor, The Guardsman:

Now that we have The Guardsman Newscasts I'd like to know just how effective this service really is. From my observation the students pay little heed to the broadcasts despite the fact that they are presented at the beginning of the third period instead of at the end, as was the case last semester.

I know that I'm only registering a kick and have nothing constructive to offer—but how are the students going to be made conscious of our campus activities?

Disgusted.

Dear Disguested: It seems to us that the problem of publicity is distinct from the job of reporting. It is hoped that when we reach the time that no other newscasts or announcements are permitted over the loud speakers the listeners will take more interest in the Tuesday-Thursday programs.

Ed.

● SERVICE FLAG AGAIN

Editor, The Guardsman:

Two weeks ago there appeared in the Ram's Horn a blow about a service flag. I thought the idea was good and expected that there would be some action.

Each day I have looked up to the main entrance in the hope of seeing there a large flag telling the world of the part SFJC men are playing in this war. When do we expect action on this?

War Conscious.

Dear War Conscious: The Executive Committee reports that action has been taken. A committee has been appointed to investigate the cost of the project. In the meantime it becomes every student's duty to report to the registrar or any faculty member the names of graduates or former students in the service.

● OUT OF THE WAY

Editor, The Guardsman:

Did you ever try to enter this building just before and during class intermissions? The congestion at the main entrance is a nuisance! When the Welfare Committee finishes the Scrap Drive let it start a drive on aspects of student conduct such as this one.

Commando.

● SPIRIT LACKING

Editor, The Guardsman:

I, along with the other members of my fraternity, noticed with decided interest a very pointed (yet truthful) article about the monopolizations of class and student body offices by one small group. This group (which the lowest sub-moron who knew anything about school affairs could tell was Phi Lambda Epsilon) is the organization to which I belong. My first reaction was one of anger; we were being denounced, we were made to look like cheats, and election fixers. However, after the heat of anger had passed away, a more precise and obvious answer presented itself; an answer supplied by your own article.

If the school had no spirit in the class elections, the Phi Lambs did! We not only had the spirit to vote, but we had the spirit to run our candidates! Every Phi Lamb voted; every Phi Lamb made it his duty to vote. The other organizations may lack this spirit, and the school as a whole may lack this spirit; but we Phi Lambs certainly don't! Yes, we did win some offices. And we also lost one. But, no matter whether we win or lose—we, the Phi Lambs will support the school in all its functions and doings.

We, the Phi Lambs, have the spirit the school definitely lacks.

Phi Lamb Member.

Study Shows Associate Art Degree Very Rare

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—San Francisco Junior College is one of 244 junior colleges in the country conferring the Associate's degree upon its graduates, according to a study just completed by Dr. Walter C. Eells, executive secretary of the Association of Junior Colleges. Results of the study were released today from the national headquarters of the association in Washington.

The study shows that San Francisco, Junior College had conferred the Associate's degree on 1295 of its graduates up to 1941, having first begun the practice in 1936. It is one of 53 junior colleges in California now conferring this increasingly popular college degree which was comparatively unknown 25 years ago. During the past 25 years, however, according to the study over 125,000 young men and women have been awarded the Associate's degree, more than the total number receiving bachelor's degrees in the first 231 years of the history of higher education in the United States.

The Associate's degree is the degree now recommended by the American Association of Junior Colleges to signify the completion of two years of accredited junior college education.

Dean Freeman Heads ACE School Administration Study

BERKELEY, Oct. 23.—Aware of a pressing need in the armed forces for men trained in various technical fields, the American Council on Education is forming a standing committee on research, it was announced today by Frank N. Freeman, Dean of the University of California School of Education and chairman of the new group.

Meeting in New York this week to set up its permanent program, the committee faces a major task of collecting information regarding facilities now available in the schools of the nation for training the thousands of specialists demanded for successful prosecution of the war.

Every effort will be made, declared Dean Freeman, to meet the challenge recently presented to the American Insitute on Education and the War by Lt. Gen. B. B. Somervell, commanding general of the Services of Supply, who maintained that "the schools and colleges of America must become pre-induction training centers for our armed forces, leaving the armed forces free to teach men the combat application of that training."

In addition to collecting and presenting information on how educational institutions are fitted to take part in the all-out production of wartime specialists, the committee, according to Dean Freeman, will have the more general purpose of surveying and stimulating research

Rams, State Yet To Win; BPB, Pirates In Cage Lead

IT'S NOW OR NEVER

Reurning home from another unsuccessful attempt at breaking into the win column, Coach Lee Eisan and his Rams face Coach Ray Kaufman and his Gators this afternoon at Ingleside Stadium.

The game should be a pip!

Both squads have played seven games between them, with the net result of no wins and seven losses. But that only goes to make for a more interesting tussle, because no matter who comes out on top—it will be their first for 1942.

Besides the game has always been close and well played, because great rivalry exists between the two colleges. Despite any advantage one team may have had over the other in the past, the contests were seldom won by a lop-sided score.

So will be the case this afternoon, but only because the teams are so evenly matched. Thus far, the Gators have dropped three games by large scores—25 to 7 to McClellan Field, 15 to 0 to Chico State, and 25 to 0 to Salinas Junior College.

The Rams' record is just as impressive with losses to the Coast Guard Reserves, 20 to 6; Los Angeles City College, 7 to 0; Santa Rosa Junior College, 27 to 7, and Sacramento, 35 to 14.

The Red and White of the college have accumulated only 27 points to their opponent's 89, while San Francisco State has scored but one touchdown and seven points to their rivals' 65.

From this it would appear that Eisan's mob has the better offense with both defenses on about a par, in view of the fact that the Rams engaged in one more game. And that might well be the case because the college was first to score in both the Santa Rosa and Sacramento contests before it so helplessly fell apart to be smothered by the Cubs and the Panthers.

In any case, the game should slightly favor the Rams, although not more than seven points should decide the final outcome. It will be a homecoming game for both squads, and will inaugurate State's new football field—Ingleside Stadium.

Should he play, many Ram eyes will be focused on Louie Vasquez, brilliant State halfback. In last year's contest, Vasquez played an important role in State's 7 to 6 beating at the hands of the college. Only then, Vasquez was wearing the Red and White jersey of the Rams and was playing under the tutorship of Lee Eisan. He was injured, however, during the Gators struggle with Salinas and at the time of this writing it is a question mark as to whether or not he will be in shape to play.

A caravan will leave the college campus at 3 o'clock this afternoon in an all-out effort to support the Rams in bringing home their first victory.

BPB, PIRATES LOOK GOOD

With the intramural basketball going into the fourth week, the race for the championship has norrowed down to two teams . . . the Beta Phi Beta and Terry's Pirates. They seem to be the class of the league and should decide the title. The squads were scheduled to meet each other last Friday, but beeause of the Mixer Dance it was postponed until the final game.

That makes for a perfect setup! Both will probably go through undefeated and out of hteir meeting will come the intramural champions.

Another brilliant name was added to the already queer titles adopted by some of the clubs. This one is Brady's Beauties. Cute isn't it?

Wonder what Jack Brady, faculty intramural director, thinks about it? Thus far, the handsome physical education instructor and his little darlings have shown little in the way of a basketball team.

The whole idea came about at the AMS Smoker. Brady was urging the freshmen to participate in the intramural program and asked them to submit a team to him right then and there. A few answered the call and out of it came Brady's Beauties.

There was a little protest at first, but finally Brady consented to the usage of his name. However, he was very much against the more appropriate title of Handsome Brady's Beauties.

WHO'S SWEET?

We were in the men's gymnasium sometime in the early part of this week conversing with Jack Brady and couldn't help but hear a conversation that was going on in the office.

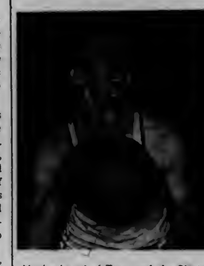
Russ Sweet was talking to a freshman who had just taken a nasty spill while building up his body. Tom Conlan was also standing near by.

Sweet then asked the freshman how the accident happened. He received an answer. Then he asked, "Who's your physical education instructor?" The freshman turned around, pointed to Tom Conlan, and said, "He is . . . Russ Sweet!"

Wonder if Tom Wilson's football team will take San Francisco State this afternoon?

Intramural

Terry's Pirates, Beta Phi Beta Loom As Basketball Champions; Cage Games Begin Fourth Week



There's nothing comical about the Pirates, because after two weeks of intramural basketball play they are head 'n' shoulders above the straggling field with three wins and nary a setback.

Top man on the Pirates (coached by one John Frederic Terry) is Ken Berridge, he of the perpetual arms and legs movement. In his first two intramural games, the whizzin' dynamo has scored a total of 43 points. Considering this to be his inaugural season of cage play, Berridge is a cinch to establish a new scoring record . . . if he continues as he has.

Teammates Not Bad

The remaining cagin' men of the Buc squad are George Vogiotsis, Ed Lapayuade, Billy Winter, Mickey McCabe, Bill Ryan, and Tom Flynn. From that group, Lapayuade looks to be about the best floor man, even better than when he cavorted for the Spartans last semester.

Another team which is gunning for high water is Beta Phi Beta, an organization with five men so evenly balanced that no one stands above the other. Like the Pirates (at this writing) the BPBs are still undefeated. Men like Johnny Scharetg, Keith Tomley, and Bob Howard are no setbacks in any man's league.

You've heard of Terry and the Pirates, of course. Well, meet our Terry—John Frederic Terry, manager of those championship bound Pirates, who are leading current cage loop.

Others Are Question Marks

Except for the Rifle Club and the Newman Club, the remaining teams in the circuit are gigantic question marks. In their last outing, the Riflcers were rammyshackled 71 to 30 by Terry's sea-devils. Only the presence of Bob Ibarolle has saved the musket-toters from a more disastrous catapult into nothingness.

Not wishing to slight the other teams in the tournament, it would be well to point out that some of the other teams include Brady's (ugh!), Old Men's Athletic Club, Psi Lambda Phi, The Wolves, Trl Epsilon, and Beta Tau fraternity.

Championship Battle

After just 21 days of intramural warfare, it looks as if the diademic battle for the umpteenth intramural crown lies between the Pirates, Beta Phi Beta, and the Trojans, with the Newman Club possibly having an outside, bare chance.

Nothing heretofore has been mentioned of the Trojans, a team composed mainly of ex-Abraham Lincoln High School athletes, among whom are Wesley Wood, Mel Ritzeau, and George Taylor. The Trojans did have a chance. . .but Taylor and Wood have enlisted in the Navy.

Side Lines

Gridders Enlist In Armed Forces

By Bob Catudio

Today's game between Lee Eisan's Rams and Ray Kaufman's San Francisco State College Gators should have all the aspects of a tepid Brobdinagian minuet. In other words, pal, it'll be a battle royal.

First string tackle Larry Martin will probably be missing today, because he's joined the army this week. He's not the only fellow that'll be missing today. George Taylor enlisted in the navy two weeks ago to the day.

Latest victims to joint the ranks of barbered Samson and Co. are George Urbano and Bob Moser. First victim was Milo Abercrombie, who used to look like a terrified gazelle. And this is the topper. If State wins today's game, Bob Jones and Al Morris (so they say, and we think they're kidding) will enlist in the army after the Modesto fracas.

Poor Eddie Bellet! Out in the clear after snagging a paydirt-bound aerial toss . . . he stumbled on the 11 yard line with no one within punching distance of him. Well, that was one touchdown the Rams definitely missed connections on.

Ed Giovia, red-headed center, will probably be today's captain, although there has been no confirmation on this selection. Bill Collins came up with a splattered right eye, but all has been okehed so far, according to Collins.

New Commando Type Track Still Being Constructed

A temporary track to be used in Commando-type training is in the process of construction on the college campus, Russ Sweet, Ram track and field coach, disclosed last week.

"The Commando track is an obstacle track," Sweet explained, "because it consists of numerous obstacles on the track which benefits the wind and legs of the participant. This is a prime necessity if an individual intends to enlist in any branch of the armed service."

Other events which might help students in their Commando-type training schedule were events to strengthen the muscles in one's arms, according to Sweet. He cited the rope-climb, a device used mainly to strengthen and develop the muscles in the forearm, fingers, and hands.

Aside from training on the forthcoming track, it was hinted that the college intramural cross country run would be held sometime toward the close of this semester.

Football

Rams, State Go For First Win In Game Today

Lee Eisan's Rams vs. Ray Kaufman's Gators — that's the menu of hors de combat which will be served to the general public today on the new Ingleside Stadium field, home of the San Francisco Staters.

Both teams are gunning for their first (very first) triumph of the season, and from all indications, it should be a colossal battle which will baptize the top soil of State's stadium. Kickoff time for today's game is at 3:30 p.m. sharp, according to head coach Eisan, of the local institution.

Cavender Plays Today

Bob Cavender, Ram left halfback, will probably see limited service today, the result of a leg injury sustained in the Sacramento encounter. Besides the injured Glen Smith, only tackle Larry Martin will be missing. Martin enlisted in the Marines this week.

The Gators, following last week's brawl with Salinas Junior College, have turned their dressing quarters into a base hospital of injured State warriors. Neil Harriman, Phil Cali, Lyle Paris, and Louie Vasquez may not face the Rams today. Boomin' Werner Steinback, who has been on the sidelines since the Chico State game, will start at fullback for the underdogged Gators.

Elsan, Kaufman Silent

Eisan, the dynamic gridiron master, is silent as to the veritable outcome of today's fracas, as is State's head man Kaufman. If odds were being quoted for today's game, they'd favor the Rams 8 to 5.

Last week, at the capital village, Sacramento Junior College came up with a 35 to 14 licking over the poor 'n' hapless Rams. As usual, the Rams tallied first in the initial period, but the Panthers scored right 'n' left for the remainder of the contest.

Rams Score First

The locals scored their first touchdown on Harlan Ferrando's pass to Jerry Pierce, Charlie Cook booting the extra point. The final six came on Allyn Morris' 40 yard aerial peg to Cook, who also converted. Fourteen big points, but the Capital Hill eleven tallied 35!

Surprise play of the game occurred in the waning seconds of the fourth quarter. Fullback Morris connected on a long toss to Eddie Bellet, who snared the ball and raced away toward the Sac goal line. But as things always happen in football games . . . Bellet fell flat on his face somewhere near the 11 yard line. The Senators then staved off a possible Ram score simultaneously with the final gun.

Doug Johnson, Former Guardsman Columnist, Writes About Life In The Merchant Marine

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Any resemblance to characters, living or dead, is purely coincidental. This is the impression Doug Johnson, former columnist, has acquired while training down at Port Hueneme.)

By Doug Johnson

I have just read your glowing epistle in the Guardsman about one named Doug Johnson. I can only say that it was well written and that one in the same vein should be printed four times a month. In fact, print the same one. Maybe some slacker didn't read the last one.

I have been in he service of the United States Merchant Marine for almost three months. Although I like the Service, I often dream nostaigically of those good old days when all of us fellows used to go around getting in people's hair, and sticking our necks out to give "the stoodents of the collitch something to look knowingly at during their Poli-Sci classes."

Port Hueneme is situated about censored-censored and censored miles from Censored, and is about censored feet from the ocean, which is obviously quite close, being only censored feet away during certain tides. This, of course, is all strictly confidential Naval and Geodetic information which may be found only in the tide tables on sale for 15 cents at the town of Hueneme. Records held by Jap fishermen are considered more accurate, however.

Hueneme is correctly pronounced, Why-Knee-Me, according to the blurred records on hand at the local city hall. The natives, however, don't seem to know this, and they persist in pronouncing their little ulcer on God's good earth, Whee-Neemah, which besides being a bit frivolous, is incorrect.

Personally, I've corrected the citizens I've come in contact with time and time again, but they have no civic pride. This is evidently a blow to morale and one finds that "don't-give-a-darn" spirit rearing its ugly head.

"Let them permit their town to go to pot," is what one thinks. "Pull up the ladder; I'm up!"

Here at the station we are being constantly drilled in the value of naval security. (How do you drill someone in the value of something?) Naval security is a polite phrase meaning "Keep your big yap shut," and "a slip of the lip may sink a ship," certainly not "rot."

You might as well have a good look now, because you'll never see this any more. If you haven't known before, we might as well tell you that . . . a parking lot is almost completed on the campus.

CAB

Group President Calls For Concentrated Activity Now

"Because of the participation by the college in an all-out effort for the duration of the war, not many clubs will take an active part on the campus this semester," Dorothy Hogan, president of the Club Advisory Board, stated this week. "Most of the attention of the students and faculty members will be concentrated on curricular activities and war work."

Jim Madsen, vice-president of the Board, revealed, "Because of the lack of a club adviser, not an adequate number of students has joined the CAB. Twelve clubs have been granted permanent membership until after the war by the CAB." These clubs are: Block SF, Floriculture, Forum, Music Club, Nu Epsilon Sigma, Omicron Phi Pi, Peace Officers, Phi Alpha Omega, Phi Rho Pi, PE and Recreation Majors, Sigma Delta Pi, and the Campus Players.

The membership committee announces the organizations accepted by the CAB, that are considered active by the associated students. These clubs are:

Alpha Delta Epsilon, Alpha Gamma Sigma, Alpha Lambda Chi, Beta Phi Beta, Beta Tau, Bible Study Club, Chinese Students Club, Tri Epsilon, Engineering Society, Forestry Fraternity, Home Economics, Hotel and Restaurant Society, Kappa Phi, Newman Club, Phi Beta Rho, Phi Lambda Epsilon, Pi Mu Gamma, Pick and Hammer, Press Club, Psi Lambda Phi, Rifle and Pistol Club, Skating Club, Theta Tau, and Women's Service Society.

AMS Complimented On Last Week's Cal Club Smoker

Complimented on last week's Associated Men Student's smoker, organization president Frank Isola declared this week that the AMS would probably be inactive for the next two weeks.

Toward the end of this semester, the AMS will stage its semi-annual men's boxing carnival, which will be staged in the men's gymnasium, according to Isola. Plans for that event, however, have not as yet been under consideration.

Success

Paving Begins On Parking Lot

Paving on the college parking lot has begun with a strip of concrete roadway already laid at the north end of the lot, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne.

When the lot is finished, the parking situation on Phelan Avenue will be improved to a great extent, Browne said. Space for parking automobiles will be allocated to students and faculty members.

The completion of the lot will mark the end of a campaign by student leaders to improve college parking conditions. Students formerly parked their automobiles in the lot at the south end of the building, but water and mud in rainy weather hampered attempts at parking.

Continued efforts by The Guardsman and student body leaders resulted in the construction of a paved roadway for student and faculty parking. Begun in earnest last spring, the lot is hurriedly taking shape, even though labor for the project is becoming increasingly difficult to secure.

Williams' Polar Maps Now Classroom Mural

Joseph Williams' recently completed Polar map series are currently being painted on the walls of Room 205 by Evans Ecke, college art instructor. The room is being planned as a map study class, and the Williams' series will be the first to be painted on the classroom walls.

Room 205 will be decorated with various maps of the world, indicating the current war a great deal.

A-Capella Choir Invited To Sing With Municipal Group

Hans Leskhe, director of the municipal chorus, has invited the A Cappella Choir to sing with the municipal chorus and the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra in a presentation of Handel's Messiah on December 19.

Flossita Badger, music deparment head, in announcing the choir's acceptance said that the Messiah is being offered to commemorate the second centennial of its first performance.

The two o'clock Listening Hour Program on Wednesday will continue to be devoted to selections from the present opera season. On Wednesday, October 28, arias from Gounod's Faust and Benelli's Love of Three Kings will be offered.

Postponement Of 18-19 Year Old Draft Amendment Seen; Men May Be Permitted To Finish Courses

Amendment to the Selective Service Act requiring the registration of 18 and 19 year old men for the army is delayed for at least three weeks, according to official comment received here from Washington this week. Present status of the amendment now in committee would further indicate that this reserve of fighting power will not be inducted until the spring and summer of 1943. That students will undoubtedly be permitted to finish their present semester in college was the considered opinion of informed sources contacted by The Guardsman.

Major General Kenyon A. Joyce of the ninth service command, while admitting that the army is encouraging the enlistment of "teen-agers", pointed out that those who are preparing themselves for fields of service which require collegiate instruction should make the most of their present opportunities by remaining in college. It seems certain that competent students, especially those taking scientific and technical subjects, will not be called into military service until the end of the school year.

Students To Remain In College

After this year when inroads on college "teen-agers" are likely to be relatively heavy, the question of who shall remain at study will not be easily answered. According to Jay Richter, ACP Washington correspondent, the draft bill itself isn't likely to lay down strict stipulations on this matter, rather, it will be left to administrative decision. Broadly speaking, Richter says, officials will base their decision on two major considerations: the course the student is taking and his scholastic record.

Key to what may happen to American students is the policy adopted by the English. Although there has been about a 25 per cent drop in overall enrollment in Britain, scientific and technical departments of the colleges are cram-full of students.

Obviously the greatest drop in our colleges will occur in liberal arts courses. San Francisco Junior College has not been slow to prepare for the enrollment drop-off in these fields, having expanded curricula to include additional science courses, mathematics and physical education. Mention may also be made of the reform in the direction of social science courses as exemplified by the emphasis on American History and the course "Winning the War."

Leave Of Absence Slips Necessary For Departure

All students, upon taking leave from this college, are requested to obtain a leave of absence slip from any member of the college guidance and counseling committee, Edward Redford, chairman of the group, disclosed this week.

Failure to comply with this regulation will result in the individual obtaining a grade of F for the subjects undertaken that semester. A list of attendance business hours was published in last week's Guardsman.

For further information, you may consult with Redford in Room 148 any day of the week.

Civil Service

Student Exams Set For Today

Civil Service examinations for stenographers and typists will be given today, October 30, by the United States Civil Service Commission, it was announced by Edward W. Larson, acting chairman of the business division.

The tests, which will be held in Rooms 300, 302, and 303, will begin at 11:10 a.m. with a ten minute dictation period at 80 words per minute. The typewriter transcription speed will be 35 net words per minute, as a minimum. There will also be a separate typing test, with a speed of 35 net words per minute required.

Certificates will be granted by the Civil Service Commission to successful candidates who will be eligible for positions in governmental offices.

Application blanks are now available at the registrar's office. According to Mr. Larson, any student who feels qualified to meet the requirements should attend the examination.

College Honor Group Has November Meeting

The first meeting of the Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college honor society, will be held Thursday, November 5, at 11 o'clock, in Room 100, according to Alice Cooper, group adviser.

Election of semester class officers, the purchasing of society pins, and the coaching system devised several semesters ago, will be discussed. All members, both regular and associate, are urged to be present. Last semester, twice as many students were awarded permanent awards over the previous semester.

In order to become a member of the college honor society, a student must maintain a standard of 30 grade points throughout the semester. Thus far, only an approximate 75 students are registered members of the organization, Miss Cooper said.

College Doctors Plan Special Tests For Students

All men and women of the college will be required to take tuberculin tests during the present semester (possibly November 16 or 17), according to an announcement made by the college health department.

The test, to be administered by college physicians Alice B. Potter and Benjamin Freedlander, consists of a simple injection to which the subject reacts either positively or negatively.

Donors

Tri-E Frat Gives Blood To Red Cross

Hoping to establish precedent at the college by their actions, 11 members of the college Tri Epsilon fraternity last week donated a pint of their blood to the local Red Cross Blood Bank.

Headed by faculy adviser Jack Brady, the fraternity men, following the lead of many other civic and fraternal groups, volunteered and were accepted by the Red Cross for the blood donation.

Students interested in donating a pint of their blood to the Red Cross Blood Bank may secure information upon that subject from Nelson Wells, college faculty member, in Room 327.

All information pertaining to Red Cross requirements may be obtained from Wells. Although the age limit for blood donations is set at 21 years, students 18 years old or over may qualify if they present a written consent signed by their parents.

Brady explained that the blood has a two fold purpose after its extraction. It is either kept for use in the United States for national disasters, or, more likely, it is sent to military hospitals for use in blood transfusions. The blood plasma is frozen and ground into a powder and stored for use either at home or abroad.

The men making the trip with Brady included the following fraternity men: Guy Watson, Jim Skinner, Don Sherba, Woody Davis, Don Lindberg, Phil Hyde, Bob Stahmer, Ray Rebois, Phil Kemp, and Brady.

College officials are of the opinion that other college organizations will follow the example of the Tri Epsilon fraternity in donations of blood to the war effort.

Claire Cuneo, college Home Economics instructor, announces to interested workers that a generous supply of Red Cross yarn is now on hand. Knitting for the Army and for evacuees, the volunteers will finish men's turtle-neck sweaters and blue slip-ons for women and children.

Knitters should call at Room 157 during Miss Cuneo's office hours.

WAA Members Teach Fitness Programs In Playgrounds

More than twenty members of the WAA are contributing to the physical fitness needs of San Francisco and East Bay children by acting as playleaders on local playgrounds. College women are also assisting the physical education programs at the San Francisco Boys Club and St. Rose Academy.

Miss Josephine Randall, Director of San Francisco's playgrounds, has expressed her approval of women's service in this capacity, according to Miss Bertha Keller, college instructor. "College women may not be able to contribute much during college days toward the war effort but leadership of children is considered a real contribution," Miss Keller said.

Home Front

Apparent Failure Of Scrap Drive Charged To Non-Student Support; Ex-Council To Aid Welfare Group

Dissatisfaction over the apparent failure thus far of the college salvage drive was voiced this week by members of the Executive Council.

Bob Ervin, former Welfare Commitee chairman, laid the blame of the salvage failufe to the majority of the students who believe that they are too old to participate in such a campaign.

A proposal that might solve the trouble encountered in the current salvage drive here was voiced by Irwin Cohen, student representative in the council. Describing the success of a similar drive at the University of California, Cohen pointed out that fraternities on the U. C. campus turned out at five o'clock in the morning to collect scrap materials in the city of Berkeley. He was of the opinion that if members of our student body had as much spirit as that shown on the Berkeley campus, the local drive might be successful.

CAB To Aid Drive

Because the Welfare Committee is without a chairman at the present time—the present vacancy is slated to be filled some time this week—Dorothy Hogan, Club Advisory Board chairman, declared that she will swing the support of the CAB in an effort to promote the drive in its remaining four week period. Miss Hogan further declared that she will ask the clubs enrolled in her organization to aid the apparently failing drive.

Bill Steenberg, ASSFJC president, directed Jane Johnston, student body secretary, to contact all fraternities and sororities connected with the college to solicit their support in the drive. Pointing out the success of the war bond drive of last semester, Steenberg said that he could not conceive any idea of failure in the salvage drive, which did not require the purchase of anything. A minimum of effort, he said, can turn this drive into a success overnight, if our students will cooperate.

Curriculum

Radio Training For Army Here

Under the direction of the Army Signal Corps and the United States Civil Service Commission, the college is conducting basic training courses in radio engineering. Classes are held six days a week from 6 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Instructors Brush, Keller and Jones are in charge.

John Bertucci, long associated with the department, has taken leave to accept a commission as Lieutenant Junior Grade with the United States Navy.

Students enrolled in this department are in the employ of the Civil Service Commission. The program of work includes the theory of radio, elementary mathematics and shop training.

The training program provides for six grades of radio technicians. Graduates of this program may advance to take work at Marin Junior College or San Mateo Junior College. Recommended students may transfer directly to the Signal Corps programs being conducted at Stanford University and the University of California.

Those who complete this training successfully are classified as Raydar Engineers. The final training for radio engineers is administered under army supervision at the San Francisco Presidio.

Hotel Group Exhibits At Los Angeles Meet

The Hotel and Restaurant Management of the college participated in the Western Hotel Convention held this week at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles. Hilda Watson, acting head of the hotel division, David Massingham, Russell Nelson, and Truman Davis represented the college. This is the third year that the college has taken part in the hotel men's meeting.

Feature of the various exhibits was the Hotel and Restaurant Division's booth. Designed by the hotel students and executed by the advertising art department under the direction of William Eckert, the exhibit depicted the contribution of the college to the hotel industry.

Grades Available Now

Grades for the first mid-term period, which ended October 16, are now being distributed by the Department of Counseling and Guidance, according to Dr. Edward H. Redford, director of the department. "Students who have not made appointments to consult with their advisers at this time should do so immediately," said Redford.

Construction Of Service Flag Discussed By Council

The college may soon have a service flag to honor its former students now in the service, if plans made by Lucille Landresse, social committee chairman, materialize.

Because the price of a flag bought from business concerns is too expensive for the student body budget, a flag may be made by the Continuation School being conducted here at the college.

According to Miss Landresse, the college now has an undetermined number of students in the various branches in the services.

Book Money Now Being Distributed At Bank

Two hundred and five dollars worth of books have been sold through the Women's Service Society this semester, it was disclosed recently by Margaret Abbett, president. Most of the money has been returned to the students, but some students have not yet called for their cash.

Your War Work

Salvage Drive Failing

Last week The Guardsman editorialized on the inactivity of junior college students in the sale of war bonds and stamps at the college. This week we find that student inactivity is not limited alone to the bond and stamp sales conducted here; it is also evident that spirit is lacking in the current salvage drive.

No one can truthfully say that the drive was not adequately pulicized. Bob Ervin and his committee used every method of advertisement at their disposal to acquaint students with every aspect of the drive. The importance of the campaign was stressed time and time again, but this week the results of the drive are not encouraging.

The amount of keys, silk, leather, and fur scraps turned into the local grammar school not far from the college shows that this public school has surpassed the junior college in every aspect of a salvage drive.

Students of the junior college are affected a great deal more by the results of such a campaign than are the students of grammar schools. The vital materials manufactured from the collected scrap will, in all probability, benefit men students who are and will be in the armed services. The scrap drive is expressly pointed in the direction of aid to our government and its military branches.

Inactivity on our part may be drastic as far as the progress of the war. How many times have we heard the statement that "every little bit counts." Judging from the reception that the salvage drive is getting thus far, it would be safe to venture that most students are still relying upon that mythical character called Joe to do their work for them.

Yes, we know that there are a few students who are doing their utmost to aid the local drive, but these people are in the minority. As in the past elections it would appear that the same five per cent who participated in the voting are also the sole participants in the scrap drive.

It is high time that we think about the seriousness of the present situation. We've got to pitch in and help with every bit of enthusiasm and scrap that we have at our command. The college salvage campaign is, at the current moment, one of the most important things about the campus that deserves our attention. It's time to get the lead out, if we want to aid the nation . . . and ourselves.

Blood Donations Cheered; Poster Lack Frowned Upon

• Tri E's Donate
Editor, The Guardsman:

How about a hand for those ten fellows who travelled with Jack Brady to the Red Cross last week and donated a pint of blood each to the local blood bank?

These fellows, all of them connected with the Tri Epsilon fraternity, deserve credit for their resourcefulness and ingenuity in doing their part in the war effort. Perhaps if we had a few more of these fellows in our student body, we wouldn't be hearing that well aimed criticism of our student activities in the war bond and salvage drives. We need a boost right where it hurts, and these fellows are the ones who've got the spirit.

Editor, The Guardsman:

I've seen quite a few football games played by the college varsity, but I've never seen such a good student turn out as I did at the Friday game with State College. I've been told that the number of spectators from the junior college numbered over 500, and even that figure is bad, considering the fact that 1600 student attend this institution. The sight of that junior college crowd out there at our "big game" was rather inspiring. Perhaps we're getting that so badly needed college spirit, and it's about time.

Editor, The Guardsman:

Well, I see by The Guardsman and my wandering around the campus that the long-awaited parking lot is almost finished. Anyone who has attended the college as long as I have will appreciate the construction of a nice paved parkway. Even though I won't be here to use the drive, I can get some satisfaction out of the thought that the mud and slush of old "Balboa Lake" is gone forever. But upon thinking back, I can justly say that "them were the days," mud, slush, and all.

ACROSS THE PACIFIC

Humphrey Bogart, once the best gangster Warner Bros. ever had, returns to the side of law and order—this time committing hara-kiri upon the Japs in his latest epic, Across the Pacific, currently attracting audiences at the Fox Theater.

Bogart is a supposedly disgraced American soldier who broads a Jap NYK liner with the noble intention of enlisting in the Chinese Army. Not a pleasure trip, mind you! Actually, Bogart is on the trail of a Dr. Lorenz (Sydney Greenstreet), a corpulent white man fronting for the Nipponese emperor. Complications become the topic when Alberta Marlowe (Mary Astor) walks naively into the situation. Now watch closely, fellas, it's one week before Pearl Harbor.

The liner docks at Cristobal, in the Canal Zone. Things aren't going so hot and Bogart really goes to town. After a running gun battle in a theater (not the Fox, thank heaven), jumping across rooftops, and sneaking down dark alleys, Bogart turns up at a plantation . . . and is taken prisoner by the "fat man." The plantation is a Jap Central Station for slant-eyed peeping Toms. Now watch again!

Lorenz plans to outfit a plane to bomb the Gatun Locks, but you know Bogie. He escapes, slugs a couple of Nips, and machine guns the plane to smithereens, a veritable Sgt. York act right before your very eyes. Bogie wasn't really a punk soldier—he was a Yankee free lance secret agent.

Across the Pacific is a sequel to The Maltese Falcon, but it seems to lack the drive and socko power that was clearly depicted in the Falcon story. Not that this current production isn't a good picture, but it isn't in the same boat with the Maltese production.

Bogart turns in a very capable performance as the reckless soldier of fortune. He isn't dumb and he doesn't chatter from the side of his mouth. Bogie is fast becoming Hwood's best box office attraction if he is to be judged from his recent performance in The Maltese Falcon, and The Big Shot. And who else, excepting Gary Cooper, would kill off ten Japs in a plantation gun battle.

Miss Astor has a role, all right, but she's practically an ornament on a Christmas tree in July. Her part is limited in comparison to the role she had in the Falcon film.

The massive Greenstreet turns in an excellent showing. All fat men, they say, are supposed to be jolly, but Greenstreet is an exception. He is a shrewed performer toddling about in each scene with the ease of a retired business tycoon.

Supporting Bogart, Miss Astor, and Greenstreet are a horde of lesser Oriental thespians, but Sen Young, the wise cracking, second generation youthful Jap, comes up with a nice performance. John Huston, the director, does a brilliant job. He's a master of suspense and action, and he has created enough superficial melodrama to keep the customers interested. Mr. Huston, we salute you—Across the Pacific IS a grand photoplay!

College Women Warned To Prepare Selves For A Part In War Effort

Stressing the needs of our country at war, the American Council on Education in a recent bulletin, brought out the fact that college women must prepare themselves for work in the war effort.

College women are needed at the present time to take the place of men in business, therefore they should all avail themselves of the opportunity to complete college in the shortest possible time.

Women are particularly urged to prepare themselves for service in the fields most needed by the nation—medicine, nursing, chemistry, pharmacy, physics, mathematics, secretarial, engineering and statistics.

At the present time one of the greatest needs for women is in the field of nursing. The call for nurses comes from every branch of the service and from areas where war production is carried on. The Army and Navy need 3,000 nurses each month until July, 1943. An acute shortage of nurses exists in civilian hospitals and health agencies.

To meet these needs the nursing profession has suggested that students who have completed two or more years of college work be allowed to finish nursing school in from 24 to 28 months. Hhowever, the present need is for more students to enroll in accredited nursing schools.

Bible Club

Group To Aid Welfare Drive

The Bible Club, in coopeation with the Salvage Committee, is sponsoring a drive to collect reading matter for service men. The men in the camps and on the ships can use magazines and books of all types—fiction, autobiography, history—even your old Economics book. The taste is varied, so if you have books of any kind which you have read and do not need any more lying around your home collecting dust, bring them to the book room at the north end of the main hall and they will be given to the U.S.O. for distribution to recreation rooms everywhere.

Especially great among the men in the service is the demand for Bibles and Testaments. Every man needs one and every man should have one. The Bible societies say that they are swamped with orders and cannot keep up with the demand, even with the presses rolling at top speed. The Bible Club is establishing a fund to enable students to contribute for the purpose of purchasing Testaments for the fighting men. Each Testament costs fifteen cents. You may see these Testaments—brown for the Army and blue for the Navy—at the book room and put your nickels and dimes in the little red box placed there for that purpose.

The drive so far has been very successful. Many students have brought books and contributed, but it can be more successful if every student brings at least one book or buys at least one Testament.

Mohr Warns Students On Dropping Courses

Wednesday, November 4, is the last day for dropping courses without loss of grade points, according to announcement made by Registrar J. Paul Mohr. Dr. Mohr warns all students to consult with the members of the Department of Counseling and Guidance in this matter in order that the procedure of adjusting the student's program will be properly executed.

"It is no longer possible for a student to add any course to his program," said Dr. Mohr. "In a few instances there will be provisions made for starting certain elementary courses," he added, "but in every case the student should not act with-

Robert Hoffman In Eighth Place In Navy Graduation

Placing eighth in his battalion of more than 200 cadets, Robert C. Hoffman, former college student, was graduated last week from the United States Pre-Flight School at St. Mary's College.

Hoffman, who was once awarded the college's President's Cup, will report to the Naval Reserve Aviation Base at Oakland (Calif.) for primary flight training. Successful completion of this course leads to a commission either as an ensign in the Naval Reserve or as a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserve.

Dr. Haley In Appeal For Air Raid Wardens

Dr. Phylis Haley, college psychology instructor and assistant director of training for the San Francisco Civil Defense Council, urges all college students to volunteer for Air Raid Warden Service. "The council is continually losing men from these ranks," said Miss Haley, "and the only source of supply is the college men." Firewatchers are also needed by the ARW service, according to Miss Haley.

"College women may well interest themselves in the AWVS and the Red Cross," suggested Miss Haley. Volunteer workers in the Home Economics department, sororities, and clubs can well cooperate in the work of these larger agencies in Miss Haley's opinion.

Newman Club Will Hear Air Corps Man At Meet

Major Frank Flynn of Hamilton Field will be the guest speaker at the next regular meeting of the college Newman Club at Saint Mary's Cathedral Monday evening, November 2.

A motion picture on the Stanford-U.S.F. football game and plans for a breakfast meeting on November 8 will be discussed at the meeting.

Debate Classes Suspended

There will be no debating activities during the fall semester, according to Charles McKiernan, speech instructor of the college English department. "Only advanced speech students are selected for debate groups," said McKiernan, "and since the advanced course is not offered this semester we will not resume practice until spring session."

Drake Takes Navy Title; Marcus Keeps 'Em Burning

LOCAL MAKES GOOD

Three cheers should be extended to Alfred "Duke" Drake, who wasted no time in getting to the top after his enlistment in the Navy only a couple of months ago.

Drake immediately walked into activities and was just as quick to walk out with the heavyweight championship of the 11th Naval District. The former Ram athlete decisioned Robert Panter of Louisville, Kentucky, in three rounds last Monday night.

We received a letter from Drake a few days before the fight in which he said that Jim McGowan was to be his opponent. McGowan and Drake had paled around together long before their enrollment and it would have been a grand setup had they fought. But for some unknown reason, Panter turned out to be the victim of Drake's punishing lefts and rights.

While at the college, Drake also made a success of his undertakings. As a member of the Beta Phi Beta Fraternity, he won the heavyweight title for two successive semesters and then captured the light-heavy crown while McGowan was winning in the heavyweight class. He also performed at fullback for Lee Eisan's gridiron squad.

It's a swell start for a swell guy.

RAMS OUT FOR No. 2

Spirit reigned throughout the college for the first time in many a semester last Friday afternoon, and as a result the Ram football team won its first game of the current season. A caravan of close to 50 automobiles, decorated in Red and White, drove out to Ingleside Stadium to see Lee Eisan's squad fumble its arch rivals from San Francisco State, 6 to 0. The victory, despite the previous losses, made the season a successful one.

Next Thursday on the college campus, the Rams will endeavor to bring home number two against Modesto Junior College. Although the Modestans shellacked Sacramento 26 to 7, who in turn trounced the Rams 35 to 14, the game should prove close.

If the same spirit is shown as last Friday, chances are that the college may emerge with a victory. At any rate, Coach Eisan believes that the turn out and continuous cheering had much to do with the Rams' good showing against State, and believes that the same thing may happen if it is repeated.

At the time of this writing the game is definitely scheduled, although Eisan remarked that Modesto may be forced to cancel the contest because of the present traveling conditions. As a tune up to the game, the Rams will face the Naval Reserves from Treasure Island this coming Monday afternoon at Treasure Island with the kickoff set at 3:30.

MARCUS IN COAST GUARD

We also received a letter from Bob Marcus, co-sports editor and alternate writer of this column last semester. Marcus is one of the "Feather Merchants" in the U. S. Coast Guard, but he claims that he is anything but a sailor at present.

Stranded in the hills of Granite Falls, Washington, the former "All Intramural" basketball player, having won that distinction while competing for the Newman Club, has nothing to do all day except chop down trees and logs.

Nice work . . . keep the home fires burning, Bob.

IS THAT SPIRIT?

We were reading the Ram's Horn in the last issue of The Guardsman and came across an article submitted by a member of the Phi Lambda Epsilon Fraternity, claiming that the only spirit throughout the college was contained by that same organization.

That is all well and fine for those who care to believe the exaggerated statement, but what we want to know is why, with all the said spirit, did the Phi Lambs manage to show up for only two of their first five basketball games in the intramural tournament?

WAA Reduces Participation And Practice Sessions To One Day; Meeting November 5

The next meeting of the WAA Council will be Thursday, November 5 at 11 a.m., according to Lorraine Johnson, president of the group. The club has voted to reduce participation and practice sessions to one day each week with the exception of badminton and basketball. All women are urged to start training now for the Tourney Week matches.

Dr. Alice B. Potter will be in her office from 1 to 4 p.m. each Monday and Thursday.

All WAA participants should be checked before November 5. Eligibility for clubs and playdays requires a health examination. Old students who have not been rechecked should see Dr. Potter immediately.

PING PONG:

A ladder tournament is being played off in matches arranged by those participating. Three tables are available for play between class periods.

This is the newest sport organized by WAA this year.

BOWLING:

Practice and competitive matches are held at 3:15 on Mondays at the Lincoln Bowl. Arrangements to play Lowell, Mission, State College, and San Mateo Junior College are being made by Marge Weiss, Bowling Club Manager. A coeducational match will be played in the near future.

ARCHERY:

Archers practice every Friday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the campus range. The team plans a novelty shoot during tourney week.

RIDING:

Riders enjoy a canter through Golden Gate Park on Thursdays, at 4 p.m., according to Mrs. Bergin, club sponsor. Men students and faculty are invited to ride with the club.

Pirates Still Leading Contenders For Cage Title; Old Mens' Club, Newmans Overtake Beta Phi Beta

Two surprises—the Old Men's Athletic Club and the Newman Club—have jumped to the top of the college intramural basketball standings as the teams terminate four week's play today.

The third member of this undefeated trio is Jack Terry's Pirates, who though still undefeated, will probably meet their greatest single threat today, at 4 p.m., in the men's gymnasium, when they tangle with the OMAC quintet. The winner of this affair (take your choice) will be "the team to beat!"

Beta Phis Lose

Most amazing thing brought to light, by a look at this week's standings, is the fact that the Rifle Club and Beta Phi Beta, heretofore, top teams in intramural play, have landslided into apparent oblivion.

The East Bay All Stars, led by gangling Georgie Walker, may solicit the services of Bob Jones, last semester's All-Intramural center Jones, if he plays (after the football season) will prove a valuable asset for the team from the other side of the bay.

In today's titanic feature, the Pirates will endeavor to knock off the surging OMACs. With Ken Berridge, Eddie Lapayunde, and Georgie Vogiotsis in the Pirate starting lineup, the Old Men will have to speed up their attack in order to cope with the fast-breaking seafarers. Jack Lefcourt, OMAC star, will enlist in the Navy next month, hence the scheduling of both teams today, according to Jack Brady, faculty director, who recently contributed "one pint of blood to the Blood Procurement Center."

Volleyball entries are now being accepted by Brady in the men's gymnasium office. Competition in this intramural sport will begin as soon as the present cage circuit is ended, Brady said.

Because of the war (and the draft) Brady expressed some doubt as to whether or not the forthcoming All-Intramural Sports Night would be staged. Plans have not been, as of this date, under consideration, but it was hinted that the sports night depended on the future.

Gators Lose As Jones Scores Lone Tally

Capitalizing on a third period opportunity, the Rams throttled the San Francisco Staters with a one touchdown triumph before a crowd of more than 1,000. Although the Gators "scored once," the scoreboard read: RAMS 6, the Gators oh!

Midway in the third quarter, Charley Cook tossed a 37 yard pass to right end Bob Jones, who snared the ball on the three yard line and scampered over for the lone tally. Cook's attempted conversion sailed to the right of the goal posts.

Gators Muff Chance

The score might have been knotted, but the Gators lost their golden opportunity when a touchdown pass from Werner Steinbach, hulkin' State fullback, to Gridley Dorr was nullified because of a holding penalty.

In the final period, Gerry Pierce intercepter a Gator aerial toss and ran it back to the State two yard striper. The Rams might have sent Al Morris plunging into the end zone, but the gun echoed to put an end to festivities—and the 1942 wartime version of the Ram-Gator fracas remains in the record books as a well-deserved Ram win.

Cook Injured

Halfback Cook, of Lee Eisan's victorious squad, incurred a leg injury in the game, but according to Eisan, Cook will probably see service in the Rams' next encounter, the Naval Reserves from Treasure Island.

In all, it was a pure case of opportunism—the Gators muffing several scoring opportunities, while the Rams came through with "just one," but it paved the way for the team's first win of the season.

Duke Drake Captures Navy Heavyweight Championship

Alfred "Duke" Drake, former Ram boxer and football player, scored a decisive decision over Robert Panter, Louisville (Ky.), to win the heavyweight championship of the Eleventh Naval District this week.

Drake, along with Jim McGowan, another college boxing champion, enlisted in the United States Navy several months ago. He is now stationed at San Diego, where enlisted men undergo preliminary training in "boot camp."

Last semester, Drake went after the light-heavyweight crown of the college in the AMS Intramural Boxing Carnival, and came out victorious.

Former Ram Golfer Plays Against Hope And Crosby

Oleg Baloff, who formerly was a member of the Ram golf squad, won the right, along with fellow golfer Jack Finger, to meet Bob Hope and Bing Crosby this Sunday, at the Presidio Golf Club.

Nearly 100 bay area golfers competed to determine which would compete in the charity matches. There was only one restriction, however—all golfers had to be employees of local shipyards. The event is sponsored by the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Buc Contest Scheduled For Thursday

With confidence restored by the work shown against San Francisco State College last Friday, Coach Lee Eisan is preparing the Ram squad for a wide open game against Modesto Junior College on the campus gridiron this coming Thursday. Kickoff is slated for 3:30.

The College eleven will be out for its second victory in a row, as it defeated the Gators from State 6 to 0 at State's new field last week. The Rams showed a definite up-rise against the Gators, especially on their passing attack, which resulted in the winning touchdown.

Jones Scores

The pass, from Charlie Cook to Bob Jones, traveled 37 yards through the air and Jones didn't even have to break his stride as he raced over the goal to make the catch.

If a person were to go by records, the Modesto tilt would be a runaway, with the Rams doing all the chasing, trying to catch the Buccaneer backs.

Modesto defeated Sacramento 26 to 7, and Sacramento defeated the Red and White 35 to 14. But, as many observers have noticed, you can't go by past scores.

Modesto Has "T"

Last season, Modesto completely dominated the Rams with the famous "T" formation which enabled the Bucs to score on fast, swift plays. Sacramento also used the vaunted "T" against the Red and White two weeks ago, and the college clever still was bewildered by the fast moving plays. The players have learned by experience from the Sacramento till, so if Modesto springs the "T" again this year, the Bucs are in for a surprise.

Modesto's colors are royal blue and white. Jerseys are blue in front and white in the back. Sleeves will be blue with three white stripes on the upper fore-arm. The moleskins will also be blue, and the headgears are white.

College Coeds To Attend Marin Playday November 7

Guests of the Women's Athletic Association at Marin Junior College, the coeds of this college will attend an invitational sectional playday at Kentfield on Saturday, November 7. Delegations representing Salinas Junior College, San Mateo Junior College, Santa Rosa Junior College and San Francisco and San Jose State Colleges will also participate.

Registration for the "Play Day" will take place in the Women's Gymnasium at Kentfield beginning at 9:30 a.m. Miss Bertha Keller and Miss Andrewa Noble will accompany the San Francisco WAA representatives.

The program of intercollegiate sports includes competition in archery, badminton, tennis, ping pong and basketball. The games will be followed by a social mixer and luncheon. Details concerning transportation, equipment and luncheon plans will be posted on the WAA bulletin board.

Merchandising

Retail Dry Goods Organization To Train Employees In Selling

San Francisco Junior College and the Retail Dry Goods Association are cooperating to train employees for the great demand holiday shopping will make upon San Francisco's department and specialty stores.

According to Karl M. Stull, secretary for the Retailers, and President A. J. Cloud, the college is conducting "brush up" courses in selling and merchandising techniques for four hours each week. Classes are under the direction of Miss Virginia Gobin, college merchandising instructor.

Openings In Stores

"This is an opportunity for housewives and women who once worked in stores to lend a hand in an emergency," said Claude Silva, college placement officer. Even if applicants lack experience, there'll be openings in wrapping departments and stock rooms, according to Silva.

Almost all of San Francisco's stores have released scores of employees to the armed services and the war industries. For this reason they are appealing to all women not now working to help handle the increased holiday trade.

Applications should be made to Claude Silva. Classes will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday each week as long as there is demand. Applicants may now register for the week of November 1. College students should consult with the Placement Office regarding holiday employment.

To be "right-eyed" makes reading easier, according to Dr. H. R. Crosland, associate professor of psychology at the University of Oregon.

AWS

Waacs-Waves Talk To Women

Compliments are still being bestowed the Associated Women Students following their meeting last week, in Room 136, which featured two speakers from the WAVES and WAACS, Ernestine Cervelli, AWS president, disclosed this week.

Lt. Tova Petersen, of the WAVES; Lt. Mary McGlynn, of the WAACS, and Mrs. Edward Sheldon, representing the San Francisco Board of Education, were the principal speakers.

There are two WAAC training schools in the country, according to Lt. McGlynn. These two are located at Fort Des Moines and Drake University. Likewise, the WAVES training schools for non-commissioned officers are located at Smith, Oklahoma, Indiana, and Wisconsin Universities.

Women interested in registering in the WAACs or the WAVES are requested to contact Margaret Dougherty, dean of women, in Room 125, immediately for further and complete details.

A Cappella

Choir Set For Music Debut

Members of the A Cappella Choir will sing at Teachers' Institute on Tuesday afternoon, November 24 in Civic Auditorium, Miss Flossita Badger, music department head, announced yesterday. It will be their first formal appearance of the present semester.

Listening Hour

The two o'clock Listening Hour for Wednesday, November 4 will consist of selections from Faust by Gounod and Traviata by Verdi. The one o'clock hour will feature Songs from the African Veldt played and sung by Joseph Marias and his Bushveld Band, and Symphony No. 40 "Jupiter" Symphony by Mozart.

KGO Concert

Students desiring to attend the Thursday night concerts in the new NBC Building can do so by securing tickets from Miss Badger in Room 260. As an unlimited number of tickets have been given to the college by KGO, all students interested should be able to attend.

Salvage Campaign By Home Economics Group To Begin

Members of the college home economics association are conducting a drive for discarded phonograph records, old scraps of yarn for blanket squares, and pieces of clean linen. Students are asked to make their donations within the next few weeks in order that the materials may be used in present projects. No donation should be withheld because of its size. Records and materials can be left at Room 157.

The students in this group are also engaged in collecting discarded magazines to be used in composing scrap books of "continued stories."

CAB

Groups, Clubs Given Permanent Membership Throughout Duration

Because of the fact that students and faculty advisers are leaving the college, 12 organizations on the campus are unable to renew their charters.

Understanding this fact, the Club Advisory Board, under the leadership of Dorothy Hogan, president, has granted membership and recognition in the CAB for the duration. These clubs are entitled to be drawn up at the beginning of the semester if their charters are renewed within the appointed deadline. Approved by the Student Council and the CAB membership committee, this order provides for the future of the campus organizations.

Jim Madsen, vice-president of the board announces the names of the organizations. They are: Block S, Floriculture, Forum, Music Club, Nu Epsilon Sigma, Omicron Phi Pi, Peace Officers, Phi Alpha Omega, Phi Rho Pi, PE and Recreation Majors, Sigma Delta Pi and the Campus Players.

Miss Hogan States that there will be a meeting of the Board November 12 at 11:00 to plan the future events of the remainder of the semester. It was suggested at a past meeting to participate in a recent drive.

Employment

Seek Student Labor Help

Part time positions suitable for students of the college are plentiful, according to Claude Silva, director of placement. Factories, offices and retail stores are anxious and willing to employ part time workers for four hours each day, and in most cases at the prevailing hourly wage. Factories like the Eastman Kodak Company and the Rotometal Corporation are seeking part time workers; banks, insurance offices and hotels have also placed a general call for assistance.

Gasoline station work at any hour, for any number of hours and most any place are also awaiting applicants. The park's aquarium is anxious for a student of Biology to take employment.

It is too soon for students to apply for holiday jobs in the retail stores, according to Silva, unless a student is available for Saturday work or for four hours one or more afternoons during the week. At present there are no openings in the United States Post Office.

Students are encouraged to place their names on file with Silva soon if they intend to make application for jobs during the Christmas season.

Proposed State Guard Plan Shelved By Group Officials

Insufficient sign-ups for the proposed State Guard company has forced college officials to abandon the idea, according to Louis Conlan, college military adviser.

Not enough men signed up to merit the formation of the militiary company at the college, and Major James Lang, State Guard official who proposed the idea, and college authorities cancelled all plans for the group.

Business

Registration Dates Chosen For Students

Business students will usher in their second eight weeks' program for the fall semester by holding a two day registration on November 12 and 13, Edward W. Larson, acting chairman of Business Division, disclosed today.

The program includes beginning and advanced courses in such subjects as typing, shorthand, machine calculation, filing, Business English, office machines, Business Mathematics and related subjects. A listing of the full schedule of courses has been prepared and is available for distribution at the Registrar's office.

Tuesday, November 10, will end the current eight weeks session of the Business Division, and registration for the second half of the course will follow immediately after the Armistice Day holiday. Students are urged by Mr. Larson to discuss their new program with their respective advisers at the earliest possible date.

Emmanuel Hein Named New Welfare Chairman

Emmanuel Hein, a high sophomore student, was today named chairman of the Welfare Committee, by Bill Steinberg, student body president.

Hein, a member of the Beta Tau fraternity, was given the Welfare post to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Bob Ervin, former chairman of the committee.

Hein Leads Drive

The college salvage drive, entering its fourth week, will be one of Hein's first responsibilities as a member of the Welfare group. Even though the drive seems to be failing in a great many ways, Hein said that he intended to spark the scrap collection to a high point in the last weeks of the campaign.

Scrap Vital Need

"Emphasizing the need for various scrap materials by the government, Hein stated that the local drive is designed to promote the collection of vital materials. The silk, rayon, and fur scraps are needed at the present time for use in manufacturing garments and hospital supplies for the armed services.

Even though the campus campaign has only one week to go in its official drive, it was hinted by Welfare Committee members that the time period may be extended for several weeks to make up for the light collection days.

Peace Conference Chooses Day For World Observance

The National Peace Conference is continuing with its effort to make November 11, 1942, Armistice Day, the Second Annual World Government Day.

It is the aim of the conference to feature the theme of world government in all Armistice Day observations. The establishment of a governed world is a great task and will come only in response to an enlightened public demand, according to a conference release.

Individuals and groups interested in the program may address inquiries to National Peace Conference, 8 West 40th Street, New York.

Curriculum

Night Courses Will Train Lab Assistants Here

A course designed to train chemical laboratory assistants will be opened at the college during evening hours and will be opened to the public Tuesday evening, November 10 at 7:30 p.m.

Instruction in the new class will be given two nights each week, Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7:30 until 10 p.m. in Room 229.

Meetings Arranged

If it is impossible for any person to start the class at the first meeting, arrangements can be made to receive individual instruction for the hours missed. A parallel course is being conducted at the present time at the junior college on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 8:00 to 12:00 in the morning.

High school chemistry or physics is required before any person can enter the class. The requirement can be made up at the college during a regular session of the class.

Work Listed

The instruction consists of teaching skills and techniques necessary for industrial analysis. The samples and directions for the analysis technique are provided by various industrial laboratories. A text book written by the instructor in charge will be used for the class work, and the book has already been approved by the industrial laboratories of the area.

One-half hour of the class period will be devoted to lecture material, and the remainder of the class time will be spent in the laboratory.

Since the college is under the San Francisco Public Schools System, students in the class will not have to pay a tuition fee, but they will be responsible for the text book use.

S. F. Symphony Group Voices Objectives

The newly founded San Francisco Symphony League, of which Mrs. John P. Coghlan is chairman, has announced as one of its first objectives the "underwriting of student tickets for music and history majors in high schools and junior colleges."

It is estimated by the league that some 400 music students in San Francisco are prevented from attending the symphony concerts for financial reasons, and it aims to make it possible for these students to go.

Other objectives announced by the league are: free admissions for service men, the underwriting of larger orchestral works, the purchase of new scores and parts for the orchestra's library, and special privileges and attractions for League members.

Freshman Class President Takes Leave To Join Navy

Taking over the presidential reins will be Shirlie Hart, low freshman vice-president.

Miss Hart is planning a low freshman dance but neither time nor the place has been set as yet.

Draft Action Delayed For Short Period

The House of Representatives Military Affairs Committee may today send the 18 and 19 year old draft bill to a conference committee of the House and Senate, according to informed sources. The efforts of Representative Rankin (D., Miss.) to have the House accept the Senate changes in the bill, and thus avoid a conference, are not expected to materialize.

As the bill now stands the Senate has amended the proposal which originated in the House of Representatives, adding a provision requiring a year's training of 18 and 19 year olds before they could be sent into combat service.

Opposition Cited

Indication of opposition on the part of the administration to Senator O'Daniel's Amendment can be taken from a speech by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, delivered at Boston last week. Patterson said that "it would be well that it (the teen age draft) should not pass at all" if crippling amendments were added to the legislation. Dispatches from Washington go so far as to intimate that the draft will be vetoed if it is passed in its present form.

The army, it is understood, prefers to continue voluntary enlistments of high school and college youths rather than accept any rigid restrictions on the use of its troops.

Students May Finish

With the present delay in legislative action it appears certain that the students will complete the present

Dr. Alice Potter To Attend Convention

Dr. Alice Potter, college physician, will leave the campus shortly to attend the national meeting of the American Academy for Pediatricians in Chicago, Illinois.

Dr. Potter has been the medical adviser to the women of the college since the college opened in 1935. Her duties in the San Francisco area have been varied, since she at one time was an instructor at the University of California Medical College, and she is often called upon to conduct health examinations in the local public schools.

Because of her many duties in the medical field, the Doctor's time has been limited at the college to Monday and Thursday afternoons. Dr. Potter will resume her duties at the campus after the Thanksgiving Day holiday.

There will be an All College Assembly on Thursday, November 12, at 11 o'clock, in the Men's Gymnasium.

All students will be required to attend. Speakers will be: Coordinator Louis G. Conlan, Dean Edwin C. Browne and Head Counselor Edward Redford, who will address the students on the general topic of "The College Student and the War." The latest information of the "teen-age" draft and officer training programs will be presented.

Education in War

'Education For Free Men' Theme Of American Schools Week Here; College Program Plans Studied

The coming week, November 8 to 14, has been designated American Education Week by the National Education Association, the American Legion, the U. S. Office of Education, and the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The theme for this, the twenty-second observance of American Education Week, is "Education For Free Men." As has been the practice in the past, special themes have been assigned each day of the week. Sunday, November 8, calls for a "renewal of faith"; Monday, "Serving Wartime Needs"; Tuesday, "Building Strong Bodies"; Wednesday, "Developing Loyal Citizens"; Thursday, "Cultivating Knowledge and Skills"; Friday, "Establishing Sturdy Character", and Saturday, "Strengthening Morale for Victory."

Two Observances

There will be two observances of the general theme at the college next week. On Tuesday at eleven o'clock, Dr. Franklin Sewell of the faculty, will address the students in Social Science 1 on the topic "The American Political Scene."

Traditional college American Education Week program will be presented by Miss Marie Weller with the broadcast of a panel discussion over Radio Station KPO, on the evening of November 13, Friday. Featured on the program will be Dean Edwin C. Browne and Dr. Sewell. They will participate in the discussion to be lead by four students selected from the radio production classes. The broadcast is set for 10:30 and will last a half hour. Topic for discussion will be "The Contribution of the College to the War Effort."

Coleman Chairman

Supervisor Coleman, chairman of the Citizen's Committee on American Education Week, in calling attention to the particular significance of this first wartime observance of the week, said:

"It is a time for concerted effort on the part of all school systems throughout the nation to help the public understand why education is more and not less important as a result of the urgency of the war effort. It is a time for interpreting to the people what the schools are contributing to the war effort and the part that they must play in the peace."

Staggered Hours

College Periods Not To Change

Nothing new to the two thousand students attending this college each day, "staggered hours" for the relief of transportation congestion due to war time peak loads, will not affect the present schedule of classes at the college.

Details of the adjustment to be made November 16 by the Board of Education for the High Schools and Junior High Schools of San Francisco are not yet complete. The new school day in secondary schools will alter the present hours of 8:30 a.m. to 3:15 p.m.

Early Classes Ideal

The 8 and 9 o'clock periods in the college day coincide with the hours proposed by the Staggered Hours Committee, Warren K. Brown, chairman. Unlike the high schools, the college provides a flexible program throughout the day thus eliminating this institution from the reshuffling.

A quick survey by The Guardsman revealed that not more than a third of the total college enrollment have classes at 8 a.m. Most students begin their day at 9 and 10 a.m., the latter being one of the peak hours here at the college.

Transport Problems Solved

Should the transportation problem become so acute as to affect the college, adjustments will be made in order not to add to the congestion, according to Dr. J. Paul Mohr, registrar. It is not anticipated that any change will be effected before the spring semester, however.

Retail stores are now running on a 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. schedule except on Thursdays, when the stores remain open until 9 p.m. City offices are being opened at 8 a.m. and close at 4:30 p.m.

College Bank Conducting Bond, Stamp Sales Daily

War Bonds and Stamps are on sale at the college banking office during regular business hours, according to Luther Lyon, college Comptroller.

Students are urged to make their purchases through the college whenever possible. Sales for the present semester have fallen below the quotas set by students buying during the spring term with the result that the college lags far behind in comparison with sales in other public schools.

"It is entirely possible that most of our students are making their purchases through pay-roll deductions," said Lyon; "but at the same time it is apparent that they have neglected the college in the purchase of stamps and the direct buying of bonds."

Wednesday, November 11, Armistice Day, will be an administrative and academic holiday for all departments of the college. Students in classes under the direction of the United States Civil Service Commission and adult education courses will be given special notices regarding the observance of the day by their instructors.

Hogan Calls Club Board Meeting At 3 P.M. Today

Evident failure of the salvage drive has prompted the Club Advisory Board to hold an important meeting today at 3 o'clock, in Room 140, to discuss whether or not the board will support the drive.

Dorothy Hogan, president of the CAB, revealed, "There are only three week left in the drive, and it is up to the board to decide whether to correct this failure brought about by the salvage campaign's carelessness."

Selective Service

College More Important

WORD was received at the college this week that legislation on the Selective Service Amendment requiring the drafting of 18 and 19 year old youths will be held up for at least three weeks, perhaps even for a longer period.

Even though the Congress of the United States has indicated that it will hold up legislation on the youth draft, college youths throughout the nation are leaving college to enlist in the various branches of the military services. Those students that are following this practice are, to say the least, not using their heads.

The present status of the amendment in committee would indicate that the young men who will be affected by the draft amendment will not be called for service until the spring and summer of 1943. Instead of quitting college at the present time, students should remain in their educational fields, receiving education they would not get if they enlist in the army or navy at the current moment.

Heads of the various military services have pointed out time and time again that they want trained personnel in their organizations, not a half trained person. Students who complete as much of their college training as is possible have a greater chance of success in the service than those men who are leaving college now to enlist.

Also of prime importance is the fact that selective service officials will be advised to induct only students in their fields. The course a student is taking and the scholastic record of the student will be the deciding factors on whether or not the student will be inducted into the military service. San Francisco Junior College has expanded its curriculum to cover all of the required subjects of the armed forces, and if men avail themselves of the opportunity set forth by the college, they will, undoubtedly, be allowed to remain in school as officer material for the army, navy, or marines.

Summing up what has been said, it should be noted that college men are urged to remain in their respective educational fields. This college has speeded up its program to include courses that the armed forces want, and it is the duty of every male student to stay in school to study a program of studies that will benefit him as well as his nation.

Cafeteria Candy Service Not Good; Check Room Needed

• Candy Counter Wanted

Editor, The Guardsman:

Once in a while between classes I decide to buy some candy, so I trot down to the cafeteria. Invariably this results in my being late for class.

I don't know why it is necessary for the candy to be where it is, but I do know that following a bunch of tray-laden students around is no fun. It doesn't exactly help one's sense of humor to stand and wait while the all important decision between ice cream and jello is made by a student with 50 minutes to eat. Such a waste of time and patience in order to buy a piece of candy is unnecessary. If the candy were moved to a more convenient location there would be a lot less confusion.

• Cloak Room Demanded

Editor, The Guardsman:

I wonder how many students there are with no place to put their coats during class. They will probably be as disappointed as I was to learn that the check service is not in use this term. Could something be done to relieve us of our wet, soggy coats during the rainy weather?

• No Guardsman Features

Editor, The Guardsman:

As a member of the Associated Students of the college, I feel I have a right to suggest an improvement in The Guardsman. Why don't we have more feature stories to pep up the paper?

What happened to "We Knew them when" by Iwanna Hayworth?

All of my friends agree with me that feature stories about students makes the paper more interesting and more human.

Please return "We Knew Them When" or a similar feature story to make The Guardsman a "super" publication.

Award Associate In Arts Degree To Sixty Graduates In February Class; New State Education Board Regulation Now In Effect

Sixty students will be eligible for Associate in Arts degrees at the close of the current semester, according to Mary Perry, Registrar's assistant. Those who have petitioned for graduation have completed sixty or more units of junior college work.

This will be the first group to graduate from the college under the new regulations issued by the State Board of Education. Prior to this semester 64 units had to be completed before the degree could be granted.

Sixty Units Necessary

Students may now graduate upon the completion of 60 units of work on the college level, including units granted for Hygiene, First Aid and Physical Education. The effect of the new regulation has been to limit the number of electives, particularly in university parallel programs.

Upon the satisfactory completion of their current programs the following students will be graduated from the San Francisco Junior College February 3, 1943.

Marjorie Anne Alexander, Nadine Evelyn Arnson.

Peter Emmet Bigotta, Arthur Irvin Bischoff, Virginia N. Bopp, Ruth Hazel Breuer, Elva Melinda Byrd.

Joseph Frank Canevaro, Jack A. Cederlund, Samuel Yim Chinn, Helen Elizabeth Clark, Theodore I. Coleman.

Earl Woods Darrah, Helen E. Dempsey, Gwendolyn Florence Dunnen.

Franklin Edward Eggert, Robert Ervin.

Ralph Lynn Fisher, Peter Edmund Fong.

Julio C. Gahn, Frances Jean Glicksman, Harold Crawford Gregory, Alfred Jack Gutfeld.

Etta Marie Haines, Roland Walter Halstead, Iwanna F. Hayworth, William C. Hickey, Harold Sidney Hyman.

Robert Arnold Iburolle.

B. Jane Johnston.

Harold Viggo Kallerup, Lester Abston Krames.

Lucille Claire Landresse, Jack H. Leonard, Della Lum.

Air Raid

Yellow Alert Shows Need For Air Drill

While the performance of the students of the college at the most recent Air Raid Alarm was satisfactory, according to Coordinator Louis G. Conlan, many of our men and women are not yet thoroughly familiar with the precautions to be taken here at the college.

At the sound of the alarm, an intermittent ringing of the classroom bells, students on the third floor should seek shelter in the basement and the main floor. All other students are to stay in the corridors on their respective floors. Avoid standing near doors or opposite doors or windows. Faculty wardens have been appointed to monitor the halls and stairways.

No person is permitted to leave the building during an air raid alarm and those outside any of the buildings are to seek shelter in the nearest building as soon as the alarm is heard.

The college buildings are the safest shelters in this area. Students who are members of the Civilian Defense Corps should be prepared to take up their duties here when the call is given by the deans. The college has been designated as a Red Cross Emergency First Aid station and better in the event of an actual air raid.

The air raid alarm is sounded in the San Francisco Public School System on the "yellow" or alert signal given by the Fourth Fighter Command. The police department radio stations and the Civilian Defense organizations are the only other agencies notified of the alert.

Women Asked To Aid In Salvage Drive

In addition to its drive for old scraps of yarn, discarded linens, phonograph records, and old magazines, the Home Economics Association is engaged in the collection of old silk and nylon hosiery.

"The need for silk and nylon in the manufacture of gun-powder bags is acute," according to Miss Maria Stanich, president of the club. Working with Miss Stanich on the HEA Salvage Committee are Helen Owen, Renee Gros, Nan Whaley, Jessie Tribble, Marian Du Jardin, and Bertha Wallace. All women students are asked to leave their donations to this drive with Miss Cuneo, club adviser, in Room 155.

Marine Corps Day Set For Nov. 10th

Tuesday, November 10, marks the one hundred and sixty-seventh anniversary of the formation of the United States Marines. The Marine Corps was not made a permanent organization until 1798, though formed by the Continental Congress in 1775. This arm of our fighting forces is under a Major General Commandant who receives orders from the Secretary of the Navy.

The Marine Corps supplies two triangular divisions as highly trained land auxiliaries of the Navy, which include infantry, light and heavy artillery, machine gun, signal, engineer tank, chemical, amphibious and parachute troops; and aviators equipped with land planes, together with all other land fighting units which would be necessary to enable the Navy to carry out its mission in war.

In addition to supplying the land forces necessary to the successful operation of the Navy, which is known as the principal mission of the Marine Corps, all capital ships and certain light cruisers of the Navy carry a detachment of Marines.

To fill its authorized strength of more than seventy-five thousand men the Marine Corps is recruiting college men as officers and specialists. Enlistees continue their education until called to officers or specialist school by the Marine Corps.

United Nations Limit Call On Teen-Age Men

If and when the "teen-age draft bill" passes the Congress, the United States will be the first among the United Nations to draft 18 year olds into war duty.

Australia, where 18 year olds were called up last July, does not permit the youths to be taken from training until a year after induction. In England the minimum age for overseas duty is 19. Canada does not take men before their nineteenth birthday.

These facts will probably weigh heavily in the deliberations now going on at Washington in the Military Affairs Committees of both houses of Congress relative to the draft of 18 and 19 year olds.

The conference committee from the Senate, appointed by Vice-President Henry A. Wallace, is composed of five Senators who voted against the amendment which restrains the army from using teen agers in combat until a year after their induction. The House of Representatives has already rejected the "training period amendment" but must reconsider the proposal this week.

November 4th Was Last Day To Change Study Programs

As announced in the circular of information, Wednesday, November 4, was the last day for dropping courses without penalty. No adjustments may be made in student's programs for the remainder of the semester.

Students who are forced to discontinue their college work before the close of the present semester, February 3, should consult with Registrar J. Paul Mohr in the matter of obtaining credit toward graduation for work completed.

Hubbard Radio Program Features Staff Members

Four students from the college participated in a radio interview with Anita Day Hubbard, November 4, according to Marie Weller, radio instructor. The broadcast originated in station KSFO at 8:15 p.m.

Students participating were Ernestine Cervelli, Barbara Sumski, Bob Catudio, Duane Skinner and Iwanna Hayworth.

RAMblings

By Nick Barbarotto

WAS IT THE LAST?

The Ram football team proved to be very poor guests last Monday afternoon when it visited Treasure Island to meet the Naval Reserves. After being invited in good faith and receiving two grand meals—all on the United States Government—they proceeded to subdue the Navy gridders under a 15 to 0 score.

It marked the second victory of the season for the college, and, with yesterday's outcome against Modesto Junior College too late for The Guardsman deadline, leaves a victory percentage of only .333 for the year.

The Rams took a 2 to 0 lead in the first quarter on a safety and then added two touchdowns in the third for the total afternoon's scoring. Harlan Ferrando's pass to Roy Mangini accounted for the first touchdown, and Gerry Pierce's 40 yard romp into paydirt made it 15.

Those students who attended yesterday's contest against Modesto might very well have witnessed the final Ram and junior college game for the duration.

Nothing definite has been said on the subject to date and it is purely guess work on our part. But after looking into the conditions that prevailed this season, we find it difficult to see where football can fit in the picture next year.

Although the representatives from the various armed forces encourage the sport and want it continued in all schools, we can't see for the life of us who's going to be around to play it—unless it be kids of 17 years or under.

By this time next fall the 18 and 19 draft will be under way so thoroughly that the average college student between the ages of 18 and 20 will be in one or the other branches of the service. College students of 17 years or under are so few in number that it is not probable any one college or university can field 11 capable men of that age.

And even if they could send a squad of 17 year olds on the gridiron, how will traveling conditions enable them to compete against other colleges? Those conditions caused the cancelling of any number of games this year and the situation looms to be twice as bad in the future.

There remains only three solutions to the problem of football. Number 1 . . . It can be played in high schools where the average student falls below the age limit. Number 2 . . . Played by men of 45 years and up. Number 3 . . . Played by those who are classified as 4-Fs.

Case number 1 has already fizzled out. The new ruling states that no school activities or athletic contests can be held during school time and that unnecessary traveling by street cars and other means between 9:30 and 2:30 are to be banished. The high schools are lucky to finish this season let alone prepare for another.

Case number 2 is also out. After five minutes of a gruesome game the old buzzards would be so worn out and broken down that a three week rest cure would not bring them back to normal.

That leaves only the 4-Fs. And to be classified in that category one has to be a heck of a mess these days. How can a person who fails to make the draft—possibly have enough energy to lift a football?

See what we mean?

If anyone has a solution to the problem, Coach Lee Eisan would appreciate you notifying him immediately.

DURYEA ON TOUR

Jim Duryea, who once attended the college, and who since gallivanted to the University of California, is at present attending the University of Oregon.

One of his ardent admirers received a letter from Duryea the other day in which he states that the Webfoot track coach expects him to heave the javelin 200 feet before the end of this coming track and field season.

Men Students Intramural Boxing Show Set Tentatively For Anniversary Of Jap Attack

A tentative date for the semi-annual Associated Men Students' Intramural Boxing Show will be on Monday night, December 7, in the men's gymnasium.

The date itself is famous, and should provide an ample amount of incentive for the men to show the spectators the fighting ability which the young men of America possess.

The date for qualifying bouts will start about the middle of November and students that figure on going out for the intramurals should start to get into shape immediately.

Russ Sweet, college boxing instructor, will be in charge of all bouts, and students interested in fighting this semester will hand their sign-ups slips to him.

Further information about the intramurals will appear in The Guardsman or on the main bulletin board in the men's gym.

Last semester, college students will remember the intramural bouts with fond memories, for such was the success of the fights. Each pugilist gave his best, and all the bouts were close.

In the leadoff bout, the crowd was brought to its feet when for three rounds, Eddie Glinden and Seisuke Akamine stood toe to toe and slugged it out, with Glinden getting the nod over his husky rival.

This semester the college will not be blessed with such outstanding boxers as Glinden, Duke Drake, Jim McGowan, Henry Lowe, or Armand Terzian, but the students, will still be able to watch Bill Steenberg, 135 pound champion, Bob Cavanaugh, Al Morris, and Bob Hemsted plus many other fighters that will appear as the finals come up.

Berridge Scores 45 Points To Break Basketball Record

Make way for Berridge, fellas!

After piloting his team to one win after another, the lean ex-George Washington High School cager committed virtual mayhem on the hapless 'n' helpless Tri-Eps by cagin' 45 (we repeat—45!) points to shatter all existing intramural scoring records.

Georgie Vogiotsis, Berridge's diminutive team-mate, came up with "an ordinary performance" with 31 points to his credit. And the final score of the Pirates-Tri Epsilon fracas: Berridge and Company 105, the three E's quintet, 26.

Pirates Still Lead

As the fifth week of intramural basketball play comes to a close today, the Pirates of Jack Terry are leading the field with eight wins and no defeats. The Newman Club, with a "7 and 1" record trails the title bound Pirates, and for the rest of the field . . . ugh!

One notable change occurred last week when the Psi Lambda Phi five came up from a gloomy bomb-shelter with three straight wins—tollowing three straight defeats. When Troy fell, the members of the Trojan squad joined the fraternity lineup; hence the three wins!

George Ritzeau, Bill Gerecke, and Lou Fortin have accounted for an upset win over the OMAC, and indications are they will "try to knock over the Pirates." The faltering OMAC quintet, however, has lost the services of Jackie Lefcourt, who enlisted in the Navy last week.

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Pirates	8	0	1.000
Newman Club	7	1	.875
OMAC	5	2	.714
Psi Lambda Phi	3	3	.500
East Bay	3	3	.500
Beta Phi Beta	3	4	.429
Brady's Beauties	2	3	.400
Tri-Epsilon	2	4	.333
Rifle Club	3	6	.333
Phi Lambda Epsilon	2	5	.286
Trojans	2	5	.286
Beta Tau	1	6	.143
Phi Alpha Omega	0	8	.000

BPB Is Best Frat

There isn't much to say about the fraternity clubs entered in the tournament. At present, Beta Phi Beta looks to be about "the best"—providing they can dispose of two other fraternity teams.

Despite the frantic antics of Billy Mahoric and Bob Iburolle, the Rifle Club is sliding further into the circuit basement. Present leaser of the basement is the Phi Alpha Omega fraternity team, and from the looks of things, the Omega quintet will stay in the cellar for the duration.

Volleyball and badminton entries are now being accepted by faculty intramural director Jack Brady, in the men's gymnasium office. Entries should not be submitted later than Tuesday, November 10.

Faculty Enters

The forthcoming badminton tournament will consist of both singles and doubles play, while the volleyball tournament will be composed of "six men teams." It was hinted, however, that the volleyball and badminton tournaments will start after the present cage tournament.

Only one team has entered thus far, namely, the Faculty! This team consists of instructors Lee Eisan, Russ Sweet, Tom Conlan, Tom Wilson, Louis Conlan, Edward Sandys, Brady and possibly William Mayo.

Women's Athletics

Members Attend Marin For Sectional Playday

Twenty members of the Women's Athletic Association, accompanied by Miss Bertha Keller, Dr. Andrewa Noble and former instructor Aileen Kinkel Llorente, will attend the Sectional College Play Day at Marin Junior College tomorrow.

"War duties and recreation work will prevent a large number of the club's membership from participating," Miss Keller said, "but regardless of numbers we are confident that the women from this college will fare very well in the competition."

Participants in tomorrow's games are:

Edna Smith, Alice Swing and Elizabeth Wardell, Archery.

Mary Lohig, Virginia Bell, Mary and Helen Looney, Chris Aninos and Pathcia Patterson, Badminton.

Helen Kellogg, Marjorie Rosenthal, Marguerite Martin and Betty Robanser, Tennis.

Dorothy Fairbanks and Erica Van Lienden, Ping Pong.

Lorraine Johnson, Virginia Hanlon, Beverley Bagley, Lavonne Jones, Fran Wiesner, Helen Looney, Basketball.

Colleges sending teams to Kentfield tomorrow are: San Francisco and San Jose State, Salinas, San Mateo, Santa Rosa and San Francisco Junior Colleges. Registration for the games will take place in the Marin gymnasium. The San Francisco delegation will travel by Greyhound bus, planning to return after the luncheon and social mixer sponsored by the Marin WAA.

WAA Club Activities

BADMINTON CLUB: Players meet regularly on Tuesday and Thursday at one o'clock for a round robin tournament. Women who have been coached in the fundamentals are urged to enter this type of competition. Co-educational matches will be promoted in the near future to prepare for intercollegiate games.

BOWLING CLUB: Manager Marge Weiss has called for a larger turnout at the Lincoln Bowl on Mondays at 3:15 p.m. Beginners are welcome. The Bowl is easily reached by the Tenth Avenue Bus and student rates (20 cents per line) are offered college players.

TENNIS CLUB: WAA Tourneys in singles and doubles are now being played off, according to Marguerite Martin, manager.

ARCHERY CLUB: Members will soon be shooting a "Columbia Round," competition open to those able to shoot at 50, 40 and 30 yards.

HOCKEY CLUB: Under coaching by Miss Verrel Weber, the Hockey team is preparing for the first SFJC participation in the Hockey Association Demonstration and Games to be held at Berkeley soon.

Ferrando Stars As Varsity Rallies To Score 15-0 Victory

To a tiny island in the middle of San Francisco Bay journeyed a spirited Ram varsity last Monday afternoon to play what was supposed to have been a warm-up game against some of Uncle Sam's fighting Navy.

As it turned out, the Naval Reserves were soundly scuttled as a seemingly rejuvenated Ram varsity rose up and smacked them under 15 to 0.

Ferrando Starts Rumpus

The Red and White showed that they were going to make a game of it when on taking the opening kickoff, Harlan Ferrando, the squad's seat back, ran it back some 55 yards to the Reserve's 45. From there, the squad went to the ten in quick, fast-breaking plays, but couldn't put it over.

After blocking several of the Naval Reserve's punts, one of them paid off, as it bounded back over the goal for a safety which put the college ahead 2 to 0.

Rams Pass To Score

As the second half started, the Rams again began to march. Down the field they went, eating up huge bits of yardage, and chalked up their first touchdown on a pass from Ferrando to Roy Mangini.

Back again came the determined Red and White and finished the scoring for the afternoon by shaking loose the elusive Gerry Pierce for a 45 yard jaunt down the sidelines and into the end zone standing up.

Squad Treated To Meals

Before the game, the Ram squad was treated to a fine lunch by the personnel of Treasure Island but the team couldn't or wouldn't be swayed by the meal for they soundly drubbed the Naval contingent by the above mentioned score. The losers proved that they were good sports, however, for they treated the team to another excellent meal and friendships were started again.

The Naval Reserves are coached by John Verducci who played for the Red and White in 1937, and the best player for the men of the deep was George Donovan who held down the end position for the Rams in '37!

The final outcome of the game yesterday against Modesto Junior College was too late for The Guardsman deadline and its report will be heard over The Guardsman News Cast.

Wilson Begins Basketball Practice On November 17

Basketball practice will officially open Tuesday, November 17, starting at 3 o'clock, announced Coach Tom Wilson.

All individuals who have signed up for basketball as regular Physical Ed credit will have to be present at that time and from then on, until notified by the instructor of their drop to another class.

Any student not signed up in basketball as yet, may come out and work with the class for or without credit, with a chance to make the varsity.

The squad in personnel will be around 15 players which will include junior varsity and varsity squads.

At the present writing, the schedule is incomplete, but indications are that there will be numerous games with Navy and Army Camp units on local courts, with other games against junior colleges.

Cafeteria

New Hotel Aid Named

Appointment of George Carbonell as an instructor in chef training was announced this week by Hilda Watson, chairman of the college hotel and restaurant management division. Carbonell will replace Ernst Hjorth who was granted a leave of absence because of illness.

Carbonell is the second member of his family to be connected with work of this type, his son, Henri Carbonell, a lieutenant in the U. S. Army Air Corps, having preceded him as a student.

Experienced In Business

The new chef has long been associated in the hotel and restaurant industry, 19 years being spent with the Hotel del Coronado, the Yellowstone Park Company, and the Yosemite Park and Curry Company.

Speaking on her recent trip to Los Angeles, Mrs. Watson remarked that there is a great interest on the part of the hotel industry on work being done at the college.

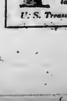
Exhibit A Success

"In Los Angeles, the convention officials were particularly pleased with the participation of our students, and they were greatly impressed by our booth," Mrs. Watson said.

Most impressive feature of the college exhibit, at the Hotel Ambassador, was the figure showing the per cent of former college students who are now commissioned officers in the armed service. One-fifth of the graduates now in service have won commissions.

Assisting Mrs. Watson were Harry Troupe, secretary of the California Northern Hotel Association, and Major Joseph Perreau, former instructor, now stationed at the Santa Ana Army Air Base.

Oakland Post Office Seeks College Students For Xmas



There are places for many young men of the East Bay who are interested in post office work during Christmas vacation, Claude Silva, college placement director disclosed today. He emphasized that the students must live on the Oakland side of the bay.

Anyone interested should see Silva immediately.

College Chemists Train For Local Industry Now

By Iwanna Hayworth

During the past two years the chemistry department of the college has been conducting a survey of the more than forty Bay region industries employing chemistry technicians. The obvious purpose of this survey was to determine the need for chemical training in which the college could offer a complete program.

The industries which cooperated in this occupational survey extended over twelve separate classifications, namely, foods, petroleum, metallurgical, leather, dyes and intermediates, rubber, plastics and moulded products, soaps, waxes, photography, electro-chemistry and analysis. The industrial chemists in these fields were enthusiastic in their response. As the program has been developed these men have volunteered to lecture to the classes, have participated in the construction of the curriculum, and in many ways have extended increased cooperation.

Even under normal conditions the supply of laboratory technicians was not adequate, and now, with the increased demands being made for scientists and technicians by the government and war industries, many excellent positions are standing unfilled. The field for women in this work is just opening.

The course of study for chemistry technicians stresses the fundamental techniques of chemical analysis according to actual industrial methods. A great number of the industrial laboratories which are cooperating in this program have given their own analysis directions to the staff. From these special advantages, and others like them, the students learn skills not obtainable elsewhere.

Because the college is equipped with the finest laboratories in the west, in fact the best junior college equipment in the entire country, the students are assured of experience with the most professional instruments. They are taught to use the colorimeter, the pH meter, the refractometer, the Orsat apparatus, and the Parr sulphur bomb. They also learn the rudiments of glass blowing and practice the construction of apparatus and utility equipment. Practice in the management of the chemistry storeroom is obtained in this course as well as an orientation to the job of purchasing supplies. All students are thoroughly grounded in the techniques of laboratory safety and first aid.

The laboratory technician must gain a proficiency in at least thirty-five operations. Through supervised practice students master the use of burettes, balances, pipettes, funnels, siphons and selves. They learn how to make precipitations, filtrations, evaporations and distillations. They make qualitative tests, fusions, ignitions and titrations. And these are but typical of the many and varied techniques which are taught according to modern industrial practice.

Instruction in this program is given entirely on the tutorial basis and as a result the tempo of the course is set by the individual student. Training for laboratory technician may be accomplished in as short a period as one semester in exceptional cases. Admission to the curricula is obtained only by consent of the instructor, Arthur Furst. All students are required to take Chemistry 60 for at least one lecture, one conference period and one laboratory period. Those who wish to accelerate their progress may do so by extending the number of units and time in service and in the laboratory and the storeroom and workroom.

Those students who are majoring in chemistry are afforded the unique opportunity of supplementing their academic studies with modern laboratory and plant practice.

High school graduates, particularly the women, can profit by investigating this field of service. A visit to the college for an interview with Mr. Furst and a tour of inspection is earnestly suggested.

Global War

Time Magazine Maps Received By Library

Enlargement of war maps from Time magazine are now being received regularly by the college library, Marcus Skarstedt, college librarian, disclosed yesterday.

These maps are posted on a rack near the card catalog, and students are urged to make use of the maps for a "clearer comprehension of the present global war." The current map is one of the African battlefields.

Home Economics Members Initiated Last Evening

Newly elected officers for the Home Economics Association are Maria Stanich, president; Helen Owens, vice-president; Renee Gross, treasurer; Nan Whaley, secretary; Jesse Tribble and Marion du Jardin, CAB representatives; Martha Wallace, reporter.

An initiation was held last evening at Sigmund Stern Grove. Membership is now composed of Nan Whaley, Marion du Jardin, Ella Gross, Marguerite Martin, Dorothy Morafka, Martha Wallace, Marilyn Green, Helen Burchett, Julia Auyong, Bessie Davis, Lorraine Johnson, Doris Repetto, Maria Stanich, Edna Smith, Nancy Rhone and Nadine Dunn.

High Frosh-Low Sophomors Dance Slated For Fairmont Next Week

The Gold Room of the Hotel Fairmont will be the scene of the forthcoming high freshman-low sophomore dance to be held Saturday evening, November 14, from 9 to 12 o'clock, Betty Dahlberg, president of the low sophomore class, disclosed this week.

Miss Dahlberg was moved to the post of low sophomore class president when Bob Haines, former president, enlisted in the Navy last week, according to Bill Steenberg, student body president. Music for the affair will be furnished "by an orchestra," but plans thus far are still indefinite.

Admission will be by Associated Student Body card, Miss Dahlberg remarked. As usual, the "no-corsage" rule will be in effect, and it was strongly hinted that "no stags will be admitted."

"This will be the biggest class dance, excluding the semi-annual Soph Formal, of the semester," Lucille Landresse, chairman of the social committee, said, "and we hope that everyone will attend. We know that this is a big order, but we hope it can be done."

semester before the machinery for the new draft will be in operation. Since the details of the law are obscured by congressional procedure there is no information on which predictions for the spring semester can be based.

Latest word from Washington indicates that all manpower problems, including the draft, will be placed under the War Manpower Commission. President Roosevelt is said to favor restricting the enlistment of youths and permit the 18 and 19 year olds to select the branch of service under Selective Service. At all events it is expected that students will be permitted to finish the present school year (June, 1943), and it may be that the final compromise will set the lower draft limit at 19.

Commerce And Girls High Grads Given Denman Award

Two women students, Iola Wilsey, Girls High School, and Lily Gyn, Commerce High School, have been awarded scholarships for the present academic year under the provisions of the Denman Scholarship Fund.

Established by the heirs of James Denman, Superintendent of San Francisco Public School, 1860 to 1861 and 1868 to 1875, the fund has provided scholarships for women of this college since 1940. To be eligible for the award the student must be a graduate of the San Francisco Public High Schools.

Women Knitters Needed

There is always an opportunity for the women of the college to increase their contributions to Army welfare by joining the Red Cross knitters.

You need only give of your time and skill, for the wool can be had for the asking. Simply call at Room 155 and Claire Cuneo will supply you with pattern and material.

Book

Instructor Authors Text

Another in the present series of McGraw-Hill business education books, "Business Mathematics," will be published in the very near future, Llewellyn Snyder, the author of the proposed publication, disclosed this week.

Under the supervision of F. G. Nichols, consulting editor from Harvard University, Cambridge (Mass.), the McGraw-Hill Book Company is printing a series of works on American business—advertising, business law, merchandising, and secretarial work. It might be well to point out now that the title of Snyder's forthcoming book is tentative.

Representatives from McGraw-Hill have spoken very highly in favor of Snyder's effort. "Snyder has done a very meticulous job. In fact, I have never seen a more thorough piece of work of this same kind," said Nichols.

Unless shortages of materials and restrictions imposed by the War Production Board make it impossible, officials of McGraw-Hill propose to publish the tentatively entitled, Business Mathematics, in about three months, according to Snyder.

A Cappella Choir To Sing November 24

Singing at their first formal appearance for the fall semester, the college A Cappella Choir will present a series of musical numbers at the semi-annual Teachers' Institute in the Civic Auditorium.

In previous semesters, before gas and tire rationing, the campus choir visited various junior colleges in the Northern California area, appearing before their student bodies in a musical review. Because of the war conditions this semester, the choir has been forced to limit its appearances to the immediate area.

Flossita Badger, faculty director of the musical department, disclosed that she has tickets to the Thursday night symphonies at the National Broadcasting Company, and students who desire to attend the programs may obtain the tickets from her.

Gasoline Rationing Books Available On November 9

Drivers eligible for rationing books will file application forms at San Francisco Public Schools November 12, 13 and 14. Forms may be obtained from service stations, garages and rationing board offices.

Philip Landis, chief of Civilian Defense Personnel, has issued a call for several thousand volunteeers to assist in the distribution of "B" and "C" gasoline ration books. The need is for typists, receptionists and clerks to assist at the special rationing centers. "Workers will be asked to give four hours one day each week, for the next four weeks," Landis said.

Public elementary schools will operate on a minimum day for the application period. Motorists must be prepared to give the serial (indented) numbers of their five tires at the time they apply for the gas ration card, and be prepared to swear that they have no more than five tires on hand.

Rationing of gasoline will go into effect on a nation-wide basis on November 22.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology and University of Minnesota are said to be the leading schools in number of physicists engaged in war work.

American Education Week Climaxed By Faculty-Student Broadcast Tonight

Dean Browne, Sewell, Cervelli, Catudio Head Panel Discussion

Climaxing a week designated by the National Education Association, and various other organizations, as American Education Week, the college will conclude this week's festivities with a student-faculty broadcast over radio station KPO tonight, at 10.15 p.m.

Participants in tonight's program will include Dean of Men Edwin C. Browne, Franklin Sewell, political science instructor; Ernestine Cervelli, president of the Associated Women Students, and Bob Catudio, managing editor of The Guardsman, official college publication.

The theme of tonight's program is Serving War-Time Needs, Marie Weiler, college radio production instructor, disclosed this week. This will mark the twenty-second observance of American Education Week.

As has been the custom in the past, special themes have been assigned each day of the week. Sunday, of this week, called for a Renewal of Faith; Monday, Serving War-Time needs; Tuesday, Building Strong Bodies; Wednesday, Developing Loyal Citizens; yesterday, Cultivating Knowledge and Skills, and tomorrow, Strengthening Morale for Victory.

Tuesday, of this week, Sewell addressed the students in Social Science 1 on the topic, The America Political Scene. This was the first observance in the college this week of American Education Week. Tonight's broadcast will mark the second and final observance this week, according to Miss Weiler.

Supervisor Jesse Coleman, chairman of the Citizens' Committee on American Education Week, in calling attention to the significance of this week, said:

"This is a time for interpreting to the people what the schools are contributing to the war effort, and the part that they must play in the coming peace."

Franklin Sewell, college political science instructor, who will participate in tonight's broadcast from the studios of radio station KPO, at 10:15 p.m.

A Cappella Choir Aids Richmond Ceremony

Together with Washington notables, the college A Cappella Choir participated in the launching ceremonies of the Robert E. Peary at the Richmond shipyards yesterday, according to Flossita Badger, group director.

Sponsor of the Peary was Mrs. James F. Byrnes, wife of the U. S. Director of Economic Stabilization and former Supreme Court Justice. Her matron of honor was Mrs. Otis Bland, whose husband is U. S. Representative from Virginia. Both Mrs. Byrnes and Mrs. Bland flew from Washington for the launching.

Master of ceremonies for the program, which was broadcast over a nation-wide hookup, was the popular coast news commentator, John B. Hughes. Principal speaker was Dr. Monroe E. Deutsch, vice-president and provost of the University of California.

Christened for the famed Admiral Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, the 10,500 ton Liberty Ship marks one of the furthest advancements in prefabricated construction. It is estimated that a new record in shipbuilding will be set when the Peary is delivered.

Barbara Jacobs New Honor Society Prexy

The college honor society, following the election of class officers last week, has scheduled an Alpha Gamma Sigma meeting Thursday, November 19, at 11 o'clock, in Room 136, according to Alice Cooper, group adviser.

The newly-elected officers of the society are as follows: Barbara Jacobs, president; Mary Ellen Vance, vice-president; Audrey Armstrong, secretary, and Dolores Sullivan, treasurer. During the course of last week's meeting, it was emphasized that orders for organization pins must be placed at the college bank before Friday, November 20.

Featured speaker at the forthcoming Alpha Gamma Sigma meeting will be Walter Homan, San Francisco State College instructor, Miss Cooper said.

This semester, the honor society will endeavor to aid other students who seem to be having "difficulty with their school work." Students who are desirous of meriting the Alpha Gamma Sigma pin are urged to enroll in the organization immediately, according to the group adviser.

Mid-Terms End Next Week

The second mid-term period will end on Friday, November 20, according to the announcement in the college catalogue. Instructors will announce the dates for the examinations in their respective classes.

Grades will not be available until after December 3, it was announced by Mary Perry, registrar's assistant.

Assembly

War Theme Given College Meet

That the duty of every man of college age was to prepare himself to serve his country as a trained and responsible leader was the opinion of Louis G. Conlan, coordinator of educational management, who spoke yesterday at the all-college assembly

Under the chairmanship of Dean of Men Edwin C. Browne, the assembly program included addresses by Edward C. Redford, head counselor; Phylis Haley, assistant Counselor; Captain John Murray, of the San Francisco Fire Department, and Robert Levison, an executive of the local Red Cross chapter.

Disregard Rumors

"There is no foundation for the rumors regarding the discontinuance of the reserve accredited college programs of the Navy, Army, the Marines, Coast Guard, or the Merchant Marine," Conlan explained. "There is a continuous enlistment in the officer training program being conducted at the recruiting offices."

Students who have not availed themselves of counseling in available war service opportunities were addressed by Redford, who remarked, "Do not enlist until you have been thoroughly advised!" Instructors who are aiding Redford in his work are George Green, Louis Berman, and Joseph Williams.

Stress College Work

"Regardless of the publicized emphasis upon the 'minimum education standards' for enlistment in the various branches of the armed services, the official releases for the War and Navy Departments stress the advantages of collegiate preparation," Redford said.

In the other addresses, Murray told of the functions of a soliciting voluntary auxiliary fireman. The work of the Red Cross was explained by Levison, while an appeal by Miss Haley was made in behalf of the needs of the Office of Civilian Defense, and the local chapter of the American Women's Volunteer Service.

Business Division Opens Second Eight Week Term

The business division begins its second eight-week program today, according to Edward W. Larson, division head. Registration will continue throughout the day. Late registrants are urged to see Larson in Room 234.

A well rounded program includes beginning and advanced courses in typing, shorthand, machine calculation, filing, English, mathematics, office machines and related subjects. The schedule and directory of courses is available in the registrar's office, Room 121.

Special day classes have been arranged for adults in such fields as typing, machine calculation, English, filing and Gregg Shorthand.

Ah, Success!

Fairmont Hotel Is Site Of High Frosh-Low Soph Dance

Both the high freshmen and low sophomores will be honored at the Gold Room of the Hotel Fairmont, scene of tomorrow night's "high frosh-low-soph" dance, to be held from 9 to 12 o'clock, Lucille Landresse, chairman of the social committee, disclosed yesterday.

Music for the dance will be furnished by Jerry Thomas and his orchestra. This will mark Thomas' first appearance before a function sponsored by the college, according to Miss Landresse.

Lucille Landresse, chairman of the college social committee, will head the group outlining plans for tomorrow's high frosh-low soph dance at the Fairmont Hotel.

Stag Rule In Effect

Admission to tomorrow night's dance will be by Associated Student Body card, and as usual, the "no-corsage" rule will be in effect. Dress is "informal and positively no stags will be admitted." This rule, which has been severely abused at previous dances, will go into effect tomorrow night, it was learned this week.

"Outside of the Soph Formal, this will probably be one of the top dances of the semester," Miss Landresse said, "and we wish that everyone, if possible, could be in attendance."

Future Plans Unknown

Dances this semester will be greatly threatened by the forthcoming gasoline rationing act. Plans to hold a dance in Oakland this semester have been temporarily sheived.

Others on the dance committee, besides the aforementioned Miss Landresse, are Betty Dahlberg and Tom Kenny. Miss Dahlberg was moved to the post of low sophomore president upon the vacancy created by former president Bob Haines, who enlisted in the Navy two weeks ago, according to Bill Steenberg, student body president.

Alumnus Reported Lost On South Pacific Duty

Word was received here today from the Navy Department that Arthur Chamberlain, a former student at the college, is "missing and presumed to be lost in performance of his duty and his service to his country."

Chamberlin, a cadet officer in the Merchant Marine, was last heard from in Melbourne, Australia. The Navy Department did not release any further information as to the whereabouts of the young man's dissappearance.

Young Chamberlain entered the Merchant Marine Officers' Training School on Treasure Island in March of this year and was placed in the merchant service two months later.

Graduated from Piedmont High School in January, 1940, he later attended the junior college and was affiliated with the Beta Phi Beta fraternity while on the campus. Chamberlain was active in intramural sports and participated in various college activities. His fraternity brothers have expressed hope that the missing man will be found alive and well.

Privileges Granted Two College Organizations

On the rendition of a special plea made to the Club Advisory Board, the charters of the Block SF and the Phi Alpha Omega fraternity have been accepted by the Board, Dorothy Hogan, president of the CAB, disclosed yesterday.

This movement has been approved by the Executive Council, and henceforth the organizations will be entitled to all privileges offered by the CAB, Miss Hogan said. Because faculty advisers of both organizations have been called for war duty, it was "practically impossible" to retain members in the groups.

Organizations who have thus far failed to submit their constitution and by-laws to the CAB are: Beta Tau, Tri Epsilon, Kappa Phi, Newman Club, Phi Beta Rho, and Phi Lambda Epsilon.

Executive Council Studies Sophomore Sweetheart Plans; Members Seek Suitable Election Methods

Proposals to substitute another type of popularity contest in place of the traditional Sophomore Sweetheart elections held at the college each semester, were studied by the Executive Council this week.

One proposal, if accepted, would allow every member of the student body to participate. The contest would consist of a printed form in which students could place names that corresponded to certain classifications: ie, popularity, appearance, sense of humor, etc.

The Executive Council at previous meetings has indicated that the former popularity elections were only participated in by a few students, and that some other suitable election might induce more students to participate.

If, however, the sweetheart election is maintained, it is highly probable that the voting on the candidates would be done by machine, rather than by ballot.

Morale

Five Point Program

THE first line of OUR defense is the battlefield; the second line, the home, and the third line, more important than either . . . is MORALE.

This is the sole ingredient which can determine a nation's future in a world of unreasoning, a substance which contains VICTORY as well as DEFEAT. We are meeting a challenge . . . and we should be prepared to face it!

College students, in particular, being leaders in "so-called public opinion" will need to prepare. Instructor Claude A. Shull offers some concrete suggestions be taken as a remedy for unity . . . and MORALE.

He writes:

"We must inform ourselves thoroughly of the nature of our Democratic heritage, and of the nature of our enemies' program. We should study current newspapers and magazines, and be alert to every injection of enemy propaganda into their pages.

"We cannot afford to be messengers of rumors. We should, rather, be "rumor-wardens," testing every rumor thus: Does it hurt Morale; Does it make you distrust your government, or business, or labor; Does such a rumor tend to discredit our allies; and who would benefit most by spreading this rumor—our enemies or our allies?

"Don't complain!

"We are facing greater restrictions than we have met thus far, but we are so far better off than other nations that we should have NO cause for complaint.

"We should embrace every opportunity to boost the war effort—civil defense duties, blood for the Red Cross bank, buying bonds, and supporting local war chests.

"Above all, we must talk courage and think courage, and allow no time for doubt as to our ultimate victory."

These are the things which MUST be done.

They CAN be done. The only enemy of morale now is time. The bulwark of our defense is the battle-line trenches, and the accelerating forces of sure success is courage, unity . . . and MORALE!

Choir Plans Program For Army Navy YMCA

Following the precedent sent in previous years, members of the A Cappella Choir will offer a Christmas program at the Portal Hearst Women's Club on Tuesday afternoon, December 1.

The success of these recitals has been of such importance as to make their occurrence a yearly event.

At the present time the choir is making plans with the Army-Navy YMCA to do a number of programs for them. As yet no definite announcements have been made concerning the programs but it is thought that besides group singing, solo numbers will also be included.

Silva Issues Call For Part-Time Student Help

Employment for the Christmas vacation, which begins on Saturday, December 11, is available to all interested students, reports Claude Silva, college placement officer.

Post office employment in the East Bay must be arranged for through Silva during the coming week before openings are filled by high school recruits.

Retail stores will make a large demand for part-time and extra help, according to Virginia Gohn, retail merchandising instructor. Experience is not required for store selling and stock work.

College Counselor Visits City Jr. Highs

"We are beginning to emphasize, in junior high schools, the importance of San Francisco Junior College's occupational opportunities," Mr. Redford, head of the department of Counseling and Guidance, said.

In the past, tenth graders have been informed of the occupational training offered by the junior culelge. Now, in war time, the San Francisco Junior College is looking even further forward, by focusing its attention on ninth graders. This far-reaching progress, once initiated, will become a permanent procedure in the semesters to come.

Already Redford has spoken before the ninth grade of Aptos Junior High School; he hopes to speak before many other such groups in the near future.

Invitations Sought For Service Men By USO Desk

The Home Invitation Desk of the USO is seeking the hospitality of civilian homes for the men in our armed forces. Families are urged to place their names on file with Mrs. Dean, Home Invitations, USO, in order that out of town men stationed here might be afforded homelike surroundings while on furlough.

The USO does not seek dinner invitations alone. It is suggested that hostesses plan evenings of bridge or other games with light refreshments for one or two men. Volunteers may call Mrs. Dean at GArfield 7377.

The Black Swan

Many men have tried to succeed the late Douglas Fairbanks, Sr. as a nimble-footed sea rogue and adventurer—and the man who tries this week is Tyrone Power, who flexes his biceps and wields a mean cutlass in Rafael Sabatini's The Black Swan, currently drawing 'em in at the Fox Theater.

Power does right well, thank you! Pirate stories are supposed to employ that same fast-breaking method, meaning, "a last minute escape from the hold of an enemy brig, and a snappy sword match with an enemy captain in order to rescue the fragile Lady Margaret, always a damsel in distress."

Power is a Jolly Roger captain, the right hand man of Sir Henry Morgan, ex-Caribbean pirate and the reformed governor of Jamaica. There is treachery in the palace, of course, and Morgan and Co. are falsely accused of scuttling English brigs.

"My Lords 'n' Ladies," bellows Morgan, "I shall scour the seven seas for that blaggardly coward who has blackened my honor!" This leads to a sea battle—flashing sword play, the top decks being coated with blood, and lusty cannon fire—all of which makes people forget about the threadbarest of plots. Since this show is in technicolor, it dazzles the eye, and creates a more spectacular effect.

Maureen O'Hara, who is every bit as Irish as Mulligan stew, is convincing as the fragile Lady Margaret. Since her performance in How Green Was My Valley, Miss O'Hara, of the red hair and green eyes, has finally arrived at a first rate star. When she's in camera range, "all eyes are upon her," for she is that good . . . and beautiful.

As usual, Laird Cregar is excellent as the massive Morgan. We admire his unennny ability to combine both humor and dramatic action into one field labeled, Talent. In villainous ways, George Sanders is tops. As the distasteful enemy captain, Sanders is undauntingly held to a belief in super egoism, and that, my dear friends, is going some! Sanders can never be a hero, since he is too good as a celluloid meanie.

Besides Power, Cregar, Sanders and Miss O'Hara, there is Thomas Mitchell, in the role of a merry, old sea dog, Anthony Quinn, and George Zucco. We warn you though. Don't look for a story, because there isn't much, but if its lusty, brawling action you crave, then The Black Swan is up your alley.

Second feature on the Fox screen is a little propaganda ditty, Manila Calling, co-featuring Lloyd Nolan and Carole Landis. It's about fighting in the foxholes of Bataan. Ho hum!

Counter System In Cafeteria May Aid Service; Division Students Hear Coffee Expert At Meeting

Inaugurated this week is the first attempt to operate the two service counters in the cafeteria as distinct units, offering different instead of duplicate luncheon menus.

Beginning Monday, the west counter of the cafeteria opened as a quick lunch and counter, while the main counter continued the service of hot dishes and blue plate luncheons, together with a la carte salads.

Only hot food on the quick lunch side is the hot dog and hamburger served heretofore with rolls and small salads.

The Hotel Division is undertaking this service change in an effort to meet the many student requests for quick luncheon service which may be had without the necessity of going through the main cafeteria line, said Helen Warnock, student manager of the division. Student response to the change in operative plan will determine the continuance of the innovation, according to Miss Warnock.

Owing to permanent construction arrangements, the soda fountain will still be operated in conjunction with the main counter.

As is evident in the articles printed here of the Hotel and Restaurant Division, students should observe that the division is faced with an acute shortage of help. Students can do their part to relieve the cafeteria manpower situation by bussing their own trays and dishes, and keeping the cafeteria premises clean.

Although other eating establishments are closing at least one day a week, the college cafeteria is attempting to meet the situation so as to give students a continuous service.

Coffee rationing brings its problems not only to household and to restaurant, but to coffee broker, packer, and wholesaler as well, according to E. C. Ramsey, coffee expert who spoke to members of the hotel division on Thursday.

Appearing at the college through the invitation of Ira W. Smith, purchasing agent of the Hotel St. Francis and part time instructor in the hotel division, the speaker told in detail the story of coffee from tropical plantation to America's breakfast table. To this he added details of current problems of the industry as developed by shortage of shipping facilities, under war conditions.

Ramsey, whose duties with the Geo. W. Caswell Co. of San Francisco, include that of sampling and passing on the brew from all shipments and blends of coffee packed by his firm has spent years in perfecting his skill as a "taster."

In response to questions from the class, he discussed the various methods of making coffee and offered as his suggestion for housewives the so-called "fool proof" drip method for uniformally good results even though as suggested by Mayor La Guardia the old method of boiling will naturally get a stronger if not so delectable a brew.

Like all other coffee experts, Ramsey points out the folly of hoarding ground coffee which grows rancid with age.

WSS Will Handle Bulletin Board Now

The Women's Service Society has recently taken over the care of the bulletin board in the foyer of the college, according to Margaret Abbott, president.

Formerly the bulletin board was kept up by Emmanuel Hein, who recently was appointed chairman of the Salvage Committee. All notices will be kept up to date by member of the WSS.

Clubs wishing to have notices posted on the bulletin board should submit their copy to the Student Body office not later than 10 o'clock on Mondays.

New Purchase Order Rules

Specific regulations concerning purchase orders have been made by the Board of Education, according to Luther H. Lyon, college comptroller. Purchase order requests may be filed by students, but only sponsors may prepare purchase order forms.

Purchase order requests must be filled in and filed with the organization's sponsor before a purchase order form can be procured.

Although this procedure may cause more work, the new system will enable organizations to keep better records of their funds and expenditures.

Blood Donors Needed Now

Students over 21, and those 18 or over who obtain their parents consent, can save a life by donating a pint of their blood to the Red Cross Blood Bank.

Volunteers should consult Dr. Nelson Wells, in Room 327. Organizations interested in visiting the Blood Bank in a body should make arrangements in advance through the Red Cross.

Occidental Scholarships

Occidental College at Los Angeles is offering ten scholarship for Junior College students, five for men and five for women. Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society members are eligible to four additional scholarships. Interested students should consult Alice Cooper, Alpha Gamma Sigma adviser.

Modesto Game Ends Season; Faculty Enters Volleyball

GRID SEASON ENDS

The curtain came down last Thursday afternoon to conclude the Rams' version of the 1942 football season, and it's just as well that the whole thing is over with. This was by far one of the poorest years enjoyed by the Red and White in a long time.

Two wins was the best the team could accumulate over a two month period. That makes an average of one victory a month. Goupie this with five losses and you have left a season hardly worth mentioning from this college's standpoint.

But things aren't as bad as the records show! In other words, the Rams had a better outfit than their record would allow one to believe. After losing its first four starts, the squad began to look like a football team, and as a result won two games and came darn close to upsetting the works against Modesto Junior College.

The Rams fell by the wayside against the Coast Guard Reserves, Los Angeles City College, Santa Rosa and Sacramento in quick succession at the outset. Next followed the victory over its arch rivals from San Francisco State, and that alone made it a successful season.

The State Gators, however, had a worse season than the Rams and for that reason the victory could hardly be called a feat. Actually the scores made against State were tremendous, including a 51 to 0 walloping at the hands of Cal Poly, and the 6 to 0 score the college managed to win by looks pretty puny after all.

A 15 to 0 victory over Treasure Island made it two straight, and in the game against Modesto the college really reached its peak. Modesto arrived with the reputation of one of the best junior college outfits in the state, plus one of the highest scoring teams.

But the Rams matched them point for point and yard for yard until the final minute of play when the Buccaneers tallied a touchdown for a 20 to 13 victory. Elsan's men played great football that day, and had their performance been equalled in the past games—the season might well have been a victorious one.

If football is played in 1943, the Rams should do better because it's highly improbable that they could do worse.

CAGE FINALE TODAY

The intramural basketball league comes to an end today with the final game in the men's gymnasium. Terry's Pirates are virtually conceded the championship although their schedule was not completed at the time of this writing. They have been the class of the league since it started and looked like champions all the way.

The Pirates hung up numerous intramural records during the course of their victories. Scoring 165 points against the Tri Epsilon Fraternity, Terry's gang broke the previous high of 84 established by the Newman Club last semester. In the same game, Ken Berridge broke the individual scoring record with a performance that netted him 45 big points.

Jack Brady has already accepted signups for volleyball and badminton and competition on those sports will begin on Monday. We understand from Brady that the faculty has submitted a team entitled "The Faculty Wizards" and he claims that the championship is only a matter of time.

Besides Brady, the team consists of Lee Eisan, Tom Wilson, Russ Sweet, Tom and Louis "Dutch" Conlan, William Mayo, and Edward Sandys. Brady also added that the team has football coach Eisan in the gym every afternoon practicing so that he may acquire some speed to compensate for his lack of height.

BASKETBALL NEXT SPORT

With football season ended, the college cage team, under the tutorship of Tom Wilson, takes the limelight. The team will begin practice in the near future and competition will start some time in December.

As was the case with football, there will be no conference round robin or standings for the coming year and probably for the duration. Basketball will be played purely on an independent basis with games against the various service teams as well as other junior colleges close to this vicinity.

Wilson wants it known that varsity signups will begin Tuesday, November 17, and will run until a definite date is set. He urges students to come out for the team and take part in the college's athletic contests.

Season Review Shows Rammy Kicked Around

By Jimmy Lee

Ending an unprofitable season, as far as number of victories is concerned, the Ram varsity hung up it's mole-skins with a total of two wins and five losses.

Starting the season in what was to have been a breeze game, the varsity fell before a suddenly powerful Coast Guard eleven, 20 to 6, with Harlan Ferrando scoring the lone touchdown on a fifteen yard jaunt around right end.

LACC Wins

As guests of the Los Angeles City College squad, the Red and White journeyed to the southland and lost a questionable decision to the Cubs 7 to 0.

Back again to the college came the Rams for a week of studying and practice and then on the road again. This time to Sonoma County to battle the Santa Rosa Cubs in what was to have been a close game. But someone was misinformed, for the Rams were drubbed 26 to 7.

Against the Sacramento Panthers the squad again ran up against the "T" formation. The game looked like a Ram victory as Ferrando passed to Roy Mangini to score first blood in the opening two minutes of play. This proved to be false, however, for the Panthers came roaring back to rack up five touchdowns and five conversions in the second, third, and fourth periods. The final score came with but five minutes to play when Al Morris passed to Charlie Cook on a "sleeper play" with Cook going forty yards to score without a Panther laying a claw on him.

State Beaten Again

With 500 students cheering them on, the Red and White made it three in a row over the Gators by defeating the San Francisco State varsity 6 to 0 at the Gators new field. Midway in the second period, Charlie Cook came into the game. On third down Cook fired a beautiful strike to end Bob Jones who took it in stride as he raced over the goal for the lone score of the day and score was raised another point as Cook booted the conversion.

In their fifth game the Red and White traveled to Treasure Island and put the horsecollar on the Naval Reserves 15 to 0. After Ferrando had scored on a quick opening play from the 2 yard line, the Rams inserted Gerry Pierce into the lineup and he proved his worth by skirting right end to go 46 yards for the second tally of the day.

Modesto Wins Close Game

In one of the closest games of the season, the varsity was barely nosed out by a supposedly strong Modesto eleven 20 to 13. It looked like a cinch tie for the Rams, with only 50 seconds remaining.

Lining up in the "T" the Modesto quarterback, Chuck Hughes, faded back and threw a beautiful pass to Bill Schemmel, who leaped high over Carter Corey's head to make a great catch which enabled the Pirates to end their season undefeated.

All-Intramural Sports Night, which proved to be a great success last semester, will be done away with for the duration of the war, Jack Brady, physical education instructor, announced this week.

Pirates Land Three On Guardsman All Star Team; Still Lead In Fight For Title As Basketball Ends Today

By Bob Catudio

Well, this department "dood it again!"

With the intramural basketball circuit due to hit the fadeout mark today, The Guardsman comes up with its second semi-annual All-Intramural Basketball Team, the five men being Stan Lefcourt, George Vogiotsis, Kenny Berridge, Keith Tomley, and Ed Lapuyade.

Save for the appearance of Tomley, the four other first team men are virtual newcomers to intramural play. Were it not for the fact that Bob Jones missed "too many" games for the East Bay Five, he may have landed a first team berth. And now for the "why we picked 'em" department.

Lefcourt, of the Old Men's Athletic Club, was the backbone of the OMAC team, besides being the third highest scorer in the loop. His running mate at forward, Vogiotsis, was selected on the same basis. Although "Vogie" lacked certain defensive qualities, he more than made up for it on the score sheet.

Berridge At Center

Berridge was a unanimous choice. There was no doubt as to who was the "outstanding center in the league." This semester, Berridge has shattered practically every type of scoring record.

At guards, this department selected Keith Tomley, one of the most aggressive cavorters on the Beta Phi Beta five. Tomley was placed on the "runner-up" string last semester, and his improvement this semester has warranted his being selected on the number one five.

Lapuyade Made Captain

Now to Lapuyade—

He is undoubtedly "the class of the tournament." Besides directing the attack for the fast-breaking Pirates, Lapuyade does his share of point tabulating as well as the next guy. And it is for this reason (or reasons) that the ex-George Washington High School athlete has been selected to captain this semester's "dream team."

Others who might have placed higher than is indicated were Gahn, Haines, Lefrancois, and possibly Walker and Wood.

Eight Teams Enter

Thus far, only eight teams have entered the forthcoming intramural volleyball tournament. These teams are: The Faculty, Harbin, Psi Lambda Phi, Newman Club, Beta Phi Beta, Phi Lambda Epsilon, and Tri Epsilon.

The only entrant in the badminton singles tournament this week is Richmond Sedley. Last semester, Sedley placed second in the singles, and teamed with Irv Bowker to cop the tandem event.

College Has Largest Marin Representation

The College Sectional Playday of the Northern California Division took place last Saturday at Marin Junior College. This playday was not alone for competition but to promote a spirit of friendliness with the different colleges. The college had over 100 present, the largest delegation at the playday.

Dr. Chang selected Mary Rosenthal to lead the American Folk Dancing, which was one of the social functions of the day. "A spirit of enthusiasm and friendliness existed and the girls that participated carried this in their games," stated Miss Keller.

Women Were Likeable

Dorothy Fairbanks, secretary of WAA and one of the participants in the event commented," we found the women from the other colleges so likeable that we disliked seeing the day come to an end and we all look forward to a future meet with them."

Because of the war it was decided to hold only two large playdays a year in place of the many small ones that have been held. The next one will be held at San Jose State College next spring.

Tourney Week Next

"The next big event on the WAA program will be the annual Tourney week. The date has not been set yet but will be some time before Christmas," said Lorraine Johnson, WAA president, at the last meeting. Plans are now being made.

The managers of the WAA clubs report that their respective clubs are meeting regularly. The Tennis Club is still playing off their matches and will be finished in about two weeks, according to the club's manager, Marguerite Martin.

AMS Fights Definitely Set For Pearl Harbor Attack

Coinciding with the "attack made upon Pearl Harbor," the Associated Men Students' intramural boxing show will be staged Monday, December 7, according to Russ Sweet, college physical education instructor.

Men who wish to participate in the forthcoming boxing show may signup now in the men's gymnasium. A short three-week's training period will then be offered each pugilistic contender, Sweet said.

The qualifying bouts will start about the latter part of this month. Further information concerning the bouts will be published in succeeding issues of The Guardsman.

Nazi-Smasher James Peck Captain In Air Force

By Bob Catudio

Remember Pilot Officer James Peck, who was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for his part in knocking down two Nazi Messerschmitts over the island of Malta?

Well . . . officer Peck, who formerly "walked about" the college, is now Captain Peck of the United States Army Air Force, and dispatches out of Algiers admit that the Berkeley Yank has taken part in the destruction of 33 Axis planes.

Not bad for a guy who was supposedly washed out of the USAAF, because of his age and educational shortages!

Ever since his arrival in the Mediteranean area, he has been a constant dose of arsenic and strychnine to Adolph's legions. Along with officer pal, D. W. McLeod, Boston (Mass.), Peck scuttled his first "Messyischmitt" during the month of April, last year.

This week, a mass American Expeditionary Force, under the command of Lt.-General Dwight David Eisenhower, invaded French Morocco—and who do you think was leading the U. S. air pack above the Yankee convoy? Um, huh! This same Mr. Peck, of course, one of the miracle men of Malta.

If you know your history, then you know that Malta is no larger than a drop of water in the Sahara Desert. This year, the inhabitants of Malta have undergone more than 2,000 air-raids, which is 2,000 more than Ysipilanti, (Mich.), has experienced.

But back to officer Peck—

While at college, Peck majored in (and why not!) aviation. He was graduated from Berkeley High School and enrolled at the college during the spring of 1939—six months before Austria fell.

When Germany marched—

Peck found himself in England with the Eagle Squadron bombing the shore installations of Nazi-held France. Four months of that, and then came Malta . . . and the destruction of 33 German "sky buggies."

Yes, even you must admit that "that guy Peck has what it takes!"

College Council Sets Meeting For Parents

The semi-annual meeting of the San Francisco Junior College Council will be held at the college on next Monday afternoon, November 23, according to Lloyd D. Luckmann, Council president. "The Council is the equivalent of the faculty-parent-teacher groups in the secondary and elementary schools," Luckmann said, "but we have always encouraged the many friends of the college to participate in the organization."

The College and the War will be the general topic of discussion, with some parts of yesterday's assembly program being repeated for the benefit of parents. In addition to the emphasis on the services the college is performing for the war effort there will be a disussion of the place for women in war work. Speakers will be Edward Redford, director of counseling; Louis G. Conlan, coordinator; Claude Silva, placement director; Edward Larson, acting head of the business department; Nelson Wells, Phylis Haley and Margaret Dougherty, dean of women.

The meeting will be held in Room 136, commeneing at 3 p.m. Parents will have the opportunity to meet with the members of the counseling staff and to discuss questions presented with members of the faculty and the administration.

Display Cards, Posters Available Through Eckert

"The art department will be glad to cooperate in making up lettered and poster material for student and faculty displays," according to William C. Eckert, instructor of advertising art.

The display ease on the first floor is available for displays for one or two weeks duration. Those who wish to arrange for a display should call on Eckert, Room 349.

Tuberculin Tests Held At College

By Dr. L. Friedlander,
College Physician

The tuberculin test is a harmless skin test. It shows whether or not there are tuberculosis germs in the person's body. It is these germs that cause tuberculosis or consumption as it used to be called.

Last semester, the college started a tuberculosis testing program in order to make sure the students are free from this disease. In this campaign the group tested showed about 40 per cent positive. Out of this group we could expect one person to show active tuberculosis. Those in the group reactive positive are followed by an X-ray and a consultation.

Your college plans to extend this program and make it an annual affair, so that the entire student body may assure itself that it is free from tuberculosis.

Air Craft Warning Service Needs College Volunteers

The Fourth Fighter Command is in need of volunteers for its Air Craft Warning Service. A request directed to the college asks all eligible women to enlist for the duration with this important branch of our defenses.

Interested persons should contact Miss Dougherty, Dean of Women, or the Fourth Fighter Command directly. The widespread rumor that the WAACS would assume the duties of this branch of the signal corps, plus the divergence of women into war industries, has caused a shortage of personnel. Volunteers will be making a vital contribution to the war effort.

Not more than 1 per cent of the nation's population can eat their full ration of sugar without harm to their teeth.

Guidance Group Plans Aptitude Tests Here

The Bureau of Tests and Measurements, under the direction of Claire Leuenberger, is conducting experiments in aptitude testing with the cooperation of the students in the Career-Guidance Conference. Tests of mechanical and clerical aptitude as well as personality inventories are being administered with a view to developing a "test battery" for entering students that will diagnose their best talents in connection with the war effort.

Significant results from the recent testing program in mathematics fundamentals are not yet available. Thomas J. Bass, college instructor, is completing an item analysis of the examination and expects to make the conclusions known at an early date.

Anyone who can "doodle" can learn to draw, believes Dr. Arthur M. Johnson, associate professor of botany at the University of California.

Library

300 Volumes Listed For Student Use

Approximately 300 new books have been added to the library in the past month, according to Marcus Skarstedt, college librarian.

Many different subjects are represented in the new volumes including a special collection of books on physics, American and English plays and foreign books in French and German.

Volumes Listed

Books of special interest are Russia and Japan, a survey of foreign relations between Russia and Japan, by Maurice Hindus; Modern Homecraft, a book on furniture making by G. A. Raeth; a book on flower arrangement, Flowers: East-West by J. G. Conway; The Last Post by F. M. Ford; The Captain from Connecticut by C. S. Forester; Last Man Around the World by Stephen Longstreet; An American Tragedy by Theodore Dreiser; Babbit by Sinclair Lewis, and My Friend Flicka by Mary O'Hara.

Magazines Available

A large number of bound periodicals are also available for use in the library, Skarstedt said.

For complete information of books on the November book list, students are advised to consult the list posted in the library for their convenience.

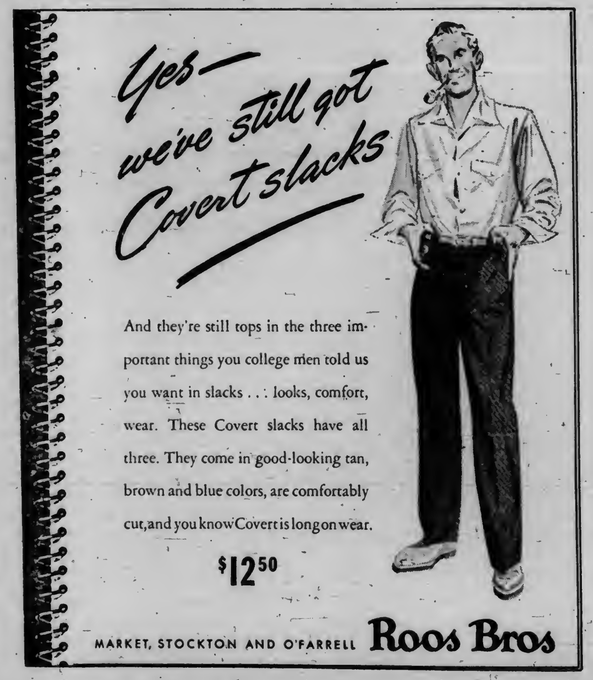
Education in Vichy is taking a new slant. Students are being placed in four categories aecording to their physique, with mental qualification a side issue.

Women In War

Nurse Shortage Leads To State Wide Drive Here

Acute shortages of nurses existing in civilian hospitals and health agencies throughout the nation has led the California State Nursing Association to inaugurate a state-wide drive to interest women in this field.

The call for nurses comes from every branch of the service and from areas where war production is carried on, yet the enrollment in accredited nursing schools is far below normal.



In recent months California has been hard pressed for members, so a drive has started to enroll women about to graduate from high schools and junior colleges in the nursing profession.

In order to combat the tremendous war time need for nurses and so that California may meet its quota of the nation's requirement, it will be necessary for more than 1,000 new students to enter schools of nursing this winter, the association reported.

Young women interested in the possibilities of this profession should write to the State Board of Nurse Examiners, Sacramento, for details.

War Program

Faculty Committee Authorized To Study Curriculum Changes And Wartime Adjustments

With the object of exploring all possibilities that exist for types of war training at the college, Dr. A. J. Cloud, president of the college, has appointed a committee of fourteen, composed of members of the administration and faculty, under the chairmanship of Louis G. Conlan, coordinator of educational management.

To meet the revolution that is about to be worked in wartime college education by the Army and Navy, the committee will meet to consider plans for the coming spring and summer semesters. Information from the American Association of Junior Colleges; Dr. Walter C. Eels, executive secretary, indicates that education after June, 1943 will bear little resemblance to peace-time education.

Liberal Arts Restricted

In line with the general reorganization it is expected that retrenchment in the liberal arts courses will be effected. That any drastic changes might be expected in the liberal arts program was not indicated, however. "We must prevent this from being a losing war for culture," said President Cloud.

College education as it has been known is on the way out, for male students at least. The social life, the fraternities, the emphasis upon intercollegiate athletics apparently are to be sacrificed to war after this college year. It is even possible that only the junior colleges will be in a position to grant a degree, so telescoped and abbreviated will be the traditional program.

Vocational Program

"The emphasis will be upon higher vocation education," said Conlan. "We will follow the requests of the Army and Navy to help them in filling their needs for specialists and technicians," he added.

Greatest need in the armed forces is for doctors and engineers. The college has all the facilities needed for the basic training in these fields, particularly the latter since engineering is to be shortened to one year's intensive study. Women will be trained as chemists and other technicians.

Personnel of the War Training Committee as announced by President Cloud is as follows: Louis G. Conlan, coordinator of educational management, chairman; Dr. J. Paul Mohr, registrar; Edwin C. Browne, dean of men; Margaret Dougherty, dean of women; Dr. Edward Redford, director of counseling; Misses Delfs, Gatley, Noble and Scribner; Messrs. Furst, Green, Larson, Luckmann and Mayo.

Parents To Hear College Progam

Parents of the men and women in the college student body have been invited to attend a meeting of the San Francisco Junior College Council on next Monday, November 23. The meeting will be held on the campus in Room 136 beginning at 3 p.m., Lloyd Luckmann, president of the group announced.

Two principal topics will be discussed by the members of the administration and the Department of Counseling and Guidance, College Men and the Draft and Training Women for War Work. Members of the faculty will be present to meet with parents and to discuss the problem of wartime education, enlistment, and reserve officer programs.

Draft Law Topic

It is expected, according to Luckmann, that clarification of the teenage draft law will be forthcoming from Washington by the day of the meeting and it is the purpose of this meeting to assist parents with plans for their sons and daughters in the light of recent wartime demands being made upon youth.

Featured speakers on the program include Dean Margaret Dougherty, Louis G. Conlan, Edward Redford, Claude Silva, Phylis Haley and Edward Larsen. Miss Dougherty and Miss Haley will present the war service opportunities for women and Claude Silva will outline the problem of job placement. The new services of the Business Division, its short term courses and adult education program, will be presented by Mr. Larson.

Officer Training Explained

Louis Conlan will outline the various reserve officer training programs open to men of draft age and Redford's topic will cover the services available to parents and students through the Department of Counseling and Guidance and the Bureau of Tests and Research.

The meeting is scheduled to close at 4:15 p.m. Parents will be invited to inspect the work of the college, particularly that directed to war training.

Aviation Mathematics Now Open To Students

Designed to aid students who are in need of mathematics credit for a commission in the armed forces, a course in aviation mathematics has been established at the college, J. Paul Mohr, registrar, announced this week.

Consisting of elementary arithmetic, algebra, and trigonometry with "many service applications," the class, which has already been started here at the college, will meet every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, at 12 o'clock, in Room 311.

Former Hotel, Restaurant Student Selects Emblem

Through loyalty to his alma mater, Lieutenant Henri Carbonell, United States Army Air Corps pilot and former college student, has selected "a Ram's head as an emblem for his plane."

Carbonell is the son of Saveur George Carbonell, present chief chef here in the college hotel and restaurant management division.

Editorial

Share A Ride For College?

WITH tire rationing in full swing and gas rationing just around the corner, many public organizations are doing their utmost to institute ride sharing campaigns. The junior college is no exception to tire and gas rationing, and we must learn to do our part.

The Welfare Committee is the college organization that looks out for the welfare of the campus and students. Always striving to aid the college in any way that it can, the welfare group would be the most logical organization to undertake the promotion of a "share a ride" campaign among students of the college.

Phelan Avenue, with its crowded condition, is ample proof of the fact that the majority of men and women attending here rely on automobiles for their transportation. Continued use of their automobiles every day will result in much wear and tear for these students, and in due time tires and gasoline will be a great deal harder to get. When this condition occurs many student automobiles will be put out of commission for the duration, and these students will be forced to either leave college or rely on poor transport companies for transportation to and from college.

We, as college students, can do our bit by cooperating with any college organization, preferably the Welfare group, that proposes to undertake a registering of students who want to share rides with other students. The federal government has instituted educational programs on the merits of sharing rides, and it is our duty to educate other people in this procedure.

The Guardsman feels that the average college student must show a doubting public that college isn't just a stopping off place for work fearing young people. We've got to show the older generation that we have what it takes to help win the war.

If we, as students, subscribe to a student "share a ride" campaign, we will be doing our part to conserve rubber, gasoline, and most important, helping to win.

Xmas Holiday Regulations

"No temporary leaves of absence will be granted for Christmas employment," was the statement issued today by Dr. J. Paul Mohr, college registrar. "The college calendar was adjusted to allow students at least twelve days for employment before Christmas," he added, "and those who feel they must work a longer period will be faced with the practical limitations of the attendance regulations."

Forum

Group Debates Education Topic

Progressive Education vs. the Fundamentals is the subject of tonight's Forum Club discussion, to be held at 153 Idora Avenue, at 8 o'clock, Dorothy Mercer, college English instructor, and group adviser, disclosed this week.

Open To Students

The Forum Club is open to all students, and the organization is interested in having "students who like to write" in attendance, according to Miss Mercer. The scene of tonight's meeting may be reached by taking the regular college bound Municipal bus from Tenth Avenue.

Next semester, the group will publish their annual Forum Magazine with contributions of short stories, plays, poems, and short biographical dramas by students of the college. The publication is designed to stimulate an interest in writing, Miss Mercer said.

Graduates See Fame

Several past members of the organization are currently engaged in the literary profession, either writing books of their own or contributing articles to leading magazines throughout the nation.

Students who may be interested in contributing to the magazine will be contacted at a later date through their respective English instructors and The Guardsman.

Mechanical Aptitude Tests Offered Here

Mechanical Aptitude tests are now being offered to all students interested in finding out their individual capabilities along this line. The first tests given will be group tests; then individual tests will be available at a later date to those who desire them. This is purely an experimental idea, and the need for employees by the war industries is expected to attract a large number of students. "Any women students are welcome to take these tests," said Edward Redford.

The dates for the group tests are:

Tuesday, December 1, Room 100 at 3:00.

Wednesday, December 2, Room 204 at 3:00.

College Committee Will Sponsor Blood Donor Drive At College; Hope To Secure 500 Registrants

Following the lead of the Tri Epsilon Fraternity, the college Welfare Committee this week inaugurated a drive to enlist students who will donate a pint of their blood to the Red Cross.

The drive, under the leadership of Emmett Hein, committee chairman, set their goal at 500 student donors. The sign-ups for the first few days of the campaign have totaled more than 50 registrants, and the welfare group expects the quota filled before the Thanksgiving holidays next week.

Sign-ups Taken

Volunteers were requested to leave their names and phone numbers at the booth by the student office. Students under 21 years and over 18 must secure parental consent before they can give their blood; blanks for this purpose can be obtained at the student office.

Hein warned that any person weighing less than 115 pounds is ineligible as a blood donor, and he further warned that unless blanks authorizing a student under 21 years to participate in the service are returned to the blood recruiting depot are returned the student will be rejected.

Plasma Vital

The blood plasma taken from the volunteers will either be shipped to the armed forces throughout the world or kept in the United States for use in disasters.

Further instructions for the blood donor, provided he is accepted, will be given at the time of the donation.

All student sign-ups must be completed on the Tuesday before the Thanksgiving holiday. Directions on filling out the application form may be found on the wall immediately outside Room 169, the student body office.

Drive Support Big

The drive is being backed by all organizations represented at the college. Most of the organizations will make it a point to enlist their members 100 per cent in the campaign. Faculty members also voiced their approval of the measure this week, and some indications were that some instructors would join the student ranks in the blood donations.

Those students who contribute a pint of their blood to the Red Cross will be given a bronze emblem for the first donation, and they will receive a type card bearing the donor's blood type.

Business Department Taking Registration

Acceptance of late registration forms is now being continued by the college business division as it begins its second eight-weeks' program of courses, Edward W. Larson, acting group chairman, announced this week.

During the past few months, there has been a sudden increase in the number of adults registered in the division. With the demand for office help growing more serious, there is a "wide-open-field" for those students who wish to avail themselves of training in the division.

In addition to the regularly-scheduled classes for college students, special day classes have been instituted for the adults, Larson said.

Wartime Education

Chester Rowell

THIS war, if it lasts much longer, is going to do some strange things to American higher education, as well as to almost everything else in life. For one thing, it may close up some of our "liberal arts" colleges outright, for lack of students, and divert others to the strictly vocational training of military specialists, which, in the traditional sense, is not education at all. But also, just for practical reasons but with incidental educational results, it is going to revive a demand for abstruse subjects like mathematics or research chemistry, and for studies once stigmatized as "cultural," like languages.

Because Americans have been characteristically monoglottic, expecting other people to learn English while they learned no foreign speech at all, the war found us with serious language "bottlenecks." Too few educated Americans had any adequate command of even the familiar languages of Western Europe. And now, with our troops going, and our military attaches and intelligence officers perhaps staying in the remotest corners of the earth, there is a sudden need of men who know languages that almost no American ever thought of studying before.

A recent article in Publishers' Weekly says, for instance, that "no American soldiers ever thought they'd be learning Swahili when they entered the Army, but that's just what some of them will be doing at Temple University, Philadelphia."

Doubtless, "no American soldiers" ever thought of that. But plenty of German colonial administrators did long ago. The writer remembers when, as a student in Berlin 50 years ago, he sat daily at a lunch table with a group of American students next to a table of Berlin University men, one of them the professor of Swahili. One day, the next table being crowded, the Swahili instructor was moved over to our table next to an "unreconstructed Rebel" (as he called himself), American student from South Carolina. There was of course nothing to do but to make the best of it, according to the custom of the country. But when the African professor had gone, the South Carolinian said: "If that had happened in South Carolina, I'd have killed the damn nigger!"

At the same time, and now, there have always been British civil servants who knew Urdu, or Tamil, or Bhutanese. Doubtless we shall have to develop specialists in languages as "freak." And certainly the time will end in our diplomatic services when the American Ambassador or Minister is commonly the only representative at many of the capitals of the world who speaks no language but his own and American educated travelers are the only ones who are speechless abroad.

They need not know Thai or Basque, but they should at least know one or more of the tongues that are taken for granted in an educated European.

The demands for mathematics and chemistry is even more insistent, and comes as much from the permanent needs of industry as from the temporary call of war. This is a mathematical and a scientific age. Even the ordinary citizen can not walk the streets understandingly unless he has some notion of what makes the multitudinous wheels go 'round and some acquaintances with the materials for the gadgets of this gadget-worshipping time. And there would be no such wheels or gadgets unless some of us knew technically and fundamentally the mathematics, physics and chemistry without which modern life could not operate.

War will require these in vastly increased numbers—Army men who can work the mathematics of ballistics, Navy men and aviators who can find their way over the trackless sea. You can't do that by arithmetic, or even by algebra and geometry. The very elements of the necessary knowledge begin above those levels.

Also, both industry and war require chemists who can not merely pour things into a test tube, but men who have delved into the fundamentals, and can produce to order new substances of specified qualities that never were on sea or land before, and physicists who by mathematical calculation can turn new forces loose for the service of man.

These studies are abstruse. They can not be understood by mere common sense nor stumbled on by luck. Most of us have shied away from them, as something reserved for geniuses or freaks. But now they are very practical. They literally "make the world go round." And you can make them pay, you can get a job by them, in industry, or a commission, in the Army. The time is near when Greek and Sanskrit, or at least their modern offshoots, and calculus and quarternions, will be restored to their places as the most "practical" of subjects. For anything is "practical" that you can get money for.

Parking

Faculty Commission Selected To Study New Parking Rules

Although the completion of the college parking lot has been delayed until the rain ceases, a faculty commission, under the chairmanship of Laurine Bergin, has been appointed to study the new driveway for parking possibilities.

No rulings on parking spaces or parking procedure have been drawn up by the commission or college officials, but Miss Bergin and the parking commission may propose a series of parking rulings when the survey of the almost completed lot has been made.

It is thought, however, that a space allotment will be made for faculty and student body cars, but no further information on the location of the allotments has been issued.

At the request of the city traffic commission, college officials are now studying a proposal to place marks of identification on all cars here at the college, which can be used to facilitate the location of car owners and use of the automobile in time of emergency.

The actual date of completion of the college parking has not yet been determined, but construction officials estimate that work can be terminated in several days if the weather permits.

Completion of the parking lot marks the end of a student fight to end the crowded condition of Phelan Avenue, and the muddy condition which formerly existed in the parking grounds to the south of the college building.

Serenade

Beta Phi To Stage Juke Box Dance

Beta Phi Beta fraternity will stage its Juke Box Serenade tonight at the Serbian Club, 225 Valencia Street near Fourteenth Street, Nick Barbarotto, organization social chairman, disclosed today.

The affair is so named "because dancing will be to records of the nation's top ranking bands featuring the number one dance tunes of the day." Dress is "sport" and stags will positively not be admitted, according to Barbarotto.

Orchestras — Glen Miller, Kay Kyser, Harry James, Tommy Dorsey, Jimmy Dorsey, Benny Goodman, and vocalists — Dinah Shore, Helen O'-Connell, Helen Forrest, and Ginny Simms will share tonight's spotlight.

Dancing will be from 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m., and during the evening's festivities, there will be free refreshments for everyone in attendance. Tickets may still be purchased today on the campus, or tonight at the door. The price of admission is 75 cents "per couple."

Suggestion

Election Procedure In Soph Queen Contest To Be Changed Shortly

Election procedure for the Sophomore Queen contest was definitely determined by the Executive Council and Bob Ervin, high sophomore president, and chairman of the queen campaign, at the college council meeting last week.

Previous contest suggestions were disposed of by Ervin, and the semi-annual contest will be conducted on the same lines this year as in previous semesters. The use of the ballot in the voting for candidates will be done away with this semester, and the use of eleetion machines will be used instead.

Dual Election

Timed to coincide with the student body officer elections, the queen contest candidates will be marked on the student body candidate sheet in the semester end elections. Thus, a student will need only vote for his student and queen selections but once, instead of voting on two separate occasions as in previous semesters.

Sophomore Week will follow immediately after the election week, and the semi-annual formal dance of the class will be held at the end of the soph week. The victor in the queen contest will be introduced at the Sophomore Formal and awards will be presented at that time.

No Election Date Set

Executive Council members have not yet arrived at a definite date for the elections, but Bill Steenberg student body president, hinted that date for the affair may be decided by the council some time this week.

Arr Jorgensen Graduates From US Air Corps School

Arr K. Jorgensen, former college student, was recently awarded a commission as a second lieutenant and bombardier officer in the United States Army Air Corps, graduating from the advanced bombardier school at Albuquerque (N. Mex.)

While in college, Jorgensen majored in music and art, besides being a trumpeter in the college orchestra. Jorgensen was graduated from Galileo High School.

Catudio — Spectator . . Major and the Minor

This sounds silly, but in The Major and the Minor, currently at the Paramount Theater, a 12-year-old girl, who is really Ginger Rogers incognito, be comes the belle of a boys' military academy. And, brother, how she fools the Major. (Ray Milland)!

The idea of this production isn't brand new, but the hilarious situations in which Ginger and the Major are involved comprise the nucleus of one of this season's gayest comedies. Ginger is a small-town girl who tires of the big city and decides to return home. She hasn't enough mazuma, so she hires a father to purchase (for her) a half-fare ducat back to Iowa. (Or was it Ohio?) Then the fun begins!

Clad in a gingham school dress, a broad-brimmed chapeaux, and anklet socks, she befriends a Major . . . who "really thinks she's a Minor!" In order to aid the Major in his attempt to return to active military duty, she finds herself at a boys' military school, where nervous adolescents, thinking Ginger to be a "teen-ager," whisper sweet nothings into her ears.

With the help of an antagonistic "sister hater," Diana Lynn, the Minor breaks up the intended marriage of the Major to the commanding officer's daughter, Rita Johnson. In between embarassing situations and whatnot, Ginger is pursued by hordes of adolescent—well, "wolves," to put it mildly!

As the energetic Minor, Miss Rogers comes up with a riotous performance as she runs the gamut of theatrics, from a 12-year-old to an elderly widow. She's partially convincing, for at times, she seems to forget that she is supposed to be 12, and not 21. She doesn't rate on the basis of Diana Barrymore's recent 'teen age portrayal in Between Us Girls.

Ray Milland, in this author's opinion, is one of the cleverest sophisticate-type comedians in the business. In this affair, he enacts the role of the befuddled Major with that dash of devilry that makes dilapidated dowagers swoon and tycoons gnash their false upper plates.

Special mention should go to Diana Lynn, the only real 'teen age female in the cast, which also includes Robert Benchley, Rita Johnson, Frankie Thomas, Raymond Roe, Leila Rogers (she's Ginger's real mom), and Tom Dugan. This is Director Billy Wilder's initial attempt at directing 'em, and from the looks of things, he'll do nicely in Glamor Town. And, as usual, Wilder and partner Charley Brackett authored the dialogue.

Number two feature on the menu is, Tombstone, the Town Too Tough to Die, featuring Richard Dix, Edgar Buchanan, Kent Taylor, Don Castle, and Frances Gifford. Yep, podner, it's a western. Yippee!

RAMblings

WILSON STARTS PRACTICE

With football jerseys tucked away until 1943, and possibly for the duration, Coach Tom Wilson began issuing basketball suits and accepting signups this week for what will be the Rams' concoction of wartime cage play.

Among those who signed on the dotted line were three outstanding veterans from last year . . . Jack Terry, Alex Adorador, and Frank Isola. Wilson will undoubtedly form the nucleus of his team around these men, who have proved to be quite handy with the sphere in the past. The trio, however, finds the hoop to be a little higher than it would seem to the average basketball player.

All three fall below the six foot mark, but make up their lack of height with ever important speed. So it would seem that Wilson's main problem is to find a couple of men with sufficient height to control the backboards while Terry, Adorador, and Isola burn up the maplewood with a blazing fast attack.

Last year the Rams enjoyed a little worse than a fair season, winning a few and losing a couple more than that. But throughout the season Terry was one of the most outstanding cagers in the junior college conference, finishing within the first five for high scoring honors.

He should be just as sharp this year, plus having had the responsibility of coaching his Pirates to the intramural championship. The talented Pirates, however, were good enough to walk off with the title even with Der Schikelgruber a the helm.

From the Pirates to the varsity go All Intramural George Vogiotsis and Ed Lapuyade. Lapuyade saw little action last year while Vogy will be a newcomer to varsity ranks. Other veterans returning include Norm Schue, Bud Winter and Ray Sulprizio. In fact, Wilson will have all but Mel Dropo, Dave Cunningham, and Gus Strongin coming back far another fling.

Out of these and some of the new ones that will probably show some promise, Wilson should find the needed help for Terry, Adorador, and Isola. All in all, it will be somo time before the starting five will be chosen . . . although we think we've soived one problem. Get a couple of six foot, four inch cuties to clear the bail, and let the dead-eyes like Terry, Adorador, and Isola keep 'em swishing.

Simple as all that!

WE DID IT BEFORE

We were siting quietly at our desk the other day when we were asked to bring forth our prediction on the outcome of tomorrow's big game between Cal and Stanford.

We blurted out with the Bears and the office went in an uproar. We gathered immediately that we were all by ourself in the picking of California, but soon we had a companion in sports writer, Jimmy Lee.

Louis "Dutch" Conlan, Lee Elsan and Russ Sweet, all conference officials, were unable to voice their opinion because of that status, although we are inclined to believe that they likewise were in favor of the Indians. But Jack Brady and Tom Wilson wasted no time in picking Stanford, as did Prexy Bill Steenberg and Bob Catudio.

How well we remember last year, when things were just the same. Everyone picked the Cards, but we stuck by the Golden Bears and took our heckling. California made good our prediction, however, and pushed Stanford all over the gridiron for a 16 to 0 victory.

We did it before—we could do it again!

VOLLEYBALL ON

Volleyball began last Wednesday and the Faculty Wizards made its debut against the Gems of the Gridiron, a bunch of fellows from Lee Eisan's squad. The Guardsman deadline prevented the outcome of the game from being published, although the Wizards claim that the championship will be theirs with ease.

Basketball is all over with and as was predicted since the first week of play, Terry's Pirates emerged with 12 victories and no defeats for the championship. Jack Brady, the intramural faculty adviser, was down right proud of his work in making the tournament another successful one.

He even went as far as to place a copy of The Guardsman on the desks of every gym instructor when the All Intramural Team was published to prove his point that the intramurals hold the spotlight in the college.

Brady is an enthusiastic fellow and will probably have just as much success in the future semesters by appealing to the women students to turn out when there won't be any men left.

Just like Brady . . . "The Intramurals Must Go On!—war or no war, men or no men."

Block SF Fails To Meet As Club Stands On Last Legs

At one time a strong organization, but at present hobbling on its last legs, the Block SF Club is trying desperately to hold its place in the college and to regain the prestige it held in the past.

With the graduation of its last officers, the organization has failed to elect new ones and have let things ride until the situation reached an all-time low.

Realizing the nose-dive, Russ Sweet and Frank Isola have called meetings in an attempt to bring the club back to the level it should rightfully hold. The first of these meetings was attended by only five members, hardly enough to elect officers.

Last Tuesday another meeting was scheduled by Isola, but Isola, himself, failed to appear and the whole thing was cancelled. It has been things like this that have caused the steady downgrade of the club, and if it gets too far gone, may die out completely.

Pirates Win Casaba Championship; Beta Phi Beta Ties For Fraternity Title; Volleyball Now In Progress

By Bob Catudio

Everything's over, but the shouting—The Pirates have been crowned the new intramural basketball champions, riding through the spheroid circuit on a basis of 12 straight triumphs.

The Newman Club, with a "9 and 3" record trailed in second place, while the East Bay All Stars and the Old Men's Athletic Club finished in the third spot; both clubs tied with an "8 and 4" record. Because of the selective service act, and other Federal laws, the new champs will not play the Newman Club during a previously scheduled All-Intramural Night.

116 Participated

Volleyball and badminton will now share the intramural klieg-light, with both tournaments "going on" at the same time, according to Jack Brady, intramural director. Although it wasn't a record, a total of 116 men participated in intramural basketball.

The 11 teams which have signed up for participation in the college "umpteenth" volleyball tournament are The Harbins, Rifle Club, Beta Phi Beta, Brady's Beauties, Bay Region All Stars, Tri Epsilon, Phi Lambda Epsilon, The Gems of the Gridiron, Psi Lambda Phi, Newman Club, and The Faculty "Wizards."

Thus far, there are 43 entrants "signed, sealed, and delivered" who will take part in the college badminton tournament, according to Brady. Play in this department will start Monday, November 23, at 3 p.m., in the men's gymhasium.

All Fraternity Team

Now that the regular All-Intramural team has been selected, this department publishes its All-Fraternity Team. The men on the first five include, Keith Tomley, Beta Phi Beta, and Bob Haines, Phi Lambda Epsilon, at forwards.

George Ritzeau, of Psi Lambda Phi, was selected All-Fraternity center, and Julio Guhn, Beta Tau, and Joo Melville, Tri Epsilon, were placed at the guard spots. Others who might have placed on the first team were Nick Barbarotto, Johnny Scharetg, Arlie Charter, and Jimmy Lee.

BPB Ties For Title

Had Barbarotto participated in more basketball contests, he probably would have been selected on the first team. However, because of a leg injury sustained early this season, he played in only the last three circuit affairs.

Beta Phi Beta and Phi Lambda Epsilon finished in a tie for first place—that is, in the "fraternity round robin."

Women's Athletics

December 2 To 9 Set As Tourney Week Date

At the WAA Council meeting held last Tuesday afternoon in the women's gym, final arrangements were made for "Tourney Week" which will be held December 2 to December 9.

Also discussed at the meeting were other WAA activities which will be held before the Christmas holidays, as will the election of new officers for the spring term.

Party In December

On December 10, there will be a Play Hour in the women's gym at which time all the clubs who have participated regularly this fall will have a Christmas party. Awards will be given out to all those meriting them. "The gym will be decorated in Christmas colors and a large Christmas tree will be a main attraction," stated Dorothy Fairbanks.

The Archers plan to shoot a "novelty shoot" at which they will decorate their targets with streamers and balloons. "They will shoot William Tell apples and no doubt this year use the pictures of Hitler, Mussolini, and Hirohito on their targets," commented Miss Keller.

Doctor Porter is expected back after Thanksgiving from her trip to the east. All the older students who haven't been checked this semester should see her as soon as possible.

Cage Managers Needed

There are two openings for managers of this coming season's varsity basketball team. Men who wish to take advantage of this opportunity are requested to see Coach Tom Wilson, in the men's gymnasium office immediately. First come, first serve!

Gym Classes Excused Next Week For Swimming Tests

This coming Monday and Tuesday, November 23 and 24, all men's gym classes will be excused. The student can go up to the Jefferson High School pool any time from 9 o'clock to 3 o'clock on either of these two days and take a swimming test.

Each student will have to swim the length of the pool, which is approximately 50 feet long.

After passing the swimming test, the student will then start on a course in boxing, which will come at the time they have their body building classes.

Cage Veterans Return; Dropo Only Star Lost

With the sound of pounding feet soon to be heard running over the maplewood boards of the college gym, Coach Tom Wilson has announced that final signups for varsity basketball will end around January 1.

No immediate information is known as to just how many men students are planning to turn out this season, but Coach Wilson said that he was pretty sure that all last-year's veterans would be returning with the exception of Captain Mel Dropo and Dave Cunningham.

50 Work Out

In the basketball class that convenes on every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, Wilson has around 50 players working out in hopes of making the varsity squad this year.

Even though no championship is at stake, games will be played against the other junior college around the bay region, and with San Jose State Frosh, U. S. Motor Army Corps based at Stockton, the U. S. Coast Guard at Alameda, California Frosh, Stanford Frosh and a possibility of games being played against the Olympic Club, San Francisco State, and the San Francisco Athletic Club.

Lincoln First Game

The first actual scheduled game will be against Lincoln High School on December 30 at the college gym. It will be mostly the junior varsity that will play.

Last year's returning veterans will be Alex Adorador, Frank Isola, Ed Lapuyade, Norman Schue, Bud Winter, Jack Terry, Ray Sulprizio, and Carter Corey.

On January 7, the main schedule will start against the U. S. Army Base here on the college pavilion. The majority of the games scheduled for this season will be played at the Rams home court.

"Another week or more will pass before we will know anything definite about a permanent schedule," Coach Tom Wilson said, "but we'll meet them as they come and should have a pretty fair season."

College Prognosticators Favor Stanford Over Cal

Who's going to win the Big Game between Stanford and California? Here is what a "few local, outstanding (we hope) experts" have to say:

Barbarotto (sports editor): "Ferguson will break up the Fawcett-Hammett attack, while Jurkovich and Porto crack the Card defense for a couple of touchdowns . . . and a Cal win."

Catudio (managing editor): "Stanford has finally hit its mid-season stride. I pick the Schwartzmen to jolt Cal for a 14 to 6 win."

Lee (sports writer): "Stanford's beginning to roll again, but you can never tell in a Big Game. I like Cal, but it'll be very close."

Wilson (basketball coach): "I'm highly in favor of Stanford. I think they can win—say 7 to 0, or 14 to 7."

Brady (intramural director): "Stanford will win! Stanford's combination will prove too tough for a green California line."

Steenberg (student body president): "Stanford will win, of course!"

Well, that's that! They'll be around Monday to pay off wagers, and defend themselves against antagonistic remarks. By the way, who do you think'll win the BIG GAME?

Remember Doug Johnson? Well, Now, He's Writing From A Long Beach USO

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of communiques written by Doug Johnson, former Guardsman columnist, who enlisted in the Merchant Marine this year. When Johnson writes . . . anything can happen. Let's see, then!)

By Doug Johnson

Here I am. What ho, so to say!

Fact is, I was dangling off the side of the American Sailor painting about 40 feet above the water in an old bosun's chair, when I thought: "I'd like to be sitting on a nice stable chair in The Guardsman office!" One thought lead to another, so I am going to write to you.

Evidently, you didn't get my letter of appreciation for that article Iwanna (Hayworth) wrote. (Ed. note: This is personal.) Thank you again, Iwanna. I've read it 18 times. You should get the Pulitzer Prize. (Ed. note: End of personal note.)

As you have probably detected, I'm in a USO house, where they give you a ping pong paddle and an oatmeal cookie and expect you to go mad with joy. To (censored) with their oatmeal cookies. Someone is always trying to "foist" a cookie of some sort on me. Deadly little things!

I'd give anything to be back at "the college" eating sandwiches on the lawn, or looking into someone's great, big bedroom eyes over a milkshake, or something. Ah, those picnics! Why don't I receive a copy of The Guardsman?

Tell you what!

Let's all give give me a big party. I'd make a speech; be the man of the hour. Down here on this pot they laughingly call a ship, one is apt to lose his superiority complex. I've been called more names by more different petty officers. The one that really hurt, and it makes me shudder to recall it, was: Salmonhead.

My God, can one be called Salmonhead and retain one's dash, savoir faire, eclat? Well—

One does learn quite a bit here, though. We've made several trips, (I can't say where to) and "gleaned" quite a bit of knowledge thereof. One bit of weather really had me worried for a while. It had to be my wheel watch.

At one time, we were taking green seas over the boat deck. I couldn't hold her and she came about—all the way. She's no small ship, either. Something grand about it, though. The sea seems to be man's last frontier. We've conquered the air and the land.

The sea will humor us, but when she gets angry, she'll snap you and scuttle you like a matchstick. She'll make a man of you, or a snivelling coward. (Snivelling—sniveling. I "i"—2 "i's?") Oh, well!

Let's all write, too. Hundreds of letters. Get the welfare committee after this. Have a big drive. Send a typewriter and a 1937 Cadillac. These pens drive me nuts, and I hate to hitch hike. Well, I'll see you sometime—I hope!

Service Flag Purchase Approved By Executive Council This Week

Approval of submitted drawings of a student and faculty service flag by William Eckert, college art instructor, was rendered by the Executive Council this week. Although no vote was taken for the preliminary presentation, the project was given full backing by the Council.

The drawings, as submited by Eckert, were representative of the number of men in the service, according to Dean of Men Edwin C. Browne. The two service flags approved by the Council were uniform in idea—one representing the faculty; the other the students.

Suggestion Made

If plans are finally executed, the flags may be made by the sewing classes at Continuation High School. This was only a suggestion which as yet, has not been in effect.

During he remainder of the meeting, two representatives from the college hotel and restaurant management division offered the student body the use of the cafeteria as a dance floor for a forthcoming Associated Student dance.

Success Predicted

"Last semester, the dance in the cafeteria was extremely successful," Dave Massingham, division student, said, "and we in the division have the feeling that a dance this semester will be just as successful . . . If not more."

Upon the approval of the suggestion rendered, a committee, headed by Social Chairman Lucille Landresse, and Massingham was appointed by Student Body President Bill Steenberg. It was hinted that admission to this forthcoming dance would be one ten cent United States War Stamp.

Book Week Ends Today; Library Designs Displays

This week end marks the close of National Book Week, an observance sponsored each year by the American Library Association. "Foward with Books" is the 1942 slogan of the association, according to Marcus Skarstedt, college librarian.

Students this week have observed the displays designed and executed by Irene Mensing, assistant to the librarian, with the aid of Martha Wallace. The principal exhibit in the main floor display case follows the national theme presenting outstanding works on each of the 48 states. An arrangement of the jackets of these books is presented on the library bulletin board.

Two Opinions For Students Offered

When the yell leader pleads hoarsely for a "Fight, fight, Siwash" and then does a cartwheel through the rain, don't question his intelligence—he's probably a little brighter than the average.

That's the finding of a survey conducted at Colgate University. The investigation was aimed at determining what relationship, if any, existed between intelligence of Colgate seniors and participation in extra-curricular activities.

The results throw a little cold water on the "big campus man," the fellow who belongs to all the clubs and appears at least a half-dozen times in the group pictures in his class yearbook. Statistics show it's not the fact that he participates, but what he takes part in—that gives a clue to his gray matter.

And as for the meek little student whose name never appears on a committee, he's 3 per cent smarter than the average.

Long suspected, the fact was established that the varsity letter for skill in major sports usually adorns a strong back and an I.Q. 11 per cent below average.

The survey revealed that 30 per cent of the nearly 800 seniors engaged in no extra-curricular activities. The most intelligent group, 16 per cent above the average, worked on student publications.

Ratings for men participating in social, religious, dramatic, musical, managerial and cheerleading activities were found to be "slightly above average."

Men in the student government were second only to those men on publications. The rating for men in minor athletics coincided with the average, while the standings of the men in departmental clubs dropped 6 per cent below the average.

Our yell leaders yell, "Fight, fight, Rams," but none of them have tried to do a cartwheel in the rain. If they did, they'd look like withering, human pretzels.

As to their intelligence, there's no doubt about it. They know how to read 'n' write, and they know what to do when someone yells, "Come and get it!"

We have no meek students in this institution. Pound for pound, we're the envy of every slaughter-house from Walla Walla to Pago Pago. Just ask anyone here, especially Jordan Groanmanger. He weighs 95 pounds.

Students in journalism are an intelligent group of young men and women. Their I.Q. is about 11 per cent above or below the normal student. Take your choice. The odds are even.

Our side of the problem is "simple," but far from "simple-mindedness." Older men and women are supposed to be smarter than younger boys and girls. If you don't agree, ask your dad, and he'll reply, "Why I remember when I was in college, I . . . "

Selective Service

Possibility Of Teen-Age Student Deferment Until June, 1943

With the signing of the 18-19 year old draft bill by President Roosevelt there is a widespread demand for clarification of the law as it passed in final form. According to President Archibald J. Cloud, the college is in communication with our Congressmen in the hope that important releases from the War Department will reach this campus without delay.

Information at hand, though not official, indicates that students will be permitted to finish the present scholastic year and those who are eligible for officer training will probably carry on into the summer and fall of 1943.

Education Rationed

Youth under 18 years of age, and those "teen-agers" now graduating from high schools will be enabled to avail themselves of the enlisted reserve corps opportunities by pledging themselves for such enlistment when they do become 18 years of age. Under this provision it appears certain that those students who are qualified will be assured at least a start on their college education.

Word from some collegiate circles indicates that higher education will be rationed by the opening of the fall semester in 1943. It is said that education itself is to be a far cry from the present on the basis of current plans in the mind of Army officials.

Somehow, the feeling in military circles in Washington is that colleges have become something of a haven from military service for large numbers of youths. "It becomes a greater challenge now than ever before," said Louis G. Conlan, college administrator, "for our men and women to avail themselves of the opportunities this and other colleges offer in accordance with the war effort." At present about 500,000 men are in school, either in the enlisted reserves or in specialized courses.

Call Married Men

The situation so far as selective service is concerned indicates that the call upon married men will go on as planned during he next two months. This would seem to indicate that the examination and classification of the teen-age youths will not be accomplished for some little time. Further evidence of the delay in the actual call and induction is the strenuous effort being put forth to encourage enlistments as privates in the thirteen branches of the Army.

Students who act in haste will probably not have too great leisure to repent their action, according to Edward Redford, head counselor, until after the battle is won. "Self-evaluation and depreciation in a time of crisis," he added, "can be a detriment to the recruitment of leaders and men qualified to serve in responsible positions."

Honor Society

Homan Featured At AGS Meeting

Featuring Walter Homan, San Francisco State College instructor, the Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college honor society, held its third meeting of the semester yesterday, according to Alice Cooper, college English instructor and organization adviser.

Following Homan's talk, it was announced that student members must place an order for their organization pins not later than today, at the college bank, Miss Cooper said. As in the past, this semester, the honor society will continue in its effort to aid "students who may be having 'homework' troubles" in their studies.

Students who are deserving of wearing an Alpha Gamma Sigma pin are urged to contact Miss Cooper immediately in Room 185. Thus far, approximately 80 students are in this semester's group.

This semester, honor society students are eligible for ten junior college scholarships to Occidental College, located at Los Angeles. Of the scholarships, five are for men, and five are for women.

Men, Women Leaders Needed By Local OCD

Junior college men and women are needed as leaders in Civilian Defense work and the many college people who have developed specific skills can now put them to use, according to Dr. Phyllis Haley, college instructor and local war council representative.

There is a lack of instructors in the Boy Scouts and the Red Cross is eager for teachers of first aid and swimming. Men and women may also serve by identifying themselves with the messenger service of the Civilian Defense Council, the Red Cross Disaster Centers, and the warden and fire watcher services.

Students who are interested in serving in any of the above capacities, or in taking a course on the technique of group leadership in Civilian Defense should contact Miss Haley.

COLLEGE STAMP DANCE TODAY

Curriculum

V-1, V-5, Naval Reserve Officer Courses Endorsed

Students who have reached their 17th birthday, whether enrolled in college or high school, are eligible to enlist in the U. S. Navy's Class V-1 accredited college program, according to Louis G. Conlan, college administrator in charge of reserve officer enlistments.

"Young men who are interested in aviation can have the same opportunity for pre-flight training under both the army and the navy flight programs," Conlan said.

Only those students will be selected for enlistment under the navy program whose potential officer-like qualities, mental aptitude, and physical condition indicate that their retention in college for a period, from date of first entrance in college as freshmen, of from two to four years will probably enable them to qualify for officer training classes such as those conducted at Northwestern University and Harvard.

Opportunity Guaranteed

Enlistment in Class V-1 accredited college program is to be construed as a guarantee to the candidate of an opportunity to earn consideration for transfer to an officer training class, but it is not a guarantee of such transfer itself, or of a commission.

The enlistee is given the opportunity to express his preference for the type of officer training desired. The Navy will consider these requests in the light of educational and other backgrounds of the individual, together with the needs of the naval service. Students pursuing, or having pursued courses of particular value to the naval service will, where necessary, be given preference of those who have not.

Elective Program

Candidates are not required to take an accelerated program, but are expected to do so wherever possible within the financial limitations of the student.

Enlistment for the Navy V-1 program means that the student will be required to take only the following subjects: a year course in college mathematics, a course in trigonometry, and one year of college physics. The balance of his program may be freely elected.

Applications Taken For Retail Merchandising

Students interested in enrolling in the spring semester merchandising program to be conducted by the college, should see Virginia Gohn, instructor in charge, during the coming week.

"There is a splendid opportunity for students to earn while they are attending college," emphasized Miss Gohn. Retail stores are experiencing a crisis in the recruitment of personnel and employment is assured those who successfully complete the course.

Miss Gohn's office is Room 222.

Note New Vacation Dates

There are only 17 more days until Christmas—but there are only seven more days before Christmas vacation!

Classes will be excused from December 12 through December 27. Resumption of classes WILL BEGIN DECEMBER 28.

There will be no school on New Year's Day, January 1, heralding the arrival of a brief vacation through January 3. Classes will resume January 4.

Sweetheart

"Contest Rules Pending On Official Okay"

Tentative election and nominative plans for the Sophomore Sweetheart contest have been formulated by the Executive Council, although administrative sanction on the matter has as yet not been given by college officials.

Entry blanks for the candidates participating in the election must be turned into the sweetheart committee before January 9. Bob Ervin, Soph president and head of the Sweetheart contest pointed out that only one candidate from any specific organization may be permitted to run in the contest.

Rally Date Set

An introduction of candidates will take place on November 14, and the elections are slated January 18 in conjunction with the regular student body officer elections.

The winner in the Sweetheart contest will be announced at the Sophomore Formal, a semi-annual affair, although the place of the dance is as yet undetermined.

Okay Not Given

Ervin pointed out, however, that since administrative support has not yet been received, the plans made by him and his committee are not yet permanent. The sophomore committee expressed confidence in the administration's granting the election proposals already laid down by them.

Scholarships Opened To College Students

Application for scholarships to Pomona (Calif.) College must be made not later than January 16, 1943, for competition in the year 1943-44, Alice Cooper, college Alpha Gamma Sigma faculty adviser, announced this week.

On the basis of open competitive examinations, the following scholarships are available for candidates from this college. They are: four scholarships of $175 each; one of $175, and two special departmental scholarships—one in chemistry for $350, and one for $350 in English.

Applicants must file before January 16 with the Committee on Admissions, a regular application of admission, the fee being $3. Further information may be obtained from Miss Cooper.

Red Cross

Blood Donations May Fail Unless Sign-Up Improves

Hopes for a signup of 500 students in the college blood donor drive dwindled this week as the total number of students enrolled in the campaign was set at 75 people.

Emmett Hein, Welfare Committee chairman and drive sponsor, expressed disappointment at the laxity of students in enrolling in the blood donor drive. "We expected many more people to sign up in this drive," Hein said, "but thus far our tally sheet shows only a small percentage of the total college enrollment."

Seventy-five Names Recorded

The Welfare Committee pointed out that the total number of students holding student body cards number approximately 1300, but of that number only 75 had the spirit to register for the Red Cross Blood Donor Service.

Because of the lack of people thus far in the blood campaign, it is possible that the drive will be extended for a short period of time. Hein offered the possibility of the extension, but he would not comment upon it, pending permission of college authorities.

Sign-ups Accepted

Volunteers who have neglected to register thus far are requested to leave their names and phone numbers at the student body office. Students under 21 years and over 18 must secure parental consent to participate in the blood service; blanks for the consent may be obtained when the student registers.

Any person weighing less than 115 pounds is ineligible as a blood donor, according to rules laid down by the American Red Cross, conductor of the blood service.

Backed By Clubs

The drive is being backed by all organizations represented at the college. Most of the organizations will make it a point to enlist their members 100 per cent in the campaign. Faculty members also voiced their approval of the measure this week, and some indications were that some instructors would join the student ranks in the blood donations.

Those students who contribute a pint of their blood to the Red Cross will be given a bronze emblem for the first donation, and they will receive a type card bearing the donor's blood type.

Local Naval Trainees In Need Of Available Housing

All students are urged by Dean Browne to notify him of available housing in the area of the junior college. In particular furnished rooms for 125 navy trainees soon to be stationed here, are needed.

Trainees will be adults, for the most part, men and women over 21 years of age. For an eight weeks training course students, they will be paid $125 a month.

Ten Cent War Stamp Admits Students To College Dance To Celebrate Drive Opening

With the thought in mind of aiding the government finance the war, an Associated Student Body dance will be held today in the college cafeteria, starting at 3:30 o'clock. Admission will be the purchase of a ten cent United States War Stamp at the door.

Music for this afternoon's dance will be "furnished by an orchestra," which at this date of writing, has not been selected.

The committee in charge of this is headed by Lucille Laudresse, Associated Student Body vice-president and social chairman.

"We have scheduled this dance in an effort to help the government," Miss Landresse said, "and, besides this, the purchase of a War Stamp will start many students purchasing stamps for a $25 War Bond."

Other Stamps On Sale

The dance, the result of a proposal made by Dave Massingham, hotel and restaurant management division student, at an Executive Council meeting, will be the first such dance of its type this semester. According to Miss Landresse, other denominations of stamps and bonds may be purchased at the door.

Provided that "no orchestra" is hired for today's dance, it was hinted that dancing may be "from phonograph records." This was only a possibility, according to Miss Landresse, who, in turn, announces that plans for other dances have not as yet been formulated.

Possibility of Bond Drive

There is a possibility that today's dance will be the start of a gala War Bond and Stamp Drive, that which resulted in an El Rey Theater show last semester, according to Bill Steenberg, Associated Student Body president.

Whether this plan will be carried out or not, however, depends upon the success of today's dance, Steenberg remarked.

Last semester the dance which was held in the cafeteria was extremely successful, and it is believed by all in charge of the dance to be held today, that this one will go off in like manner.

Citizens Observe First War Anniversary Sunday

Dr. Monroe E. Deutsch will be the principal speaker at the San Francisco Salvage for Victory Committee program, to be held at the First Congregational Church, Post and Mason Streets, at 2:30 p.m., on Sunday, December 6.

President A. J. Cloud will also participate in Sunday's program which will be broadcast locally, according to Chairman Fred E. Parr. Entertainment will be furnished by noted soloists accompanied by an Army band.

Bible Club

Drive Nets 500 Books For Army

Approximately 500 books were collected by the college Bible Club in a three week campaign to gather reading material for the men of the various armed services.

The drive, ending on November 24, netted club members types of books and magazines, and these books were sent to the United Service Organization in San Francisco for distribution to the armed camps throughout the nation.

A membership drive now being conducted by Bible Club members throughout the campus will be climaxed by a Christmas dinner in Oakland.

A total of $5.00 was collected by the organization to enable them to purchase New Testaments for men in uniform. The money collected here at the college served to buy enough books for one platoon of men in the armed services.

Students interested in becoming a member of the Bible Club are asked to contact Darrell Hoyle, group president, or attend the next regular meeting of the organization.

U.S. Army Asks Public For War Zone Maps, Pictures

Rumaging through his files recently, Dr. Joseph Williams, geography instructor, came across a map of the Baleric Islands. A phone call to Army headquarters brought messengers on the double-quick, for the chart was called a "prize" by the local staff.

Dr. Williams urges all faculty members and students to give any maps and pictures pertaining to the war zones, European or Pacific, to the Army. Scenic postcards of cities and countryside are most important for aerial and land operations.

If students or faculty members desire to make such donations, they should leave them at the Registrar's Office addressed to Dr. Williams.

Rumor

Have You Heard?

THESE are war times—unsettled times, unusual times, and no one knows just what is going to happen to us individually or as a college.

The result is we are prone to believe everything we hear, without critically thinking whether or not the statements are true. We are receptive as never before to every idle rumor we hear.

And a rumor is a vicious thing. While it may be repeated innocently, there is always a tendency to add just a bit to it, "the next person adds just a bit to it, and the next, and the next."

How many of these rumors have you heard about the campus?

The college is going to close for the duration.

Only technical courses are going to be given next spring.

The Army is going to make a hospital out of the college.

The government is going to build barracks on the campus for an embarkation center.

The college is going to be open only to women students.

Everyone in a reserve classification is going to be called up for immediate duty.

The Navy intends to make the junior college a branch for pre-flight training.

The State Guard is taking over the gyms for drill purposes.

Rumors, rumors, rumors.

In print these look ridiculous. However, when whispered and discussed in the corridors or on a bus, they take on an air of fact wholly unwarranted.

Nothing will dispell rumors more quickly than bringing them out in the open and examining them.

With this in mind, The Guardsman intends to run a column of rumors being circulated and the correct answers as obtained from the most reliable sources—the administration, divisions of the state and federal government, the superintendent of schools and others who may be in a position to know the TRUTH.

This is vital to all of us. If the college is going to close (which it is not) the students should be informed without delay. If some branch of the service intends to take over the college (also not true) we should know about it.

Help us to help you.

When you hear a rumor, ask the person telling it, "Who told you that? What is your source of information?" Then after you hear it, instead of repeating it, write it down and give it to us. We will pass it on to the entire college—WITH THE TRUTH ABOUT IT.

DON'T BE A RUMOR MONGER; BE A RUMOR WARDEN.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Pilot Selects New Emblem; No More Mud?

• Rammy Flies

Editor, The Guardsman:

I read with very much interest an account of a former student in the Call-Bulletin last week, who, flying with the American Air Force in Africa, wanted a copy of a Ram's head to put on the side of his fighter plane.

I don't know if any one at the college has undertaken to grant that fellow's request, but I know that perhaps The Guardsman would be in a position to contact the right people. The college should feel honored that their mascot is riding with an American pilot who is doing his bit to rid the skies of enemy planes. Here's hoping that the fellow—his name is Henri Carbonell—has a lot of luck with that Ram's head.

R.C.

Editor's Note: Henri Carbonell's father is currently working with the Hotel Division here at the college, and the request for the replica of a Ram's head came through him. Consequently, this week, an art student finished a painting of the head, and the finished product will soon be sent to the aviator.

• Rain Reigns

Dear Editor:

I am one of those unfortunate people who has to walk to the gym from the 12 streetcar. This isn't bad except on rainy days, then life isn't worth living. A number of "puddle jumpers" (who don't jump them any more) come tearing along, and if you're anywhere in their vicinity, you get a free mud bath. You might think they would slow down to practically nil at the sight of a pedestrian, but instead they keep traveling at their regular rate of speed which seems terrific when they zoom up the road through all the small lakes and rivers drenching all innocent pedestrians. Can't something be done about these hypersensative extroverts?

Yours,

G.S.

Jobs Offered

Employment Possibilities For Christmas Vacation Decreasing

Employment possibilities for Christmas work are decreasing steadily for college students, according to a statement by Claude Silva, college placement director, recently.

"Any student desiring work during the Christmas holidays should contact me immediately," he said. "For example, there aren't going to be sufficient post office jobs for all those who may desire them. Therefore, the conclusion seems to be 'First come, First served'."

Similar positions, he suggested, may be placed with the American Railway Express, and other parcel delivery companies. However, these should be inquired about immediately, as applications placed with the American Railway Express require two weeks for approval.

High School Students Lead

As for the openings in department stores, Silva made the statement that the labor shortage will not be as great as expected at this time. Most of the stock jobs, however, he said, have already been given to city high school students due to their Christmas vacation beginning on December 5.

"Lastly," he said, "there will be a few selling positions opened at this late date, and any student wishing at this time to secure employment during the holidays, should see me as soon as possible."

Larson Urges Late Enrollees

"It's not too late to enroll in many of the classes of the business division," Edward W. Larson, division head, asserted this week.

Many of the late registrants include students who have come from other vocational or academic departments for the purpose of supplementing their regular programs.

This eight-week schedule should have particular appeal to adult women who are interested in acquiring or "brushing-up" on certain fundamental office skills, it was emphasized by Larson.

A schedule and directory of courses is available in the registrar's office, Room 121. All students interested in these business courses are urged to see Larson in Room 234.

Block SF, Phi Alpha Omega Charters Accepted By CAB

Charter renewals of the Block SF and the Phi Alpha Omega fraternities will be accepted by the Club Advisory Board on consideration of the fact that both organizations had difficulty at the beginning of the semester in obtaining an adequate number of members, and replacing faculty advisers who were called to the armed forces.

"However, this extension," Dorothy Hogan, president of the board disclosed, "does not exempt these organizations from turning in their renewals. As yet there has been no moves to submit them and an effort should be made to do so as soon as the functions of the clubs are under way."

At a recent meeting, the Executive Council approved the bill, presented by Miss Hogan, to extend the charter deadline for only these two groups.

Social Science

'Year After' Is Dec. 8 Theme

On next Tuesday, in observance of the Declaration of War by the Congress of the United States, a lecturer in Social Science 1 will take stock of what has been done in one year of war.

Speaker for this program will be Lloyd Luckmann, instructor in charge. The topic has been suggested by the Office of War Information.

Students enrolled and all others interested may attend the lecture which will be the twelfth in the series known as the "President's Lectures."

Who, What, Where, When, Why—

The following questions are submitted (with the correct answers) for the information of students eligible for V-3, V-5 and V-7 Accredited College Programs:

Where do I go to enlist?

Ans.—Central Tower, 703 Market Street, 3rd Floor.

Whom do I see?

Ans.—Lt. Commander Dwight C. Baker, U.S.N.R.

What kind of a course do I take?

Ans.—A general letters and science course which includes one year of college math, a course in Trigonometry in high school or college and 1 year of college physics.

What must my average be?

Ans.—Enlisted reserves in the V programs are required to maintain a "C" average for their whole program.

How long will I stay in college on the V programs?

Ans.—At least two years, in most cases four.

Can I enlist in V-1 after notice from my draft board to appear for a physical examination?

Ans.—Yes.

No Cooperation From Gym; Bob Marcus Writes Again

THE USUAL MIXUP

People wonder why newspapermen get gray hair so easy and at such a young age. The answer is so simple. Even on the small scale that The Guardsman is published, grief is as great as that which accompanies a big time daily sheet.

We of the sport page try desperately every issue to come up with the most important stories and give every sport publicity. Phone calls come every day from the gym department asking us to print a story or to give more publicity to a certain sport.

Jack Brady asks for more intramural copy, Lee Eisan wants football, Russ Sweet demands track and boxing stories, Tom Wilson wants basketball and the AMS nights, and they all want the same thing . . . big stories, big publicity.

So as we said before, we try to be as partial as possible and give them all a break, and publicize the sporting events accordingly and as we see fit. But what we want to know is how the heck can we give them the build-ups they ask when they themselves don't know what's coming off next and when!

How well we remember when Bill Cothran was editor of this department. It seems that the Women's Athletic Association was planning a tremendous Tourney Week and wanted the thing built up as never before. The obliging Mr. Cothran went ahead and gave the event a splurge with big headlines and numerous pictures.

But the Tourney Week was postponed to a later date and Cothran suffered the embarrassment. Came the next date for the Tourney Week and Cothran stuck his neck out again. Big publicity, pictures, and headlines!

This time Tourney Week was cancelled altogether!

Now it's our turn. Came the date to turn out this edition and we were all set to give the AMS-Intramural Fights a blast to top all blasts. The fights are or were (depending on how you look at it) scheduled for Monday night, December 7, an ideal date since it would be the anniversary of the war.

So, in need of information, we rang up the gym department and expected to get the necessary "stuff" that goes to make a successful blast. But did we get that information? We did not!

The only answer we got was . . . (Quote) The date was originally scheduled for December 8, but then we changed it to the seventh. As it stands now it will be on the seventh, but we're not sure. We may have to change it to a little later date and maybe until after the Christmas vacation (Unquote).

Makes sense, doesn't it? What would you do in that case? But the boys at the head of the deal still want the big build-up and publicity and expect to get it.

However, we're not the kind that want the same fate bestowed upon us as was upon the aforementioned Cothran . . . and for that reason there appears no boxing headline, no boxing pictures, and no boxing blast.

But the fights are still set for December 7.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS EDITORS

We were typing this story when who should walk into The Guardsman office but Bob Marcus, who was co-sports editor with us last semester and alternate writer of this column.

Stationed at the Seattle Repair Base in Washington and a member of the Coast Guard, Marcus is home on a three week's leave and wasted no time coming back to the old stamping grounds to see how the sports page was doing.

Being that his name appeared as the author of this column many times before, we think it only fitting that we turn over the remainder of the space to him. From here to finish we have Bob Marcus, former Guardsman Sports Editor.

By BOB MARCUS

Called upon rather unexpectedly to write a few notes of wisdom by your ardent sports analyst, Mr. Barbarotto, I am still rather shaky on being greeted by the remnants of the shattered glass window which graces the entrance to The Guardsman's editorial room.

Perhaps the law of averages have caught up with the staff, for if memory serves me right, this same window on many occasions through the past semesters usually trembled precariously because of the loud outbursts voiced by Mr. Barbarotto to a cub reporter who failed to meet the deadline.

Once inside this haven for future journalists, the thing which noticeably came to my attention was the size of this semester's sheet.

In recent years there was always an urgent call for more copy to fill up the ugly holes near the bottom of the page, but it appears that now since the budget and size has been sliced in half, there isn't enough room for the more than ample copy which is turned in.

So what can be done to give an honest amount of inches to each coach and his respective sport? Absolutely nothing! So the coaches must be good little boys and be patient until each season rolls around before any space is given to their athletes.

Don't get the idea that the sports staff is neglecting their talents, but in a case when space is so valuable, what would you do?

Now take the case of Jack Brady, intramural director of the college. Each semester a huge intramural program is sponsored by the college, and hence, to make the activities a success, a great deal of news is devoted for this.

So what do the other coaches think? They become peeved and yell threats of murder at the poor unsuspecting reporter who seeks a story from them later in the year.

Well, this week's column is nearly exhausted so I will have to conclude my little commentary of which I have said nothing.

In fact, I am really stunned by the fact that I was allowed to write anything at all, for last semester, Mr. Barbarotto and the author of this little notation used to have friendly heated verbal arguments on who would write Ramblings and how long they would be from week to week.

62 Cagers Turn Out

AMS Boxing

Date For Semi-Annual Carnival Still Tentatively Set For Monday Night; May Be Postponed Until January, '43

One of those complicated mixups which would make Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors look like a deglamorized stage farce has resulted in the TENTATIVE scheduling of the Associated Men Students-intramural boxing carnival, December 7.

According to Tom Wilson, the carnival will be staged "after the Christmas holidays," IF there is an insufficiency in the number of candidate boxers signed up. This may be lessened by the fact that IF enough boxers are signed up, the carnival will go on as scheduled, December 7.

Three Register

Thus far, only three candidates have registered, they being Herb Levy, Lawrence Cardellini, and Bob Hemsted. With the "tentative" date set for next Monday, it seems unlikely that enough men will sign up, a prerequisite to a series of elimination bouts prior to the finals.

"We would like to have the fights definitely scheduled for Monday evening, December 7," Wilson said, "but if the time element prevents our tentative date, then we'll probably hold the fights after the Christmas vacation."

Boxers In Service

Last semester, the AMS-Intramural fights were witnessed by more than 300 students—and it was a time when black-outs were the order of the day. Defending champions this time will be rarer than a "full tank of gasoline."

Boxers who will not make an appearance because of enlistment in the service, will include Al Drake, Jim McGowan, Armand Terzian, Ken Ludlam, Bryant Finch, Jack Cederlund, and Pete Ceti. Only remaining participants are Billy Steenberg, Bob Cavanaugh and Al Morris.

Intramural

Harbins Retain Title In Volleyball Tourney

Blasting the Faculty Men to the sidelines with a crushing two game defeat, the Harbins captured the "umpteenth" semi-annual volleyball tournament defeating the Wizards, 15 to 12 and 15 to 8.

This marked the second consecutive semester that the Harbins have won an intramural volleyball title, having disposed of the Phi Lambda Epsilon sextette last semester. Leading the aerial attack were Dave Osheroff and five others who completely outplayed an odds-on favorite Faculty team.

Non-Members Play

The Faculty Wizards—Russ Sweet, Jack Brady, Tom Wilson, Lee Eisan—"deserved to lose, since they had two non-members cavorting for them in their final contest."

Men are now urged (now-that volleyball is over) to submit team entries in the forthcoming intramural six man, touch tackle football tournament, Brady, faculty intramural director, said. Last year's tourney winner, The Warriors, defeated the Spartans, 6 to 0, scoring on a 12 yard paydirt pass from Al Morris to Carter Corey.

No Softball League

This will probably be the final outdoor tournament of the season, according to Brady, what with winter and the "local fog" yet to come. Thus, there will be no softball tournament this semester.

Entry blanks for the six man, touch tackle football tournament must be submitted as soon as possible to Brady, in the men's gymnasium.

Corey Elected President Of Block SF At Meeting

In an election held this week, Carter Corey was elected to the presidency of the Block SF Society, an organization which this week planned "to abolish the wearing of block letters of other institutions by men students."

Other officers elected included Al Morris, vice-president; John Prongos, secretary; Bill Collins, treasurer, and Herb Jensen, sergeant-at-arms. Corey, a member of Lee Eisan's football team this season, will replace outgoing president Frank Isola, who is, at present, president of the Associated Men Students.

Wearers of block sweaters other than a block SF sweater will be duly warned by the society twice before drastic action is undertaken. This proposal, however, has not, as yet (at this writing) had the full approval of the Executive Council, or the Club Advisory Board.

Coach Wilson Greets Ram Lettermen

By Jimmy Lee

With a roar of "Hi-ya Coach" that almost shook the men's gymnasium to the ground, 62 husky men greeted Coach Tom Wilson on the first day of basketball signups November 17.

Coach Wilson announced that the first game of the basketball schedule would be against the University of California Frosh here in the college pavilion on February 10, with a game against the Stockton Army Motor Ordinance Base here on January 7.

State Scheduled Twice

San Francisco State has promised to play the Rams in a two game home and home series in January and February.

Other games that Wilson has listed so far are with the John Borlo A.C. here in January, the U.S. Coast Guard from Alameda on Thurs., January 14.

By next week, a halfway perman-

Alex Adorador, ex-Commerce High School prep star, will be a holdover from last season's team, according to Head Coach Tom Wilson. He is one of the 62 men who have turned out for fall practice. Other veterans, along with Adorador, who will wear the red and white of the Rams for another season, include Jack Terry, Norman Scheu, Frank Isola, Ray Sulprizio and Ed Lapuyade.

ent roster will be determined after a few practice games with either the high school squads or with some of the college frosh.

Great Turnout

The following is a list of the men students that have already signed up for the varsity basketball squad. Signups are still being taken.

Women's Athletics

Christmas Celebration To Be Staged Dec. 10

By Dorothy Dean

Climaxing a semester of intercollege athletic activities, the Women's Athletic Association will stage a mammoth Christmas holiday celebration, Thursday, December 10, in the women's gymnasium, starting at 3 p.m., Lorraine Johnson, group president, disclosed this week.

All women are invited to be in attendance Miss Johnson said, and it was revealed that "all girls attending San Francisco Public High Schools will be extended invitations. Prior to attending, all women must register as soon as possible in the women's gymnasium office, Miss Johnson said.

The program will consist of various folk dances, exhibition tennis and badminton matches, the announcement of the recent WAA election, and awards will be distributed to women who have participated in WAA activities throughout the semester.

Surprise of the afternoon, according to Miss Johnson, will be "the appearance of Santa Claus—a feminine St. Nick—who will distribute candy and other assorted refreshments to the women in attendance."

"The program will be brought to a close with the singing of Christmas Carols and it is hoped that Bernice Hayes, A Cappella Choir member, will be able to sing," Dorothy Fairbanks, organization secretary, said.

Catudio Spectator . . ACADEMY AWARD PREVIEW

Since it's nearing the close of another motion picture year, yours truly takes a well-earned breathing spell to look back at the best films and performances of this year—and perhaps cast a preview of the forthcoming Academy Award situation.

Thus far, from the films we have seen (and yours truly has seen almost all of them), the ten best films of '42 are as follows: KINGS ROW, MRS. MINIVER, THE PIED PIPER, MY FAVORITE BLONDE, YANKEE DOODLE DANDY, WOMAN OF THE YEAR, TALES OF MANHATTAN, TALK OF THE TOWN, MY SISTER EILEEN, and WAKE ISLAND.

The best performance by a woman will probably come out of the following list: Greer Garson, Mrs. Miniver; Bette Davis, Now, Voyager; Barbara Stanwyck, The Gay Sisters; Joan Fontaine, This Above All; Katharine Hepburn, Woman of the Year; Michele Morgan, Joan of Paris; Ida Lupino, Moon Tide; Olivia DeHavilland, In This Our Life, and Betty Field, Kings Row.

Now, Voyager is the only film in that group that we haven't yet seen, since it starts its San Francisco premiere at the Warfield Theater next week. And if we know Miss Davis, she's bound to turn in a magnificent performance.

For the men, take your pick from this list: James Cagney, Yankee

Elyse Knox, Universal starlet

Doodle Dandy; Ronald Colman, Talk of the Town; Spencer Tracy, Tortilla Flat; Gary Cooper, The Pride of the Yankees; Edward G. Robinson, Tales of Manhattan; Robert Young, Joe Smith, American; Monty Wooley, The Pied Piper; George Sanders, The Moon and Sixpence; Jean Gabin, Moon Tide, and Charles Laughton, Tales of Manhattan.

And our "Oscar" for the best supporting role by an actor may go to either Lynne Overman, Reap the Wild Wind; Frank Morgan, Tortilla Flat; Alan Ladd, This Gun For Hire; Claude Rains, Kings Row; Thomas Mitchell, Moon Tide; Otto Preminger, The Pied Piper; Alan Hale, Gentleman Jim; Henry Travers, Mrs. Miniver, or George Tobias, My Sister Eileen.

Best supporting role by an actress may be selected from this list: Dame May Whitty, Mrs. Miniver; Teresa Wright, Mrs. Miniver; Doris Dudley, The Moon and Sixpence; Agnes Moorhead, The Magnificent Ambersons; Nancy Coleman, The Gay Sisters; Maria Ouspenskaya, Kings Row; Judith Anderson, Kings Row; Rosemary DeCamp, Yankee Doodle Dandy; Fay Bainter, Woman of the Year, and Hattie McDaniell, In This Our Life.

Among the newer crop that may spring to Hollywood's zenith, you can put down the names of Marjorie Reynolds, Anne Baxter, Gene Kelly, Alan Ladd, John Shepperd, Elyse Knox, Teresa Wright, Dana Andrews, Cornel Wilde, Jean Rogers, and Nancy Coleman.

However, we'll take—

Best Film: KINGS ROW.

Best Performance by an Actress: GREER GARSON, Mrs. Miniver.

Best Performance by an Actor: JAMES CAGNEY, Yankee Doodle Dandy.

Best Performance by a Supporting Actress: TERESA WRIGHT, Mrs. Miniver.

Best Performance by a Supporting Actor: FRANK MORGAN, Tortilla Flat.

U.S. Navy Inaugurates Course Next Year In Engineering, Aircraft

Inauguration of a training course of inspectors in engineering and aircraft materials will make its debut January 4, 1943, by the United States Navy at this college.

The United States Civil Service Commission will recruit both men and women for this type of work, according to Captain G. H. Laird (USN retired), who is in charge of naval activities here at the college. While at work, trainees will be paid $125 per month.

After a six to eight weeks training course here at the college the personnel will be assigned to various naval stations on the Pacific Coast.

Lt. J. Edward Sharkey will supervise the school for the Navy. He will be assisted by a civilian staff and by members of the college faculty. In addition to housing the classes the college will offer instruction in mathematics and blueprint reading.

Thus far this is the only course of its kind on the Pacific Coast. Men and women, graduates of junior college are needed for this program, the only other prerequisite being "a good background in mathematics." New personnel will be enrolled in the training school at the close of each training period.

Tables Turned; Faculty Tested

Man bites dog is news, and so the faculty takes tests.

For a long time now suffering, but conscientious college students have been waiting for this moment when the tables would turn. Then instructors would have to doff their answer books and rely on their gray matter.

This is just what happened recently, when instructors had the opportunity to take any type of test they cared to. Some instructors were interested in finding out if their talents included mechanical ability, and others were concerned with just knowing about the various tests offered.

CAPITAL to CAMPUS

ACP's Jay Richter Reports from Washington

TEEN AGE DRAFT

WASHINGTON — (ACP) — The impact of the 'teen-age draft bill will be felt by colleges and universities throughout the nation.

About one-third of all male collegians are 18 or 19 years old. Prospects for these men sum up about like this:

Approximately 25 per cent probably won't be taken because of physical disabilities.

Those already enlisted in college reserve training courses won't be taken — they are already in the army and, apparently, passage of the bill won't appreciably affect their present status. The same goes for those in senior ROTC.

All other 18 and 19 year old college students are subject to draft call—and fast. It is estimated they will be inducted starting about Jan. 1. For a time it appeared that 'teen age men already in college would be able to obtain deferment until July 1, 1943. That prospect is now out the window for college men, although high school students called up in the last half of this school year may request deferment in order to finish out their terms.

Enactment of the law has brought a hard drive by the navy to enlist 17 year olds, since army draft of the older 'teen age youth will seriously cut into the navy man power potential—and the navy still insists upon voluntary enlistment.

ONLY A DIM-OUT

Passage of the bill does not mean a complete blackout of educational opportunity for college 'teen agers.

Once they are in the army, these men, as well as all other 18 and 19 year olds who are drafted, will be eligible to take aptitude and intelligence tests to determine whether they may return to college for technical and scientific training.

Fast education, apparently, will be considered in final selection of draftees who may return to college. Other criteria include "qualities of leadership, military ability and aptitude for more education" as reflected in examination results.

According to Representative Sparkman, Democrat, of Alabama, the army will send more men back to college than it actually needs for its own purposes. These extra men would be assigned to industrial jobs.

Sparkman points out that the army plan calls for training periods of varying length, from 9 to 27 months. Principal courses would be medical and pre-medical courses, engineering and science.

Although there is some disagreement in Washington on the point, it appears that all of the young draftees will have to complete basic training before they may return to college.

His financial status will have nothing whatever to do with whether a man is selected to return to college for training. Ironically, it takes the dictates of wartime logic to achieve a degree of democratic selection of those who should attend college.

POST-WAR IMPLICATIONS

Which brings us to some significant post-war implications of the 'teen age draft bill.

As he signed the bill, the President announced that a committee of educators is making a study looking toward measures to "enable the young men whose education has been interrupted to resume their schooling and afford equal opportunity for the training and education of other young men of ability after their service in the armed services has come to an end."

Although educators and officials here are chary about interpreting that statement, it is evident that there are high hopes it may mean post-war democratization of the American educational system. Or, in basic English, college education for all whose minds deserve it, regardless of ability to pay for it. Presumably, this would mean vastly extended government financing of higher education.

Spring Voting

Student Election Postponed Until New Registration

Because of the uncertainty of incoming students, the semi-annual student body elections have been postponed until the first week of the new semester, it was revealed today by Charles Loughridge, election committee chairman.

Petitions for candidates will be distributed the week following registration in February, and the elections will follow a brief campaign period.

Machines Planned

Loughridge disclosed that election machines will be used in the voting, but the use of the machines depends upon the number of students enrolled at the college. The election proceedure will be much the same as that used in previous semester, Loughridge said.

"Due to conditions created by the war, it is probable that some student activities may be curtailed to a certain extent," Loughridge intimated. "Everything will be done to keep up student activities," he added, "and the election is one of the most important activities in our student life."

New Students Needed

Advices reaching The Guardsman report that unless student enrollments in the Spring are high enough, certain student activities will be done away with. The student body government and similar activities were those things which were threatened with dissolvement.

The second election facing at ban this semester is the sophomore sweetheart contest, but if the high sophomore class can reach an understanding on the issue the election may be run off in the remaining weeks of the present semester.

WSS To Conduct Book Sales Service Again

Women's Service Society members will re-open Room 103 on January 22 for the collection of student's books which are to be sold in the Spring semester, according to Margaret Abbett, club president.

The society will collect and sell unwanted textbooks for students, the money being paid to the seller in the next semester. The organization conducts the book service on a non-profit basis, depending upon volunteer members.

Books will be collected from January 22 until the end of the finals period, and the sales will begin the first day of the new semester.

College Group Would Name New Driveway After Cloud

A movement was under way this week by student administrators, headed by Bill Steenberg, to name the new driveway in the rear of the college after the President of San Francisco Junior College, Archibald J. Cloud.

"Cloud Circle" was the name suggested by the group under Steenberg, but approval of the measure depends upon the attitude of college officials.

Here's Latest Word On Status Of College Reserves, Draftees

The Navy is accepting enlistments in the V-1 program of college men who have not yet reached their eighteenth birthday. Seventeen year olds who are about to graduate from high school are also eligible for this program. Applicants should obtain all necessary papers, birth certificates, transcripts, and letters of recommendation. It is important that the candidate's family and given names are identical on all papers.

Navy enlistments are processed at 703 Market Street.

The Marine Corps is also encouraging seventeen year old men to enlist for Officer Candidates Class. High school students who are in their fourth year of academic work are likewise eligible for this special classification.

After February 15, students enlisted in the Enlisted Reserve Corps of the Army from this college may be subject to call. Candidates will be assigned to camps for basic training and will thereafter be quartered at selected colleges for the completion of specialized officer candidate programs.

The United States Army Air Corps invites Reservists and students subject to call by the Selective Service Boards to present themselves at the Air Corps Recruiting offices for physical examination and classification tests. While enlistments are not open the prospective soldier will, upon induction, be assigned to the Air Corps if he has successfully passed these tests.

Students who are subject to the draft, as well as high school seniors about to be so classified, who are not interested in the Air Corps of the Army, are encouraged to avail themselves of the special four-week Pre-Induction Training Programes that will be inaugurated at this college next semester.

Dance Time

High Sophomore Class Will Hold Semi-Annual Formal At Drake Hotel January 16

Culminating a two year period of activities at the college, the high sophomore class and their guests will celebrate at the sophomore formal at the Sir Francis Drake Hotel January 16.

The Empire and French rooms of the Drake Hotel will be the scene of the formal. Noel Thomas and his orchestra have been selected to furnish the music for the dance. Thomas is well known in the bay area, having played for several dances at neighboring colleges.

Bids On Sale

Bids for the affair may be purchased at the college bank for $1.50; they will also be on sale at the door on the evening of the dance.

Bob Ervin, sophomore class president, warned that admission will be by couples only, no stags being admitted. Following a precedent set down several semesters past, the wearing of corsages also will be banned.

Queen Undecided

If a sophomore queen is elected prior to the dance, she will be presented the evening of the affair, but class officials declined to offer any statement upon the queen election, which has ordinarily been a part of sophomore week at the college.

AWS

Tea Will Honor S. F. Graduates

Members of the Associated Women Students will honor senior women from San Francisco high schools at a tea to be held at the college Tuesday, according to Ernestine Cervelli, AWS president.

The high school women honored by the AWS are those who have signified their intentions of entering the college in the Spring semester, Miss Cervelli said. College women will usher the visiting seniors through the college.

Assistants Named

Assisting Miss Cervelli at the tea will be her staff of officers: Geraldine Fitzgerald, Phyllis Stanley, and Betty Dahlberg.

Other women students appointed to serve on the tea committee are Lucille Landresse, Jane Johnston, Dorothy Hogan, Betty Vivaldi, Frances Glicksman, Geraldine Keepfe, Helen Custer and Margaret Abbett.

Beta Tau Stages Dance At Sigmund Stern Tomorrow

Beta Tau fraternity will stage its Winter Informal dance tomorrow night at Sigmund Stern Grove, but "it will be more than a dance," according to Beta Tau officers.

Bids are 75 cents and may be purchased today from fraternity officers who will be stationed at both the student body and Guardsman offices. Attached to each program will be a 25 cent U. S. War Savings Stamp.

Dancing will be "off the record" from 9 until midnight. During the evening, a buffet supper will be served the guests.

War Spirit

Welfare Committee Leads Second Bond Drive Here. Mammoth Rally Will Spark New College Campaign

With all preliminary arrangements in order, the college Welfare Committee today disclosed plans for a mammoth rally to promote the forthcoming campus war bond drive.

The bond drive, closely paralleling the drive of last semester, is scheduled to open Monday, January 11, continuing through January 22. Emmett Hein, Welfare group president, will head the local drive.

Mammoth Rally

A mammoth college rally, to be held in the Mens' gym on January 22, will feature entertainers from the principal night clubs and theaters of San Francisco, according to Hein. Citing possible candidates for the role of master of ceremonies, Hein disclosed that measures are being taken by his committee to secure either Tommy Harris of the Mutual Broadcasting Company, or Ira Blue of the Columbia Broadcasting network. The rally is under the direction of Nick Barbarotto of the Rally Commission.

In the course of the two week bond drive, members of the Womens' Service Society will operate a booth in the main college corridor, selling stamps and bonds. The college bank will also have bonds on sale at their office window.

Bond Sale Chart

Hein disclosed that a thermometer, similar to the one used in the last campaign, will be erected to show the daily progress of the bond sales.

Although the current drive will be limited to a two week period, Welfare Committee members said that they would strive to surpass the $14,000 mark set last semester.

Officer In Program

It was rumored throughout the college that Bill Steenberg, student body prexy, and Lucille Landresse, student social chairman, would bestow kisses upon the women or men students that purchase $18.75 bonds. Steenberg and Miss Landresse could not be located to confirm the rumor, but usually reliable sources indicated that the two student leaders would conform with the ruling.

Hein added that the man or woman that purchased the highest denomination bond in the local drive would be given a free bid to the high sophomore formal, slated for January 16.

Faculty

Parker, Agosti Called By Navy

Called into active service by the United States Navy, Dr. Alfred Agosti and Dr. Robert Parker, left San Francisco last week to report for duty at eastern naval bases.

Agosti, a veteran of World War I, was assigned to the Navy Pre-Flight School at Athens, Georgia. Dr. Agosti was instructor of physics here at the college since its organization in 1935. He now holds the rank of Lieutenant, Senior Grade, in the Naval Reserve.

Robert J. Parker

Parker To Carolina

Parker is scheduled to report at the Chapel Hill, North Carolina Naval Base, where he will take up basic training. He has been commissioned a lieutenant (j.g.), and expects to be assigned to the teaching staff of a western pre-flight school upon the completion of his officer school program.

Thomas J. Bass, instructor in mathematics, has received orders to report on January 23 to the Naval Air Station at Coral Gables, Florida. Bass, a lieutenant (j.g.), may also be assigned to cadet instruction.

Veterans Here

Both Bass and Parker have been with the college since its institution, eight years ago.

Also awaiting orders to report for training are instructors Louis Berman and Beverly Pasqualetti. Dr. Berman, college astronomer will be commissioned lieutenant while Pasqualetti is a candidate for the rank of Ensign.

Service Flag Given Okeh By Ex-Council

Appropriations for two service flags for the college were passed unanimously by the Executive Council at their last regular meeting. The contract for the banners has been given to the Paramount Flag Company of San Francisco.

The two flags, one for the faculty and one for the student body, will be ready for display sometime this month, according to advices from Executive Council members. The faculty service flag will have a star for each instructor in the service, while the student body flag will have a star representing a certain number of college service men.

Lucille Landresse, social chairman, first introduced the resolution asking for some means of acknowledging the men from the college in the service.

CAPITAL to CAMPUS

ACP's Jay Richter Reports from Washington

AFTER IT'S OVER

WASHINGTON—(ACP)—As colleges and universities lose their young men to the services at an ever-increasing rate, more and more attention is being directed at post-war educational opportunities for those who will be veterans of World War II.

After the last war, the government financed the education and vocational training of only those veterans who suffered injury during the war. This time the government's intentions appear to be much broader.

When he recently appointed a committee to study the problem, the president said nothing about wound-stripe pre-requisites for the post-war education of veterans-to-be. He also referred to the educational policy of the last post-war period as "provisional, thus indicating he thought it quite inadequate.

He said that the plan this time should "enable the young men whose education has been interrupted to resume their schooling and afford equal opportunity for the training and education of other young men of ability . . ."

That approach gives many enlightened educators reason to hope that the war's aftermath will bring a revitalized educational system, with selection of students based on ability rather than economic privilege.

At any rate, it gives college students going into the army some hope that there will be a concrete freedom awaiting them at the end of "the road back."

Already, the "President's Committee on Post-War Education of students," as it is officially called, is wrangling about details of the program—which is a good sign. It indicates that there is something in the wind worth arguing about, and that the committee is active.

Points at issue appear to be the question of how the plan shall be financed, how long it shall be under the jurisdiction of the army, and then whether its administration should be under the Veterans Administration, the Office of Education, or some new government agency set up for the purpose.

Details of how college credits earned in pre-war days shall be applied to a student-veteran's record when he returns to school, have been worked out by the American Council of Education here in Washington.

Members of the President's Committee on Post-War Education of Students are: Brigadier-General Frederick H. Osborn, the chairman, who heads the Division of Special Services, War Department; Dr. Y. B. Smith, Dean of the Columbia University Law School, New York City; Dr. Dexter M. Keezer of Reed College, Portland, Oregon, who is at present with the Office of Price Administration in Washington, and Dr. R. C. Harris, president of Tulane University, New Orleans.

Although these are the members of the committee, the man to write if you want some special information about the group's work is Colonel Francis T. Spaulding, Chief, Educational Branch, Division of Special Services, War Department, Room 2-C 557, Pentagon Building, Washington.

For information on how credits earned prior to the war will be applied to your account when the war is over, write Dr. Francis J. Brown, American Council of Education, Washington.

And, incidentally, the committee on post-war education is working closely with the National Resources Planning Board, the government's superstructure for study of post-war problems.

Pre-Induction

Army Training In Curriculum Next Semester

With the opening of the Spring Semester, February 8, the college will inaugurate a special program for Pre-Induction Training designed to fit the prospective draftee for the specialized services, according to Louis G. Conlan, coordinator.

Courses will be organized on a four weeks basis and will demand intensive study. A student may enroll for four, eight, twelve or sixteen weeks of work, according to the time the student has available before induction.

Trained Men Needed

"The Armed Forces need trained men," Conlan said, "and the student will be afforded the opportunity to serve himself as well as his country by preparing for technical positions in the services."

According to the army's Lt. General Brehon Somervell, the War Department recommends that schools and colleges become pre-induction training centers for the armed forces thereby leaving the army and navy free to concentrate on combat training. "Education is the backbone of the army," said Somervell, "and the job of the colleges in this total war is to educate the nation's manpower for war and the peace that follows."

Flight Course Needed

Pre-flight training will be included in the pre-induction curriculum. Courses in aircraft recognition, aerodynamics, math and physics will comprise the first unit. Since draftees can select the air forces by pre-induction examination and classification this program will undoubtedly meet a great demand.

Seamen will be afforded training in navigation, code, higher mathematics and physics. Pre-technical training will include blueprint reading, machine shop, drafting, electricity, welding and radio.

Bulletin Prepared

A special bulletin announcing the Pre-Induction Training Program is being prepared by the administration and will be off the press early next week, according to Conlan. Through this program the student will be able to qualify for the air corps; for ratings as quartermaster, machinist or mechanic, yeoman, photographer, pharmacists mate, signalman.

Training in map reading, military sketching, fundamentals of chemical warfare, first aid and field sanitation will also be available to enlisted reservists and draftees.

CAB

Advisory Board Nominations Open At Meeting Today

Nominations of future Club Advisory Board officers for the coming spring semester will be held today at 3:00 in Room 140, announces Dorothy Hogan, president.

"All club and organization representatives should make it a point to be present at this meeting and nominate the candidate they believe to be most capable of holding the office."

Officer Election Next

The election of the three officers will be held at the last meeting of the semester, the date of which has not been set. This term the officers were Miss Hogan, president; James Maddsen, vice-president, and Margaret Abbett, secretary-treasurer.

"The CAB is no small organization. It was organized to serve as a coordinating unit between the clubs in the college and the Associated Students organization. Nominations for officers should be made with this in mind and the representatives should make sure they attend today's meeting."

Requirements Cited

The one requirement for the three offices is that the nominee must have been a member of the board in good standing for one semester previous to his election.

Mammal Cast And Dissected By College Instructors

Through the courtesy of Ted Leatzow, manager of Bernstein's Fish Grotto, Kenneth Hobbs, college anatomy instructor, recently obtained a valuable laboratory specimen—a 300 pound porpoise.

The mammal has been dissected by Hobbs and Dr. Glenn Noble of the life science department. Before this was done the two instructors cast the young whale-in plaster of paris and from the cast will create a mounting for exhibit.

According to Hobbs, Leatzow guessed that the porpoise strayed away from its school into the Grotto fishermen's nets. Whatever may have happened the college has a desirable addition through Leatzow's generosity.

Radio

Students Invited To Witness KGO Tours, Programs

Radio Station KGO invites students of this college to attend two programs, "Sing With Your Favorite Band" and "Young Artists Contest." Tickets may be obtained from Flossita Badger, Room 200.

At 7:30 p.m. each Sunday night at Radio City, Taylor and O'Farrell Streets, followers of sweet and swing music bring their favorite record to the broadcast and sing to the accompaniment of the record. Prizes will be offered—a gold cup, and a chance to appear professionally on "Sonia's Party", popular KGO program. The broadcast of "Sing With Your Favorite Band" is aired at 9:00 p.m. each Sunday night, PWT.

The "Young Artists Program" is sponsored by the San Francisco Symphony League and is designed to uncover bay area talen. Winners of the Tuesday night auditions will be given an opportunity to appear with the Symphony Orchestra.

Business Dept. Makes Plea For 'Speed-Up'

Displaying an emphatic interest in the acceleration of business training, the college business division, with the aid of the advertising art department, has placed an arresting display in the central showease on the main floor corridor.

A series of eight cartoons showing the lines of activity in courses such as typing, shorthand, filing, retail merchandising, office machines, insurance, business English, accounting, and business mathematics feature the card's central theme.

The presentation is the work of students enrolled in the advertising art department, directed by William Eckert, in cooperation with Edward Larson, acting chairman of the business division.

Northwestern University is one of the most recent to adopt a program of compulsory physical education for all male undergraduates.

AMS Fights Finally Set; Cagers Lose Close Game

AT LONG LAST

Those boxing fans who have eagerly awaited the final decision on the date of the AMS-Intramural Boxing Show needn't wait any longer. Chief Tom Wilson and company, who are in complete charge of the affair, have finally set the carnival of fisticuffs for Monday night at 7:30.

Little do most students of the college know what a struggle it was to get this semester's fights under way. Not even Wilson and his staff knew definitely when they would be staged until after the Christmas vacation. In fact, every time we got in touch with Wilson for information, we received an answer that left us knowing less than we knew before.

For example, there was the time when we thought the fights were positively scheduled for December 7. After talking to Wilson, we didn't know whether they would be held on the seventh, the eighth, sometime in January, or not at all.

Wilson, however, shouldn't be blamed entirely for the delay in getting the pugilists started. He had high hopes of holding the fights on the celebrated day of December 7, an ideal time since that would have marked the first anniversary of Japan's treacherous attack on Pearl Harbor. It also would have served as an example of what America was doing in preparing its college men for their crack at the slant eyed Sons of . . Heaven.

But when the time came for Wilson to make final preparations, he found himself with only three men signed up to fight. The best he could get out of this quota was one contest and a referee, hardly worth the trouble of putting the thing on at all.

On the other hand, we believe Wilson should receive credit for the work he has done. Being coach of the Ram basketball team, he has had to devote most of his time to that department. Scheduling games, attending practice sessions, working out plays, and getting his players in condition were only part of the duties which he had to couple with staging the boxing carnival.

Finalists will be decided this afternoon, and Monday night promises to repeat the many thrills which accompanied last semester's contests. So for those sadistic and blood-thirsty students or for those who crave action, we suggest a trip to the men's gymnasium on January 11 at 7:30 p.m.

CAGERS DROP TWO

With the aroma of basketball already in the air, the Rams have yet to get a whiff of victory, although the result of yesterday's game against the Stockton Motor Base was too late for The Guardsman deadline.

In its first two encounters, the Red and White of the college dropped decisions of 43 to 21 and 39 to 38 to the Olympic Club and the San Francisco Junior Varsity, respectively. But even in defeat, the Rams looked as though they could develop into a strong outfit with a little more practice.

Coach Wilson was pleased with the showing his cagers put on and expects the squad to reach its peak before its scheduled games with the various junior colleges. Having nearly a veteran team to work with, it wouldn't surprise us if Wilson finished the season losing only the aforementioned two games.

A schedule of the Rams' remaining games will be found elsewhere on this page.

Basketball

Squad Dwindles To Twenty Five; Terry With Army

With the war calling many of the men of the college, Coach Tom Wilson is becoming exceedingly alarmed at the loss from his squad this semester as the basketball season rolls around.

A total of 62 men greeted Coach Wilson for the first signups, but now the team has dropped to a mere 25, including the junior varsity. If this decline in personnel continues, the varsity basketball will just be able to have one whole team on the floor and that's all.

Terry Out

Along with the loss of Captain Mel Dropo, Wilson was greeted with the news that Jack Terry, runner-up

Scoring shortly after the second half had begun, the Psi Lambda Phis eked out a 6 to 0 win over the bewildered Bears this week to be crowned this semester's intramural six man, touch tackle football champs.

scorer in the conference last season, will not be able to play any more. He has been called by Uncle Sam.

With the loss of Terry goes Coach Wilson's mainspring in the varsity quintet. Only Alex Adorador and Ray Sulprizio remain of the first string from last year's five. Returning men who have had experience on the varsity already are Frank Isola, Norman Scheu, Ed Lapuyade and Homer Winter.

Rams Lose Two

Two practice games have been played already with the varsity losing to a strong Olympic Club 43-21, and just being nosed out by the U.S.F. junior varsity 39-38 in a thriller.

"The Santa Rosa, Marin, and Menlo games are tentative but they are the ones who wrote for the games, and I answered, so everything should be O.K.," Coach Wilson said.

Tuesday night the varsity will play the Coast Guard from the San Francisco Base with the tip-off at 8:15, and the junior varsity playing St. Anthony's Club in the 7:00 curtain raiser. Both games will be played in the men's gymnasium.

Semi-Annual Carnival In Men's Gymnasium Monday Night; One Champ Returns

Postponed once because of a mild department mixup, the semi-annual Associated Men Students-Intramural Boxing Carnival will make its "so-called debut" Monday night, January 11, in the men's gymnasium.

The first bout will get under way at 7:30 o'clock sharp.

Preliminary bouts in all divisions were held this week, but the names of the final contestants will probably be known after 3 p.m. today. The following is a list of participants in all divisions. (Finalists will be denoted in bold face type).

Heavyweight—Al Cardinellini, Al Morris, and Roy Mangini.

175 pounds—Jack Cedarlund vs. Jack Hahemeyer.

170 pounds—Bob Trouse vs. Gordon Cartwright.

160 pounds—Bob Walkotte, George Ferrebeuf, and Herb Levy.

WINS STRUGGLE—That's exactly what Tom Wilson will have accomplished Monday night when he presents the semi-annual AMS Boxing Show. Besides coaching his basketball squad, Wilson coupled his duties with the staging of the gala event.

155 pounds—Aldo Bindi, Dave Schenderlein, and Knox Kirkland.

150 pounds—Don Amsbaugh vs. Bob Thorsen.

145 pounds — Bill Winter, Bob White, and Jack Wilson.

140 pounds—Bob Hemsted, Billy Steenberg, and Ray Mainero.

135 pounds—Jimmy Lee, Angelo Anzueto, and Bill Kurz.

Feature May Be Added

There is a tentative possibility that the intermission will present several St. Mary's Pre-Flight cadets demonstrating the latest Commando attack tactics, according to Tom Wilson, sponsor of the AMS.

Medals will be presented following the end of each bout—gold medals for the winners, silver medals for the losers.

Champion Returns

Only returning champion from last semester will be Bill Steenberg, although Jack Cedarlund in the 175 pound class, and Al Morris in the heavyweight bracket reached the finals in Spring, 1942.

At that time Morris fought as a middleweight, while Steenberg participated as a 135 pounder. The blond Associated Student Body President will attempt to add the 140 pound crown to his laurels Monday night, and Morris will be after the title vacated by Jim McGown.

Intramural

Badminton Tourney Enters Second Week

Thirteen men have survived the first round in the college's semi-annual badminton tournament. Threatened by the disheartened "show up" of contestants, intramural director Jack Brady, this week, announced that second round matches must be completed before Wednesday, January 13.

Enthusiasm Lacking

Commenting on intramural sports in general, and the possible expansion of the present intramural program for next semester, Brady exclaimed "that intramurals will be better next semester, if not bigger."

Because of a lack of interest, according to Brady, many scheduled tournaments may be cancelled this semester. These tournaments may include table tennis, tennis, swimming, softball, and horse shoes. Table tennis, however, with a total of nine men entered already, is the best bet to be started shortly, according to Brady.

Course Purchase Okehed

A noteworthy tinge of gratitude was expressed by the physical education department this week when the Board of Education stamped their approval on the construction of an obstacle race course, similar to the track constructed at the U. S. Navy Pre-Flight School at St. Mary's College, in Moraga.

Women's Athletics

Frances Weisner, New President, Announces Schedule Of War-Time Activities For Co-eds

"Emphasis will be placed on a complete 'schedule of war-time activity' for the women of the college next semester," Frances Weisner, newly-elected president of the Women's Athletic Association, explained this week. "We are fortunate that we are able to finish college and should show our appreciation by full participation in all college activities,' she added.

The first meeting of the WAA was held on Tuesday, January 5, 1943, at which time plans were laid for the new year. "This meeting was the best attended of all those that have been held this semester," commented Lorraine Johnson, outgoing president.

Awards Given

Miss Johnson also announced that the awards for all those participating in WAA sports have been given to all women except the Freshmen who will receive them next semester.

The following are the new officers for the coming semester:

President, Frances Weisner; vice-president, Dorothy Fairbanks; secretary, Virginia Hanlon; treasurer, Virginia Stone.

The newly-appointed managers for the different clubs are: Archery, Elizabeth Leong; Basketball, Virginia Bell; Tennis, Marguerite Martin; and Badminton, Margaret Umger.

Club Holds Tournament

"The Tennis Club have had interclass tournaments but have not played with an outside club," announced Marguerite Martin, manager.

The Badminton Club had a meet with the badminton club from Balboa. "The players enjoyed themselves to such an extent that it is hoped that we will meet them again in the near future," Chris Anonos, the outgoing manager of the club, remarked.

Jacare, Killer of the Amazon

We were of the opinion that only Frank Buck could sojourn in the untamed jungle, pictorially record his trek, and "bring 'em back alive." We are happy to report that in Jacare, currently at the Larkin Theater, a strapping six-footer from Texas, Jim Dannaldson, is the unscathed hero . . . not Buck.

Several years ago, an expedition was made into the heart of the Amazon jungles. The purpose of this journey, besides capturing seemingly harmless animals, was to record a picture featuring Jacare, the killer of the Amazon, in his habitat. In case you are wondering who Jacare is, let us say now that Jacare is a slithering mass of a murderous crocodile.

Not that it mattered much, but a 28 foot anaconda all but liquidates Dannaldson, who was rescued quite daringly by his jungle companion Miguel Rijinsky. According to Buck, who did a running commentary, Dannaldson is one of the few men who have been in the coils of an anaconda and lived to tell the tale.

Jacare is an educational film. It teaches men the value of their superior knowledge in overcoming the physical elements of a maze of jungle. Films of this caliber are not subjected to high class photography; they are real and as authentic as the Amazon.

With the cooperation of the Brazilian government, the party of photographers and hunters arrived at Belem preparatory to traveling inland. When your reporter and the happy-minded 18 souls who witnessed this week's performance had carefully snuggled in their seats, birds, animals, and reptiles—natives of the Amazon forests—crept into view. And like all innocent creatures in all Buck films . . . they were captured!

It's quite an experience to watch a parade of "reincarnated animal crackers" take the play away from a six-foot 1A jungle hero, but such is the case in Jacare.

Buck himself appears in the film's prologue, but Dannaldson and Rijinsky take turns sharing the spotlight throughout the safari. Miklos Rosza, the musical director who scored so brilliantly with The Thief of Bagdad, and Four Feathers, does a splendid job with the background music of Jacare. And since the picture was filmed in Brazil, the music has a Latin-American flavor—the good neighbor policy, you know.

In times like these, perhaps it would do us all some good if we had a chance to see what real killers look like in their native duplexes. The scenery, you'll find, is amazingly different from the tameful shrubbery in the city park—and wild life still seems to be indestructible. It's been 12 years since Buck made Bring 'em Back Alive and there is hardly a flaw in Buck's typically thrill-fested epic of the uncharted.

Supporting the current Larkin bill is a short subject (Paramount) dedicated to the men and women of Lidice, in what was once Czecho-Slovakia. Ellen Drew, Barry Sullivan, and Lionel Royce participate in the dedication ceremonies, but the effect is superficial, so don't worry about it.

Students' Poetry

Literary Contributions Subject Of Forum Club Meeting Tonight

Discussion of the students' contributions of poetry to the Forum Magazine will be the topic of conversation at tonight's Forum Club meeting, at 2647 Buchanan Street, starting at 8 o'clock, according to Dorothy Mercer, group adviser.

With the departure of Conrad March into the armed service, Winifred Graber has been appointed chairman "pro tem" of the organization. Her post will terminate at the end of the semester.

The purpose of tonight's meeting is to intercest the students of the college in writing for the Forum Magazine. Edited by student members of the organization, the magazine is intended to represent the students' contributions of English literature.

Students are asked to submit excerpts of poetry written by either the student himself or by "a competent, well known poet." These excerpts are to be submitted to Miss Mercer in Room 185, or to John Gerstung in Room 237.

Rhodes Urges State Guard Men In Uniform Each Week

All men of Company H, First Regiment, California State Guard must appear in uniform each Tuesday and Thursday at 11 o'clock at the men's gym, according to Lt. Ray Rhodes, student military leader.

The State Guard group, formed several weeks ago at the college, will still take applicants for the force, and it is expected that the group will continue in the Spring semester.

Meat Rationing Next On List

Based upon records of past business, the college eafeteria will operate for the remainder of the semester "as usual," until further advice is received from the local rationing board, Hilda Watson, head of the hotel and restaurant management division, disclosed this week.

"At the present time we have been advised that we will be called upon to supply detailed information to our rationing board for consideration of our future needs." Mrs. Watson declared.

Rationing for this month will include such foodstuffs as coffee, butter, sugar, poultry, meats, canned and dried vegetables, and fruits. The records of past sales will also determine the allowance of candies and ice cream to be received by the cafeteria Mrs. Watson said.

BOND RALLY TODAY AT EL REY

Rosenbloom And Celebrities To Star In Bond Drive Here With Headline Entertainers

Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom, Jackie Gleason, and Izzy Gomez are a few of the entertainers who will open the second bond drive at the El Rey Theater in a rally today at 3 o'clock.

Bill Baldwin, special events man for the Blue Network, will appear at the rally in the role of master of ceremonies, assisting Rally Commissioner Nick Barbarotto. The Rhythm Dukes, a colored novelty band, formerly employed at Jack's Tavern in San Francisco, will provide the music for the affair.

Scheduled for the mens' gymnasium this afternoon, the rally may be switched to the El Rey Theatre, if last minute plans materialize, according to Barbarotto.

Two Week Campaign

The rally will officially start a two week bond and stamp campaign here and is scheduled to end prior to the final examination program.

The Welfare Committee, under the chairmanship of Emmett Hein, will conduct the bond drive during the two week period in the college. The committee has indicated that bond booths, will be erected in the college hallways to sell stamps and bonds to student purchasers.

WSS Operates Booth

In the course of the two week drive, the Women's Service Society will conduct the sales conducted at the booths, while the student bank will be an official salesroom.

A giant thermometer, similar to the one used in the last campaign, will be built by the Welfare Group. The purpose of the sign will be to indicate daily and weekly sales to student buyers.

Record Sales Marked

Even though the current drive will be limited to a two week drive, student officials indicated that they hope to surpass the $14,000 sales mark set last semester. An intensive campaign for the bond and stamp drive has been mapped by the Welfare Committee, and will be unfolded in the succeeding days of the campus drive.

Satisfaction with the drive was voiced by various faculty leaders, who pointed out that the college's rank in the drives conducted by the San Francisco School Department was extremely low. The drive now underway, they pointed out, may raise the place of the college in city buying.

Registrar

New Plan For Next Semester's Sign-Up And Registration

An entirely new registration procedure will be inaugurated this spring, according to an announcement made today by Dr. J. Paul Mohr, college registrar. "The change is made necessary by the demands which the war is making upon our students and our facilities," said Dr. Mohr, "and we are desirous of eliminating the inefficiency of our past procedure."

A calendar for the Spring Registration of new and old students is announced in the adjoining column.

Courses Listed

Instead of publishing a schedule and directory of courses complete with hours of classes by days the Registrar will issue a mimeographed list of courses to be offered. This list will be tentative. Old students will consult their advisers and select the program of their preference from this list of courses. The final schedule of courses to be offered will be made up from the preferences indicated by the students who plan to enroll for the spring semester.

Students are expected to consult their advisers between now and February 4. Since the schedule of final examinations is particularly light on February 1, 2 and 3, advisers will hold office hours on those days to facilitate the election of spring programs.

Hours Regulated

Between February 4 and 8 the schedule of days and hours will be drawn up. Considered in the schedule will be the student's working hours, time for commuting, and other exigencies. The class hours will then be entered on each student's program.

On February 9 returning students will complete their registration. On that day they will obtain their grades for the Fall semester and Spring programs from their advisers. Final adjustments in subjects and hours will be made at that time. Classes will begin on February 10 at 8:15 a.m.

The procedure is similar in some ways to that followed for the 1942 Summer Session. If only those courses are offered which the returning students demand it will be possible to meet the needs of the greatest number of students most efficiently, according to Mohr.

New Adviser List

Dr. Edward H. Redford, Guidance Director, has announced a new list of advisers for the spring semester. Students should be careful to arrange for an appointment with the proper adviser in order that the best possible program may be arranged. It is expected that each student will plan to fulfil the required courses in his major and make a selection of alternative courses for his electives.

Spring Registration Calendar

Monday, February 1	New Students: Entrance Tests *Old Students: Finals (10 o'clock TTh Classes)
Tuesday, February 2	New Students: Entrance Tests Old Students: Finals (8 o'clock TTh Classes) (3 o'clock MWF and daily Classes)

Note: Old students are expected to see their advisers by appointment between January 18 and February 4.

Dance Time

Sophomore Class Celebrates Annual Dance At Drake Hotel Saturday Nite

Concluding the present semester of activities during their two year stay at this college, the high sophomore class will stage its Sophomore Formal tomorrow night at the Sir Francis Drake Hotel, from 9 to 1 o'clock, in the Empire and French Rooms.

Bids are $1.50 per couple and may be purchased today at the college bank, Room 188, or from any member of the college Executive Council. Music for tomorrow night's Formal will be furnished by Noel Thomas and his orchestra.

Dress will be "strictly formal," according to Bob Ervin, high sophomore president and chairman of the Formal committee. Men are requested to wear tuxedos, and women are urged to wear formal evening gowns. It was announced this week that the "no corsage" rule will be officially dropped.

Warning has been issued from the Formal committee that positively "no stags" will be admitted. Admission will be by couples only, according to Ervin.

Social Study Class To See Federal Documentary Film

"The Land" a four reel documentary film will be shown for the students enrolled in Social Science 1 on next Tuesday, January 19. The picture will be screened in Room 136 at the eleven o'clock hour. In addition to those regularly enrolled for credit interested faculty and students are cordially invited, according to Lloyd D. Luckmann, instructor-in-charge.

This meeting of the course "Winning the War" will mark the sixteenth and final session of the group. Included in the weekly programs have been six guest speakers and eight speakers from the faculty of the college. The only other documentary film to be shown was "Our Neighbors Down the Road", issued by the cultural relations section of the Department of State.

College Drama Group Plans Spring Program

"The Very Light Brigade," a comedy in three acts, is now being cast for spring production, according to Ruth Somers, college drama instructor. Students interested in Little Theatre are urged to consult with Mrs. Somers in her office, Room 258, before the spring semester opening. Participants will be enrolled in Speech 42a, Acting, and will earn three units of college credit.

Present plans for enlarging the facilities of the Speech department include the equipment of a classroom with a stage, hangings and lighting. "This of course depends upon the interest demonstrated by the student body," cautioned Miss Somers.

Cast of characters for the coming play includes seven men and six women. The play is current and timely, taking as its theme Civilian Defense activities in a background of young people.

With this issue, The Guardsman will suspend publication until the spring semester. Since the final examinations are forthcoming, Guardsman editors deemed the suspension advisable. The first issue of the Spring semester will appear during Orientation Week.

Elections

Man, Woman Named To Elective Post

Although the student body elections have been postponed until the spring semester, the election committee today announced a partial list of its committee members.

Headed by Charles Loughridge, chairman, the committee will include Mary Cummings and Bill Solomon. The naming of Miss Cummings and Solomon to the election board does not complete the membership, however, in that several more students are needed to fill the other vacancies. Loughridge declared that any student desiring to serve on the committee should contact him at the student body office.

There were no indications today of any candidates who might have intentions to run for office, but Loughridge indicated that he expected a heavy tournout of candidates in the spring elections.

Participants in the election will campaign during the first week of the new semester, the election being held possibly in the second week.

Postponement of the election, usually held at the latter part of this semester, was due principally to the uncertainty of the incoming student body. If the enrollment merits a student government, Loughridge said, the election will be conducted in the same manner as previous years.

A Cappella Choir In Fall Review For Student Body

The regular semester concert for students and faculty will be given by the A Cappella Choir at eleven o'clock in Room 100 on Thursday, January 21, according to Flossita Badger, director of the choir and chairman of the music department.

The final program for the concert has not yet been announced. The group will answer requests for several of its more popular numbers and will feature a group of marching songs.

A patriotic and military note will predominate the program, according to Miss Badger. The instrumental numbers featured on previous programs will probably not be announced this semester due to the limitation of facilities.

Walter Forbes To Act As Knife Collection Agent

Answering the request made by the armed forces for the donation by civilians of knives, machetes, sabers and swords, Walter C. Forbes, college chemistry instructor, has volunteered to act as campus collection agent.

"Our land forces in the Pacific area need these weapons," said Forbes, "and we should be willing to turn in any relics or excess tools to help them."

Hunting knives, butcher knives, in fact any instrument that can be salvaged will be welcomed for this collection. Turn in your donations to Forbes in Room 124.

President's Message

Victory Or Defeat

IN his address to the seventy-eighth Congress, the President of the United States issued a plea for "unity and personal confidence," but . . . he also emphasized the utter futility and horror of war in the years to come if the future peace is not a DECENT AND DURABLE ONE.

The President's main points in his address were:

American production is increasing beyond totaled Axis production.

Despite the many discomfitures, agricultural production is ALSO increasing. And there is a steady growth of patriotism rendered by the American men and women.

The President has asked for a complete victory!

This IS NOT exactly a futile goal, but it is a tough job to say the least. Everyone of us in this college should realize our present situation. Our part in the victory will be a small one. Our deeds will be overlooked. Our names and our theories will be slighted from the record books.

This should not hinder our attempts to comply with the President's plea. We are faced with taxation, deprivation, shortages, the selective service, and minor prohibitions.

We call our country a democracy and we call our people patriotic. Now we are faced by a crisis in a crucial moment of world history. We are beset by two objective—VICTORY or DEFEAT!

We should accept our present plight, not in contempt or disdain, but as a signal to the enemy—a go-head signal toward winning a war. Americans are a fighting people. We SHALL NOT—rather we can not—TURN BACK!

Hooray For A Path; Cloud Circle Named

• No More Blisters

Editor, The Guardsman:

At last the hike down to the gyms is not the drudgery it used to be! The improvements of the newly-paved road and the stairs make the trip much easier and more pleasant. This winter we will not suffer the ordeal of wading through thick mud to reach the gym.

These improvements also add to the appearance of the college.

Credit should be given the college for finally repairing the dirt path that used to be the only lane of transportation from the main building to the gyms.

Grateful Student

• Cloud Honored

Editor, The Guardsman:

In your columns of last week, I noticed an article which announced that a movement is underway to name the new driveway after our college president. Whoever thought of the idea is to commended, for I know of no other man so deserving of praise for work well done at the college. President Archibald J. Cloud has given this college much spirit in his reign here, and with our naming the drive after this man his memory will linger on for years to come.

Junior College Student

CAPITAL to CAMPUS
ACP's Jay Richter Reports from Washington

That murky crystal ball.

(An Associated Press story dated at Washington January 11 announces that "a statement will be issued by next Monday (January 18) on the utilization of colleges for training men for military, industrial and other essential needs.)

Latest word on the status of students in reserve programs and those subject to Selective Service comes from Robert Gordon Sproul, President of the University of California. In a communication to the DAILY CALIFORNIAN last week Sproul, who had just returned from the nation's capital, announced that another postponement in the call for reservists could be anticipated and that some clarification of occupational deferments was available. Reservists who have been successful in their studies should be eligible for the first opportunities for advancement when they join the army, he said.

The statement issued by the Navy on December 17 has not been changed, Sproul pointed out. According to that order Navy Reserves were not to be called until they had completed from six to eight terms of college work, i.e., from 2 to 2 2/3 years after matriculation under the accelerated program. Army pre-medical and junior engineering students will remain on inactive status until the end of the spring term.

Sproul further stated that the order calling all other ERC men to active status in February will probably be modified to call Sophomores and Freshmen about May 15, 1943. However, students who are members of the Army Air Corps Enlisted Reserve may be called to training at any time.

The War Manpower Commission has approved occupational deferment to the end of the spring term for all pre-medical, pre-dental and all students in engineering, and preveterinary students, who have completed one semester or its equivalent and who rank in the upper one-half of the Freshman class of the college. In the following classifications students must be within two years of the completion of their curricular to gain deferment: majors in astronomy, bacteriology, chemistry, geophysics, mathematics, meteorology, naval architecture, physics or psychology.

President Sproul added that coeds too will probably be included in future plans for the army and navy for specialized training in preparation for service in the WAVES, WAACS, SPARS and in essential fields in industry.

All students, whether they are called to active duty from a Reserve Corps or through Selective Service, will upon completion of from 9 to 13 weeks of basic training in an army camp, be eligible for selection for the Army Specialized Training Program, in addition to the specialized training they have already had, according to Sproul. Those selected will receive uniforms, pay, board and lodging while they are being educated. Selection will follow the general plan of Officer Candidate Schools, supplemented by special tests and examinations, and will lean heavily on the indications of a student's college record to the date of his call to active duty. "So the good time boys," said Dr. Sproul, "who have decided that studies don't matter because they soon will be in the army where grades will be forgotten, are in for a rude awakening. I shed a tear for them now." Men in the Army Specialized Training Program may be furloughed to industrial establishments engaged in the production of material for the armed forces, as well as to those forces themselves.

For the high school graduate the prospect appears to be as follows: First, it looks as though all 18 year olds who are drafted will be eligible to take tests to determine whether they are to be assigned to colleges for training; Second, these men will probably be selected on the basis of their previous education, as well as for qualities of leadership, military ability and aptitude for more education.

Five hundred or so institutions will be selected by the government on the basis of geographical and educational and housing facilities. After their induction and basic training, Reservists and Selective Service recruits marked for further education will be sent to one of these colleges with the facilities for training in the specialized service to which the soldier is assigned. To facilitate this work a standard collegiate calendar for the whole country will probably be ordained.

As many as 250,000 men will be sent to colleges under this plan. The government will not take over any colleges to which service men will be sent for courses lasting from nine months to more than two years. Obviously this training program is based on the supposition of a long war.

• Krupa Band Arrives!

The ace skin-beater of the nation, Gene Krupa and his solid senders, are keeping the audiences at the Golden Gate Theater really "rockin' and sockin' " with joy.

His aggregation—including Ray Eberle, Roy Eldridge, and Penny Piper—is featured in a swing-fested stage show celebrating United Nations' Week. But back to Krupa!

Krupa Is Tops

There is no doubt in any jive fan's mind as to the ability of Krupa. The man is a master mind behind the skins—never an out-of-pace tempo and hardly enough solitude for 40 winks! Krupa is a sight to behold with a stick of gum in his mouth, perspiration on the forehead, and all with rhythmic frantic gestures.

The band comes up with several Krupa sensations, like Blue Ribbon Fantasy, with the maestro flailing away at the drums. Fans who visit the Gate this week are in store for both sweet and hot music, but they'll enjoy every bit of it.

Eberle Sings Well

Ray Eberle, late of the Glenn Miller ensemble, does fancy bit of warbling on At Last, When the Lights Go On Again, and There Are Such Things. Of course, the feminine gentry in the audience are supposed to swoon—and they do!

But the tonic for spring fever is the energetic sepia trumpeter, Roy Eldridge, the guy with the "Rochester" song appeal. He repeats a couple of favorites like C'mon, Baby, Knock Me a Kiss, and what is supposed to be a novelty tune, I Want a Big Fat Mama.

Piper Replaces O'Day

With the departure of alluring Anita O'Day, the maestro presents blonde Penny Piper, who does a takeoff on Mister Five By Five, but for our dough, we'll take Ella Mae Morse. Not that the Piper girl is bad, but she lacks that "back-in-the throat" sobbish voice of the Morse chanteuse.

Ho hum! The remainder of the Gate's stage bill is cluttered with, such people as Allan Carney, comedian; Paul Kirkland, juggler, and Jane Slater, tap dancer. Why, we don't know!

The current screen attraction is Seven Miles From Alcatraz, co-featuring James Craig and Bonita Granville.

Ethel Jones, Former Student, Writes Letter Telling Of Her Experiences In Women's Navy

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This letter written by Ethel Jones, former college student, who was recently inducted into the WAVES, and at present is stationed at Oklahoma A and M.)

Dear Miss Flournoy:

. . . "I'm enjoying myself thoroughly here. About 600 WAVES are quartered in a lovely dormitory (Willard Hall) on the campus of the Oklahoma A and M University. There are four to a room, two double decker beds—and the rooms are grand. We have a corner location, one window looking out over an expanse of lawn, now snow-covered, with two small lakes in the distance, and the other looking toward Cordell Hall where 400 sailors are quartered. In another dormitory we have a thousand Army Air Cadets. The boys are allowed to visit us each evening from 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. We can play games or dance.

Our study schedule is pretty rigorous. Our first class begins at 8:00 a.m. and our last is at 5:00 p.m. We cover subjects on Naval Personnel, Organization, Tradition, History, Correspondence, Naval Forms and Methods of Filing, Punctuation, etc. Also we have two hours daily of speed and accuracy building in typing. Last but not least, one hour daily of drill—which is learning to march—squad movements, flank movements, etc. Our particular favorite to get "Balled up" is the command "to the rear march".

From 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. is study period and we really have some long assignments. Taps is at 10:00 p.m.

Oh, I almost forgot! Reveille is at 6:00 a.m. I'm positively allergic to six in the morning. I may rise but I never shine until about two in the afternoon, at which time I feel like going to bed again.

Our training course is about four months. At that time we go out as Petty Officers, 3rd Class, Yeoman classification. They ask us our preference as to where we would like to be stationed, but of course, nothing is guaranteed.

Ethel Jones of the WAVES

You should hear the nautical expressions we have to use. Our dormitory is our ship, we live on the second deck, to leave the ship we request permission to go ashore and when we come back we report our return aboard.

I'll probably acquire a conglomeration of accents. We have all kinds here: deep South, Brooklyn, Boston, Western, etc. One of my room-mates is from Mississippi and now after three weeks I can finally understand her.

We get liberty every week-end from Saturday noon to Sunday evening at 7:30 p.m. We have to check in at 11:30 p.m., Saturday night, however. On liberty we "go to town", literally and figuratively. The sailors and soldiers are at liberty at the same hours so we really have lots of fun. The USO, American Legion and the churches have recreation halls open to us where we can do anything from reading to dancing. Then there are five movie houses, a roller-skating rink, two bowling alleys, and there are horses and bicycles to rent. Never a dull moment. At that our whoopee is pretty mild because Oklahoma is a strictly dry state.

We finally have our uniforms. Two navy blue suits, one navy blue overcoat, two hats (one with white crown, the other all navy), four pairs of lisle stockings, two pair of black laced oxfords, two pair of white gloves, a pair of black gloves, one shoulder strap purse, four light blue blouses, two navy blue and two black ties. We look pretty spiffy in our uniform (at least we think so). The Navy supplies all this of course.

Hope this letter gives you a general idea of Navy life. Give my regards to all the girls in the club.

Sincerely,
Ethel Jones

New Shirt Saves Sweet; Broad Jump Record Doomed

By Nick Barbarotto

SWEET OUTSTANDING

Although there were many commendable performances put on by the men in trunks in last Monday night's semi-annual AMS-intramural fights, we believe the work of Russ Sweet, erstwhile track and field coach of the college, stood out head and shoulders above all others.

"Remarkable Russ" proved that he has still retained most of the courage that made him such a great athlete in his younger days when he volunteered to step in the ring with Lieutenant (j.g.) Ab Young and play stooge while Lt. Young demonstrated the defensive and offensive tactics taught the cadets at St. Mary's Pre-Flight School. His part was strictly that of a stooge but his performance drew the applause of the crowd.

Sweet seemed to enjoy his work, too. We can recall the many times he came up with a smile after Lt. Young had applied an arm lock of some sort that all but yanked Sweet's arms from the new sport shirt he was wearing. And it was that new sport shirt that saved him from many an embarassing moment.

If Sweet had been wearing a sweat shirt or his daily gym equipment, or even an old sport shirt—we hate to think what might have happened. As it was Lt. Young had no desire to see the garment go to shreds, especially with the clothing situation of today. This was easily noticed when Lt. Young nearly forgot himself and had Sweet all but sailing through space.

He was demonstrating on how to defend an attack from the rear. Sweet took the part of the assailant, and came sneaking up on the ever-ready Lieutenant with both arms outstretched. The minute his arms tightened about the defender, Lt. Young pulled some sort of a "quickie", grabbed Sweet by the arm, and started to throw him on the mat via the old flying mare.

Perhaps Sweet still had the price tag pinned to his sleeve. At any rate, the Lieutenant spotted the new shirt and quickly coming to his senses—released the hold. In so doing he remarked, "we will not follow through with this demonstration, since Mr. Sweet is wearing a new shirt!"

Darn nice, we think! Darn nice!

OWENS' RECORD DOOMED

Jesse Owens, the great colored athelete of a few years back and holder of four world records in the various track and field events, is about to see one record fall by the wayside.

Both the 100 and 220 yard dashes seem safe for the present, as does his effort in the 220 yard low hurdles—but his broad Jump leap of 26 feet, 8 inches plus is doomed to fall in the very near future. In fact, Sunday—just two days hence—seems to be that day!

The feat will not be accomplished by some unknown, but by someone who has been the idol of young and old for many years. His heroic deeds have amazed the world time and time again, but this will be the first time that he has mingled with sports. Athletes, peering over his wonderful accomplishments of the past, shivered at the thought of him ever resolving to enter their field.

Their prayers were well answered, however, as he never once intruded in their affairs. But the great man has gotten himself into one of his usual predicaments with the only way out . . . the fate of Owens' record hinges on that escape.

The man of whom we speak is Flash Gordon! The same Flash Gordon who appears every Sunday morning in the colored section of The Examiner. Gordon is stranded on an island with a great gush of lava rushing on all sides of him, and his love, Dale Arden, just 30 feet away.

Only way out is to jump! And that's exactly what Flash decided to do. Toeing his mark, the great Gordon gave a terrific lunge and set out through space in last Sunday's edition. But the result of his effort must wait two more days, and Owens can sit back and rest until it comes through.

Of course, there is a possibility that he will fail but we are inclined to doubt that very much. In fact, we are willing to go as far as to give 100 to 1 odds that he does it. Place your bets, gents—but quick!

We'd suggest that the A.A.U. open its books sometime tomorrow and be ready to enter the new record. It also would be nice if our Russ Sweet could secure the services of someone like Mr. Gordon for next semester's track team.

But Mongo is so-o-o far away!

Rams Travel To Face Santa Rosa Wednesday; Trounce Stockton Motor Base By 75 to 27 Score

By Jimmy Lee

With five practice games already played, Coach Tom Wilson's casaba tossers open the mythical Junior College Conference basketball schedule Wednesday night against the Santa Rosa Bear Cubs at the Cubs home court, tipoff slated for 8:15.

Last season the Ram varsity split the two game series with the Cubs, the Red and White winning the first tilt, 53-48, while dropping the second contest, 33-48.

Rams Bounce Back

After losing two straight practice games, one to the strong Olympic Club 21-43 and the other to the USF junior varsity in a tight game 38-39, the Ram varsity came back and thoroughly trounced the Stockton Motor Ordnance Base 75-27. High point men for the night were Alex Adorador with 14, Frank Isola scoring 12, George Vogiotsis 10 points, and Jack Sibold also tanking 10 digits.

Everyone on the squad was thrown into the one-sided affair, as Coach Wilson tried to stem the tide of points against the Stocktonites, but the Rams just couldn't miss, and the points kept adding up.

Even the junior varsity, who had played the Balboa varsity in the curtain raiser, was thrown in to give the Motor Base a chance and Uncle Sam's boys did manage to score a few from then on.

Adorador Also Lost

Tom Wilson received some saddening news last week when Jack Terry turned in his suit. Instead of trotting onto the college court in the traditional red and white, Terry will now wear the draped khaki of the U.S. Army. Also to go in a few weeks will be Alex Adorador. Adorador was to have been one of Coach Wilson's mainstays on the varsity this year. He played last season, and although it was his first year in junior college competition, he proved to be a very dependable player.

Undoubtedly the five men that will make up the varsity from now on will be Frank Isola, George Vogiotsis, Ray Sulprizio, Ken Berridge, and Jack Sibold.

Corny Chatter

Curtain Call By Public Demand

By Bob Catudio

Didja ever wonder what the inside of The Guardsman office looks like? Confidentially, it ——!

Your reporter was all set to turn in a story about Russ Sweet, but it was thumbed down. "Too corny," was the reply, and we have a black and blue leg to prove it.

Our sports editor has told us—on the side—that we have the wit of a DeMaupassant, the charm of Shakespeare, and the intelligence of a Cyrano de Bergerac.

When we type a story, the "chief" stands by us and whispers sweet nothings in our ear. (Nothing is right!) His vocabulary is limited to just "Yes," and "No."

When he found out we were writing a sonnet about him, he grinned and his one tooth glistened in the sunshine. He offered us a bonus if we would write articles about him every day.

In his rationed zoot suit, the dapper sports editor is a man of action—especially if assigned copy is not submitted to him before deadline time.

This may be our last story for the duration. The jigger at the top says: Corny Chatter.

So why are you reading this?

Semester Summary Given At WAA Meet

By Dorothy Dean

Semester activities of the Women's Athletic Association were cited by Frances Weisner, newly installed president of the WAA, at a meeting held this week in the women's gymnasium. Club managers gave a summary of their respective clubs doings for the semester, at this the last meeting of the WAA for the term.

It was hinted through "official sources" that inter-collegiate playdays will be arranged with San Jose State College some time during the month of April, Miss Weisner said. This plan, however, may not be executed because of the current gasoline rationing act, and the difficulties arising from inadequate transportation.

"So far as we know," Bertha Keller stated, "our schedule calls for a playday to be held with San Francisco State College. No date has been set as yet.

Miss Keller also said that courses would be given in Game Technique and Camp Counciling next semester. "This will help our women students in leadership that is so important at these critical times and we, the staff, stand by to help, a councilation service," Miss Keller added.

The physical education department announces that all student absences from regular classes must be "made up" on or before Wednesday, January 20.

Badminton Finals Today; Intramurals Near Finish

Intramural competition will do a swan dive—but gracefully—today when the quarter-finals and finals of the current badminton tournament take place in the men's gymnasium.

In the doubles competition, Bill Steenberg and Jim Skinner won their way into the finals by defeating the combination of Ted Dykman-Dabster and Al Jaeger. Steenberg and Skinner will play the winner of the Richmond Sedley and George Davidson-Bob Catudio and Dick Anderson match.

Tourney favorite in the singles division is Sedley, but Gene Valdemi, the past season football guard, cannot be overlooked. The rugged footballer may be just the one to upset Sedley, according to several of the players who have lost out to Valdemi.

Boxing

AMS Show Proves Success As Eight Champs Crowned

Simon pure fisticuffs—the collegiate way—was unveiled this week when eight new champions were crowned at the college's thirteenth semi-annual Associated Men Students-intramural boxing carnival. Only one bout failed to last the distance.

Jack Cederlund, rangy 175-pounder, scored a technical knockout over Jack Habermeyer in one minute, seven seconds of the second round. Cederlund jolted the dazed Habermeyer with two solid rights to the jaw before referee Lt. (j.g.) Ab Young halted the bout.

Wild Affair

In what came as a surprising crowd pleaser, Jackie Wilson, wiry 145 pound boxer, decisioned Bill Winter. Both fighters were sent to the canvas, but the taller flailer—namely, Wilson—was given the nod.

Running completely true to form, Bob Hemsled all but kayoed Billy Steenberg to win the 140 pound title. Hemsted, the heavier of the two contestants, scored solidly with rights and lefts, but a game and willigg Steenberg held on to win the plaudits of the onlookers.

Morris Takes Title

In the heavyweight division, Al Morris, he of the terrific torso, decisioned Roy Mangini. Both fighters were off in their timing resulting in a tornado of wild blows struck by both men.

During the intermission, Lt. Young of the United States Naval Pre-Flight Training School at St. Mary's College gave an exhibition, with the aid of Russ Sweet, college track and field coach, of "hand to hand combat tactics currently used by the men of our fighting forces."

Results:

135 pounds—Jimmy Lee dec. Bill Kurz.

140 pounds—Bob Hemsted dec. Billy Steenberg.

145 pounds—Jackie Wilson dec. Bill Winter.

150 pounds—Bob Thorsen dec. Don Amsbaugh.

155 pounds—Knox Kirkland dec. Norman Nicolls.

160 pounds—George Ferreboeuf dec. Bob Walkotte.

170 pounds—Gordon Cartwright dec. Bob Trouse.

175 pounds—Jack Cederlund TK'd Jack Habermeyer, one minute, seven seconds of the second round.

Heavyweight—Al Morris dec. Roy Mangini.

Ram Five Soundly Trounced By S.F. Coast Guard 49-36

Completely outclassed in every department of play, the varsity cagers were soundly thumped by the San Francisco Coast Guard quintet this week, 49 to 36, in the men's gymnasium.

The Surf Riders took an early lead, forged steadily ahead leaving the half time count in their favor at 18 to 13.

Nick Zotovich, Surf Rider forward, chalked up 18 points for high point honors of the evening, closely followed by ex-Ram George Mossler with 12. Alex Adorador, veteran Ram forward, pumped home 10 points for the Red and White five.

Contribution

Rare Books Donated To Library By Michael Terzian, Ex-Student

As a gift to his Alma Mater, Michael Terzian, former college student who has just joined the Army Air Force, recently presented his collection of approximately 150 books to the college library.

Among the volumes received is a copy of "Inhale and Exhale" by William Saroyan, the well known writer. Saroyan, now with the armed forces, is a cousin of Terzian. The book contains a personal presentation.

The books embrace a variety of subjects including biographical, historical and literary works, a set of Robert Louis Stevenson, several valuable books by Leo Tolstoy and a set of the Complete Greek Grammar. A number of the books are strictly collector's items, very difficult if not impossible to secure.

Included in the new books recently added to the college library are nine volumes written by members of the faculty.

Five of these books, written by Louis Berman, astronomy instructor, are The Effect of Space Reddening on the Balmer Decrement in Planetary Nebulae, A Spectrophotometric Study of Certain Planetary Nebulae, The Spectrum Analysis of the Hot Carbon Star, 70 Ophuichi As a Triple System, and The Spectroscopic Orbit of the Fainter Component in the System.

Chemical Reactions, What Makes Them Go, by Milton J. Polissar, chemistry instructor, is also among the new additions as are three volumes by Robert J. Parker, history instructor. Parker's books are Western Hemisphere History, a guide used by the college students in history courses 28a and 28b, and two books on California, The Wreck of the Star of the West and Larkin's Monterey Customers and Larkin's Monterey Business.

Current Affairs

Contest To Be Held Here Next Semester

A prize contest sponsored by Time Magazine will be administered on this campus between January 18 and February 18. Students participating will be required to take the Current Affairs Test authored for Time Magazine by Dr. Alvin C. Eurich and Professor Elmo C. Wilson. Lloyd D. Luckmann, college instructor, is in charge of the contest on this campus.

The prize arrangement is that there will be one five dollar book of the winner's choice awarded for the highest Freshman, and another for the highest Sophomore. In lieu of a book, the winner may elect to receive a handsome world globe, with his name inscribed on a decorative seal.

The contest will probably be held shortly after the opening of the spring semester in the various social science classes, Luckmann said.

Bible Club Elects Spring Officers; Banquet Soon

Looking forward to a very active Spring semester, the Bible Club elected officers at the last meeting. The new officers are: Warren Johnson, president; Bernice Hayes, vice-president; Lorraine Johnson, secretary; Maurice Wolf, treasurer, and Darrell Hoyle, publicity chairman.

These new officers will be honored by a dinner in the very near future.

Part-Time Jobs Available With Motor Vehicle Dept.

The San Francisco office of the Division of Motor Vehicles, State of California, is making a definite appeal for help in solving the remendous clerical job involved in registering automobiles for the year 1943.

There are scores of clerks needed on a part-time basis to work in the early evening hours. eHre are the facts:

Type of Work: Junior Typist of Duplicating Machine Operator.

Hours: Night Crew—6:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m., five night per week; no Saturday employment.

Duration of Employment: Three month minimum.

Salaries: $47.50 per month.

Further information can be secured from Claude Silva, Room 155.

NYA Inaugurates New Pay Check Policy For Spring

Those students employed by the National Youth Administration are notified by Claude Silva, college placement and NYA director, that a new business policy has been inaugurated by the federal agency.

Heretofore, according to Silva, checks were available at the close of the time period. In the future the warrants will be mailed after the period has been closed and this should involve a delay of from seven to ten days or more in the delivery of the checks.

Students concerned should allow a reasonable period to elapse after the customary time for the arrival of their salary, said Silva, before contacting the NYA offices regarding the matter.

Chemistry

Lab Technicians In Demand Now

The five women now registered in Chemistry 60, "Laboratory Operations" have accepted positions in the industry, according to Arthur Furst, instructor.

Mary Batey and Dolores Sullivan will take positions with the Shell Development Company at Emeryville; Agnes Lively goes to Richmond to work of Standard Oil; Dolores Bradshaw will be in the employ of the Bethlehem Steel Company and Betty Krug joins the staff of Consolidated Chemical Company.

Students who are interested in becoming laboratory technicians should consult with Arthur Furst before spring registration. The placement record has been 100 per cent ever since the inauguration of the course and there will be a continuing demand for workers trained in this field.

The U. S. Civil Service Commission is seeking Junior Chemists and is particularly interested in co-eds who have had four years of college, with 30 semester hours of chemistry. Pay, $2000 annually; no written test.

Also sought are Chemical Aids who need only three years of college, with 24 semester hours of chemistry. Pay, $1800; no test.

Expanded research in synthetic ruber may double the demand for chemists during the coming months.

Grades Mailed Graduates And Others On Request

Graduates and other students who do not plan to return to the campus next semester are requested to leave a stamped self-addressed envelope in the Registrar's office, Room 121, according to Mary Perry, registrar's assistant. Returning students will receive their grades upon completing their registration, February 9.

Requests for transcripts should be made in writing on the proper form. Photostatic copies of student's records will be made upon request and forwarded by the college to the address given by the student making the request. Requests can be made before the end of the current semester to assure immediate attention when the Fall grades are posted. There are no fees for this service.

Curriculum

Pre-Induction Courses To Train Yeomen, Army Clerical Workers

An intensive four-week offering in general office practice and procedure is being planned for inclusion in the college's pre-induction training program, beginning Monday, February 8, it was announced by Edward Larson, acting chairman of the Business Division.

"The spirited participation of a highly coordinated and competent corps of clerical and office workers in war front situations cannot be underestimated," Larson said. The tremendous task of organizing and administering the effort of our various service branches places a heavy call on behind-the-line activities. Future advancements in this field are wide open for young men who wish to qualify through adequate training and supervision.

Subjects Offered

The course of instruction has been set up for classes in typing, filing, office machines, spelling, business mathematics and business English.

A special brochure and display cards have been issued by the college to publicize this specialized training for high school graduates and young men eligible for the draft who are not already enlisted in the various reserve corps.

Pre-Flight Training Included

The various offerings included in this new program are designed for pre-flight training, army and navy specialist ratings, and general orientation to induction procedure.

Edward Sandys, college instructor, has been placed in charge of prospective students in this field. He will serve as their adviser and counselor during the training period.

The first university in the western hemisphere was founded in Santo Domingo in 1538.

Counseling

College Advising Staff Revamped

A reorganization of the college advising staff is announced by Edward H. Redford, college director of counseling and guidance. Principal reason for the shuffle is the departure of so many of the instructors assigned to this work on military leave.

Students now enrolled who plan to return for the spring semester are warned to make appointments with the proper adviser to prepare their spring programs. This should be done before February 3.

Listed below is the new advising staff.

Army Deferred Enlistment	Green, Williams
Art	Allman, Eckert
Aviation and Pre-Induction	Sandys
Biological Sciences	Noble, Porter
Business	Gavin, Gohn, Nowell, Snyder, Stoupe, Williams
Chemistry	Furst, Polissar
Commerce	Bolton, Cranston
Engineering	Aggeler, Mayo
Home Economics	Cuneo
Hotel and Restaurant	Watson
Letters and Science	Galley, Luckmann, Weber
Music	Badger
Pre-Nursing	Scribner, Wells

Advisees who will have to go to a new adviser as a result of the above reassignment are directed as follows:

(The advisees of the first column of instructors will meet with the advisees named directly opposite the students' previous adviser.)

Berman	Sandys
Booher	Furst
Chesterman	Aggeler
Flournoy	Gavin
Gerstung	Cranston
Goss	Cranston
Harris	Mayo
Henderson	Nowell
Lyon	Snyder
Marsh	Snyder
Nelson	Porter
Parker	Bolton
Pasqualetti	Snyder
Reveal	Williams
Wilson	Snyder

Advisees of Agosti will go to Aggeler (A-M); to Mayo (N-Z).

Candidates, Voters Ready!

Student Body Election Petitions Available February 15; Balloting Procedure Unchanged

Candidates seeking student body offices may secure election petitions Monday, February 15, in Room 169. The petitions will be due in Room 169, Thursday, February 18.

This move was executed by Bill Steenberg, student body president, and Charles Loughridge, election committee chairman, in the interests of those students who have indefinite plans concerning registration next semester.

High Sophs Only

Students eligible for student body president must be high sophomores in class standing, or the equivalent of four semesters here at school. Failure to comply with this prerequisite may result in the disqualification of the candidate.

The forthcoming election will be held in the college cafeteria, according to Steenberg. Election machines will be stationed in the north wing, it was announced, and electioneering will be prohibited.

Petitions ready	Monday, Feb. 15
Petitions due	Thursday, Feb. 18
Nominations' rally	Tuesday, Feb. 23
Student elections	Wed., Feb. 24
Inauguration rally	Tuesday, Mar. 2

(Editor's note: All student body petitions for election to student body office must be submitted to any member of the election committee, in Room 169, Thursday, February 18.)

A nominations rally has been scheduled for Tuesday, February 23, probably in the men's gymnaslum, Steenberg said. This will enable students to view the candidates before the election.

Service Flags Slated For Spring Semester Debut

Representing the members of the college faculty and the students who are now in the armed services, two large service flags will be on display in the central first floor corridor "for the duration."

The flags, designed by Helen Keller, advertising art student, will be decorative in motiff, according to William Eckert, college art instructor.

Curriculum

Pre-Induction Courses Attract New Students

With the opening of the Spring Semester, February 8, the college will inaugurate a special program for Pre-Induction Training designed to fit the prospective draftee for the specialized services, according to Louis G. Conlan, coordinator.

Courses will be organized on a four weeks basis and will demand intensive study. A student may enroll for four, eight, twelve or sixteen weeks of work, according to the time the student has available before induction.

Bulletin Prepared

A special bulletin announcing the Pre-Induction Training Program has been prepared by the adiminstration. Through this program the student will be able to qualify for the air corps, for ratings as quartermaster, machinist or mechanic, yeoman, photographer, pharmacists mate, signalman.

Flight Course Needed

Pre-flight training will be included in the pre-induction - curriculum. Courses in aircraft recognition, aerodynamics, math and physics will comprise the first unit. Since draftees can select the air forces by pri-induction examination and classification this program will undoubtedly meet a great demand.

Seamen will be afforded training in navigation, code, higher mathematics and physics. Pre-technical training will include blueprint reading, machine shop, drafting, electricity, welding and radio.

Counseling

Enrolling Students To Acquire New Advisers

Because of the steady flow of instructors to the armed services, the college counseling and advising staff has been revamped, Edward Redford, director of counseling and guidance, disclosed this week.

Students who plan to return next semester are urged to contact their advisers on or before Thursday, February 4. The new advising staff is listed below:

Army Deferred Enlistment	Green, Williams
Art	Allman, Eckert
Aviation and Pre-Induction	Sandys
Biological Sciences	Noble, Porter
Business	Gavin, Gohn, Nowell, Snyder, Stoupe, Williams
Chemistry	Furst, Polissar

Education—What Worth!

President's Message

By DR. A. J. CLOUD, President, San Francisco Junior College

Schools and colleges throughout the land are carrying heavy loads today in their effort to give all-out aid to the war program. The drastic urgency of this effort, and its utter inclusiveness, have had no parallel in history. It may be opportune, then, at this juncture, to inquire: Education? What worth education?

A character in Dickens, whom he called Fagin, was trained from early boyhood to be a thief. His expertness in matters of thievery proved that, for its purpose, the pattern of education he had received was unexcelled. Otherwise, it was not worth much.

Dr. A. J. Cloud

The youth of the aggressor nations, again, have given new and astounding instances of the tragic effects of mal-education. Indoctrinated from infancy with the criminal spirit of the ruling classes of their respective countries, the young Nazis, Fascists and Nipponese have committed unnumbered deeds of infamy in disciplined obedience to a misguided conception of their duty to the state.

Americans abhor the present-day German, Italian, and Japanese brand of education. They demand instead a type of education fitted to the spiritual and the material needs of free men and free women—of men and women able to interpret the virtues of democracy, and eager to cherish and courageous to apply them to their every-day mode of living.

As President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill said at their recent epic meeting at Casablanca in Morocco, the Allied Nations must go uncompromisingly forward to accomplish the "unconditional surrender" of the Axis forces in the briefest possible space of time. That is our immediate task. To win the war, and to earn the peace, we must develop and employ every atom of intelligence, will-power, and energy at our command. True education, as opposed to mal-education, comes now into full use.

Enlisting for Victory, then, let every student apply himself more diligently than ever before to hard work at the College. Let him thereby prepare himself rapidly and efficiently, while so rich an opportunity is offered, to qualify for those important military services and essential civilian occupations for which specialized training is required. Let him weigh with care the most recent message from Washington, which reads: "All students whether or not in the Army Enlisted Reserve Corps or subject to Selective Service are urged by the Army, Navy, and the W.M.C. to continue in college until called."

Student Prexy Bids Farewell

Members of the Associated Students:

Another term has passed, and with its passing we close the cover and store away another set of memories. A valuable store of happy memories for everyone, I sincerely hope. The term has, in nearly all of its phases, been a successful one. The usual spirit and enthusiasm has greeted all of our activities, despite the many hardships caused by the present world situation.

I have enjoyed and gained much from the opportunity to serve you as your president—and am only sorry that the term ends so quickly. Your constant support was greatly appreciated.

But all good things must end—so I say farewell; you can be sure that my hopes and prayers will always further the college on its road to further successes.

This Draft Business

College Manpower

MANPOWER is being recruited from every walk of life to fill the ranks of our growing Army, but the masterminds of martial strategy have failed to reason out one vital problem which every college man is connected with in some way.

Undoubtedly manpower is essential to the battle front and our numerous defense industries, yet no one will either deny or refute the statement "that MANPOWER is essential, to a lesser degree, in the nation's colleges."

Men in the 18-19-years-old classification are being inducted into service this month, this week, this very day. But the most important factor is that MANY men in this category are students in colleges throughout the nation.

We should face the facts as they stand now!

For one thing, induction into the service this month, or shortly, is a handicap to those students who have made plans to attend a four-year college. Why, then, should such a heavy handicap be further weighted by grief?

Men have been leaving this college, for personal reasons, before their semester is completed.

Lucrative offers by the bay area shipyards have baited others in to leaving college.

This, for plain and obvious reasons, is necessary in some cases—BUT there are men departing from this college who are majoring in chemistry, physics, dentistry, engineering, radio, pre-medical, and other skilled subjects.

This SHOULD NOT be the case in any college.

Yet the facts are that students have shattered the earmarks of simple reasoning in their unglorious attitude to the conditions that make up the present. Students can help most—for their own good and for the good of the nation—by remaining in school UNTIL THEY ARE CALLED. This, however, is oppositional to what many people think.

But this is essential!

It is BENEFICIAL to the men who will be trained and lead by this group of men. It will also aid the individual himself.

Before making decisions, THINK, REASON THE PROBLEM OUT, and ACT, but act wisely. Mistakes in times like these are perilous.

B.C.

Gal Going with Hoagy

This semester has seen more changes than a chameleon on a plaid lumber jacket, what with the departure of men from the campus to the camps and the departure of women to defense industries. It is the student with a quest of knowledge that will make a valiant effort to return to this college next semester.

While walking along Suicide Pass the other day—in the rain—we saw Eleanor Ann Griffin who demonstrated a successful way to keep one's hair dry. This latest fashion consists of wearing a bandana over the head topped with a pork-pie hat. In a literary mood, smiling EA presented us with her latest verse . . . and, confidentially, what could be verse!

POULTRY—IT'S FOUL

I wish I was a witta egg,
As wotten as can be.
I wish I was a witta egg,
Away up in a twee.
And when a bonehead motowist
Honks his hawn at me,
I'll throww my witta wotten self,
And spatta all ovah he.

The problems of war are making their definite imprint on everything, not excluding women's fashions. We venture to predict that come spring a great popularity of dresses "with clever buttons" will be the vogue.

Because of the scarcity of metal, zippers are no longer being used and the use of button closings is strongly urged by the War Production Board. This will pave the way for many exciting new fashions accentuating novel ideas for buttons.

Because of the lack of dyes (note: dyes are now being used in essential war industries), color will be greatly affected. Personally, we advise against black, dark green, and brown. Grey is going to become one of the more popular colors.

CAPITAL to CAMPUS

ACP's Jay Richter Reports from Washington

All Quiet Or Fairly So

Three men each from the Army, the Navy and the Manpower Commission in Washington are studying procedures by which men are to be selected to attend college under the recently-announced Army-Navy college training program.

They're working like beavers on the testing procedures, but have nothing to announce to date. Meanwhile, male college students are asked to keep their seats—which, no doubt, is easier said than done.

Incidentally, an Army man selected for college work may get any one of five assignments when he has completed his studying—he may go to an Officer Candidate School, be recommended for a job as a technical non-commissioned officer, returned to troops, in some "few cases" be tagged for advanced technical training, and in "very exceptional cases" made available for work outside the army, if that work is "deemed highly important to the war effort."

Army's College Requirements

To get into the Army's Specialized Training program in U.S. colleges, men must get at least 110 in the Army classification test, the same grade required of those who want to take officer training.

Other requirements, previously announced, stipulate that candidates have at least a high school education. Further, they must either be in basic army training, or have completed it. Except in the case of advanced college training courses, men must be at least 18 and no more than 21 years old. There is no maximum age limits for advanced training.

Originally scheduled to start about February 1, it now appears that the Army's college program won't get under way until a later date.

Since the Army announced its training program in mid-December, criticism of it has been heavy. Whether it's due to this needling or for some other reason, the Army has relaxed its provisions for college men who are enlisted in reserve corps.

College men in the reserves and in "advanced technical and engineering courses" may now finish the academic year. The same goes for first-year advanced ROTC students, most of whom are juniors. Under the original Army order, some of these students would have been required to leave college earlier.

College training for prospective civilian war workers is being discussed in Washington's War Manpower Commission. Present plans envision federal subsidies for education of both young men and women for important civilian war jobs.

However, a new plan—which provides no subsidies to students—is being submitted to the Commission by educators here. The plan represents a minority view which contends that it will be impossible to get adequate funds—and get them quickly enough—from Congress.

Advocates of the new plan point out that a $39,000,000 request for a college war-training program was pared to a paltry $5,000,000 by the last Congress and the government's Budget Bureau. Why not, they ask, be realistic and speed things up by forgetting the subsidy?

The catch is, of course, that many of our best potential war workers may be unable to finance college educations—or feel that they cannot afford college when they can make big wages at comparatively unskilled war jobs.

Intramurals Expand

Brady Prophesizes Increase In Intra-college Athletics; Draft Necessitates Change

By Bob Catudio

Athletic experience from intramural sports will be emphasized on a greater scale next semester and "will continue to serve those students who do not have the time and experience for competition in intercollegiate athletics."

"It is necessary for a student to have athletics experience, and, inasmuch as traveling to other schools will be definitely curtailed, intramural competition will be stressed more than ever," Jack Brady, intramural director said. "Intramurals will expand . . . definitely!"

Draft Is Threat

Brady, who has guided the current intramural program from infancy, hastened to predict that the draft will be more than a match for the furthering of intercollegiate sports.

Spring intercollegiate athletics, it was revealed, will be offered to the students, but the continuance of such competition will depend on the number of candidates that sign-up for that particular sport.

"Schedules will be cut," Brady commented, "and the only program of sports that cannot possibly be hampered is the intramural program."

Student Loss Imminent

In order to cope with the impending loss of students to the armed forces, it was hinted, through reliable sources, that next semester's intramural program will include two man "hunch" basketball.

According to Brady, "hunch" basketball, once proved a success at San Jose State Teachers College, will demand individual talent rather than the usual team reliance in a team basketball tournament.

Cage Play Popular

Basketball will probably be the one sport which will be offered to the students every semester, since it has proved itself to be of the most magnetic caliber. Unofficial figures estimate that more than 125 men competed in basketball this past semester.

Although this does not, in any way, compare with the number of participants in previous semester, it does, despite the draft and lucrative offers from the shipyards, indicate the manner in which the college intramural sports program is faring.

Tourneys Cancelled

Because of the insufficient number of athletes, many tournaments, which were previously held in former semesters, were cancelled. These sports included swimming, table tennis, tennis, softball, horse shoes, and track and field.

"It would be useless to stage a tournament in which only a few students compete," Brady said, "but the intramural department will, nevertheless, offer these programs to the students."

Indications have been such that it was prophesized that more than 40 per cent of the men in the college would take an active part in intramural sports. In normal times, this would mean that approximately 750 men would participate in a semester's program.

Handsome Jack Brady, the intramural wizard. The maestro has indicated that intramurals will be greater . . . if not better next semester. (Read exclusive story on intramurals for next semester in adjoining column.)

Women's Athletics

Program To Be Heavily Stressed In New Term

By Dorothy Dean

Hampered by the threatened loss of women students to the defense industries, a program of women athletics will be heavily stressed next semester, to aid, as much as possible the role of women in war time.

Paralleling the expansion of the men's intramural program, it was expressed, by reliable sources, that the women's athletics activities will be strengthened. Table tennis, archery, badminton, tennis, swimming, horseback riding, and softball will be included in this forthcoming program.

Because of the curtailment of "pleasure" transportation issued by the Office of Defense Transportation (ODT), playdays, scheduled with Marin Junior College and San Jose State College may be cancelled. This statement, however, has not been confirmed or denied by Bertha Kelier, women's physical director.

Playground jobs are now opened to women students interested. Any college women interested in recreational leadership in San Francisco playgrounds after school and on Saturdays are urged to see Miss Keller.

Basketball

Skeleton Squad Faces Menlo JC Tuesday Night

Inability to snatch their second win of the season, and with the draft at the heels of his starting five, coach Tom Wilson will scrape-up whatever remnants that remain and prepare his charges for Menlo Junior College's quintet, Tuesday, February 2, in the Rams' pavilion.

Jim Ringel and Stan Peterson, both reserve guards, are the latest men to be inducted into the Army. Both Ringel and Peterson left last week, joining forwards Jack Terry and Alex Adorador, who are already in the service.

Cagers Quit

Veteran Ray Suprizio, who has been one of Wilson's most dependable cagers, "jumped" the team this week, and starting center Jack Sibold has announced that he will forsake basketball in lieu of a lucrative working position.

Adding to the worries of cage maestro Wilson, was the departure of team manager John DeGrace, who cavorted for football coach Lee Eisan last season, resigned his position last night.

The varsity's lone triumph this season was accomplished at the expense of a hapless and bewildered U.S. Army. Ordnance Motor Base team from Stockton, 75 to 27, several Thursdays ago.

String of Losses

Since then, however, the luckless Rams have lost every single contest—the John Borlo Athletic Club, U.S. Coast Guard Sea Lions, U.S. Coast Guard Surfriders, and Santa Rosa Junior College. Lack of experience and height have been two of the reasons why the Rams have consistently been beaten.

Readjusting his starting lineup, Wilson has announced that the following men will be on the court at tip-off time, next Tuesday: forwards, Frank Isola and George Walker; center, Ken Berridge; guards, Aldo Bindi and Homer Winter.

Winter Injured

In this week's practice sessions, starting guard Winter suffered a badly cut lip and was taken immediately to the Alemany Emergency Hospital, where several stitches were necessary.

Despite this injury, Wilson confided that the dark-haired guard will have a starting role against the invading Oaks from Menlo. The current cage season will wind up late next month, according to Wilson.

Sedley-Davidson Crowned Badminton Doubles Champs

Richmond Sedley and George Davidson have been crowned this semester's intramural doubles badminton champions, defeating the combination of Billy Steenberg and Jim Skinner.

The singles tournament is, at the moment, still in progress. Only Sedley, who placed in the finals last semester, has reached the end round in this division. In the semi-finals, Sedley disposed of Ted Dykman-Dabster.

Several of the men in the singles division have dropped out to facilitate the hurried execution of play, according to Jack Brady, intramural director.

Brady In Fast Finish; Gym Staff Cooperates

INEVITABLE FINALE

It was too good to be true, and we had a hunch something was cooking in the back of master-mind Jack Brady's head! But when nothing came of it, and only one edition of The Guardsman remaining for the semester, we thought we had conquered the mighty man.

Very seldom had the genius let us get away with printing a short intramural story. When we did shove one past him, he would be on our necks the minute the paper was distributed about the college—telling us our mistakes and stressing how important the intramural program was.

Being sports editor for three semesters, we had to listen to Brady squawk over and over again. No matter what argument we gave him or what explanation for the short story, his comeback would leave us without words.

And so it was that the intramural program received so much publicity the last three semesters! We had become to think of Brady as one most powerful—one who could not be broken down. We can remember the many times we were all set to give another story the top billing—when a last minute phone call would come from the men's gym. Sure enough, it was Brady! He would follow with something sensational and thereby win his story the top spot.

Yes, Brady is a remarkable fellow. His fast talk would put ordinary fellows like Lee Eisan, Russ Sweet, Tom Wilson, and Tom Conlan to shame. And though they tried to compete against Brady, they found it useless. Brady carried too many guns, and was in a class by himself.

But to get back to our original story. With the conclusion of the basketball tournament this semester, there really wasn't much to be said for the intramurals! We realized this, but we were almost positive that the Wizard would come through with something.

Deadline day arrived—and no phone call from Brady. Well, we of the sports staff came to the conclusion that Brady, realizing there was nothing of importance to blast, had given up! We were proud of our feat, and had all the right to be.

That edition of the paper—No. 9—came off the press and the intramurals rated only a six and one-half inch story. We heard not even a peep from Brady! We phoned the gym to see if Brady was in his usual good health, and during our course of conversation not a word was mentioned of the comparatively short story.

How we rejoiced! It was the first time in three semesters that Brady had nothing to say.

Deadline for issue 10 rolled around, and we decided to try again! This time we reduced the story to three inches, and went further by burying it at the bottom of the page. Again . . . not a peep from Brady! The good man was all through—we were positive of that.

Two editions in a row, and a total of less than 10 inches. This was nearly half the space given to ONE edition in the past! We began to think that this was our reward for putting in three hard semesters on the paper.

With one edition of the paper remaining, we were determined to cut the story to one inch or eliminate it entirely. By the time the paper had come out, we would have been ready to graduate and our grades from the gym would have been already turned in—so it didn't matter much.

News was scarce in the sports department for this last edition and we had decided to give the top spot to whatever sport came through with the most important information, even though the standards which rated a top spot had been lowered considerably.

We had forgotten all about Brady, believing that he was all washed up! It had taken us three semesters, but we finally succeeded in eliminating him. It was going to be a wonderful finish to our two years at dear old SFJC.

We sat down to make up the last edition of the paper—undoubtedly our last for this college—when Bob Catudio rushed into the Guardsman room with the story we had grown to fear might arrive at the last minute.

Yes, Brady had scored again! It took him three editions to think up a good one, but he finally succeeded. But we were disappointed in the old master-mind, nevertheless. His story didn't carry the old punch as in the past, although it outweighed all others and richly deserved to attain the goal that Brady struggled so hard to secure.

All Brady had to say was, "The intramurals will expand next semester." And that little corny phrase was enough to rate him the top spot. It's a pity Eisan, Sweet, Wilson, or Conlan couldn't get together and think up something a little better.

They let Brady out-fox them again!

However, we would like to take this opportunity to wish Brady as much success with next semester's sports editor as he had with us. We would also like to thank the gym staff as a whole for the swell cooperation they have given us over the three semester-period.

Their promptness, in most cases, aided us a great deal in turning out this page, and for those times that we blasted Brady, Eisan, Sweet, or Wilson—it was only to keep them stepping lively and getting their stories to us on time.

Hasta la vista!

Spectator . . . They Got Me Covered—Another Smash Hit For Hope And Lamou

Chalk up another hit for the comedy team of Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour, because They Got Me Covered, currently at the Golden Gate Theater, hasn't a single priority on laughs.

The whole story's a riot of fun. and even Bing Crosby's voice floods the screen, to which Hope remarks: "That guy haunts me." But we have to admit that Bob is to comedy as Stokowski is to music.

In Sam Goldwyn's latest opus, rapid Robert, after messing up the coverage of the Nazi invasion of Russia, is innocently led into a nest of spies and saboteurs. With darling Dottie's help, the tooth powder salesman gets down to work tracking down the evidence that will redeem his honor and his creditors.

The ski-nosed quipsomaniac is lured into every trouble villa in Washington (D.C., to you) before the Axis strong men frame Bob to make him the laughing stock of Washington—a worse fate than being a Republican in the White House.

First nighter audiences went stark raving mad with laughter at Hope's rendezvous in a beauty parlor, where he undergoes facials and mud packs in his quest of a story that may award him another Pulitzer Prize. How he won the first one, we don't know!

Bob Hope, the Pepsodent man

They Got Me Covered has all the essentials of a first rate comedy, but more than that, it has Hope and Lamour. Hope, the smiling, unassuming quip-master is a mixture of everything necessary to keep an audience entertained happily for two hourse or so.

David Butler, the director borrowed from RKO, shoves Bob and Dottie ahead in scene after scene which, to us at least, seemed tailor-made for the both of them. And Lamour, incidentally wears more clothes in this film than she has in all of her previous successes.

The most ingenious comic scene in Goldwyn's production is the scene where the supposedly washed-up reporter, our Robert meets up with timid Donald Meek in a decrepit run-down house. The exchange of dialogue between the two of 'em is fresh and stocked with a new brand of slapstick comedy.

SFJC Extension College Planned

That an Evening Extension College will be established by the college in the Everett School building, was the announcement made today by Louis G. Conlan, coordinator of educational management. The Extension College will open on Tuesday, February 23. Hours each evening will be from 4 to 10 p.m.

The Everett School Building is located on Church Street, between 16th and 17th Streets and is reached direcely by tht Muncipal J car and the 22 line of the Market Street Railway.

Offerings will be in the fields of anthropology, biology, chemistry, economics, English, floriculture, history, home economics, mathematics, music physics, Portuguese, psychology and speech.

A special brochure describing the particular courses is now on the presses and will be available in the registrar's office after February 1.

College credit will be awarded those students who complete these courses of instruction provided they meet regulations for atendance and complete the work assigned in each course and pass a final examination.

Nearly 3000! Count 'Em

Spring Enrollment May Set New Mark With Opening Of Evening Extension Classes At Everett

Spring registration in all departments of the college had reached a total of 2980 on February 11, according to J. Paul Mohr, college registrar. Dr. Mohr reported that the registration on the day campus had topped 1360 on that day and that the off-campus programs, namely, Victory Gardening, [illegible] Institute, Navy Training Program, [illegible] Fire Department, Floriculture, Hotel and Restaurant Management Technology, Parent Education and Navy Material Inspectors School, had enrolled more than 1600 students.

The enrollment figures for the current semester will not be complete until the closing of registration for the Evening Extension College, which opens on February 23, and the [illegible] program for the Navy Purchasing Office which begins on March 1.

Still More Men

Due to the demands made by the armed services the enrollment on the campus is still dominated by the men at a ratio of approximately six to four. Contributing factor in these figures is the Pre-Induction Training Program instituted at the college this spring under the direction of Edward Sandys. Over 200 students have enrolled for the first four weeks training course in mathematics, navigation, physics, code, aircraft recognition, and similar specialties.

With word from the Navy that official plans for service training would probably not be readied before July of this year it is expected that the students enrolled in college who have enlisted in the Naval Reserve will be able to complete the present semester. No definite word has been received from the Army with regard to its proposed specialist training program.

Final Study Lists To Be Filed This Week

Students must file their final study lists this Wednesday and Thursday, February 17 and 18, according to the date stamped on the cover of the registration booklet at the time of registration, it was announced today by Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

Study lists will be filed in the college library, located in the east wing on the third floor of the main building, these days between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Consult Adviser

Each student should consult with his adviser today and tomorrow in order to facilitate the procedure and make the necessary adjustments which may be required. No program will be accepted for filing without the adviser's signature. All advisers will hold special office hours for this purpose during these four days.

Changes in study lists after filing must be made with adviser's approval on special forms to be obtained from the registrar. Before the final study list is filed the student may make adjustments by merely informing the instructors whose rolls are affected, namely, the class being dropped and the class to be added.

Lectures

Global Mural Dedication Tomorrow-1

Dedication of the Pacific Coast and Global Geography Mural will take place tomorrow, Tuesday, commencing at one o'clock at the opening meeting of the President's Lectures. Featured speaker will be the Honorable Stuart Ward, executive secretary of the Commonwealth Club. Mr. Ward's topic will be "Latin America in the War—and After."

[illegible] Julian Arnold, veteran [illegible] officer in the American [illegible] who will be an honored [illegible]. Arnold was [illegible]

Mr. B[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] J. Cloud last fall. The meetings are held each Tuesday at one o'clock in Room 136. Students who enroll for credit are awarded a half unit of college credit without grade points for satisfactory attendance. The public is also invited to attend.

Present plans for the spring lecture program will include talks by Alfred Lundberg, President of the Key System Railroad, Miriam Gatley, Claude Silva, Marcus Skarstedt and Edward Sandys of the college faculty.

Speaker for the second lecture in this series will be Dr. Marcus Skarstedt, college librarian. Dr. Skarstedt has not yet announced his topic.

War Training

Maritime Cooks, Bakers Aid Cafeteria

Cooking in the college cafeteria this semester is being done by men engaged in the serious courses of training for jobs as cooks and bakers in the U. S. Merchant Marine, according to Hilda Watson, chairman of the Division of Hotel and Restaurant Management.

At the request of the local office of War Shipping Board, San Francisco Junior College is offering intensive training for these men who will shortly sail to the four corners of the globe.

"A very high class of men is being sent to us for this training by the War Shipping Board," Miss Watson said.

Service Extended

During rush periods [illegible] both counters will be opened, the west side, however, will offer only sandwiches, beverages, and candy (when available). The east counter will continue the serving of blue-plate and hot dishes.

Students are again reminded that owing to the shortage of help in the cafeteria it is necessary that each person take his own dishes to the dish stand.

Bottle Problem

Another urgent reminder is the fact that the government now requires the return of all empty milk bottles before further deliveries are permitted. It is therefore absolutely necessary that milk bottles be not taken from the cafeteria.

Rationing quotas make the following sales restrictions necessary: limit of one cup of coffee, one pat of butter, one ice cream, and one candy bar to a customer.

Fall Editor, Sports Editor, Managing Editor, On Leave

Bob Cuthbertson, Nick Barbarotto and Bob Catudio, veteran Guardsman staff members have gone with the four winds to take up journalistic duties in other climes.

Catudio, the last of the trio to lend a steadying hand to "the rag," has taken up with the Army at Monterey; Barbarotto is meeting deadlines for the "Foghorn" at USF; Cutherbertson is a police and court reporter in Martinez.

Returning students will miss these musketeers but probably not so much as The Guardsman advisers.

Listening Hours Set On Mondays, Wednesdays

A "Listening Hour" on Mondays at noon and on Wednesdays at one o'clock will again be provided students and faculty by Flossita Badger and Madison Devlin of the college music department. Programs are also planned for Thursdays at one o'clock featuring soloists and group numbers and community singing.

Meeting hour for the A Cappella Choir has been changed to eleven o'clock on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Places are still open in all sections but the greatest need is for male voices.

Students interested in musical entertainment should see Miss Badger in Room 200. Every type of talent is solicited.

Teas, Mixer, Smoker

Orientation Week Program Filled With Social And Political Fare; Mixer Dance Set For February 24

Starting with the WSS-Sorority Tea, to be given on Thursday afternoon, February 18, from 3 to 5 p.m., a full program of social and political activities has been arranged for Orientation Week. Teas, rallies, elections, dances and smokers comprise the bill of fare which should satisfy the most discriminating freshman.

On Tuesday, February 23, at 11 o'clock, a Nominations Rally will be held on the steps to the main entrance of the building. At this general meeting, for which all classes will be suspended, candidates for the various offices will be presented to the Student Body of Charles Loughridge, election committee chairman.

Election Day

Wednesday will be filled with the matter of voting and electioneering. Voting will be by official voting machines loaned by the City and County of San Francisco through the cooperation of Cameron King, Registrar of Voters.

The Associated Women's Students will honor their new officers by a tea for all college women which will be held on Thursday, February 23, commencing at 3 p.m.

Freshman Reception

A Mixer Dance, jointly sponsored by the AMS and the AWS, will start the activities for Friday. The dance, which will be "off the record," will be held in the Cafeteria. All students will be admitted by Associated Students Card.

Friday evening, at the California Club, Clay Street near Van Ness Avenue, the Associated Men Students will sponsor a smoker for freshmen men. The program is being arranged under the direction of Tom Wilson, club adviser.

"These traditional events are provided in the interest of the students who are new to Balboa Park," said Dean Edwin C. Browne, director of the week's activities, "and it is the responsibility of every student to make them go."

Race On

Election Date Set; Hopefuls File Petitions

For the first time since the opening of the college the Associated Students open a semester without having chosen its executive officers. During the "interregnum" the members of the Executive Council, fall semester, have provided the continuation of student policies and procedures under the direction of the college deans, Margaret Dougherty and Edwin C. Browne, dean of women and dean of men respectively.

Election petitions have been available at the Associated Student office since last week and these must be executed and filed before 5 o'clock on Thursday, February 18, according to Charles Loughridge, election committee chairman.

Nomination By Petition

Students eligible for the various offices must obtain their petitions, provide proof of constitutional qualifications and clear with the elections committee.

Students eligible for student body president must be high sophomores in class standing, must have the equivalent of three semesters of college completed and be enrolled for their fourth semester.

Voting In Cafeteria

The forthcoming election will be held on February 23, Wednesday, the day following the Nomination Rally. The voting machines will be placed in the north wing of the college cafeteria.

Electioneering, that is, the use of handbills, cards, gifts, is strictly prohibited. Each candidate is permitted to place three posters.

Polls will be open from 10 to 4 p.m. on Election Day. Students must present their Associated Students membership card in order to vote.

Radio, Speech Enrollees To Study At NBC Studios

Through the courtesy of the National Broadcasting Company, student enrolled in the college radio and speech classes have been extended an invitation to spend two hours weekly at the local NBS studios, as part of the students' laboratory curriculum.

Evening College Opens February 23 At Everett

Under the auspices of the Board of Education the college will open its first evening extension classes on Tuesday, February 23, at the Everett School building, it was announced last week by Louis G. Conlan, coordinator of educational management.

College credit with free tultion will be offered for the first time in San Francisco on an extended day program. Classes will meet Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, from 4 until 10 p.m.

New Courses

Offerings will be in the fields of Anthropology, Biology, Chemistry, Economics, English, Floriculture, Gardening, History, Home Economics, Mathematics, Music, Physics, Portuguese, Psychology and Dramatics.

A special brochure describing the particular courses is now available in the registrar's office.

Students enrolled on this campus who wish to avail themselves of the courses offered at the Everett School Building can do so, according to Registrar Mohr, providing they do not exceed the maximum program restrictions.

School For War

Hit Those Books

FROM all the reports at my disposal, I gather that since we entered the war students are studying harder and more eagerly than ever before. That is undoubtedly due to the encouraging fact that our young people have grasped the seriousness of this war and the share of their responsibility in it.

I merely wish to congratulate you on this trend and to urge you to continue to study ever harder. Consider yourselves as a great student army training to take your place to help win the war and then to carry out the objectives of the peace.

Never in our history, never in the history of mankind, has there been a war so vast, so destructive, so far-reaching, so all-embracing, as the war we are now fighting. Although this has been said many times, there are not many people who can fully grasp what total war means. We, the United States alone, spend in a single day almost twice as much as we had spent on the entire of the Revolutionary War. In the far-flung battles we have thousands of costly tanks, machine guns, airplanes, PT-boats, and great armadas of various other types of naval ships, greater by far than in any war of the past. But money and machines alone do not win battles. Men are the decisive factors. Not just men, but educated and well-trained men. In this war more than in any of the past the men with the specialized training—the trained pilot, the trained bombardier, the engineer, the meteorologist, the chemist, the mathematician—determine the outcome of battles.

In modern warfare, as in modern peacetime living, knowledge and training have become increasingly important. Knowledge and training will be even more important when the war ends. We have known for a long time how important education is in a civilized society. This war has fortified our convictions. When the war is over, we will need great numbers of young people equipped with the knowledge to reconstruct the world and improve it.

I repeat, therefore: Study harder than ever before! Prepare yourselves with confidence. Learn to understand our war aims so that you can do your part now in saving, serving, conserving and learning; and later you will be able to use your knowledge to help build a better world for yourselves and for all of mankind. The benefits of your knowledge and training will come back most to you; but it will also be a great asset to our Nation.

PARADE of OPINION

ACP Feature

COLLEGE: DOES IT PAY?

Does a college education pay? Right now that question is uppermost in young American minds, more than ever before. Industry and business seem to be offering unusual opportunities to persons with little or no training, and those who have had higher education apparently have no better status than unschooled workers.

From a practical standpoint, however, actual statistics lead to a different conclusion. Men and women with college educations not only have more prominence in their vocational fields, they make more money. This statement is supported by a survey of positions and salaries of graduates of the school of forestry of Montana State University.

Graduates up to and including 1941 totaled 394. Of men graduated from 1910 to 1915, the weighted average income in 1941 was $5,243, with a $6,000 maximum and $3,860 minimum. Men graduated from 1936 to 1940 earn an average of $2,038, with a maximum of more than $4,000 and a minimum of $1,100. Those graduated in intervening years earn incomes averaging between $4,750 a year and $2,600.

These figures were compiled from 72 per cent of the total number of graduates, 84 of whom are in the armed services, and for 94 of whom records are incomplete. The 72 per cent sampling is well distributed and sufficiently large to be indicative.

Though wages have gone sky high this year, official government figures reveal that the average income of American wage earners for the period June, 1942, to June, 1943, is still only about $990. In 1940 the average income for the entire country amounted to $573, and for Montana $579, yearly. This information is from "Trade and Professional Associations," a government survey compiled by C. J. Judkins.

CAPITAL to CAMPUS

ACP's Jay Richter Reports from Washington

COLLEGES STILL IN DARK

Officials in Washington now say it will be about February 15 before announcement is made of which colleges and universities have been selected to train service men under the new Army-Navy college training programs.

* * *

They won't say how many colleges will be included, although guesses have ranged from 200 to 350 institutions. Navy Secretary Knox has said that small colleges won't be left out in the cold on the deal.

ARMY-NAVY PLANS

College men who are not thoroughly familiar with the Army Specialized Training Program and the Navy College Training Program are afforded the following outline of these programs based on a special ACP dispatch from Jay Richter, Washington Correspondent.

* * *

Main provisions of the plans, as they affect both Army and Navy, are these:

* * *

Army men 21 years old and under, and Navy men 22 and under, may apply for the college work.

Nothing in the new plans will affect existing contracts of Army or Navy with colleges.

Men selected for college training will wear uniforms, be on active duty and receive service pay. Soldiers will go to school as privates, seventh grade; sailors as apprentice seamen.

* * *

Civilian professors will do most of the teaching.

ARMY PLAN

Men chosen for college training will be drawn from enlisted men who are taking, or have finished, basic training. Exceptions are medical, dentistry and veterinary students in the enlisted reserves who will continue their studies under the new program in an active duty status.

Medical, dental and veterinary students not in the reserves may finish another semester of college. After that, they apparently will be subject to selective service and will have to qualify for training under the new program in order to continue their education.

Pre-medical and pre-dental students and junior and senior engineers, whether or not they are in the reserves, also may finish another semester in college.

Fourth-year ROTC students may finish another semester of college.

All other students in the reserves may expect to be put on active duty soon.

* * *

All other students not in the reserves are subject to the draft—now.

NAVY PROGRAM

The Navy's side of the new program is known as the "Navy College Training Program."

Normally, students in this program will be picked during their senior year in high school.

At a "date to be announced," all V-1, V-5 and V-7 reservists in college will be placed on active duty as apprentice seamen, and V-1's and V-7's then may continue their studies under the new plan at least through their junior year. Those who qualify as medical, dental, engineering and theological students may complete their professional studies.

* * *

V-5's may complete the year "current at the time of their enlistment or transfer to V-5".

* * *

Students now holding probationary commissions may resign "at a date to be announced," enter the new college program, and be commissioned again later.

Random Harvest One of Year's Better Pictures; THE OUTLAW—Well, You Guess!

(EDITOR'S NOTE: These are the final two reviews of Bob Catudio, regular Guardsman drama editor, who is now in the United States Army. Forthcoming reviews will be written from the Presidio of Monterey.)

Seldom does a motion picture touch upon the tragic sentimentality of the past, but Random Harvest, currently at the Warfield Theater, does so with magnificent brilliancy.

Much can be said in praise of this great James Hilton story, but the one thing—above all others—that impressed me was the attentive quality that pervades the onlooker as he watches in silence at the story of a man who becomes an amnesia victim of the first World War.

Ronald Colman, as Charles Rainier, is victimized by loss of memory and shortly afterward is befriended by a music hall dancer, Paula, (Greer Garson). Through her confidence, the ex-soldier now known as just plain Smithy, restores himself to independency.

Smithy and the music hall dancer marry. Their life is complete, so it seems, until Smith, while on his way to Liverpool in behest to a literary job, is struck by a taxi-cab and injured. When he "comes to," he can remember nothing of the past and assumes his place in the world as Charles Rainier, industrial prince of England.

Rainier knows nothing of his life during that three-year epoch during which time he had married. Under the sensitive direction of Mervyn LeRoy, circumstantial evidence—a key to a house, a hastily-packed suitcase, and a pair of cheap glass beads—is smoothly placed in order as a sort of a restorative stimulant.

There are a few lines of prose that bring pathetic impetus to this heart-warming story by the author of Goodbye, Mr. Chips, and Lost Horizon.

"During the early years of the war in England,

"Bombs fell in random harvest upon the soil."

As the unassuming plot threads out, the action tends to become more of a drawing-room drama than anything else. But it will suffice to say that whatever defects appeared in the final half were absorbed in interest during the film's touching beginning.

Ronald Colman has never been more brilliant in his role of the mild gentleman who rises to political heights . . . after an epoch of happiness as just plain Smitty. This, perhaps, tops all of Colman's previous pictures.

Scoring heavily as the unselfish music hall dancer, we can now predict that Greer Garson will, in the near future, become America's First Lady of the Screen. She absorbs sympathy without flinching and can be both radiant and womanly.

We personally liked the work of newcomer Susan Peters. As the sensitive Kitty, the Peters girl has shown both the ability to exhibit emotionalism under moderate strain, and to act among a group of cinema vets such as Colman and Miss Garson.

The script by Claudine West, George Froeschel, and Arthur Wimperis is cleverly handled. Their treatment of unpretentious grandeur is effective, and it should place all three scribblers in line for an Academy Award medallion.

Adding to the gayety and pathos of Random Harvest are Reginald Owen, Susan Peters. Philip Dorn, Rhys Williams, Una O'Connor, Melville Cooper, Aubrey Mather and Jill Esmond.

They all contribute materially to the story and their individual performances—strangely enough—add to the charm and luster of one of the best films to come out of Hollywood in some time.

This is your truly's last column (possibly for the duration), and we heartily recommend Random Harvest as both an entertainment feature and sentimental yarn involving two of the brightest luminaries in the cinema heavens.

We thought we'd never see the day when a Howard Hughes production would be a disappointment, but The Outlaw, now anchored at the Geary Theater, is just two whoops and a holler from being the "flop of the year."

Twelve years ago, Hughes came up with his daring Hell's Angels and introduced the late Jean Harlow; today Hughes presents Jack Beutel and Miss Jane Russell, one of the shapeliest newcomers in cinema history.

The epic of Billy the Kid is a slow-paced pretentious western involving four principal characters: Billy; Rio, a half-breed female; Doc Halliday, and the legendary Pat Garrett.

We don't know why The Outlaw resulted in the way it did. Hughes took a chance and gambled on two unknowns. The plot (if any) is bereft of interest save for the heated arguments of Billy and Doc.

Between the long dull stretches of Hughes' directorial work, many tense and dynamic scenes are unveiled—the episode in the barn where Billy meets the furious Rio who attempts to liquidate the baby-faced bandit as soon as possible.

Then there are the scenes where Billy is recuperating in Rio's shack. He almost dies of pneumonia and whatnot, but thanks to Rio's careful treatment, the Kid is back on his feet again . . . arguing with Doc and doing his best to hate the fiery half-breed charmer. He doesn't succeed, however!

Camermaman Gregg Toland, cited for his photography of Orson Welles' famed Citizen Kane, reveals the beauty of the arid Arizona deserts, capturing its wholehearted wild intrigue. Notable is the sequence of the chase across the desert.

The applause that greeted the picture's end was perhaps more in a gesture of good will than of deserved honor. We could sense that the horde of imported syndicated critics brought from Los Angeles just for the premiere showing were rather hesitant in showing-off an enthusiastic report of the Hughes epic.

The skit prepared for Miss Russell and Beutel following the film's termination definitely showed that the Hughes proteges lack stage experience . . . if not screen experience. It was silly in the first place! In a setting fixed for a color blind artist, the shapely Miss Russell and the boyish Beutel romp about talking nonsense and boring the audience.

We honestly can say one thing in favor of Howard Hughes, though. He will definitely gamble on his worst effort to prove his prediction that Miss Russell and Beutel are star material in the future.

INTRAMURALS START NEXT MONDAY

Hunch Basketball To Open First Intra-College Sports Tourney; Students Urged To Participate

The first event in the expanded intramural program for the spring semester will be a two-man hunch tournament, Jack Brady, faculty intramural director announced last week. This tournament will be either an elimination or round-robin affair depending upon the number of entries.

The hunch tournament is the first of several new sports which will be offered to the men students this semester. The addition of the hunch tournament will not mean that basketball league, long the highlight of the intramurals, will be discontinued.

Basketball Entries

The two man sport is being held first to enable the new students to acquaint themselves with the workings of the intramural program, and give them the opportunity to smooth out the rough spots in their play before the arrival of the regular basketball league.

All men students are urged to hand in their entries to Brady in the men's gymnasium not later than next Friday, February 19. The tournament will open next Monday, February 22.

Following the two-man hunch tournament, the regular five-man basketball play will begin. The definite starting date cannot as yet be determined as it is dependent upon the length of the hunch tourney. However, students are urged to organize their teams and enter them as quickly as possible.

Sports Listed

Other sports on the intramural docket for this semester include touch-tackle football, volleyball, singles and doubles badminton, singles and doubles tennis, boxing, swimming, track, table tennis, horseshoes, and any other sport for which there is any demand.

The intramural program is a program to give athletic and recreational opportunities to all men in the college, particularly those who have neither the time nor the ability to participate in the inter-collegiate programs.

Every male student or faculty member is eligible to participate in any or all of the events, except that a student cannot participate in a sport in which he has won a letter in this school.

Awards Given

An appeal is made particularly to the students who are entering this semester to organize and get into the various tourneys. Any group of boys can get together and enter, or they can enter as representatives of any school club, organization or fraternity.

The school organization that aggregates the highest number of points in all of the events will be adjudged the intramural champion, and will have their name inscribed in the perpetual trophy that adorns the showcase in the men's gymnasium.

Winners and runners-up in all of the tourneys will receive individual awards. In past years these awards have been medals but government regulations restrict the use of such now, and this semester's awards will be an innovation.

Harriers

Trackstars Prepare For Indoor Relays

All men who are interested in participating in indoor track meets should report to Russ Sweet as soon as possible, the track coach announced this week.

Several indoor meets are going to be held in the Civic Auditorium some time in March and Sweet is anxious to have several relay teams representing the college.

It is important that all sprinters, quarter-milers, half-miers, milers and hurdlers report their intentions of qualifying as soon as possible, as it is essential that a rather intensive training period precede actual competition.

Regular Schedule

A regular track schedule is going to be run off this semester, and all track men should sign up immediately, as is is imperative also that these men go through their conditioning program before the rainy weather sets in.

The schedule of meets is still in the formative stage, but meets will be held with as many junior colleges as possible, and with various other club teams.

"A Must" For All Men Physical Education Now

Every man in school must take Physical Education this semester, Lee Eisan announced last week. This pertains to fifth semester students, post-graduate students, and medically restricted students, some of whom have been excused in past years.

This tightening of regulations is definitely in line with the desires of the various services, who believe that every boy should be taking a physical fitness program.

A tentative fifteen week program has been drawn up by the men's physical education department, a week's work consisting of four one-hour classes.

The first three weeks will be devoted to body building, which will include such things as calisthenics, and the rope climb. This is designed primarily to build endurance.

The second three weeks will be devoted to basketball, whose purposes are the development of speed, skill and coordination. This will be followed by three weeks of bodily contact work in boxing.

Skills, strength and endurance will be tested during the following three weeks in the Decathlon testing program, and the semester will wind up with three weeks of touch tackle.

The badminton and tennis classes will follow the same schedule as above, except that during the recreation periods they will play badminton or tennis instead of basketball and touch tackle.

A special program will be drawn up for the medically excused boys, and swimming classes will be held for all those men students who cannot swim. The date for this class will be announced later.

Every male student enrolled in college must have a medical examination by the school physician, whether that student is enrolled in physical education or not.

Intramural Entries Due February 19

Those interested in the opening intramural round robin must have their entries in by next Friday, February 19, according to Jack Brady. The following Tuesday, schedules for basketball competition and play will begin. Entries will be accepted every day by Brady in the office of the men's gymnatium.

Managers of club or independent teams should fill out the application printed below, Brady said.

Name of college organization represented.....

If independent team, name of team.....

Manager of team: Name.....

Name of Players 1.....2.....3.....

In entering this team I understand that none but members of this college, or college organizations are eligible to compete.

If a student is a member of your organization, he is not eligible to compete unless his name appears in the above list.

I realize that because of studies it may be impossible to have the same players on the field each time our team plays, but I shall make every effort to have a team present.

Ram Cagers Seek Third Triumph Of Season Against Santa Rosa; Locals Dumped Twice By Menlo

By Bob Catudio

Facing inevitable disaster by the loss in manpower to the armed forces, Tom Wilson's varsity cagers will attempt a "do or die" swan dive when his charges meet Santa Rosa Junior College this coming Wednesday, at 3:30 p.m., in the men's gymnasium here.

In their last week's campaign, the Rams were twice defeated by Menlo Junior College—38 to 36 in the first encounter, and 42 to 35 in the last of the two game Ram-Menlo cage series.

The loss of 12 men to the services has greatly hampered Wilson's triumphant plans. In his last three contests, the Ram sage of cage has started a make-shift lineup that has consistently lacked coordination and offensive strength.

Thus far, the Red and White quintet has lost—via the draft and whatnot—Jack Terry, Al Adorador, Ray Sulprizio, Bob Peterson, Sam Weiss, Joe Buckley, Aldo Bindi, Georgie Vogiatsis, Kenny Berridge, Jack Sibold, Bob Cavanaugh, and Jim Ringel.

Capitalizing against the feeble efforts of a brand new cage team, the Menlo Junior College basketeers blasted the Wilsonites in both ends of a hectic two game series.

A total of 47 personal fouls were called against both quintets so antagonistic and hectic was the play. The Rams "had a chance" in the opening contest, but they blew the duke in the last two minutes of play.

Wilson has announced, however, that when his charges meet the Santa Rosans, he will start Frank Isola and George Walker, forwards; Hugh Bias, center, and Homer Winter and Larry Isola, guards.

The boxscore of the second SFJC-Menlo game:

Menlo (42)				San Francisco (35)
Player	Fg.	Ft.	Tp	Player	Fg.	Ft.	Tp.
Bowers, g	4	1	9	Walker, f	2	3	7

Brady New Baseball Coach; Few Vets

Baseball will be held at the college this semester, Jack Brady, new varsity baseball coach, announced last week, if a large enough turnout warrants the expense of completing a schedule.

The Junior College Conference has disbanded for the duration because of traveling difficulties, but Brady pointed out that a good schedule could be worked out with teams in the bay area.

Home and home arrangements could be affected with Marin J. C., San Mateo J. C., Menlo J. C., and San Francisco State, and single games could probably be arranged with U. S. F. Frosh, Cal. Frosh, St. Mary's Frosh, Santa Clara Frosh, St. Mary's Pre-Flight, the Coast Guard, and various other club and service organizations.

Two Veterans

Frank Isola, pitcher-third baseman, and Homer Winter, hard hitting outfielder, are the only two returning veterans from last year's nine, and Brady is looking forward to many new faces to fill in the gaps.

All men who are interested in signing up for baseball are urged to notify Brady as quickly as possible, inasmuch as a schedule is not going to be drawn up until it is certain that enough men will be on hand to start and finish the season.

Probable Government Ruling To Emphasize Physical Education Program For Women; WAA Plans Announced

Faced by a probable edict imposed by the government to aid college students in their physical fitness training, the Women's Athletic Association will place emphasis on a suitable program for all women this semester.

The WAA program, as announced by Verrel Weber, women's physical education instructor, will stress the development of health, coordinated skills, and sportsmanship.

"The government expects us to keep physically fit as well as to study harder," Miss Weber explained. "Here is your opportunity to comply with their probable demands . . . and restrictions."

Tourneys Set

A series of tournaments will be initiated during the coming semester within each WAA club, and with San Francisco State Teacher's College. It was hinted, by reliable sources, that many of the women representatives here at the college will participate in the semi-annual Federation Playday, to be held at San Jose State Teacher's College.

College Days Are Numbered

First Army Call Takes Thirty-three College Enlisted Reserves; Special Pre-Induction Classes Set For Group

On March 8th, the college will dispatch its first contingent of Enlisted Reserve Corps enrollees to the Presidio at Monterey, according to Louis G. Conlan, college liaison officer in military affairs. Thirty-three men will entrain for the Reception Center on March 8, under the leadership of Frank Isola, past president of the Associated Men Students.

Approximately 70 men registered for the spring semester were subject to call. Information regarding the induction date set for the remaining 27 enlistees was not available at this writing.

Unanimous Choice

At a meeting held on last Friday, under the direction of Coordinator Conlan and George Green, college adviser to the enlisted reserves, the men unanimously decided to enroll in a special pre-induction training course of two weeks duration. This course, suggested by Edward Sandys, director of the Pre-Induction Training Program, will prepare the men for the army classification and special aptitude tests. The classes will meet daily from 9 a.m. until noon in Room 205. "This is the first student reaction we have had to our pre-induction program," said Dr. J. Paul Mohr, college registrar, "and it would seem to indicate that the courses have the college man's O.K."

Army Air Force Calls

Word received late yesterday disclosed that approximately fifteen men on the reserve lists of the Army Air Force have been ordered to report to duty on March 1, 2 and 3 at the Fresno Air Training Station.

Navy Inaugurates New College Officer Plan

The new officer training service of the United States Navy was announced this week by the Navy Department in Washington. From the first announcement it was clear that this program would not change the status of the "V-program" enlistees who are now in college. Naval Reservists, men now enlisted in V-1 and V-5, are deferred from active duty until the end of the present (spring) semester, June 4.

If the V-men pass all examinations during this semester, they will be sent to colleges by the Navy about July 1. In college they will be on active duty, in uniform, and with pay as apprentice seamen. From that point on, those who do not make the grade academically will be assigned to other duty, probably at sea.

Women Students, Dean Invited To Mills Meet

Five women students from the college will accompany Margaret Dougherty, Dean of Women, when she attends the conference for deans of women to be held at Mills College in Oakland on March 27 and 28.

In announcing the invitation from President Reinhardt of Mills College, Miss Dougherty stated that one of the features of the event will be the presentation of the spring play on the night of March 27. Dorothy Ann Kraul, a former junior college student, is an active member of the committee at Mills College.

Publication Schedule

Eleven more issues of The Guardsman are planned for this semester. Subsequent publication dates will be: March 12, 19, 26; April 2, 9, 16, 30; May 7, 14, 21; June 4, giving a total of thirteen numbers in Volume XVI.

Deadline for notices and regularly scheduled events is each Monday at noon. Final deadline each week is Tuesday at noon. Copy should be deposited at the office of The Guardsman, Room 134, or in Box 136.

Reporters have been assigned to each college organization.

Baritone Bards Besought By Badger-A-Cappella

Men! Can you carry a tune? Floksita Badger, college music instructor, will supply the "basket" if you'll lend the voice. What with graduation and the inroads of the first ERC call the A Cappella Choir is really in a plight. While places are still open in the choir, in all sections, the sorest need is for male voices. Basso profundos, tenors, baritones, come out of the bath tub! Save that crooning for a more appreciative audience!

For the benefit of the uninitiated, the college choir is one of the leading a cappella groups of the bay region. Under the direction of Miss Badger, the organization has built up a reputation that has enhanced the prestige of the college in the community.

In the past the choir has assisted in dozens of outstanding programs, among them Teacher's Institutes, convention musicales of the AASA and CTA and NEA, religious services, radio shows and college commencements. Before the Eastman ODT edicts the group traveled a northern California circuit each semester. Luncheon clubs, Rotary, Lions, and fraternal organizations are always on the choir's waiting list.

Jealous of its identity and its record, the choristers have their own organization and officers. The club is sponsored by the Associated Students as an approved activity. Gowns, music, and other features of a musical organization are supplied by the ASSJC.

The choir meets each Tuesday and Thursday at 11 a.m. in Room 200. Students may enroll for service or for credit.

Student Government

Final Returns On Associated Student Vote Approved; Light Balloting Characteristic

A radical departure from the accustomed election procedure, the Spring Elections not only suffered from change but from the withdrawal of promising candidates due to the first ERC call by the Army as well.

With a lighter vote than usual last Wednesday's balloting placed the following candidates in office:

ASSOCIATED STUDENTS

President ..... Jack Brown
Vice-President ..... Ernestine Cervelli
Secretary ..... Barbara Treganowen
Rally Commissioner ..... Edward Brain

ASSOCIATED MEN STUDENTS

President ..... Bob Stahmer
Vice-President ..... Bud Robinson

ASSOCIATED WOMEN STUDENTS

President ..... Betty Dahlberg
Vice-President ..... Jackie Thompson

(Election returns were available at too late an hour to permit the staff photographer to submit portraits of the newly elected officers. Statements from these officers and pictures will appear in the next issue of The Guardsman.)

Newman Club's Bonfire Dance Set For March 4

Next Thursday, March 4, is the date set for the Twilight Bonfire Dance sponsored by the Newman Club. Locale for the dance will be Sigmund Stern Grove, according to Tom O'Neill, faculty sponsor of the organization. Music by Czar Petrillo's men "from off the records and from out the juke box" will provide the tempo. Refreshments will be served. Members of the Newman Club and their guests will be welcome.

A special meeting of the club will be held at Saint Mary's Cathedral on next Monday, March 1, at 8 p.m. Final plans for the Bonfire Dance will be discussed.

Alpha Gamma Sigma Rolls Close Monday, March 1

Monday, March 1 has been set as the deadline for eligible students to file applications for membership in the college honor society, according to Miss Alice Cooper, sponsor of Alpha Gamma Sigma. Students interested may sign up either in the Registrar's office or with Miss Cooper in Room 185.

Regular membership is open to all students having a total of 30 or more honor points (excluding Physical Education) with no grade below a D. Students who hold permanent membership in the California Scholarship Federation on graduation from high school or the equivalent may join the society as Associate Members.

Honor points are compiled by multiplying the number of grade points received in each course by their respective units and adding the results. Grade points are rated three, two, and one, corresponding to A, B and C.

Students Urged To File Graduation Petitions

Students planning to graduate in June should file their petitions immediately in the registrars foffice, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

Miss Learnard stressed that the filing of petitions early is to the students' own benefit as it leaves ample time for investigation and advising of the student as to his standing in regards to graduation.

Extension College Now Under Way At Everett

The inauguration of the San Francisco Junior College Evening Extension College at the Everett School building last Tuesday night was met with a most gratifying public response. Miss Dorothy Mercer, college instructor who is in charge of the new program, reports that "despite the pressure of the point rationing program, there is every indication that we are filling a long felt community need. Some splendid offerings are available to our regular students, as well as adults, and we are more than encouraged by the opening enrollment."

Publicity for the Evening College has included a special catalogue, car cards and posters. Through the offices of Miss Marie Weiler, college radio instructor, radio stations KSFO, KGO, KPO, KQW and KFRC donated "spot announcement" time to the promotional program on Sunday and Monday of this week. "We are more than grateful for the generous cooperation and public spirit demonstrated by the managers and staffs of these stations," said President A. J. Cloud, "and I express the feelings of both faculty and students."

Charter Applications Called By CAB Today

Under the chairmanship of Margaret Abbett, the Club Advisory Board will hold its second meeting of the semester this afternoon at two p.m. in Room 132.

Principal business for the meeting will be the consideration of charter renewals according to the applications presented by the various active organizations on the campus.

"No group is authorized to conduct itself as a college club, fraternity or sorority unless it is chartered," warned Miss Abbett. Charter applications must be made each semester. Blanks can be obtained from Miss Abbett at the Associated Students office.

Freshmen Feted Today

AWS-AMS Mixer Dance Today At 3; Orientation Week Program Closes With Tonite's AMS California Club Smoker

This afternoon, commencing at 3 p.m., there will be a Mixer Dance in the college cafeteria, jointly sponsored by the AWS and the AMS. Music will be furnished by a popular orchestra selected by Madison Devlin. Admission will be by Associated Student Card.

Highlight of the dance will be the reception of the freshmen students and the presentation of the newly elected officers.

This first dance of the season will set the tone for future college socials. It is anticipated that the restrictions on transportation and other war-time curtailments will make it necessary to hold the great majority of the entertainments on the campus this spring.

Tonight, at the California Club, Pine Street between Van Ness Avenue and Polk Street, the AMS will stage a special smoker for the freshmen. Tom Wilson, faculty sponsor of the organization, and Frank Isola, last semester's prexy, have arranged a program for the masculine taste.

AMS Smoker Program

Jack Meeker, Naval Officer, will describe his experiences in the Philippines and the South Pacific; Ernie Smith will MC; Lt. Joe Lantagne, USA, and Lt. Joe Verducci.

Bob Stahmer, newly elected AMS president will preside over the festivities and will introduce his assistants.

The college athletic staff, Tom Wilson, Lee Elsan, Russ Sweet, Tom Conlan and Jack Brady will present the spring sports programs.

The California Club can be reached by Municipal cars H and D; Market Street Coach, line 19. The Washington-Jackson cable cars also run within a block or two of the club.

Army Specialists Wil Begin Training Soon

The Army has deferred pre-medical and pre-engineering students from all active duty until the end of the current semester, when they too must join fellow ERC reservists and the thousands of non-reservist college students and non-college men of draft age, in the thirteen week basic training program.

At the end of the first nine weeks of basic training all army men may apply to take a special aptitude test. Those who pass this test will be assigned to the Army Specialized Training Program.

The ASTP and the basic training are the two big differences in the Army college program as compared with that of the Navy. The Navy wants to train officers, the Army's intent is to train technicians who later may have a chance to become officers.

Faculty, Students Help With Point Rationing

During the week students and faculty members of the college have been working as volunteer registrars for the point rationing system, according to Edwin C. Browne, Dean of Men.

Voicing the gratitude of the administration, Browne said, "the generous and spontaneous response of the students to requests for aid in the rationing program deserves the sincere thanks of the college."

Democracy

Give Them The Vote?

NOT a little has been written, since the induction of the teen-age group into the armed services, on the proposition: "If they're old enough to fight they're old enough to vote."

Covering the recent student elections last Wednesday it struck us that some strange miracle can be worked under army discipline that education has not yet been able to divine.

With this election, as in all previous elections, the keynote seemed to be APATHY. Perhaps it follows that when men are put into the serious business of preparing to kill they learn the value of the democratic privileges for which they are fighting. Perhaps the best school for the citizen is the citizen's army.

Proponents of student government and student management of college affairs insist that "democracy can't be mastered by merely talking about it" and with that observation we thoroughly agree. Talk has yet to solve anything.

On the other hand, when we stop to consider that the students of this college are not asked to face the typical problems of a California election, initiative and referendum propositions we mean, and that the only task they are asked to perform is the democratic selection of eight officers from a small field—is it unreasonable to expect that they will at least exercise the privilege of voting?

The sense of value which today's young man or woman of college age possesses seems to leave a great deal to be desired. Today they are the citizens who will be charged with the working out of a permanent peace, the citizens who must place consideration of self behind the larger considerations involved in the concept of world citizenship. Yet just the other day they were too busy with selfish interests to demonstrate that the practice of self-government is understood and appreciated.

It is encouraging to know that with the baptism of blood in war these same men and women will be converted to a new sense of values, that they will thus obtain the "feel" of the duties and responsibilities attached to the rights and privileges of citizenship. "The School of the Citizen Soldier" will pass away, we trust, and what then will be substituted in its place when we want to train the citizens of the future?

It is the responsibility of a Republic such as ours to create the alert citizenship that is necessary to the success of democracy to prevent the "rape of the mind of the masses", and to plan governmental structures suited to the needs of self-governing people.

Education has been charged with this responsibility ever since the spread in this country of free public education on the secondary level. The most education can do is what this college has done—make every student a citizen under some form of government and give them a voice and a vote. Unless this technique strikes a note of response in the student body accomplishment will continue to stand at "zero".

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Two Moans And A Good Suggestion

• Low Blow!

Editor, The Guardsman:

Granted that your paper is a journal, it seems to fall short of its real purpose. That purpose is UNITY, that is, making each student feel a part of the institution.

We want more local color, more doing of the students, more club news, more gossip, more everything.

Yours for a change,

D.M.

Editor's Note: We have high hopes for this semester—when will you sign-up for Journalism?

• Encore!

Editor, The Guardsman:

Now that a new semester has started, why doesn't The Guardsman renew the semi-weekly newscasts of previous semesters?

The Tuesday-Thursday programs of last semester were a great aid in keeping students conscious of activities being sponsored by the college. Through these broadcasts much unnecessary confusion was avoided and a spirit of willingness injected into campus affairs. Such programs are just the thing to awaken students to the necessity of cooperating in college activities.

K.K.

• An Idea!

Editor, The Guardsman:

I'm depositing this letter under the door of the publications office with the hope that it won't be swept up by the janitorial staff. Where do you get your mail, anyhow?

It seems to me there ought to be a suggestion box somewhere near the Associated Student's office. Why not?

G.A.

Editor's Note: A good idea! In the meantime try Box 137.

Service-Men-o-gRams . . Sumski

Orville Wright was in the contingent that went to Monterey on February 15.

One of the first San Francisco Junior College graduates to complete the training at the Athens, Georgia, Navy Pre-Flight School, William Albertson has been ordered to the Naval Reserve Aviation Base at Dallas, Texas, for preliminary flight training. Bill entered the Georgia Pre-Flight School in November. Within three to five months Albertson should be on his way to Pensacola, Florida, Naval Air Station.

The Army censor wouldn't pass a picture of the plane, and no picture of Henri Carbonell came with the letter, but anyway we have a reasonable facsimile of the RAM which William Eckert, college art instructor, designed for Carbonell's plane. Fighting somewhere in the South Pacific, Carbonell felt the need of a good luck charm and decided that "Rammy" would do the trick. Henri didn't say who did the "daub" but if the charm is working everyone is satisfied.

Al Coffman is now training for combat duty as an Aviation Cadet at the Pecos Army Air Field, Pecos, Texas. He will soon complete his basic flying with the AAF.

Dick Simpers, popular Guardsman Sports Editor, has been assigned to special public relations and newspaper service at Camp Bowie, Texas.

Larry J. Bowman received the coveted "Navy Wings of Gold" at Corpus Christi Air Station on January 29. Ensign Bowman volunteered from this college for flight training last March and received preliminary flight instruction at the Oakland reserve aviation base. As a graduate of the world's largest naval air station Larry is qualified for duty with the fleet or assignment as instructor at one of the Navy's preliminary flight training centers.

Bob McArthur, former editor of The Guardsman, has recently been promoted to the rank of First Lieutenant, Tank Corps, at Camp Cook. Bob made it the hard way, up through the ranks of private, private first-class, corporal, sergeant—and then OCS.

Emile (Frenchy) Larrecou, 1941 first string guard on Lee Eisan's eleven, has just been awarded the gold bars of a Second Lieutenant in the Army Air Force.

Eugene Bomer, engineering student at the college, has been graduated from the Army Anti-Aircraft School and now holds the rank of First Lieutenant. According to Gene, the route through the ranks and then Officer Candidate School, gives the officer a better background than that obtained in ROTC. "When you've been through the ropes you know the soldier mind," he told President Cloud on a recent visit to the campus while on furlough.

A recent letter from Bill McLaughlin from Camp Roberts, Calif., brings word that he has just finished his thirteen week's basic training in the Field Artillery. Victor Sharp is housed in the same barracks with Bill—he will be assigned to Roberts indefinitely.

TAKE IT FROM US

Students come and students go but there are such things that stay forever, like groupings around the silver pole between classes, fog and rain on holidays, the view on a clear day from the front steps, Kathleen McIntyre's freckles, trying to arrange furniture comfortably in the Student Body office, Stan Gilbert's sketches during lectures, and Doc Sewell taking roll in his way.

T'other day, he read the list of names, "Bergin, Carlsen, Olsen . . . Johnson."

With the return of each semester, it is a natural prerogative for the columnist to inform the new students of the Junior College and Welcome To It. A few helpful principles can be carried out: enroll in Monkey Business 21a, attain use of the underground passage to and from the gymnasium by the password "Aetaoin Shrdlu", and make use of the Student Body Office by making yourself to home and disposing of your raincoat, lunch, and books therein.

IN THE BOOK STORE

The rumps on the campus these days is the approach of spring with women students planning their new wardrobe. Helen Peletier's beige gabardine two-piece suit is a necessity in any wardrobe. It looks especially smart worn over the new fresh white blouse with the little round neckline and stitching detail throughout. For both gaiety and style initials are sweeping the campus fashions. Check Tubby Frantz' light blue monogram on her brown sweater.

Said Book Store is in the mustard pot, iamenting the loss of one ardent fan, who now finds lunch in the cafeteria comparatively restful. How about that, Bev?

CRY ON HOAGY'S SHOULDER

Dear Aunt Hoagy:

I can't go in a class unless I find one of my neighborly students questing me for supplies. I can't afford it. Please advise me.

Ray Biscio

Dear Old Bean:

Get yourself a tin cup, a box of pencils, and a few reams of paper. Who knows maybe you can run George out of the business.

Flicker Flickerings . . . Stagnaro

The Commandos Strike At Dawn, shown daily at the Orpheum, is a worthwhile war thunder. Perhaps the plot or the acting will not completely satisfy you, but credit must certainly be given to Director John Farrow for his successful attempt to depict realism in war. With the assistance of superb camera-ship and a cast which includes Paul Muni, Ray Collins, Lillian Gish, and Elizabeth Fraser, Farrow has made a highly authentic, almost documentary film.

The story concerns itself with the Nazi invasion of a small Norwegian town whose citizens, tormented unbearably by the field green hordes, strike ferociously under leader Eric Toreson(Paul Muni). In this upheaval the Nazi Commander is killed and Toreson leaves for England—to come back again, better equipped, more able.

The raid of the commandos is full of gore and death, yet, it never attains the excitement of a Wild West show because of the steely (but definitely), cold manner with which it is carried out. With bayonets sliding in and out of Nazi's mid-riffs, the expedition counterblitzes admirably a German airdrome.

The commando scenes were enacted for the most part by real life soldiers of the Canadian Army who were training near Vancouver Island, the set for the entire shooting of the film. Major General A. E. Potts was the chief adviser of Farrow's production. Potts earlier drew plans for the first actual raid on Norway.

Platter Chatter . . . Persson

A column dedicated to the swing classics of the day could certainly not be any smaller than a volume of Shakespeare and still review the records which time after time grab the nickels of jive-lovin' students who listen to their favorites over a cup of java between classes at the Student Store. So—just a word about those which seem to be the most popular at the time.

The ole' stand-by of all times will no doubt be that One O'clock Jump, so aptly resounded by none other than the King of Swing—Benny Goodman. Although not one of his latest, The Jump takes the cake as a disc which will be played as long as nickels fit the 'lil slot!

As for the up-and-coming records, I'll take Tommy Dorsey (harps and all!) and his version of It Started All Over Again, one of those Hearst American Weekly deals which appear every Sunday. Patterned much the same as I'll Never Smile Again and There Are Such Things, All Over Again reaches the peak of sentimentality; and who could ask for more than Sinatra and the Pied Pipers doing the vocalizin'?

That catchy tune you hear being hummed about the college is none other than Why Don't You Do Right, originally spun on wax by Benny Goodman. Much has been said for and against Peggy Lee's "scat" style of warbling, but her job on this one should turn her most rabid enemies to her side. She does a swell job—and the record's a honey!

It's a pity there aren't more Ellington lovers around campus, for his music has been, and will continue to be, the epitome of jazz as it should be played—and brother—we mean jazz. His style is strictly his own, and the various strains some of his musicians cook up will delight the listener more than once. Spin his Sherman Shuffle the next time you get a chance, and try to sit still in your seat. Don't say we didn't warn you!

We mustn't leave Glenn Miller out of the scene entirely. Captain Miller made a few records worth listening to just before he folded up his orchestra, and one just released is destined to become one of his best. If you haven't heard That Old Black Magic yet—do it now. Skip Nelson and the Modernnaires give words to a lovely ballad which is one of those things you Miller fans just can't do without!

So Long Petch Ole Boy

Coach Sweet fondly pats Dick "Caddage" Petch as he bids the veteran track star good-bye for the duration. Petch was called with the Enlisted Reserve Corps and will report to Monterey March 9. No Heinies or Sons of the Rising Sun will ever out run this soldier.

Basketball

Dismal Season Brought To Disappointing Close By Santa Rosa Cubs; Rams Lead At Half

Coach Wilson's cagers climaxed the dismal 1943 season with a decisive 52 to 37 loss to Santa Rosa Junior College. The past season was without doubt the worst in the basketball history of the college! In the course of the season only TWO teams fell before the Rams!

A tough schedule aided our basketeers in their downfall. Any team playing the Coast Guard Sea Lions must have what it takes to even stand a chance. You see, All-American Jim Pollard's outfit has won 19 out of 21 encounters against such opponents as St. Mary's Air Devils, California, Stanford, U.S.F. and San Francisco Junior College.

The Rams were further hamstrung by the loss of 13 squadmen to the various services and to money-making defense jobs. Most painful losses were those of Kenny Berridge and Ray Sulprizio. Berridge was the season's high point man despite the handicap of not having played the complete season.

Now for the gruesome details of San Francisco's basketball finale.

Tom Wilson's crew shocked the loyal followers in attendance by moving into an early 6 to 0 lead. At length, the visitors got moving and began to slowly close the gap. At half time, the Santa Rosans trailed by the slim margin of a single point, 15 to 16.

In a generous effort, Coach Wilson sent his reserves into the second half's action. This fine gesture proved to be poor strategy, for the Cub's offense ran roughshod over the inexperienced substitutes. Even with the game safely won, the Santa Rosans substituted grudgingly and continued to pour it on.

Santa Rosa's sharpshooting center, Clark, led his team to its triumph by tanking eight baskets for some 16 points. Bob Walker was tops for our side with a total of 12 for his afternoon's work.

Wilson Has High Hopes For Tennis Varsity

Tennis prospects are at a new high with four out of the top five returning from last year's championship team. Despite the promising outlook, Coach Wilson is camped under a cloud of gloom (probably left over from the struggle of keeping five men on his cage team).

Two things keep Wilson from being sublimely happy: (1) Inability to keep players out of the Armed Forces. (2) Will the school budget permit traveling outside of the city?

Norm Scheu, Ronny McArthur, Gene Barradas, and "Val" Valemy, veterans all, are now available to carry Wilson's racquets in the coming campaigns.

Except for matches with San Francisco State, USF, and St. Ignatius High, the schedule is a blank.

Take It Off! Take It Off! Prep School Block' Out

That cherished high school letter must be stored among the moth balls for the duration of your stay at San Francisco Junior College. Accompanying the blocks, according to an edict from the blockmen, will be any red sweaters with white stripes on the sleeves.

This policy was adopted to clear the campus of the meaningless prep blocks and to stimulate student interest in the Ram's sports program.

College Health Program

By Dr. R. Dufficy Friedlander

Few students realize the comprehensive health program that the San Francisco Junior College offers to every student. Under the leadership of the Health department and with the astute cooperation of the other school departments, the health program of the San Francisco schools has developed into one of the most comprehensive health prevention and health educational programs anywhere in the West.

Believing that health education can not be separated from health prevention, the Health Department initiated a system of screening which coordinated the efforts of all the school departments into a program that assured a complete and far-reaching enquiry into the health of every student. With the exception of the initial examination, the physician has come to depend heavily upon several "screen methods" for the discovery of disease and faulty health habits. These "screen methods" have been found to be more efficient than routine examinations, in that they allow the physician a more personal sutdy of the student as a whole, including his health habits and symptoms.

The following methods are used in the screening program: Tuberculin testing with X-rays, Weight losses Fatigue, etc., and students referred to the physician by the teachers and advisers. By this method the unhealthy student can be located and examined for symptoms of disease in a minimum of time and effort.

Through the Health Department the ailing student is given free X-ray examinations at a clinic which is maintained by the Health Department specially for this purpose.

Although this program is not yet perfected, it is so much more comprehensive than any other method so far found that with even fuller cooperation from the student body and faculty, it is believed it will go a long way toward the mitigation of existing problems in health education and prevention.

Team Drafted

Coach Sweet Faces Track Season With Only One Veteran

Hopes for a good track year were shattered last week when we were informed by Dick Petch, ace sprinter, that he was entering the army. Dick was supposed to be the backbone of our team this year so naturally this is a great blow to our chances. About the only returning veteran is Cunningham, a pole vaulter. He is capable and should prove to be a winner.

The new material seems to be promising. Dick Hultgren from Polytechnic, Jack Brestler from Lowell, and Papageorge from Balboa are examples of the talent that has been contributed by San Francisco schools. The east-bay has also contributed a host of stars to fill out the track team's roster.

Coach Russ Sweet announced that the only track meet we are sure of at the present time is the big meet on March 12, but he also stated that the team would enter other tournaments, in spite of transportation difficulties.

There is still time to get on the team. So, if you have the ability and time, sign up with Coach Sweet as soon as possible.

Hearst Civilian Trophy Rifle Match Entries Due

All riflemen and sharpshooters in college, attention! The San Francisco Rifle Association has issued the last call for entries in the annual Hearst Civilian Trophy Match. All those interested must file their entries with the Rifle Editor, San Francisco Call-Bulletin or with L. A. Landreville, 151 City Hall.

Dates to remember:

Entries close February 28.
First match must be fired before March 15.
All matches must be fired before April 15.
Finals will be fired on or about May 1.

Intramurals Underway

Intra-College Basketball Play Begins Monday For Unlimiteds; Twelve Strong Teams Signed Up

Regulation intramural basketball comes into its own next Monday, according to a Brady announcement. Thus far, only nine teams have signed up for competition, but it is anticipated that the league will contain a dozen or more clubs before tonight. It is still not too late to enter. Your entry must be in Coach Brady's hands by 2:00 today or it will not be considered.

Indications are that this year's intramural cage league will be exceedingly strong. Positive proof of this may be seen in the varsity's hard fought 53 to 50 decision over the LATTS, one of the stronger intramural teams. The LATTS' roster features such men as Turner and Spencer, All-OAL forward and All-ACAL guard, respectively. Turner scored a mere 23 points against the men of the varsity.

There are only two rules governing play in the Intramural leagues. (1) No letter winner at San Francisco Junior College can compete in a sport in which he has won his letter. However, he is eligible for all others. (2) If a player actually plays for one team, he cannot shift to another team. But, if a player has signed up for one team and does not play for them, he can still play for another team. We might add: if he's low enough!

Last semester's undefeated champs, Terry's Pirates, will not enter a team for all of its members are ineligible or not in school. The second place Newman Club will again make a bid for the title. Newman Club had taken the casaba championship three successive times before being bounced by the Pirates. Along with Newman Club, three of last season's "also rans" are fielding teams; namely: Beta Tau, Brady's Beauties, and Psi Lambda Phi.

As yet, not much is known about some of the new teams. Two of these teams, the LATTS and the Easterners, are composed entirely of East Bay folk. The Easterners boast no All-League men but regard Bob Coward and Guy Woodman in highest esteem. The Flying Tigers are made up of a fast and tricky bunch of Chinese-Americans. Both the Eagles and RDD are complete dark horses.

Nothing can be said about the scheduling of games, except that the teams will play every afternoon at 3:00 in the Men's Gym. The complete schedules will be posted on the two bulletin boards in the men's dressing room next Monday morning.

The Pastime

Brady Issues Sign-up Plea To Baseballers

The baseball team was called together yesterday by Coach Jack Brady to get the official signup. Other particulars such as the schedule, travel plans, uniforms and individual positions on the team were discussed.

"Growing feet" seems to be the main problem confronting the team. Boys who have grown out of their old spiked shoes may find it very difficult to get a new pair. In fact, it is almost an impossibility to find a new pair on the market. If there are any boys in college who have a pair of baseball spikes that they have no use for, please contact the baseball team.

Coach John Brady

There is still time to sign up for baseball. If you are interested, bring your glove and spikes to the gym at 2 o'clock today or as soon as possible.

Late Bulletin: Frank Isola, veteran pitcher, revealed that he would be unable to play this term as he is entering the army. Good luck, Frank!

Joe-Joe The Joltin' Yank Takes Army Trail, Fans Sad

From $50,000 a season to $50 a month. This is the change of salary that Joe DiMaggio suffered recently when he quit baseball and joined the army. Joe, who was twice voted outstanding player in the American League, seemed to like the army, even though he was put on K.P. duty soon after he got to camp. He opened his mouth long enough to say that he hoped that the war would be over and won soon.

The steady drafting and enlisting of baseball stars is going to hurt baseball a great deal. Old men will be in demand and baseball will become a slower game in the Professional Leagues. Rumor has it, that ancient Smead Jolly may return.

Body Building Course Called Body Breaker By Men

Five ruthless characters are responsible for all the bent backs, haggard expressions, and extreme fatigue around college. These characters of which we speak are none other than the men's gym instructors. Yes, all five: Sweet, Elsan, Conlan, Brady, and Wilson. This term, these fine gentlemen decided that the students needed a course in body breaking (I mean building). The men gathered on the first day of gym, expecting a hard workout. They knew it would be hard but they had no idea as to what exactly body breaking (I mean building) was. They found out, but quick.

After one-half hour of work, the men were so exhausted, that the gym teachers had to undress, bathe, and dry the poor misguided gymnasts. De we like it? You bet we do.

Stuart Ward's Address Highlights Dedication Program; Maps Praised As Scientific And Cultural Aide

The splendid and widely acclaimed Williams-Eckert Pacific Ocean and Global Geography Mural was dedicated with special exercises on February 16, with the opening of the second series in the President's Lectures. Stuart Ward, Executive Secretary of the Commonwealth Club and public affairs analyst, presented the lecture, "Latin America in the War—and After". The dedication took place in the Mural Room (205), and was broadcast over the college public address system.

An audience which overflowed the facilities, heard President Cloud's words of acceptance and appreciation in which he said in part, "Dr. Williams and Mr. Eckert have implemented the way to a 're-understanding' of geography by their execution of the idea implanted by our good friend Julean Arnold." Dr. Cloud then introduced the artist of the murals, William Eckert, college art instructor, who discussed the technique and medium employed. Eckert was followed by Joseph William, college geographer who explained today's new styled maps and the characteristics of his projections. Concluding the dedicatory program was Arnold who described the background which gave rise to the inspiration he supplied for the mural.

East-Bay Dedication

Another mural, identical with the college project, was unveiled and dedicated at the Berkeley Public Library on last Wednesday, February 24. The program on this occasion was broadcast over Radio Station KRE.

Speaking at the Berkeley dedication, Dr. Williams noted "that in the air age into which we are so rapidly moving the concept of the shorter, safer routes over the north pole to Europe and to Asia will be all important. We must master a new idea as to the proximity of the land masses. The airplane has changed our notions of the globe."

Beta Tau Men Announce Officers For Spring

Beta Tau Fraternity has announced the unanimous election of its officers for the spring term, according to Charles McKiernan, faculty sponsor of the group. Twenty-two members were present for the special election meeting.

New Beta Tau president is Jack Lagoria. Other officers are: Bob Hemsted, vice-president; Dick Brown, treasurer; Hank Brennes, recording secretary; Frank Nelson, corresponding secretary; Jim Madsen, historian; Edward Brain, custodian.

Gafer Enrollment Drop

With an overwhelming ratio of men to women, spring enrollment at San Francisco State College reached a total of 1140 students. While this figure exceeded the most optimistic hopes of the administration at State College, the college has suffered a loss of more than fifty per cent from its 1941 enrollment of 2400.

Numerous Openings For Part-Time Work

Many calls are coming to the college employment office from men and women students for Saturday jobs, according to Claude T. Silva, college placement officer. There is some clean-up work for men but, on the whole, one-day jobs are not plentiful, Silva said. Most employers want students daily or from two to three afternoons a week.

Part-time jobs for men usually consist of stock-room work, helpers in defense plants, gas station attendants, parking-lot attendants, and recreation work.

A number of office places are open to women who can type, file, or take dictation half-time or three or four hours daily. Calls for salesgirls are few at the present, but shortly before Easter the stores will hire help for afternoons and Saturdays.

There is an opening for several girls to collect tickets on the ferry boats in the mornings. Fares are taken on this side of the bay and then the collectors ride across and gather them on the other side. The hours are from 5:30 to 9:30 a.m.

Some NYA funds are still available to students who wish to work in their chosen fields at the college. These jobs may be in the nature of office work, store-room clerks, photography, etc.

Empty Bottles Must Be Returned To Bus Stand

A federal order, received by the college, requiring that it make a deposit on all milk bottles, forces the division to again insist that no bottles be taken from the cafeteria and all bottles be returned to the bus stand when empty, announces Mrs. Hilda Watson, chairman of the Division of Hotel and Restaurant Management.

Mrs. Watson further states, that the program recently initiated by the college to train cooks and bakers for the U. S. Merchant Marine, has become so popular that there is now a waiting list of men for this type of training.

Business Division Still Permitting Registration

Late registrants will still be accepted in the various courses of the business division, according to Edward Larson, acting chairman of the department.

Classes in typing, shorthand (Gregg as well as Thomas systems), machine calculators, business math, business English, office machines, insurance, income tax problems, accounting and merchandising are among the many offerings now available.

Students are urged by Larson to see their advisers at the earliest possible moment regarding any contemplated enrollments in business courses.

Radio

Industry Needs Trained Worker; Classes Open

Starting this week the National Broadcasting Company will give a series of lectures and demonstrations at Radio City, it was announced by Marie Weller, college radio instructor.

The opportunity will be open to several of the college speech classes in addition to the group in radio production, Miss Weller said.

Announcer Class Formed

Radio Announcing, Speech 14, which was recently organized, has gotten under way with a large sign-up of students. This work was organized in response to a demand by the local industry for new talent. Students who show aptitude for the work are practically assured positions, Miss Weller pointed out.

As has been the custom in the past, college radio announcers will air the twice-weekly newscasts of The Guardsman, each Monday and Wednesday at opening of the eleven o'clock period.

Recent productions of the college radio department have been heard prior to the Lincoln and Washington holidays. Under the direction of Marie Weller, assisted by technician Jack Garner, these memorial programs were broadcast over the public address system.

Sororities Set Plans For Spring Rushing

Proving that the manpower shortage caused by the war will not dampen their enthusiasm, college sororities are coming forward with plans for rush teas and war service work.

Theta Tau is planning its first rush tea for the Mark Hopkins Hotel under the guidance of newly elected President Ethel Elliot. Assisting their president are the other members of the executive committee, Gloria De Martini, Joan Cecil and Jackie Thompson.

Opening their second front with a barbecue at the home of Pat Hamilton, Alpha Lambda Chi will entertain its pledges with a novelty program. Bobbie Allen, Mary Jo Bradwin, Jean Donner and Irene Sotack are the officers in charge of rushing.

Phi Beta Rho plans joint meetings with the Beta Phi Beta fraternity. This semester's officers are: Ginger Luke, Terry Alcera, Jane Smith, Kathleen McIntyre and Marie Witte.

Virginia Frantz, Gloria Nelson and Dorothy Hogan were recently elected to the offices of Kappa Phi. The group has not yet announced its rushing program.

Money May Be Claimed For Books Sold By WSS

Students may claim their money for books sold through the Women's Service Society Book Exchange at the school bank any day before Friday, March 5. Unsold books may be claimed at the Exchange.

The Book Exchange is operated by the Women's Service Society at the beginning and end of each semester, at which students may buy books or leave their old books to be sold. The Exchange is entirely a non-profit organization. Its whole aim is to help students make the best use of campus books. Finances are conducted through the college bank.

There is no time to lose: There is still time to win. Buying War Bonds and Stamps will help.

GALLANTRY HAS DIED

In this mad world of women street car conductors, ration cards, Casablanca, steel helmets, and 4F's, there arises a scorching topic: "Should a man offer honor and respect to a woman, that is, give up his seat on the street car?" I grant you it's hard to give up your seat to something standing in front of you that resembles Pikes Peak in trousers or stares at you resentfully, mentally demanding your seat. But it is a woman, because you can see above the blur of size 44 Levi's a streak of red, a mop of hair and a lunch pail with pink ribbons. You can also determine her sex by the stronge scent of Evening in Paris which, in a crowded street car, becomes a Night in Butcher Town. When you finally give the beast your seat, she hits you over the head with her lunch pail, looks down at you, and screams "Masher!"

Then, there is the woman with her utility bag under one arm and a screaming drooling infant under the other. You find it's better to avoid the woman's acute stare and Junior by giving up your seat to her. After picking up the bag several times, stuffing in the baby powder, which is now all over your dark suit, you smile at Junior who kicks you in the stomach and rubs shoe polish on your vest. The woman smiles at you, sickly-grateful. Yes sir, you are a gentleman, a pale one covered with powder and glory.

Then, there is the small, gasping do or die "I'll stand all the way" woman. She's so old that she's deaf in both ears and blind in one eye. She's almost falling apart, but insists on standing. She doesn't realize you're not deaf and shouts at you personal questions and assures you that you are just like her dead son, Egbert, who used to double for Boris Karloff. Everytime you open your mouth to ask her to sit down, she screams "God Bless you" and coughs in your face.

You arrive home after walking ten blocks as you couldn't conga your way through the street car when your block was called. Your hat is smashed and the ribbon is gone. Your suit is covered with meat balls. Your wife smells powder and is convinced you have reached the dangerous age and is going madly through her first aid book for symptoms.

The Army In Review

Private Bob Catudio begins in this issue his series of personal observations on army life, written to us at this time from Mississippi. Former Guardsman editor, Bob Catudio is widely known on this campus for his SPECTATOR—a feature which also returns today.

Kessler Field, Miss.

There are hundreds of newspaper men in the Army, but few from this college. The first week of basic training is tough; the men are always thinking of home and Army chow; the morale of a soldier decreases . . .

But this is war and this is the Army!

Keesler Field, where your correspondent is now stationed, is somewhere in the U.S.A., about two miles from the metropolis, Biloxi.

All of the soldiers from Northern California were inducted at their local draft boards and sent to the Presidio of Monterey, in California. Processing takes, on the average, five days.

Inductees are given an atrocious physical examination, are issued G.I. clothing, are given several military examinations (the mental variety), and last of all, inductees are read the Articles of War.

Army life can be fun, too!

When you mix with Kentuckians, New Yorkers, Georgians, Carolinians, and Ohioans, you're bound to meet up with a special brand of Army humor.

It rained in Biloxi one Sunday afternoon and an Irish first ser-

Marine Reserve Enlists Last Recruits Monday

Naval sources have revealed that a quota of 6000 enlisted Marine Reserves and 2500 men from civil life has been established for the Marine Corps phase of the Navy's college training program.

Men now in the Reserves will be eligible for the college training program, subject to screening tests. Reservists who are last semester seniors, however, will be given the alternatives of remaining in college for the last semester at their own expense or of going on active duty.

Selected Reserves who go on active duty at once will continue their school training without a break for basic training.

Business Dept. Enters Second Term Today

The Business Division started on its second term yesterday, and, according to Edward Larson, business students will be able to find out what grades they received from their instructors in class.

This procedure will deviate slightly from the program as outlined in the catalogue for general college courses.

California Colleges To Aid Training Program

Since February 7, the Joint Committee of the War Manpower Commission and the armed services have been issuing the names of the colleges to be utilized in the Armed Service College Programs. As of February 14 more than 281 institutions of higher educations (out of some 1700) had been named by the Committee.

"No institution not on the approved list up to the present time can conclude that its facilities will not be used," says the official Washington statement, "for the committee will continue to approve other institutions."

California junior colleges selected have been named for the Army Aviation Cadet Training Program. First named junior colleges are: Compton, Long Beach, Pasadena and Ventura, all in the south.

Stanford, U. C., Santa Clara, U. S. C., Pomona, U. C. L. A., U. S. F., California Institute of Technology, Fresno State and Whittier are the four-year institutions included in the latest lists of approved schools. The last named, Fresno State and Whittier will house WAAC trainees.

AWS Tea

College Women To Hold Reception On St. Patrick's Day

Wednesday, March 17, the Associated Women Students of the college will hold their Reception Tea from 3:00 to 4:00 p.m. in Room 158.

President Betty Dahlberg announced that the tea is being held mainly to give the incoming women students an opportunity to get acquainted with college officers and various members of the Faculty. Special guests will be enlisted WAACS who will answer questions concerning the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. This will give many women a chance to find out if they are interested in enlistment.

The refreshments and the general theme will be in keeping with St. Patrick's Day. The dress will be the usual sweater and skirt combination. Dean Dougherty cordially invites all women students to attend as well as the freshmen. She is looking forward to meeting and talking to each of the freshman women.

Serving on the reception committee will be Jane Smith, Jackie Thompson, and Betty Dahlberg. The following will assist on the tea committee: Alice Violanta, Dolores Spindler, Ernestine Cervelli, Joan Wren, Betty Vivaldi, and Margaret Abbott. The Reception Committee will each name ten others to aid them.

Social Science Course To Show OWI Pictures

The OWI will supply the program for Social Science I, The President's Lectures, on next Tuesday, March 16, at one o'clock.

Three pictures will round out a complete bill of the serious, news and comics. Donald Duck on the Income Tax, Divide and Conquer, a film on German propaganda techniques, and News Review No. 2, will be shown.

Students are welcome to attend these meetings, which are held in Room 136, whether they are enrolled for credit or not.

Lutheran Association Meeting Tomorrow Night

The Lutheran Students' Association will meet at the King George Hotel tomorrow evening at 7:30 p.m. Guest speaker will be Mr. Claude Ward on the topic of "Religious Music, yesterday and today."

Faculty Adviser Edward Larson announced that the election of officers will be held that night and that refreshments will be served. The King George Hotel is located at 334 Mason Street and it is the Lutheran Service Center.

WPA Gift To College Is Acknowledged By Library

More than a thousand volumes and a number of fine book cases have been turned over to the college by the WPA library located at Mason and Sacramento Streets. Practically all the volumes are new and selected. The books have arrived but remain to be unpacked. They will be available for student use when they are classified and catalogued.

New Navy Program

New Navy V-12 Program Opened For Students Not Now Enlisted In Naval College Reserves

The Bureau of Naval Personnel of the United States Navy has arranged with civilian agencies to administer the qualifying tests for the Navy College Training Program, known as the V-12 program. Karl M. Cowdery, of Stanford University, has been directed to arrange for testing in this territory.

The purpose of the V-12 program is to produce Naval Officers. College students who appear to have potentialities for ultimate selection as officers will be chosen for college training. The plan contemplates that this college training will be carried on while the men are on active duty, in uniform, receiving pay, and under general military discipline.

The test used for the preliminary selection of the men who are to be given this college training will be administered in high schools and colleges throughout the United States between the hours of 9 and 11 a.m., on Friday, April 2, 1943.

Eligible men must obtain admission-application forms which they must present at the time they take the test. These forms will be available in the registrar's office where a special sign-up sheet is available.

Only the following groups are eligible:

a) High school and preparatory school graduates who will have attained their 17th but not their 20th birthdays by July 1, 1943, regardless of whether they are now attending college.

b) High school and preparatory school seniors who will be graduated by July 1, 1943, provided they will have attained their 17th but not their 20th birthdays by that date.

c) Students who will have attained their 17th but not their 20th birthdays by July 1, 1943, who do not hold certificates of graduation from a secondary school but who are now continuing their education in an accredited college or university.

Men now enlisted in any branch of the armed services, including the V-1, V-5, V-7 reserves on inactive status, are not eligible to take the test.

Applicants must also be male citizens, morally and physically qualified, including a minimum visual acuity of 18/20 for each eye, be unmarried and evidence potential officer qualifications.

SPARS Win Popular Member Of Faculty

Miss Mary B. Perry, assistant to the registrar, arrived yesterday at Smith College, Massachusetts, to enroll for the SPARS Officer Training Program.

First faculty woman to enlist in the auxiliary services for the duration, Mary Perry leaves a post which she has held in the administration of the college since its organization. A graduate of the University of California, where she was active on the staff of the Daily Cal, Miss Perry was a member of the staff of the Office of Admissions at U.C. before she accepted her appointment here.

After a training period of thirty days Miss Perry will be commissioned Ensign and assigned to active duty with the Coast Guard.

Hearst Papers Sponsor Jefferson Speech Prize

In honor of Thomas Jefferson's 200th birthday, April 13, 1943, a national oratorical contest has been arranged by the Call-Bulletin and other Hearst papers. To the winners among the Bay area's colleges, prizes totaling $400 in War Bonds will be given. In addition the winner will have an opportunity to enter the finals for the national grand prize of a $1000 war bond and a trip to Washington, D.C.

Any students interested in entering this contest should see Mr. Luckmann in Room 134 before March 19, the date of the first round of elimination.

Draftee's Choice Made At Time Of Induction

Men called for induction by their Selective Service Boards can express their choice for service at the induction center on the day they report for examination.

Special military induction boards consider each man on the basis of the service for which he seems best fitted. But they have instructions to give the fullest consideration to the preference indicated by each man.

Out of every 54 men inducted the army gets the lion's share, 44. This disparity is due to the physical standards of the navy, marines and coast guard who have no provisions as yet for "limited service".

Change In Dates Noted For Grade Distribution

Cinch notices will be given out on March 18, rather than March 25 as previously announced. All students will report to advisers to receive their grades unless other arrangements have been made by their advisers. Cinches will be given out at 1 o'clock in the rooms to which students reported on March 11.

English Department May Close Course On Movies

All students interested in the study of motion pictures are urged to register in English 5B.

This two unit course offers a detailed study of motion pictures and presents one movie each week. The class meets at 2 o'clock on Tuesday afternoons and consists of a 45 minute lecture and the presentation of a moving picture.

Classes In Russian Open

The college has added two courses in Russian to its language curriculum. Interested students should consult Dr. Zarchin. Classes meet on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at one and on Tuesday and Thursday at one.

Reservists See Conlan

Students who have transferred to this college this semester who are enlisted in the Army or Navy Reserves must notify Mr. Conlan, college coordinator, of their status.

Let There Be Light

Exterior Darkness

FOR some reason we like the letter in the Ram's Horn about the Bulletin Board situation here at the college. Try, just try, to promote an event on this campus. Try, if you dare, to build up some spirit for a dance, a rally, a lecture. The only avenues for publicity open to you are the radio broadcasts, The Guardsman and the grapevine. It's no use having posters made, you'd have to wear a miner's hat in these dark corridors to even read them. It's just like the black market in the main corridor.

And who sold the Board of Education that wonderful job of "protection" that has made all the glass opaque?

We notice that if you stand far enough away from one of the display cases you can make out the war posters and the Beta Tau Service Flag. Why not sacrifice displays and use the two well lighted cases on the main floor for posters and promotion.

We venture the guess that the Chemistry Department could help us to see through the glass once again.

• More Men!

Editor, The Guardsman:

With all the beefing about the lack of he-men around the college dances it struck me that there was a ready supply that wasn't being tapped.

Send some bids to a USO club, or two, and invite a few service men up for a stag line, I bet the gals would even come with their brothers, just to get in.

• To Arms!

Editor, The Guardsman:

Every student of the institution should hang his head in shame. I did when I read the editorial on the apathy shown by students at the last and previous elections. What's wrong? Where's that good old college spirit?

Maybe the Woman's Service Society can do something about it. Perhaps it can offer a solution and rally up enthusiasm for the next elections.

E.F.

• Blackboards

Editor, The Guardsman:

Did you ever try to read the bulletin boards in this building. What was the idea of putting them in the dark. And as if things weren't bad enough, some dope had to paint all the glass with lacquer. If it wasn't for the little bill board in the main entrance, I'd be completely in the dark between issues of The Guardsman.

E.W.

• Earlier?

Editor, The Guardsman:

From what I hear there have been few complaints about the last Mixer Dance. In fact I'm sorry now that I missed it.

Couldn't the dances start at say, 2:15 or at the latest 2:30? Most of us can't see waiting an hour or more for the dance. Even 2 o'clock would be better. Let's have lots of Mixers!

B.D.

• No Pix

Editor, The Guardsman:

Wanna know what's wrong with your rag? No pictures, not enough pictures, stale pictures, no cartoons.

Ed. Note: We're set to do better if the staff photog will get out of the waltz. Little matter of money held us back.

• El Rey?

Editor, The Guardsman:

Is it true that we are going to hold our graduation exercises at the El Rey? Phooey!

• Newscasts

The Editor, The Guardsman:

In the first place is there an editor? then, i would like to know if you can't do something about those newscasts? how about something original, instead of "the guardsman brings you the following baloney"? and, puleeze, don't put on another transcribed mix-up like the one on februray 22. in all fairness to george you ought to cut that out. if it had been written and produced by our students it would have been okay, but for professionals to record that kind of stuff . . . .

Service-Men-o-gRams . . Sumski

Dick Schacht, the fellow you elected Student Body President way back in Fall '42, writes us that he is now serving his fourth month in the United States Army. Dick received his basic training at the Naval Torpedo School at Newport, Rhode Island. Two weeks ago he took his final examination, passed second highest in his class, and now proudly answers to the title of Corporal Richard Schacht.

While attending Junior College, Dick was an active member of the Phi Lam Fraternity. He graduated in the June '42 class.

From Corpus Christi, Texas comes word that Dale Frederick Farnow, one of our former students, received his Navy Wings of Gold at the graduation ceremonies held on February 12. Completion of a stiff training course at the world's largest naval air station, qualifies Dale for duty with the fleet, or an assignment as an instructor at one of the Navy's preliminary flight training bases.

Edward Nylund returned to his Alma Mater the other day bedecked in Navy blues. Ed, who studied hotel and restaurant management at school, has deviated only slightly from his original ambitions and is now serving in the capacity of Second Cook, USN.

Dave Carter, a mighty swell guy, who we no longer see frequenting our halls, wrote us a letter the other day from Camp Howze, Texas. Davey seemed quite elated over the fact that he is no longer "just a buck private". In Carter's own words, "I learned my left from my right, so they made me a Private First Class." Stick to it, soldier. They tell me they're running low on generals.

LAWRENCE E. DIDIER
Ensign, USNR

Lawrence E. Didier is another ex-Ram who received his gold wings from Corpus Christi. Larry was given not only his commission, but also recommendation to receive advanced instruction in flying the Navy's fast fighter planes. We must be doubly proud of Engsign Didier as he is one of the few men chosen to fly fast fighter planes, which are of prime importance for use in combat areas.

Roy Hammerich finally broke down, wrote us a letter, and let us know just what he's been doing since he left. Better late than never comes the good news that Roy was made a Corporal way back on November 9. He is now serving in the capacity of Second Cook, but he says 't ain't right, because he has been doing the first cook's job ever since his first day in the kitchen.

Just a word or two about the former Rams who seem to be with us once again. I refer to Bob Silverman, Howie Marg, and Bill Sullivan. It so happens that the U.S. Army Air Corps is rather slow in calling some of its men to active duty, so they are just brushing up on fundamentals until they receive notice to report for action.

Private Borrie Hyman was home on a three-day furlough last week and he spent a little time with the men in the Pre-induction classes. Borrie, one of the outstanding editors at the college, is on his way to "basic" and we hope—on to OCS.

Bab Catudio, has begun a brand new series for The Guardsman, "The Army In Review." He says that Al Adorador, one of Tom Wilson's varsity cagers, is the only other Ram at Kessler Field, Mississippi.

THE AMAZING MRS. HOLLIDAY

Deanna Durbin, Universal's golden-voiced meadow lark, emerges forth into the strata of immortality by starring in her fourteenth "successful" picture—this one being "The Amazing Mrs. Holliday." No other star will equal Miss Durbin's rating.

Deanna, to be more informal, is a missionary in China during the Nip-Chinese war. When Jap raiders strike, Deanna, together with nine small children who were entrusted to her care, sail aboard a vessel captained by a venerable San Francisco "commodore."

The ship is torpedoed and Deanna, with eight children in care now, is rescued at sea. Troubles arise in San Francisco, when the children are detained at immigration headquarters.

Well—in order to insure the children's security, Deanna fakes marriage to the supposedly lost "commodore." To make matters worse, the "commodore" puts in a belated appearance with the ninth child, and explains that he isn't Deanna's lost hubby. Things subside with Deanna's becoming engaged with the "commodore's" approval to his grandson, who is fortunate Edmond O'Brien.

Quite a mess, isn't it? If you pay strict attention to the story, however, it becomes quite clear, thanks to scenarists Frank Ryan and John Jacoby.

Deanna plays the mild-mannered missionary teacher quite capably. We have yet to find fault with her acting which is always exact to the role she portrays. Deanna's singing is more than enough to fill anybody's entertainment bill of fare, but she always has that fresh tinge of youth and sweetness about her.

Veteran actor Harry Davenport, as the lovable old skipper, is fine as is Barry Fitzgerald, the Irish comedian, who has the role of a breezy, snappy-talking first mate.

It's unfortunate, but Edmond O'Brien fails to show his true worth.

On The Rampage

All too quickly the first midterm is stealthily pouncing upon us. During these troubled times of study, war, and no men the Associated Women of the college are planning to meet secretly to form a plan of rationing men.

The idea originated in Washington State College, and is quickly sweeping over the continent. This plan will provide each woman in the college with lettered ration cards. A cards, distributed to entitle the bearer to one date and one walk to the Book Store a month. B cards will entitle the girl to two dates and one auto or bus ride a month; while C cards give three dates and one business trip a week.

A meeting will be held in the basement of the college at an undisclosed date to determine the requirements for getting the respective cards.

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE

Cloud Circle in the fog, Bobbie Mathew's light blue eyes, Pat Galvin and Carlyle Rutledge, Seeing Stinky bid farewell to Alma Mater for the Navy Air Corps, having enough will power to avoid going to the store by crossing Suicide Pass to get to the street car, Shirlee Hart's kelly green coat, and Nancy Traversa's smile.

WHAT HAPPENED AT THE BOOK STORE

. . . while you were at classes department. Those brave souls who had the strength to make it up the hill last week for classes ought to know that . . . Bill Sullivan was back at college for a while, you all knew Bill . . . you girls we mean. Bill Kokus drove by in a Navy truck, sailor suit and all, to give the babes a treat, according to him. Eddie Brain almost got fired and Dolly Doody has been off in a corner studying. Jack Werner stands over your game with a glass of milk in one hand and a sandwich in the other and sprays his kibitizin' advices to some unfortunate game. Jackie Thompson wishes she had the same schedule of classes as that cute new Beta Tau pledge. Who do you think has a long face over that? Why Hank Brennes, of course. Marshal Hyde, last semester's man about the campus, dropped in on last Monday to take up where Sfim left off with Pat.

Catudio

We know he can act—remember The Hunchback of Notre Dame? Incidentally, we wonder why Robert Cummings and Robert Stack weren't cast in this one.

Gus Schilling shines notable as the flustered Fresnan. The scene where Schilling is waiting in the terminal for a train, is clever and hilarious. We advocate that the movies should have more scenes of this type in order to come up with "original" humor.

Director Bruce Manning has done a creditable job in piecing together one of Deanna Durbin's better films. Universal has all but duplicated the Twentieth Century Fox film, The Pied Piper. The human understanding of children in the present war is clearly depicted Only love and kindness can defeat bitter antagonism.

The Amazing Mrs. Holliday—that's Deanna—will positively not win any Academy Award honors, but just the same, it's entertainment in the best Deanna Durbin manner.

Hogan

Don Taylor was mustered out of Cal by the ERC call and is back on the campus for a bit of a refresher course. He was in to buy some books. Well, he was! And just in passing, we think Corinne ought to know that while she is off to classes some really first class torch carrying goes on—in reverse, shall we say? We admit this isn't such a hot job for the two weeks that have elapsed but mid-terms are on us kiddies, and we thought we could rely on Johnny Scharetg to do our work for us.

A certain Miss Jean, who is new, but quickly getting acquainted, has been sitting and gazing bleary-eyed at a certain young man every day at the book store at about 11 o'clock. Take a tip from us, Jean and quit wasting your time.

DID YOU KNOW THAT

Maybe sitting next to you in one of your classes is someone who shook hands with the Ghandi, sat in Ronald Colman's car, or Heiled in Der Fuhrer's face. On the rampage it was disclosed that Sunny Baquero's Spanish accent is derived from living almost all of her life in South America.

RAM-DON NINES CLASH TODAY

Athletics And The War

"Our arch-rivals, the San Francisco State Bloomer Girls defeated the Ramettes in a LOVELY touch football game yesterday. All the girls had a simply lovely time, especially enjoying the delightful tea served during half time."

Quite probably college athletics will never slip so far, but the number of good athletes is steadily diminishing. The draft is an ever present threat to all teams, good or otherwise. What happens to a team when several key players are caught in the draft can best be judged by a look at the record of our cagers.

Bringing with it a taste of things to come, the Army has already called up its reservists. This included two star trackmen: Petch and Conway; plus Frank Isola, President of the AMS, as well as a baseball and basketball standout.

Then too, both the Marine and Navel Reserve Corps are planning "unofficially" to put all their men in uniform and ship them off to some university. This college probably won't be one of the lucky institutions! Included among these reserves are Jim Turner (All-OAL in football and basketball as well as a trackman of note) and Bob Coward (All-ACAL forward, hard hitting infielder, and a fair quarterback).

There is one bright spot in this picture of gloom. Seventeen year olds and 4-Fs are not being taken by the draft. Don't think that these young lads can't play ball. Rave Thurm made a varsity letter at California when he was only 17. Some of these 4-F's aren't hopeless wrecks, either. Remember Whitey Kurowski, the fellow that beat the Yankees in the World Series. Whitey was just classified 4-F.

For these reasons, it is rather obvious that college athletics will not be even close to pre-war calibre; probably being no better than that of the better high schools, such as Lowell, Poly, or Piedmont.

Spring Sports For Women

Women's Athletic Association Start Their Activities; Bowling, Swimming Are Popular

Women's Athletic Association activities started last week with sign-ups for spring sports.

Prevailing sports this semester are archery, badminton, basketball, bowling (co-educational), golf, ping pong, soft-ball, swimming, riding (co-educational), and tennis. Those students enrolling in these various activities will be organized into clubs and managers elected. Sports showing the largest sign-up so far are bowling, swimming, and badminton. Awards will be presented in May to those students who have kept at least a "C" average and have participated weekly.

Women entering into sports this month and turning out at their weekly practices will be eligible to attend the San Jose State Play-Day, April 10.

Those interested in learning "Officiating Techniques" for camp and playground leadership are urged to participate on Fridays at twelve with Miss Bertha Keller's officiating group. Women who like to play basketball are welcome to be guinea pigs.

This group of student officials and staff members in physical education plan to arrange recreational sports for the WAACS stationed at Funston Playfield near Fort Mason. WAA playdays with the WAACS will be announced soon. Many of these women were college students or graduates so competition should be good.

Fencing classes appearing this semester are not new to old students of the college, according to Miss Keller. Miss Verrel Weber has taught both men and women fencing in the past and is offering it again at one o'clock on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Intramural

Easterners, LATTS Favored To Take Mural League Titles

For the first time, two leagues, the American and the National, have been organized for intramural basketball. To decide the championship this setup has been evolved: At the end of the single round robin, the two top teams of each league will play three games, one against each of the other finalists. The team winning the most games in the final tourney being declared the champs.

A two league system was adopted mainly to cut down the length of playing time necessary for a 17 team league. The play-off tournament at the end will give added lustre to the second place berth; making it the equal of the top spot insofar as championship chances are concerned.

Today's Games:

3:15
Flying Tigers vs. Easterners
Tri-Epsilon vs. Eagles
Brady's Beauties vs. RDD

4:15
Beta Tau vs. Screwballs
Psi Lambda Phi vs. Phantoms
HOTHS vs. LATTS

Intramural cagers completed their second week of play yesterday, some slightly the worse for wear. The Donos, for example, aren't sure just what happened to them in their clash with RDD, but whatever it was, it cost them the game. Donomen swear that somebody robbed them of six points and that the referee was oblivious to fouls in one of the ruggedest games on the intramural record.

The much publicized LATTS lived up to their press notices by thumping the Donos soundly. With the aid of Dalimat and Clayton Hooper, a freshman flash from Lowell, the Donos surged into an early 8 to 0 lead. In desperation, the LATTS concentrated their defense on Hooper and eventually caught up. Despite the frantic efforts of their bewildered opponents, the LATTS committed scoring mayhem in the second half to win by a convincing margin.

Imposing victories were scored by the other strong America League in the race for the title. It would seem from here that four teams stand out in the American League, namely: Gnats, LATTS, HOTH, and the rechristened Newman Club.

In the National League, the Easterners loom up as one of the favorites because of their massacre job on the Screwballs and 43-32 decision over the men of Beta Tau. Woodman, Coward, and Greene carry the weight of the trans-bay lads, having scored some 80 or more points between them in two games. Psi Lambda Phi, a strong contender last year, and Newman's Varsity, which on three previous occasions took the intramural cage crown, both figure to be around when the awards are handed out.

Turner, Hedges Beat Sibold, Loughery; Take Hunch Title

The Mutt and Jeff hunch team of Turner and Hedges whipped Loughery and Sibold two consecutive times: 22-18 and 22-16 for the hunch title. Turner and Hedges and Loughery and Sibold had previously defeated other teams.

The tight defense of Turner & Co. held in check the beautiful screening that had baffled all of the previous foes of the losers. Jim Turner, former OAL choice from Castlemont, was on a scoring rampage throughout the campaign, usually tossing in some 14 or more points per game. Much of this scoring was made possible by the feeding passes of teammate Harry Hedges.

In the semi-finals, Falk and Ferreboeuf came near upsetting the champs in a wild melee, falling short only in the overtime, 26-22. Elbows, hips, and hacking arms flashed through the air with carefree abandoh; both sides making an effort to foul "fustest and mostest."

Hunch basketball made an impressive debut in its opening season in attracting 36 players. Not only local hamburgers participated for several trans-bay lads, headed by Coward and Turner, competed in the tournament.

Loughery Ready To Hurl Season Opener For Rams; Outfield Well Fortified

This afternoon in Seals Stadium at 3:30, the college baseball team will play the University of San Francisco, if the weather permits. Because of the bad weather and wet grounds the team has been able to hold only two real practices, so they will probably go into the game as underdogs.

The outlook for a good season is at the present time very bright in spite of the loss of our only returning veterans: Frank Isola and Homer Winter who went into the service. Our pitching staff is composed of boys who have played before in high school and semi-pro leagues. They are Frank Loughery, John Heitman, Dick Boyle and Jim Greene. One of the strongest positions on the team is that of catcher. Jack Sibold, an excellent hitter is vieing with Herb Levy for the backstop position. Competition for first base is also very keen with George Hammerson holding a slight edge over Ted Bofinger. Phil Kollischonn and Dino Del Vigna are fighting it out for the keystone sack. Both these boys have hitting and fielding ability. There is an uncertainty about the short stop position. No one tried out for that spot so Coach Brady put in Bob Coward and Fred Bahrt and both are doing fine. Bob Queirolo is the only one at the third base position, but don't worry men. He has showed himself to be an outstanding ball player and should get attention from the major leagues. In the outfield, there are four men for three positions. The leading contender is Roy Mangini, who has been hitting the ball 300 to 400 feet in practice. The other three boys are: Larry Isola, Clayton Hooper and Dick Labourdette.

The schedule at the present time is very uncertain. "Negotiations" are being made at the present time to get games with the San Mateo, Marin and Menlo Junior Colleges, but as yet, no regular schedule has been drawn up.

Track

Ram Relaymen Enter Olympic Track Meet

Tonight at the Civic Auditorium, the big Olympic Club Invitational will be held. Our track team will send its fine relay team to compete with the mile relay teams of such schools as: U.S.C., California, Stanford and St. Mary's Pre-Flight. The boys who will run for us are: Dick Hultgren, who won the high and low hurdles in the city meet, and Melvin Evens, Harry Dunn, George Albertus.

Highlight of the meet will be the pole vaulting contest. Connie Warmerdam who holds the world's record, will compete against six other stars. Among them is Irv Moore, who was once Warmedam's pupil at Piedmont High. Moore won the Junior College meet last year with a jump of 14 feet.

Another event to watch will be the hundred yard dash when Hal Davis of California races Bill Smith of San Jose State. It is still doubtful at the present time if Davis will run but he is trying to work out a leg injury so that he can compete against Smith who is rated as the second fastest sprinter. The outstanding star in the 440 event is Cliff Bourland of U.S.C. He is the man that beat both Grover Klemmer and Hubie Kerns last year. The St. Mary's Pre-Flight School will contribute Earl Vickery, formerly of the Trojans.

The Guardsman staff wishes to apologize to Dr. Ben Freedlander for confusing him with his colleague and non-relation, Dr. R. Dufficy Friedlander in a health column by line. Dr. R. Dufficy Friedlander preceded Dr. Ben Freedlander as men's health adviser at the college.

Tennis Team To Play State March 26; U.C. On April 10

March 26 will be the date of the college tennis team's first contest. On that date they face the San Francisco State team. The only other games on our schedule so far are University of California on Saturday, April 10, at 10:00, and the University of San Francisco at 2 p.m. some day at the end of March. The reason that we have so few games on our schedule is because we are not sure as yet of the money allotment given to men's sports for the spring term.

The turnout for tennis has been very good this year with many boys turning out. Norm Scheu, Ronny McArthur, Gene Barradas and "Val" Valemy are the returning veterans on the team and the newcomers should show enough promise to fill out the team's roster.

Students, Coaches Meet; Discuss Sport Budgets

At its meeting of last Tuesday, the minutes of which will be published in the forthcoming issue of The Guardsman, the Executive Committee approved the final budget for the men's sports program.

Approval was given for a lump sum of $500.00 which will be administered by the sports staff according to the demands of schedules and competition in Baseball, Track and Tennis.

Greatest curtailment will come in Track and Tennis. Few Northern California junior colleges plan to enter the track and field competitions and, according to Russ Sweet, the Rams will plan only one, at the most two, meets. Tennis likewise will be trimmed because of the limitations imposed on transportation.

Coach Lee Eisan expressed complete satisfaction with the Executive Committee's management of the sports budget. Speaking before the committee, Eisan said that, "the college plans to restrict competition in all sports to a radius of fifteen miles, with the possible exception of games with service teams where transportation or other accommodations will be provided by the Army, Navy or Coast Guard."

Executive Committee Holds Informal Dance At St. Francis Hotel; Plans For Spring Socials Rest On Response

The Colonial Room of the St. Francis will be the scene of the first off-campus dance of this semester, when, next Friday evening, the Associated Students will sponsor the regular Freshman Hop.

This informal dance will be free to all students with Student Body cards and will feature the music of Clem Kennedy of S. F. State College. No committee has been announced as the class officers have not yet been elected. Street clothes and necktles will be the things to wear. Ernestine Cervelli, vice-president of the Associated Students said that she hoped "for a large attendance, so that we will be able to have more dances like this one." Remember, Friday, March 19, from 9 to midnight for a good time at the St. Francis.

Three Plays Being Cast By College Players Group

Plans are under way for the presentation of a play in commemoration of Shakespeare's birthday. "When Shakespeare's Ladies Meet" is a one act comedy with an all girl cast. According to Mrs. Somers, college Dramatics instructor, there is "some excellent material in the Speech 42a class" and, since the play has an all-girl cast, fewer difficulties are expected than in other productions, where the war will affect many of the men students.

"Submerged" is another one-act play which the drama group hopes to produce this semester. All the roles in this tragedy will be played by men and the setting will set forth the heroism among five men in a sunken submarine.

AGS Has Large List Of Honor Students

Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college scholarship society, starts the spring semester with an enrollment of 83 students, announces Miss Alice Cooper, sponsor of the society. The semester's enrollment includes nine Associate Members and 74 Regular Members.

The following students are members:

Associate Members: Raymond Douglas, Ann Hart, Jean Low, Shirley McRae, Frances Minton, Carin Person, Shirley Rodgers, Phyllis Soisich and Frank Van Liew.

Regular Members: Marilyn Bon Ahn, Richard Anderson, Maria Aranda, John Arcidiacono, Audrey Armstrong, Betty Ann Attwater, Mary Baures, Enzo Belli, Barbara Caswell, Martin Chinu, Gloria Clavona, Rosemarie Coleman, Doris Crane, Barbara Dazersten, Edith Dresdner, Nadine Dunn, Ethel Elliot, Norman Epstein, Jane Fairbanks, Eileen Fink, Robert Fong.

Leslie Galvan, William Gibson, Lily Gyn, Lloyd Hamill, Jerome Harnigan, Lawrence Hawkinson, Warren Heiman, Doris Heruriel, Jean Hodgkinson, George Holden, Roberta Hood, Harold Hymon, Barbara Jacobs, Myron Jacobs, Arthur Jue, George Lamberl, Donald Lawson, Elizabeth Leong, Lorna Legaas, Bernice Lubetich, Claire Luccianni, Maybelle Marr, Louise Matejovic, John McLaughlin, Nancy Miller, Ruth Neil, Edith Nickelsburg, Robert Olson, George Osteitag, Fernando Penalosa, Ada Perofti, Gus Perscheid, Dick Petch, Marjorie Power, James Reed, Marilyn Ritchie, Lloyd Rohrs, Schmidt, Douglas Shull, Evelyn Short, William Starkey, Peggy Stewart, Jean Stohl, Elizabeth Sutton, Lois Swartz, David Tilles, Barbara Treganowen, Lorraine Trussell, Fran Weesmer, Nan Whaley, Betty White and Lillian Sun Yu.

Don Thompson, NBC Producer, Rehearses His 'Hawthorne House'; Discovers Zenia Konovaloss

Don Thompson, producer of Hawthorne House, and a member of the local staff of the National Broadcasting Company, gave the first of the previously announced series of Radio Lectures at the college last Tuesday.

Members of the Speech 13 and 14 classes were cast in the current episode of Hawthorne House and reproduced it. After Thompson had completed his lecture, which was more or less a question and answer session, he happened to mention the fact that he was to produce a show that afternoon based on Tschaikowski's music. Since this show, a sustaining program called "Romantique", had a good many Russian terms in it, he arranged for Zenia Konavaloss, one of the students to sit in during the production in the capacity of an "advisor on Russian terms".

Bible Club Active With Spring Program, Study

Inspired by last year's successful activities which included the Books for Servicemen drive and the challenging talk by Mr. Vernon V. Morgan of the University of California Bible League at the club's inaugural banquet held February 12, the Bible Club plans an interesting and active program for this semester.

The club sent invitations to all the new students of the college to be present at its first regular meeting.

All students interested in studying the Bible are invited to join the Bible Club. Meetings each Thursday at one, Room 200.

There is a manpower problem in Germany with tragic overtones. Preparations are reported under way for professional military training of boys 14 and 15 years old.

Beta Phi Beta To Hold Formal Initiation Soon

Beta Phi Beta will hold its formal initiation on March 19 at the St. Francis Hotel.

The new members are: Cyril Commerer, Pat Pollock, Ed Casqueira, Boyd Stack, "Scotty" Stebonne, John Cattermale, Jerry Wills, Ken Hewlett, "Dud" Sullivan, Lyle Pember, Emmet Shearer, Stephen Knoll.

Beta Phi Beta also announced their new officers for the spring semester: John DeGrace, president; Jack Brown, vice-president; Bill Pool, treasurer; Bob Howard, secretary, and Lenny Cinnamond, pledge master.

A joint meeting of the Beta Phi Beta fraternity and the Phi Beta Rho sorority will be held at 160 Urbano Drive, the home of Dolly Doty, tonight at 8:00 p.m.

Various Tests Given To Assist Choice Of Career

With the opening of this semester, a new testing procedure will be introduced into the psychology classes of career-guidance. Personality, clerical, mechanical and vocational-interest tests will be given to students enrolled in this course. All students are welcomed to register into the career-guidance conferences. Starting February 23, an introduction to the course was made in Room 100 at twelve o'clock., The following Tuesday, March 2, the testing procedure will begin.

Math 51

Math Dept. Ask Students Heed Requirements

Students enrolled in courses in mathematics or the physical sciences are reminded that the Mathematics 51 requirement for these courses will be rigidly enforced, according to Dr. Andrewa Noble, coordinator for the arithmetic program.

Page 18 of the Announcement of Courses, 1942-43, reads: "Regular students shall include in their programs the following required subjects: . . . 5. Mathematics 51 in the cases of students enrolling for any course in mathematics, physics, chemistry, or astronomy who do not obtain a satisfactory grade in the Arithmetic Test given at entrance." The only exception is Physics 30.

Those students who have either failed the entrance test or who have not taken it and who do not enroll in Mathematics 51 will find it added to their study lists with an F grade for each midterm period and the final grade. They will receive no credit or grade in any Mathematics or physical science course until the requirement is cleared.

Students who are in doubt about their status with regard to Mathematics 51 should consult Dr. Noble in Room 185. She will be glad to look up their records or answer any questions concerning the course.

Mathematics 51 is a refresher course in arithmetic fundamentals. The textbook is an arithmetic workbook, through which students may work as rapidly as they please. An industrious student can complete the material and be ready for a retest within a month or six weeks, at which time he is given a retest. If he passes this retest, he receives a unit credit and is through with the course. Dr. Noble warns students that these retests are open only to people enrolled in Mathematics 51. Students can clear the mathematics requirement after the semester starts only by enrolling in a Mathematics 51 course.

Playground Depts. Seek Director Help

Private and city playground departments are asking Claude T. Silva, of the college placement office, for student recreation directors. Both men and women are needed, but mostly the former.

This is pleasant outdoor work for those who like to be with and are interested in children. The hours are from 3 to 6 in the afternoons, 6 to 9 in the evenings, and all day on Saturdays or Sundays. The playgrounds are scattered over the city so that students interested may work at one near their residence. At present, there is an opening in Visitation Valley.

Women can handle a considerable amount of this work according to Mr. Silva. They can manage the hobby, handicraft, and art classes besides directing the games for the younger children. There is always one fellow on the grounds to take care of any disciplinary cases that arise.

A job of this type fits in with the war-time program, because playgrounds are one of the places where children whose parents work, can go after school. Without proper supervision, delinquency can result.

Executive Committee Minutes

The following budget appropriations were approved at a regular meeting of the Executive Council held March 2, 1943.

Activity	Appropriation
A cappella	$ 100.00
Administration	50.00
Alpha Gamma Sigma	37.00
Associated Men Students	95.00
Associated Women Students	180.00
Basketball	110.00

Sophomore Formal	325.00
Womens Athletic Association	85.00
Graduation	150.00
Forum	50.00
Payment of Bills regularly incurred but not paid in previous semester	170.00
Undistributed Appropriations	400.00
Total of Approved Appropriations	$3,512.00

Action on the following budget requests was postponed for later consideration:

Activity	Requested
Baseball	$300.00
Football	100.00
Tennis	65.00
Track	75.00
Health & Medical	200.00

The first regular meeting of the Executive Council was called to order at 4:40 P.M. by President Jack Brown. Under new business Mr. Lyon was called upon to explain the budget for the semester and he distributed budget work sheets to those present. The items listed under Estimated Revenue were discussed and Mr. Lyon informed us that under present day conditions these estimates were optimistic. The estimated revenue for the semester is about $3,500.00.

We then listened to a discussion by Mr. Luckmann concerning The Guardsman request for $1,100.00. If was explained that the printer will receive about $937.000 of the amount and that aven by figuring pictures and incidental items as closely as possible, the amount could not be reduced any further. Mr. Luckmann discussed the possibility of $100 refund from advertising. Dean Browne volunteered the information that The Guardsman budget had been cut as far as possible and since the other organizations were receiving their requests, it seemed only fair to grant The Guardsman request also.

A discussion was opened concerning appropriation for athletic activities and due to confusion resulting from lack of information regarding team schedules and participation, President Jack Brown appointed Bob Stahmer as a committee of one to secure someone from the gym to present reasons for the various requests to the Executive Council. Dean Browne offered to have the Medical request explained at the same time. Ernestine Cervelli moved that we accept the budget as presented with the exception of the requests of the Baseball, Football, Tennis, Track and Medical. Ed Brain seconded the motion and the budget was unanimously approved as attached.

Since there was no further business the meeting was adjourned at 5:50 P.M.

Respectfully submitted,
BARBARA TREGANOWEN, Secretary

More On The Army In Review

geant briskly ordered a platoon of 13 men—of which I supposedly was a member—to move out of "Hut City" to the Flight Section Barracks two miles distant.

"But, Sergeant, we'll get soakin' wet," meekly protested a Dunsmuir, California, doughboy.

It was a silly statement to make, we thought. The sergeant slowly shook his head and whistled softly.

"Man," he began, "you're not home, you're in the Army, and since you're in ranks 'at ease,' KEEP YOUR BIG MOUTH SHUT."

Result: we trudged the two ferocious miles in a field of sloppy mud carrying two heavily-loaded barracks bags. We'll learn . . . but fast!

Following another physical examination, our second day at the field was spent in undertaking mechanical and Morse code tests. Classification follows in about a week.

I'd never thought this Guardsman alumnus would be assigned to duty with the Air Corps Technical School Squadron, but such is the case with me. It's a nice thought—being a member of the Air Corps.

The most precious occupation of a soldier after working hours is the relating of the beautiful features of one's home town or city.

"Say there, fella, yawl nevah been to Tennesssee, hev ya? Man, we got the best state in the Unyon!"

Of course a Californian will explode with: "Listen, Bud, when you stand on Powell Street, in San Francisco, and watch the city parade by, you're seeing something and I don't mean maybe."

So much for the battle of words—

Keesler Field, from what I have seen, is an Army city of tents, huts, and barracks houses with training planes maneuvering about in the skies during drill sessions.

College Women Members Of Auxiliary Services

All branches of the service now boast proudly of representatives from San Francisco Junior College, including the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps and the Women's Auxiliary Voluntary Emergency Services.

Dolores Connor and Ruth Berryesa have joined the WAACS, Geraldine Magee, member of Alpha Lambda Chi Sorority and former vice-president of the Newman Club, is now a member of the WAVES. Miss Magee graduated from San Francisco Junior College last June and was speech major. She leaves U. C. for the WAVES.

Anyone interested in details concerning the women's armed services should consult Dean Dougherty.

Forum Club Meeting At Dr. Mercer's Tonight

The Forum Club will hold a meeting tonight at 8 p.m. at the home of Dr. Dorothy Mercer, the club sponsor.

The differences between Absolute and Progressive music will be the topic of discussion for the evening.

All interested students are invited to attend.

Those Elections Again!

Class Officers Finally Chosen; Usual Turnout For Elections Sustains Custom

Not more than a hundred people controlled the elections for class officers last Tuesday. Largest representation was the Low Freshman class with some thirty-five voting, poorest response came from the Low Sophomore group.

Results of the balloting in the High Freshman election brought a tie of 7 to 7 for the presidency. This deadlock was broken by a gentlemen's agreement which placed the final result in the lap of chance. Dean Browne's two-headed coin was called into action and Charley Loughridge called it—leaving Jack Habermeyer the loser.

Hotel Division To Streamline Courses

To meet requests by industry, that young women be trained as rapidly as possible for food work, the Hotel and Restaurant Division is now streamlining its courses into compact units of eight weeks. Each unit will train for a specific "spot." High school graduates or other young women showing aptitude for the work will be accepted. Spot jobs such as food checker, cashier, food server, dining room hostess, front office clerk, and hotel and restaurant accountants, are urgently needed by industry. Students trained at the Hotel and Restaurant Division should be able to hold outside part time jobs within four weeks. "Correlation of the entire program of single units will give a comprehensive training for industry as a whole," states Mrs. Hilda Watson, chairman of the Hotel and Restaurant Division.

Inter-American Affairs Contest Open To SFJC

The Executive Committee of the National Discussion Contest on Inter-American Affairs has voted to include junior colleges in the contest this year, according to Wilson B. Paul, Denver University.

How the American Republics are Cooperating in Winning the War is the subject for discussion. There will be no expense to the contestant or the institution for participation in the contest. Send your registration to W. Hayes Yeager, National Director, The George Washington University, Washington, D. C. The local contest should be held on or before April 1 and the manuscripts should be in Mr. Yeager's hand by April 10.

WSS Holds Tea Sunday; Groups Eighth Year

The Women's Service Society will hold its semi-annual formal tea on March 21 at the home of Eleanor Frates. Thirty college women will be entertained by the society. Receiving the guests will be the officers for this spring: President, Marilyn Bush; Vice-President, Claire Connor; Secretary, Roberta Hood.

Again this semester the WSS has been operating the Junior College Book Exchange as a service to the student body. Through the Exchange, an entirely non-profit organization, text books may be bought and sold at prices set by the students themselves. Several years ago, the Executive Council requested the WSS to accept the responsibility of maintaining such an exchange and since then, it has been one of the major activities of the group.

The WSS is now looking forward to aiding in various school activities this term and is in hopes of helping to sponsor a Bond Drive such as the drive of a year ago in which $12,000 worth of War Bonds were sold.

The purpose of the Women's Service Society, one of the oldest organizations at college, is to help foster a college spirit and uphold college tradition. Membership in the organization is invitational and open to all, women. Prospective members will be entertained.

Retail Merchandising Program Attracts Women

A cooperative merchandising course based on the relationship between industry and the college has proved quite popular since it was initiated by the college in 1939.

Through the cooperation of some of San Francisco's most prominent department stores, there is now an unequaled opportunity for part-time work leading to permanent jobs for students wishing both a job and an education.

Library Administers Visual-Aid Equipment

Visual-aid instruments will be charged out by the college library for use in classes at any time. At present, the library collection of these instruments includes a motion picture machine, both silent and talkiffg, and a slide projector. All the films are catalogued. There is also a mirror-phone and a record player with a collection of fine records.

Navy V-12 Course Will Prepare Men For April Exams

Beginning on March 22 a special refresher course designed to prepare students for the V-12 qualifying examination will be offered. Ten hours of refresher work, including elements of testing, mathematics fundamentals, and vocabulary, will be given. At the end of the course a final testing session will be conducted and instructions will be given concerning the procedure for the coming examination.

The class will meet from 3 to 5:30 p.m. on March 22, 24, 26, 29 and 31, in Room 100. It is strongly recommended that all students who intend to take the qualifying tests for the new Navy College Training Program enroll in this class. Their whole future may depend upon the V-12 test result.

Students who are eligible to take the V-12 test are invited from other colleges and high schools to take advantage of this ten hour course.

The test, as announced in last week's Guardsman, will take place on Friday, April 2, between the hours of 9 and 11 a.m.

Attractive Awards Open To Graduates

Graduating students wishing to continue their education in higher institutions of learning, are specifically urged to investigate the numerous scholarships that are now being awarded junior college graduates by leading colleges throughout the nation.

Especially deserving of attention, among these scholarships, are those now offered by the University of Chicago, the University of Redlands, and Fresno State College.

The University of Chicago is now offering scholarships yielding both full tuition of $300 and scholarships yielding half-tuition of $150 upon the recommendation and application of eligible students. The University of Redlands offers one $300 scholarship to a graduate of San Francisco Junior College. This provides half-tuition for both the junior and senior years. Fresno State College awards several scholarships each year in amounts of $50 to $100 to junior college graduates recommended for scholastic ability and citizenship.

Advertising Art Students Aid Public Schools Week

In conjunction with the statewide Public Schools Week, the advertising art students of the college are producing five large 30 by 40 posters to be placed in the windows of some of San Francisco's larger department stores. The posters will follow this year's theme of "Education For Victory."

Fetch A Frail To Frisk And Frolic At The Frantic; Frosh Hop Promises A "Time" Tonight

Tonight at 9 p.m., the Hotel St. Francis will be the scene of the traditional and informal "Frosh Hop." As usual the "No Corsage" rule will be in effect.

Scheduled for the evening is the introduction of the new ASSFJC and class officers. Music will be supplied by Clem Kennedy and his boys who hail from San Francisco State.

At the California Hotel, the Tri Epps will hold their formal initiation in the early evening and will join the dancers at the St. Francis later on.

Ernestine Cervelli
Dance Chairman

The Beta Phi Beta Fraternity has arranged for their formal initiation at the St. Francis, starting at 8 o'clock and carrying on at the Hop.

Arrangements for the dance were made by Ernestine Cervelli, Associated Students vice-president, who said that she hoped "for a large attendance, so that the executive committee will be encouraged to have more dances like this one."

Jobs

'Part-Time Work Is Plentiful' -- Silva

Part-time and Saturday only department store jobs are now opening for women students. Applicants need not be experienced to obtain sales work.

Many office jobs are still open to women who have had courses in filing, typing, and shorthand and can put in at least four hours daily.

The department stores have some part-time stockroom work for men students. There are also week end defense jobs open for fellows. East Bay shipyards in Alameda, Oakland and Richmond intend to employ college men on Saturdays and Sundays. If swing-shift hours are arranged men may also work on Fridays.

For additional information concerning these jobs see Mr. Silva in Room 155.

College Will Open Child Care Study Group April 5

A new section to train for recreation leadership in the San Francisco community Child Care Centers will start on the campus on April 5. One hundred and fifty women are needed. Mothers and other adults who are in good health are invited to qualify themselves for the part time paid positions soon to open up.

The six weeks course, from 10 to 1 daily, carries four units of college credit and a foundation in Child Psychology, Creative Activities, Plays and Games, Nutrition, and Child Center Administration.

April Production Cast; Rehearsals Under Way

When Shakespeare's Ladies Meet, the one-act comedy planned for the end of April, is well under way. Mrs. Somers has announced that Flora Allen, Doreen Arnold, Chloe Carillo, Helen Huff, Rosalie Miller and Lucille Valentine will take the roles in the play.

Two other plays have been scheduled for this semester, and it is expected that casts for these will be available before long.

AWS Entertains WAAC's

Last Wednesday afternoon, Room 158 was the scene of the AWS reception tea.

Green shamrocks and green and gold decorations honored the day. The tea proved to be quite successful, and many of the women were able to get much useful information on the Women's Army.

OWI Official Addresses SS 1 Group Next Tuesday

William Gahagan, assistant to Dean Jennings, chief of the local Office of War Information, will speak at the next President's Lecture on March 23 at one o'clock in Room 136 on the subject "The Office of War Information." The organization, function and aims of the OWI will be discussed.

Gahagan's visit will be in the nature of a return engagement as he supplied pictures for last Tuesday's program. Among those films shown were: Divide and Conquer, News in Review, and the Spirit of '43, starring Donald Duck.

Graduation Not Automatic For Students; File Form

An urgent request that all students who have not yet filed petitions for graduation do so at once was voiced by Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, this week.

The filing of petitions early is to the student's own benefit as it leaves ample time for the registrar's office to investigate the student's program and advise him as to his standing in regard to graduation.

Alpha Gamma Sigma Meets For Election March 25

Thursday, March 25, has been set as the date for the first meeting of Alpha Gamma Sigma. All members are especially urged to attend this meeting for important discussions on the semesters' work and the election of officers. The meeting will take place in Room 205 at 1 o'clock.

Freedom?

Anniversary

TWENTY-THREE years ago today the United States Senate rejected the League of Nations proposal sponsored by President Wilson. We wonder if we dare think the thought that it could happen again.

Wars that are fought for spoils cannot be expected to produce a national or international sense of responsibility. Men want compensation for the sufferings that war imposes, they want to be free once again. And you aren't free if you have to be concerned with someone outside yourself.

In line with Woodrow Wilson's idealism we have the new idealism of Roosevelt and Wallace. A secure world, free from worry and even self-responsibility is the essence of the new utopia. Such schemes seem to insure that freedom men want most, especially men tired of fighting. Actually, we seem to be facing Hillaire Belloc's "Servile State", an animal state of being where nobody cares 'bout nuthing, 'cept hisself.

Knowledge vs Information

YESTERDAY we overheard a trio of intellectuals, freshmen at that, giving their reactions to the goings on in college classes. "If I've heard it in one class I've heard it in three, 'that the family is the unit of society,' same line we got in high school."

It may be that the high school has been too much concerned with sociology, economics and political science—to the neglect of history, mathematics and English—but it strikes us that the collegian is still a bit slow in recognizing the difference between learning facts, acquiring knowledge, as presented in prep school, and UNDERSTANDING.

Students who want to continue taking everything on faith will find a striking similarity and boring repitition in the high school and college curriculum. The college student is only worthy of the name when he realizes that information is not knowledge.

Reports from the fighting men's camps, behind the lines and in the fray, tell us that not too many men know why and what they are fighting for. They complain that "nobody tells us what we are fighting for." These are the same men who can tell you that the family is the unit of society, they remember that fact from simple reiteration, but they don't understand it—or the question of "what we are fighting for" would never stand.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Phantom Letter Writer; Sports Page Criticized

• Impaired Vision
Editor, The Guardsman:
What's the deal on those bulletin boards anyway? I was under the impression that the stuff smeared on them was supposed to shatter-proof the glass on them. What's the answer? In your last issue, you, as well as a person signed E. W. attacked these bulletin boards so you must know all the answers. How about letting us in on them?
L.L.

• Missing Nick!
Editor, The Guardsman:
We sporting fans miss Nick Barbarotto's column. The sport page just isn't what it used to be. Seems to us that some of the punch is missing. Even though Nick is gone, it seems to us that between 4 f's and 17 year olds, you should be able to find someone to take his place.

Editor's Note:
We have an aspirant or two we're watching closely. One of these days there'll be some changes on the staff.

• No Funds For Rallies
Editor, The Guardsman:
We read that Eddie Brain has been elected Rally Commissioner, but the last we heard of Ed was in this paper. The first mid-term is over and still nary a rally. A little less publicity and a little more action. How about it, Ed?
Jibester
Dear Jibester:
No rallies have been planned for this semester for the very simple reason that no money has been allotted for this worthy cause. Now, if you want rallies, send a check to Eddie Brain and he'll do something for you.

• English Major?
editor, the guardsman?
yes, that's a question mark, and its there on purpose too; who is the editor of this sheet anyway? i asked you the same question last week, and even though you prinfed my epistle, you didn't answer it. i noticed, that you print a lot of letters, but that you hardly ever answer them. why???
yours,
snoopy, alias irate
Editor's Note:
Dear Lower Case Snooper:
There is such a temptation to embarass the irate, illiterate letter writers on such fundamental things as punctuation. With the same comma fault in this and the letter above it should appear that you are afraid of identity.

Service-Men-o-gRams . . Sumski

We intercepted a card from Jim Lee addressed to Bob Catudio. Funny, Jim is in Nashville, Tennessee and Bob is in Biloxi, Mississippi. "Write right away, you bum," is the salutary closing of the message. Lee's friends can reach him by addressing A.A.F.C.C. 39037946, Squadron 3, Group 3, Nashville, Tennessee. If we guess right, Jim is stationed at Southwestern University.

From the Army Advanced Flying School comes word from Suey Louie. They put Suey through Administration school and to his surprise he ranked first in his class. "My college training sure did me some good," he avers to his correspondent. Louie is now working in the orderly room.

A press release from McChord Field, Washington, tells of a new "three striper," John Vukovich. Jack attended this college recently. Prior to entering the Army he worked for the Consolidated Aircraft at San Diego before he was inducted into the Army in 1941.

Jim Parmenter, a signal corps man "somewhere on an island, with natives," makes the point in the opening paragraph of his letter, that "over here letters are about the only things we have to look forward to, despite the weekly movies." Jim passed up a chance to go to OCS in Australia for the life of a private. Ratings come very slowly when you're on an island.

Life In The Army . . . . Catudio

Keesler Field, Mississippi

Basic training is the beginning of a course of martial study which may lead to Casablanca, Australia, England, or legendary Guadalcanal.

Yours truly, who has lingered longingly for another reportorial assignment, has been classified in the air corps administrative division. I was originally scheduled to be classified in the radio operator and mechanic section, but a neat-appearing second-lt. "saved me."

"So you want to be in administrations?"

"Yes sir," I replied, "if it's possible.

He looked at me and stroked his chin with his thumb. His grey eyes widened perceptibly, and I was afraid of what decision he might make.

"Ever have any administrative experience, clerical, typing?"

"Well, sir," I began slowly, "I majored in journalism in college and all work was typewritten."

"Catudio," he ordered briskly, "report to Sergeant Thurman and I'll give you a typing test."

That was that! I reported to the Sarge and passed the so-called test to qualify me for administration school.

Beside our petty grievances, the men who undertake basic training are always wishing to be assigned to a permanent party. Once a week, the "Basics" are marched to the immunization clinic for their regular three "shots."

In the afternoons—when it isn't raining—every basic training group drills on a drill field adjacent to the sluggish Gulf stream. The field is infested with tall slim pine trees that border every barrack. And now to Army chow!

There's no food rationing in our army and consequently the food is the best. Here's an example of a Sunday dinner: turkey and dressing, mashed potatoes and gravy, beets, peas and carrots, onion soup, lettuce salad, cherry pie, apple butter, bread, and coffee.

It's such good food that some go back for a "re-fill." And with the good comes the bitter—meaning K.P., that old bugaboo of the lowly private.

Last week, to be exact, your correspondent and 129 other unfortunate victims, arose at 3 a.m. to begin running the gamut of kitchen police. I washed tin plates by the thousands, carried trays until my arms ached, and when it was all over, I returned to my barracks after completing 17 hours of K.P. duty.

Calisthenics, the army's version of collegiate "body building" is held twice each day. It's one, two, bend, three, four, bend, five, six—and when the last order is given you untwist your arm from back of your leg and crawl to your barracks.

This week, the Army basic training plans is featuring daily gas mask drills. Soldiers are taught how to use their equipment and are given the chance to waltz about in a gas chamber. The gas, of course, is not powerful or harmful, but it'll teach Uncle Sam's fighting men a lesson in caution.

It's been raining quite heavily in Biloxi this week, but even a torrential rainstorm can't stop half of the men from thinking of home, the family, and friends.

Platter Chatter . . . . Persson

Undoubtedly the corniest and most uncalled for song apt to come out of the war is a hill-billy tune that for some entirely unknown reason is actually enjoying a few nickels. I'm talking about "There's A Star Spangled Banner Waving Somewhere," It's really out of place in this column, but is merely mentioned because it characterizes the majority of tunes that have tried to catch the fancy of the public such as "Over There" did in the last war. None have succeeded. Closest of all to succeed was probably "Johnny Doughboy," but it's popularity waned quickly. Maybe it's because we haven't the writers; maybe it's because we have no George M. Cohan, but whatever it is, we have not yet come across a song with the lyrics and melody that has captured the spirit of fighting America. This "Star Spangled Banner" job tells of a soldier boy who wants to become a hero in the worst way, but—why does he have to lose a leg and moan about the hereafter in a croon that would do well on "The Grand Ole Opry!"

Best "Can't Get Out of This Mood" seems to be the Ole' Professor—Kay Kyser's. Done on Columbia, Harry Babbjit and the Quartet do it up fine with harmonizing and such . . . and the tune is so-o-o sentimental.

We had thought we'd heard Dinah at her best some time ago on "How Come You Do Me," but the Shore gal gets better with every issue—and this time its really something! That's right, we mean "You'd Be So Nice To Come Home To" and man-oh-man—can she do things with those vocal cords of hers!

I don't think there is a male vocalist today who can compare with Bob Eberle, Jimmy Dorsey's boy, who comes through so admirably on "Daybreak." Bob really is at his best on this Decca hit, and almost puts Sinatra a step behind him for honors. (What do we mean, A Step?)

For the "sweets" around the Junior College campus, we, have Claude Thornhill's "Rock-a-Bye Bay," a melody that reveals the maestro's amazing capability at the keyboard to great advantage. It's a slow-moving record, the sort that calls for the sandman!

Now that Lu Watters and Yerba Buena gang have definitely sold out the Dawn. Club to the Hurtado Bros., "world famous marimba band!" (it says here) there seems to be no out for all we San Franciscans who looked forward so eagerly to those visits to the Annie Street spot where music was being played righteously and well, the New Orleans way. This writer doesn't know just how many of you San Francisco Junior College students take to this particular type of jazz (and we don't mean swing,) but here's one who does. For those who have been interested enough in the music that had its origin deep in the jungles of Africa to delve further into its background, there is nothing better. It is not a thing of the moment, it will live longer than any "pop" tunes of the day. It has a colorful history, from the honky-tonks of New Orleans, up the Mississippi to Kansas City, from there to all points. Out of this type of music developed the Blues, Boogie-Woogie, Ragtime piano, hundreds of improvisions that swing of today has copied for the public's fancy. But there is only one real Jazz, and no Harry James can ruin it. Louis Armstrong, Meade Lux Lewis, Bud Freeman, Bix Beiderbecke, Muggsy Spanier . . . these are the pioneers in the music that will live forever.

Baseball

Ram Nine To Play Against Mission Bears Today At Crowley Field; Boyle, Hedges, Batteries

Today, at Father Crowley Field, the San Francisco Junior College baseball team plays the Mission High Bears. With only one game under its belt and squad members already disappearing in the draft, the team is still optimistic about having a good season. Jack Sibold, great catcher and hitter, has announced that he is going into the service. Jack was the number one catcher, and his going will greatly alter the team's plans. Fred Bahrt, ranking short stop on the team, will also leave shortly through the Navy V-1 program.

Our opponent for today, Mission High, usually has excellent teams and should prove to be stiff competition. Most of our games that we have scheduled at the present time are with prep schools, but we are trying to get games with the large local colleges and the service teams in the bay area. Whether or not the Army camps will organize baseball teams is still a mystery but, if they do, the Junior College nine will no doubt schedule them. Because of a limited budget, the team can schedule only about one month ahead, but we are sure that we will have a full season.

The starters for today's game will be Hedges, catcher and Boyle, pitcher. The starting infield will be composed of: Bofinger at first base, Coward at the keystone sack, Bahrt at shortstop and Querirole at third base. The infield is almost airtight. The boys are all exceptional fielders but their batting power is rather weak. The outfield is fairly strong and is composed of boys who all have had experience. Larry Isola will play left field. Labourdette will start in right field and speedy Clayton Hooper will play center field. There will probably be many substitutions made before the game is over so that the new boys can get experience and learn how to play better under fire.

As yet, we have only three major games on schedule. They are: San Francisco State at Ocean View on March 27, U.S.F. at Seals Stadium on April 6, and the California Frosh at Berkeley on April 10.

A complete schedule will be found at the bottom of this page.

College Health Notes

The first of a series of timely health articles by the college Health Department to keep the student informed on current health developments as they personally affect him.

Ignorance causes more diseases than germs.

Tuberculosis is still the chief menace of youth. It is the major cause of death in the age group 20 to 25 years.

Alcohol is indirectly the cause of more serious diseases than is any other agent. It causes many diseases of the heart, liver and nervous system, that in turn, create as many invalids as does the war.

• • •

The major principle in the treatment of any disease is rest. A broken bone is rested by splinting it. The heart and lungs by staying in bed and decreasing the amount of work that these organs have to do. The new sulfa drugs have not changed this basic principle.

In case of illness consult a doctor, not a druggist or your friends.

Consume less "cokes" for two reasons: 1. Each glass contains quite a large amount of caffeine; 2. It is unpatriotic to consume so much sugar.

Nose colds are not all caused by germs: some are caused by allergy to dust and pollens: some by reflex nervous symptoms.

Do you tire readily? Lack pep? See the college doctor. Insidious diseases sometimes start with these symptoms.

High blood pressure in young people is frequently caused by worry, nervous tension, and anxiety. Learn to compose yourself.

• • •

Can you name four good protein substitutes for meat? If not, you may not remain healthy during the war period.

New Commando Type Track Now Being Constructed

San Francisco Junior College's latest athletic innovation is an up-to-date obstacle course. The 350 yard course will be completed sometime next week.

A series of ten obstacles to test the agility of the male students make up the new project. Those familiar with prep school courses will recognize the breastworks, wall scale, overhead ladder, etc.

The obstacle course will be a part of either the boxing or decathalon divisions of the current P.E. program.

Track Team To Try Again After More Practice

The college track team inaugurated their track season last Friday night when they entered the big meet at the civic auditorium. The four men representing the junior college were Dick Hultgren, Melvon Evens, Harry Dunn, and George Albertus. Hultgren was lead off man and he started off in a flash, leading the men of Stanford, California, Pre-Flight, and others. Dick led the pack for quite a while, but was finally passed and as the race turned out, Stanford won and our team took last place. They put up a good fight, but on account of this lack of practice showing was poor.

Highlighting the meet as usual was Connie Warmerdam who cleared fifteen feet again for the 30th time. It was the last time he will compete for the duration as he is going into the service. The main upset was the defeat of Bill Smith, San Jose State sprinter, by Trout of U.S.C. Smith is rated as the second fastest sprinter in the country, next to Davis of California.

Newborn Halfback

Gym Head Lee Eisan Proud Poppa Of A Son

Congratulations are in order in the men's gymnasium!

Coach Lee Eisan, head of the physical education department, announced this week that he was the proud father of a six pound six ounce boy. The baby was born Tuesday, March 16, at St. Mary's Hospital, and he and the mother, Mrs. Edith Eisan, were doing very nicely.

It was reported that Eisan was seen scouting around the sporting goods stores during the week purchasing shoulder pads and a helmet, and from all indications you can look for Leland II cavorting at quarterback for the Golden Bears of Berkeley around about 1963.

Tennis Squad Loses Barradas, Valdemy

The tennis front reports the loss of two veteran players, Gene Barrades and "Val" Valdemy, and the anticipated loss of an excellent Oregon transfer, Ehmke. Despite these losses, Coach Wilson still has several good men left in the fold and retains high hopes for another fine season.

Those racqueteers not already gone the way of all 1-A's are now getting in condition for intercollegiate and high school competition by means of the tennis ladder tourney now in operation.

One more match, with the Saint Ignatius Wildcats, has been tentatively added to a schedule which includes the California Frosh, San Francisco State, and U.S.F. Frosh. As yet, the Stanford Freshmen have not given a reply to a proposed match with the Rams. A fairly complete schedule is in prospect for the Wilsonmen despite a slight cut in the tennis budget. Principle drawback comes from the fact that most, possibly even all, of the local jaycees have abolished tennis for the duration.

Intramural

National League Totters Due To Forfeits; Six Games Today With Playoffs Set For Next Tuesday

The National casaba league is in a state of near collapse with only three of the eight teams participating regularly. Because of this, most of the games are won by the simple process of forfeit. One outfit, Newman Varsity, has won three games, all of them by forfeit.

The forfeiting Phantoms are completely lacking in substance when game time rolls around. Psi Lambda Phi, a pre-season favorite, and the Flying Tigers, both had considerable trouble with the local draft boards. The Five Old Men, obviously not old enough, also experienced similar troubles. Some excuse for forfeiting exists for the Screwballs, most of whose players are also on the roster of Brady's baseball bashers.

Both intramural cage leagues engage in their season's finales this afternoon with the following five games to be played:

Friday's Games:
3:15
RDD vs. LATTS
Newman Club vs. HOTH
Easterners vs. Psi Lambda Phi
4:15
Brady's Beauties vs. Tri-Epsilon
Eagles vs. Donos

The Donos-Eagle and RDD-LATT clashes, though completely unimportant, will probably be the closest and most interesting of today's fare of dull and drab contests.

In what remains of the National League, the Newman Varsity and the Easterners reign supreme. Both the Newmanites and the Easterners had to challenge American League opponents to keep in practice. The LATTS swamped the Newman Varsity in the losers first start while the Easterners eked out a hard-fought overtime win over their challengers, the Donos, by a 48 to 45 score.

Three strong teams, the Gnats, LATTS, and Newman Club lead the strong American circuit with a total of but two setbacks thus far for the trio. The supposedly strong HOTHS were hampered in recent tilts by a lack of players, therefore had to play shorthanded and lost. The Newman Club still has a remote chance of reaching the playoffs if no more games are lost in the course of the season, an extremely doubtful possibility. As it stands, the LATTS and the Gnats will probably be the American League entrants, facing the Easterners and the Newman Varsity for the casaba championship of the intramural leagues. The play-offs are slated to start next Tuesday, the schedules being posted at 1:00 on that day.

Following basketball on the intramural program will be volleyball and boxing. Any and all parties interested in engaging in either of these two sports should notify Intramural Director Jack Brady of their intentions now or in the immediate future.

WAA Plans Active Program For Spring

WAA has a busy program planned for the spring. The organization will do its part for our "armed women" by arranging play days and showing the skill of its members in swimming, tennis, badminton, and basketball at Funston Playground, for the benefit of the WAAC's stationed there. These WAAC's also plan to participate in the next tea given by the Associated Women Students Volunteers. Those interested should see Miss Keller or Dean Dougherty.

Dorothy Fairbanks has resigned from her office of vice-president of the WAA. After her recent marriage, she left the college to study medicine in the east. Miss Fairbanks spent much of her time for the WAA.

Marguerite Martin has filled the vacated office.

"No, no, Albert! That's not the way to Save Food!"

From Where I Sit . . . Meyer

So you think holding a damp kleenex in one hand and gazing at a picture of a toothey buck private is a good way to spend Saturday night. In your present role, you fancy yourself a dramatic Juliet without a Romeo. Frankly, you look like a bloated cow going to slaughter. Now look at that picture again!

He isn't so dapper. His nose is spread all over his face, and he looks almost bald with the G.I. haircut. But I guess it is that crooked smile that gives you butterflies in your stomach. Odd how you miss him tonight when you haven't give him a thought or sent him a letter in three weeks.

Oh, you thought you did your part by sending those cookies you baked with your own carbon-colored hands. But you forgot to tell him that those lumps in the cookies weren't peanuts. Oh yes, you did send him a pale-pink sweater which you modeled on a 12-year-old boy who had just received his draft notice, well maybe he was a little older. Dear private liked the muffler very well, but pink doesn't exactly suit him.

So here it is Saturday night, and you sit moaning: "Mad about him, sad about him, how can I be glad about him, blues." Do you realize it's been almost three weeks since you wrote him. Do you recall the sacred vows to write a paragraph every hour—such nice vows, made over a lemon 66, real coke at that, not imitation. Now be honest, you haven't even thought of him until tonight and you are feeling sorry for yourself.

What about the handsome Harry with the teeth? He is away from friends, family and good times; he has a job to do and you should be helping him do it. Write him now, tonight, even if it's a short letter; but don't tell him about the new band at the St. Francis or about the new garbage boy with the "C" card. Don't tell him that his kid brother threw the toaster in his grandmother's face, or that his tires are all gone, and that you have lost his football pin. Tell him that you are unhappy and missing him and waiting for him to come back. Write often. Send snapshots. Send the one with your face in the dark, you look a little like Hedy Lamarr. Send the home-town paper to him along with the newest books. You won't need that old phonograph and he could fix up that old radio that only works when you jump on it. Remember it's your war as well as his.

Executive Committee Minutes

Tuesday, March 9, 1943

The second regular meeting of the Executive Council was called to order by President Jack Brown at 4:40 P.M. Those present were Mr. Lyon, Mr. Eisan, Br. Brown, Miss Cervelli, Miss Treganowen, Miss Dahlberg, Mr. Stahmer, and Miss Weisner. The minutes were read and approved.

Under old business, Mr. Lyon introduced Mr. Eisan who began his discussion concerning appropriations for gym activities. He explained that the baseball and tennis schedules are complete and definite, but if the scheduled games do not materialize, the money will not be used. He stated that the money will be used for track, for conference games and cleaning of uniforms. Mr. suggested that there be some constitutional appropriation for The Guardsman and for sports. President Jack Brown suggested that we grant a lump sum of $500.00 for men's athletic activities and Mr. Lyon asked that we grant $365.00 immediately and hold $135.00 in a reserve fund. After some discussion Bob Stahmer moved that we grant the Men's Athletic Association a lump sum of $500.00 in lieu of the requests submitted. The motion was seconded by Betty Dahlberg and was unanimously approved.

A discussion was opened concerning Health and Medical appropriations but a decision was not reached and no vote was taken.

An appropriation of $25.00 from the Administration fund was made as dues for the California Hotel Association in order that our membership might be maintained.

Under new business, Ernestine Cervelli presented the report of the Social Committee. She announced that the low freshman dance will be held on Friday evening, March 19, at the Colonial Room of the St. Francis. Music will be furnished by Clem Kennedy and his orchestra. She gave the tentative plans for a dance to be held April 30, at the Century Club. Bob Stahmer suggested that since the free hour on Thursday would be taken up by an Adviser's meeting, the officers should be inaugurated at the dance. This suggestion was approved. It was also decided that we elect class officers on Tuesday, March 16, at one o'clock.

Betty Dahlberg in her AWS report, stated that there would be a Saint Patrick's Day tea for all women students on March 17, in Room 158.

Fran Weisner reporting for WAA said that women's sports activities were well under way.

Bob Stahmer presented his report for AMS and informed us that a successful smoker had been held at the California Club. He also suggested for further discussion a joint Barn Dance to be held with the AWS in the gym.

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned at 5:35 P.M.

Respectfully submitted,
BABARA TREGANOWEN, Secretary

Oratorical Finals For Hearst Prizes Set For March 30

Tuesday, March 30, the President's Lectures, Social Science 1, will be host to the finalists of the Thomas Jefferson Bicentennial Oratorical Contest.
